

ALLEN COUNTY PUBLIC LIBRARY

3 1833 01736 7209

GENEALOGY
929.102
F91FRIA
1903

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2010 with funding from Allen County Public Library Genealogy Center

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, FIRST MONTH 17, 1903.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.
To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers.

Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application.

No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,

N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.

 TELEPHONE No. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—III.	33
POETRY: LOVING WORDS.	33
THE QUAKERS AS MAKERS OF AMERICA.	33
SPIRITUAL REALITIES.	35
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
Reform.	37
EDITORIAL:
The Education of Teachers in Friends' Schools.	38
Notes.	38, 39
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS.	39
SOCIETY NOTES.	39
THE GREATEST NEED OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. Brief Answers Sent to FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.	40
CLEAR CREEK MONTHLY MEETING.	41
JOURNALISM.	41
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	42
EDUCATIONAL.	42
LITERARY NOTES.	43
COMMUNICATIONS:
Appreciative Words; Lesson Leaves Again; Justice for the Negro.	43
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	44
POETRY: Loss; Encouragement; The Fallen Pine- Cone.	44
PETER VERIGIN'S EXILE.	45
THE EVILS OF LYNCHING AND CONVICT CAMPS.	45
THE ACCLIMATIZATION OF THE PEACH.	46
JUST THREE THINGS.	46
MISCELLANY: The American Invasion; Skimming It; Two Views of a Boy.	47
CURRENT EVENTS.	47
NEWS NOTES.	48
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	48

"BREVITY IS THE SOUL OF ELOQUENCE."

All good advertising contains this desirable feature. T. Vaughan Stapler, Ad-writer, 200 S. 10th St., Phila.

WANTED.

WANTED.—BY A WOMAN FRIEND, employment during part of day at moderate salary. Well qualified to fill a position of trust. Address "EMPLOYMENT," this Office.

WANTED.—A WORKING HOUSEKEEPER in a small family. Wages $5. Address No. 79, this Office.

MAN WITH SMALL FAMILY WILL TAKE charge of farm or gentleman's country place. Has had charge of college grounds past two years. Address No. 79, this Office.

WANTED.—IN A FRIENDS FAMILY in Wilmington, Del., a white woman, for cooking and general housework. The family consists of two adults and three children. Mother a help kept. Good wages. Address No. 68, this Office.

THE CO-OPERATIVE HOUSE KEEPING Association will have one vacancy after the first of the year. Apply to ELIZ. H. SMITH, 140 N. 15th St.

FOR SALE AND FOR RENT.

FOR SALE.—TWO IRREDEEMABLE GROUND lots. One for $15.00 and one for $1,325. D. H. WRIGHT, 905 Crozer Bldg., 1400 Chestnut Street.

FOR SALE.—THREE HOUSES AT SWARTHMORE, with modern conveniences and in good order. Prices from $4,000 to $4,500. Some allowance on quick sale. Apply to CHARLES PALMER, No. 12 E. 5th Street, Chester, Pa.

THOMAS O. PEIRCE,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW.
815 Real Estate Trust Building, Philad'a.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
613 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
OFFICES: 1 Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
395 SWINE STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

Disease Cured by Osteopathy.
A System of Natural Healing. Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and Chronic diseases in general.
O. O. STODDARD, E.D., D.O.
10 a. m. to 4 p. m. 7 p. m. to 10 p. m.
354 N. 17th Street, Philadelphia.

JAMAICA, LAND OF SUMMER.

Now is the time for a trip to the Tropics, where you may escape the cold and severe Winter of the North. You can leave direct from Philadelphia on the splendid steamers Admiral Sampson and Admiral Selkirk; swift passage, comfortable accommodation, excellent cuisine.

You will have a delightful Sea-voyage, and you will enjoy a land of sunshine where interest and health-giving qualities are unimpeded.

For further information and tickets call or address
ARTHUR H. MIDDLETON,
421 North Second Street (afternoon), or
2821 North Broad Street (evening), Philadelphia, Pa.

16th Annual Oyster Supper

FOR THE BENEFIT OF

FRIENDS' HOME FOR CHILDREN

TO BE GIVEN AT

Mosebach's Hall, 1207 N. 13th St.,
from 5 to 8 p.m.

Second-day, First month 26, 1903,
A Musical and Literary Entertainment will be given at 8 o'clock.

Tickets, for Supper and Entertainment $1.00.

BOARDING.

BOARDING.—A WOMAN FRIEND OF refinement is desirous of securing a home in a family of Friends. Can only pay a very moderate rate of board. Address No. 71, this Office.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1827 I St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

HOTEL WINDLE, Centre of city. JACKSONVILLE, FLA. Near all car lines. American and European plan. New. First-class. European plan, rooms $1 per day. American plan, $2 per day. C. B. SMITH, Prop.

MOUNTAIN SUNSET HOUSE FAMOUS RESORT. Sun parlor; steam heat; comfortable and hot 'ce. Dr. J. D. MOYER, Mountain Sunset P. O.

T E KATHLU, 1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J. Open all year. Hot water heat. Home comforts. K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD

THE AQUARILE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR OCEAN VIEW OF TENNESSEE AVE., Atlantic City, N. J. Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet. M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

PERSONAL ATTENTION

to every order means here that one of the members of our firm gives the closest personal supervision to every bit of printing that is entrusted to our care. Hence our reputation for good work is in the hands of those whose interests are most at stake.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Printers,
Phone 1019-21 Market Street, Phila.

CALIFORNIA.

A private car party is being formed to accompany Raymond and Whitcomb's first mid-winter tour to California, Second month 3. Tour includes visit to Grand Canon. For further particulars address ROBT. F. ENGLE, Mt. Holly, N. J.

FLORIDA TOUR.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED.

Merchant & Miners Transportation Co.

Nine-day tour to the Land of Sunshine and Flowers, $47.00; including all necessary expenses. Leave Baltimore Tuesday, February 17. Send for itinerary.

W. P. Turner, G. P. A., Baltimore, Md.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, L.L.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,
FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, graded education, and prepares for college.

EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.

Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to

GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Or, Jenkintown, Pa.
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogozot, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR
BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty two miles north of New York City. For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars address

A. DAVIS JACKSON, B.S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars address

ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register.

The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE 2-29-38 D.

"Down the O-hi-o"

By CHARLES HUMPHREY ROBERTS.

A charming story of Quaker life suitable for holiday gift. Well bound in cloth; postpaid, $1.00, or two copies, separate address if desired, for $1.50.

* Filled with incident and adventure, quaint character sketches and delightful humor. Moreover the literary finish of the book is rare and grateful. — Buffalo Courier
Address C.H. KELLER, Mgr., 613 No. 145 La Salle St., Chicago, Illinois.

BIBLES.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

A NEW AND FULL LINE.

FAMILY QUARTO BIBLES, suitable for Friend.

SELF-PRONOUNCING, REFERENCE TEACHERS' BIBLES, with maps and concordance.

TESTAMENTS, ETC., convenient, large, clear type, desirable binding. New and up-to-date. Surprisingly low prices—from 50 cents up.

THE CHILD AND THE BIBLE Syllabus of a course of twenty-five lessons in education.

By George Allen Hubbard. Price, 25 cts. Postage 4 cts.

THE OLD RED SCHOOL-HOUSE. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Price, postpaid, 75 cents.

JOHN KINSEY, Speaker of the Pennsylvania Assembly. By Joseph S. Walton. Price, 50 cents.

All Friends' books for sale by

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,

N. W. cor 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.

$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL,

Phone 1-33-55. Clerk.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet, 27 pages. * Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet, 1 page. * A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of Friend's Friend. Small pamphlet, 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet, 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

* * * All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,

N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Sts., Phila.

Established 1860 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEORGE C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

WALL PAPER of

Attractive Styles

Popular Prices

Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,

1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

STENOGRAPHER GEORGE B. COCK.

Telephones. Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley

BUNTING AND SHRIGLEY

ARCHITECTS

Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

George W. Hancock,

APPRAISER

Real and Personal Estates.

All values confidential.

(12 to 2).

802 Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL,

Manufacturing Optician.

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.

5 PHONES.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, FIRST MONTH 17, 1903.

{ Volume L.X.
Number 3.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

III.

THERE is a harmony in the sound of that voice to which Divine love gives utterance, and some appearance of right order in their temper and conduct whose passions are regulated.

JOHN WOOLMAN.

LOVING WORDS.

AMID a life of happiness,
When every hour is a dream of bliss,
Take time to speak a loving word
Where loving words are seldom heard;
And these will linger in the mind,
And gather others of like kind,
Till loving words will echo where Erstwhile the heart was poor and bare;
And somewhere on thy heavenward track
Their music will come echoing back,
And flood thy soul with melody—
Such is Love's immortality.

—Selected.

THE QUAKERS AS MAKERS OF AMERICA.¹

BY DR. DAVID GREGG.

WE are apt to think of the Quakers as a people of peculiarities; they are before our mind as men and women of broad-brimmed hats and poke bonnets, drab coats and gray dresses—a serious people of slow movements; a demure people, who are the victims of their own virtues. They are a peculiar people, but behind every Quaker peculiarity there is a consistent reason. The Quakers are more than an embodiment of oddities; they are an embodiment of great principles and an incarnation of a grand life. Both their principles and life have entered into the bone and sinew of our republic, and both are still necessary for the realization of ultimate America. The reproduction of their spirit and purpose by American citizens will make real, by and by, our "manifest destiny." We wish to look at this destiny as it exists in germ form in the souls of our Quaker ancestors. There is nothing more interesting or inspiring or profitable than the experience of those great souls who have helped to lead the nations up the heights of civilization and into the advances of civic life; who have led the human race nearer to God and into genuine and abiding liberty. The Quakers had such souls. Such souls looked out of the clear and striking faces of George Fox and William Penn, Elizabeth Fry and Lucretia Mott. Around the lives of such heroes and heroines the history of the world has turned as on an axis. They have helped to direct the main currents of human thought in the right direction. You call them single souls, but they have multiplied themselves into myriad souls; they have become a people. There is no getting away from the true men and the true woman, from the single soul, if you would get at the origin and history of great movements.

The tendency of scientific study in our time has, perhaps, led us to undervalue the influence of great souls. History has been believed to advance according to definite laws over which neither human genius nor human freedom has exerted any appreciable influence. Mr. Buckle explains national character as the result of circumstances, and he claims that history and biography are wholly different in their sphere; yet the fact remains that persons are the ruling centers in history. Take such personalities as Augustine and Luther and Fox and Penn out of history and the course of history ceases to be intelligible. Because this is so, we emphasize the names of the great men who stand chief among the races and peoples who form the constituents of our republic, and we exalt their principles, which form the bone and sinew of American manhood. The Quakers, when seen at their best, stand in American history for ideal civilization; and this civilization is their contribution to the American republic. As historic character the Quakers are a marked and influential people in the midst of the most marked and influential types of mankind. They have put their stamp indelibly on national and international life. If we enter into the courts of justice we can see that they have been there; the substitution of affirmation in place of the oath is their work. The jails of humanity show the results of their reform; it was they who changed our prisons from sties to sanatoriums. The dream of that beautiful prison angel, Elizabeth Fry, is being worked out into reality in criminal law, and the remedial element in punishment is being pushed to the forefront in the administration of justice. They have put their mark even on the pages of our Holy Bible and have made it a book of greater power. They have taken some of its grandest prophecies and statements and commands and beatitudes; and by believing them, living them, translating them into reigning forces in the home and in the church and in the State, they have so made these their own that in reading the Book we instinctively associate their names with these scriptures.

The Quakers arose in an age of dogmas and creeds and persecutions and reforms and religious revolutions and quarreling ecclesiastics. They took their place among the ranks of reformers and were the most advanced of all. Their reforms were the most sweeping of all. They were the liberals and radicals of that age; they were the reformers of the reformed; they undertook to reform Calvin and Luther and Knox. The Episcopalians and Puritans and Presbyterians protested against the Romanists, but the Quakers protested against the Episcopalians and Puritans and Presbyterians. In the language of Milton, to them "Presbyter was only old priest writ large." The Quakers were the Episcopalians and Puritans and Presbyterians of the seventeenth century, sweetened and modified and made over with a new and a large admixture of love. They denied all ecclesiastical authority and threw aside all the prevailing ecclesiastical rites; they went to God directly for their instructions and worshipped before God in stillness and silence without prescribed forms. As the complement of a state without a king, they offered mankind a church without a bishop. Their aim was to humanize Christianity and substitute a gospel of hope for a gospel of despair. Sweeping aside creeds and councils and rituals and synods, they held that God and the individual man, living in loving fellowship, were sufficient. They simplified things in a wholesome way and struck for an all-round liberty. This was Americanism before its day; this was Americanism out-Americanized. They were a people of great moral purpose. Their ideals were their inspiration, and the realization of these ideals was their goal. They got their strength from ideals and convictions and visions of which the senses take no cognizance. James Freeman Clarke calls them the "English mystics." If they were mystics they were exceedingly practical mystics. They were one of the most independent people among all the races.

¹ This sermon is reprinted by request. It was preached on "Father's Day," in a Brooklyn Presbyterian Church in 1896, and reported in the Brooklyn Eagle of Twelfth month 21, 1896.

They differed from all the sects around them, in that they renounced the use of all force in the propagation of their principles. They inculcated and practiced religious toleration. They have the honor of being one of the few divisions of Christendom against which the charges of cruelty and selfishness and love of power cannot be brought. Their gun was a protest, their bullet a principle and their powder the inner light. They served the church and state by what they were. Their method of pushing their faith was to be what they believed and then assert themselves. They exalted the passive virtues. This was the method of Jesus Christ. All which Jesus ever did in this world was to assert Himself and suffer. When violence was used against them their principle of action was, Never retaliate. Their method of growth was by patience and perseverance and quiet suffering, and their method was effective. For example, they carried their religion into the Massachusetts colony and planted it right in the midst of the hard-headed Puritans. The Puritans persecuted them, whipped them, robbed them, hung them, but they kept right on asserting themselves and suffering until, by their patience, they wore out the cruelty of the Puritans and brought the Puritan scourge and scaffold into public disgrace. The public, won over to them by their beautiful spirit, rose and demanded the cessation of persecution. Thus they purchased and established for us by their sufferings the religious toleration which now exists in our republic. They served America by patiently suffering. Their martyrdom was like the martyrdom of the church of the catacombs, of which history tells us in thrilling words. The church of the catacombs was the kingdom of God in sackcloth, working underground, along channels and galleries of rock, to overthrow and replace the armed empires above.

The Quakers were content to be in the minority on every great question until by self-assertion and honest argument and right living, they could win men enough to their side to make them the majority. In the first days their ways and principles spelled anarchy, but by the slow education of centuries and by the beneficial changes which they wrought, they now spell righteousness, peace, love. You see I am giving the bright and beautiful side of the Quaker story. I am telling what they contributed by way of strength and glory; I am speaking of them as the children of the light, shining with the celestial beauty of a Christ-like spirit. In telling the story of the Quakers there is one starting point—we must start with George Fox. He is to Quakerism what Christ is to Christianity, its incarnation. In him we find the traits and principles and hopes and methods and life of Quakers at their best. He represents the heroic age of the Quakers. He gave Quakerism as a life and started it out on its thrilling career to march through England and Holland and America. This has been the order and growth of Quakerism: George Fox gave the world a Quaker life. Robert Barclay took the doctrines and principles and purposes out of which that Quaker life was constructed and built these into a terse, clear, logical Quaker system. It was necessary to build such a theological system for the purpose of defense under attack and misrepresentation, and as a fair treatment of the public. This formulated the Quaker system Edward Burroughs took and carried out to the world and expounded and preached, and by the conversions which he made built up into a Quaker society. Then came William Penn and took the life of Fox, and the system of Barclay, and the converts of Burroughs, and built all into a Quaker commonwealth, which gave Quakers the civil embodiment of their cherished ideals and which gave America the powerful colony of Pennsylvania, a bulwark in the defense of freedom. After this came John Greenleaf Whittier, who took the commonwealth and the converts and the system and the life and beautified all. With chiseled words and sculptured cadences he built Quakerism into a cathedral-like poem of liberty, full of reverence for God and of appreciation of man and of praise for the truth.

George Fox, who was the spiritual father of the Quakers, was born in 1624. This makes him a child of the seventeenth century. Did he rise to power in that century? Was he so endowed and did he so assert himself as to make for himself an immortal name among immortal men? If so, he was a man among men. That was a wonderful century and brought forth wonderful products. It was a century when every weakling was relegated to obscurity; for George Fox to make his mark in that century is all the evidence required to prove him a great man. This was the century of great religious wars; this was the century of great books and measures and men. If you except the Bible, the most democratic books ever published were published in this century. Cervantes published "Don Quixote," which set all the world laughing at sham aristocracies and mock heroism; that book helped to turn away the human mind from the worship of the false and artificial. Shakespeare's dramas were published then; his works tended toward human equality; they made kings and queens only men and women like their subjects. Bacon's works were published then; these taught men to feel it not only their right, but their duty, to look with eyes undimmed by a church creed at all things which the Lord had created. Bacon's works made it possible for Newton to open the heavens, Watt the air, Lyell the earth, and Darwin animal life. "The Pilgrim's Progress" was published in that century; so was "Paradise Lost," so was Baxter's "Saint's Rest," and so was the authorized version of the Bible, which gave the Book to the common people. The Book is the ever-enduring Magna Charta of civil and religious liberty. This was the century of the Westminster divines, with their catechism and confession of faith. This was the century of Cromwell's guns. Can George Fox rise in this century? Can he in this century found a sect which shall live and prevail and modify society, and add freedom to freedom, and inaugurate reform which, when carried out, will realize the ideal civilization? Can he lead in the strike for independence in an age when the whole trend of things is toward independence? He does.

(To be Concluded.)

SPIRITUAL REALITIES.¹

BY ELIZABETH POWELL BOND.

"The law of the Lord is perfect," the Psalmist wrote. Is there ever a doubt of this in our minds? The sun shines by this perfect law, upon our earth day by day, and upon the stars by night. The "flower in the crannied wall" shapes its beauteous self, and lives its busy life of perfecting seed, according to the law of the Lord. The "man of sorrows" who grew from youth to manhood in obedience to his parents; who entered into the joys of the Bethany home; who drew little children to his heart of love; who poured out his life for every human need, and then was led to crucifixion; who remembered his mother in those last moments upon the cross; who lifted his soul unto serene heights which could not be disturbed by physical anguish; do we ever doubt that he wrought and taught by the Lord's perfect law?

Intellectually the Psalmist gains our assent—is it always a reality to us that the Lord's perfect law is in us and under us and about us? It is quite possible for us to open our eyes to each new day with never a thought of the Lord's perfect law—he does not require it of us, to think of it or of him. Our daily bread is made ready for us just the same whether or not our hearts are lifted up in thankfulness at the beginning of the day. The sheep and the ox and the silk-worm all yield up their own lives that we may be clothed, just the same, whether or not we pause in remembrance of these "little brothers" as St. Francis of Assisi would name them. We buy and sell; we spin and weave; we generate electricity and build railroads; we heal the sick and plead causes before a jury; it may be we meet as students and teachers—just the same whether or not we have whispered within our inmost souls. "Here am I, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" True, the word that came to Moses was: "I, the Lord thy God, am a jealous God." But divine jealousy does not mean the same thing as human jealousy. "Visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation," is only another way of saying one part of the Lord's perfect law: "As ye sow, that must ye also reap." In the largeness of the infinite soul, we cannot think of any of the pettiness of human jealousy, that blights and limits and despoils our human life. The infinite soul is not living unto himself—he is the life of all that lives; "For him to live is still to give," and we are borne on from day to day until time is swallowed up in eternity, just the same, whether or not we are conscious that we live and move in Him. But for ourselves—not to have this consciousness, is infinite loss! It seems to me to reduce life almost to the poverty of the little tin men that during Christmas week were wound up by the street vendors, to make their way with much ado over the pavement the little while that the motive power lasted. Could any one choose to be the tin puppet rather than the man of spiritual perception? It is not altogether a matter of choice; the sense of spiritual realities is in varying degrees a matter of inheritance—a gift that like our sense of harmony in sound and in color may be made to grow with our growth and strengthen with our strength. I cannot believe that there are many human souls that wilfully deny the realities of the life of the spirit—but it is quite possible to allow oneself to become indifferent, and to sink to the impoverished level of the tin automaton. It is in the deep conviction that no New Year's gift would more surely and forever enrich your life, that I would place before you on the threshold of the year a leavening thought concerning spiritual realities.

For one moment think of the lives that seem to be set in absolutely barren places. Think of the youths and maidens born into the poverty of city slums. We can hardly use the word home in this connection. Body and soul are kept together by the minimum allowance of food and the scantiest provision of clothing, from the scantiest wages for work. The hunger of the body fills the whole horizon of life. The hunger of the body leaves no place for any hunger of the soul for beauty and blessedness. Think of the sights and smells and sounds that make up the daily round of life of multitudes of youths and maidens in our great cities. God pity them, and in his wisdom bring them somehow and somewhere to the compensations that seem to be their right as His little children! Think for a moment of such life as theirs; then come back to the thought of our own. What are we that we find ourselves in the midst of every blessing that life has to give? What have we done to deserve it all? Hunger of the body!—our danger is that the body shall be so pampered with its food and clothing as to become a hindrance to the soul. Every morning we wake to physical luxury—not comfort merely. And our daily round of life is to avail ourselves of the satisfaction of every intellectual hunger and every craving of the soul? How dare we accept, without a feeling of awe, the blessedness of our lot that by mere chance of birth, and not by our own earning, has fallen upon us? The prayer that the children of poverty may come to the compensations that seem to be theirs, supplements itself with the word of warning to ourselves to beware how we accept the gifts of life to us. How dare we accept them not having earned them, without at least trying to deserve them? May it not be that in the far-off compensations for our actions, the physical poverty of the city slums will be more than matched in the impoverished souls of the ungrateful and the indifferent? Can we think of the children of poverty—then dare to be wasteful of the things we have not earned, or ruthlessly destructive of the property that is not ours, or indifferent to the opportunities for intellectual and spiritual growth, in our cup of blessings?

¹ Read to students of Swarthmore College First month 11, 1903.

In my own experience I know of no attitude of the soul more sure to open its windows toward God than acknowledgment of present blessings, and the effort to deserve them. For the effort to deserve them is the effort to be sincere and mindful of others. This effort to deserve is uplift of the soul toward God, binds us to God, is in very truth, religion. Jesus, our teacher, the obedient, the self-abnegating leader, declared: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine." And Ruskin has said in modern phrase: "The life of God is not to be discovered by reasoning, but by obeying." Not long ago I noticed the announcement that a university preacher would speak upon "The Religion of the College Man." How could the college man be separated from the rest of the brethren in a consideration of the religious life, except to show that the college man or the college woman, being the most favored of all the brethren, having received the best gifts that life has for bestowal, is in honor bound to show himself trying to deserve them. We of the college have recently been told that to Agassiz the laboratory was a sanctuary; and Whittier has preserved for us in his beautiful lines, how this great learner and teacher of nature's lesson called the thought of his pupils from the creature to the Creator:

"On the threshold of our task,
Let us light and guidance ask,
Let us pause in silent prayer!"

When the man of power finds it his best help to become as the little child, need any young student fear that a religious spirit in his work endangers his manliness among men!

It is a recent utterance of President Schurman, of Cornell: "That men be pious and good seems to me more important than that they be educated." Not long ago President Eliot, of Harvard, addressed a conference of ministers in Boston. In this address he is reported as saying: "I hear much preaching. I go to church twice on Sundays and twice on Thursdays. . . . What do I find? I find that I am not called on for personal activity, for exertion. I am only absorbing. The ministers are at work, but I am not. . . . I find it does me no good to have my sympathies touched, my anger asserted or indignation stirred unless I can go out and do something about it. Indeed, sometimes I think it is absolutely hurtful to me unless I can go and do something. . . . To be true, it is hard both for the church, college and university to find means for getting action out of the spirit which they wish to teach and implant. How can we give them means for applying the principles we wish to implant? Christ ends many of his sayings with the words, 'Go thou and do likewise.'"

This problem of the university does not belong to us. But the college, too, is included in President Eliot's inquiries. What has Swarthmore to do with the problem? Are there any chances in our college life to "go and do" as Jesus did? It is easy to make the mistake of looking for opportunities so far away that we miss those lying right at hand—literally on our halls. If the only religious service to be considered is the devotion of our lives to the needy and untaught of far-away people in other cities, or states, or countries, then our college man and woman are temporarily cut off from such service. For the business of college life is to accomplish the task of preparation for life-work which the loving providence of parents or the energy of the student himself has made his privilege. Agassiz has shown us how this very task may be undertaken in a religious spirit. In our college life, which combines home relations with intellectual tasks, there is full scope for "getting action out of the spirit" which the church, the college and the university wish to teach and implant. True, Swarthmore students cannot devote themselves to the needs of East India, nor can they do much personal work for the college settlement only ten miles away. But right at their own doors, on their own halls, lies the opportunity that is as truly religious service. If it is a virtue to minister to the needs of people over the seas it is not less a virtue to consider the needs and the rights of our neighbor just the other side of the wall. When Jesus said, "Go thou and do likewise," the "likewise" for us is not in the very same service to the sufferers, but in the spirit of the service. Healing the palsied, the lame and the blind, is not college work; but a service which is its exact counterpart, of the very same value, as truly following Christ, is to respect the need and the right of students to have the life in college halls suited to the doing of college work. It is fatal blindness and irreligion to overlook an opportunity right at hand for noblest living. This is the mistake so easily made about religion—to regard it as a far-away interest for a far-away time in life; while it is really a reaching out of the soul toward our Heavenly Father, and an honest wish to serve him by serving in any humble way we can those who are close about us. For us to "go and do likewise" may be just to keep our hand on the door-knob instead of slamming the door; just to deny the impulse to interrupt our neighbor's work for the moment's gratification; just to remember that there are certain seasons when quiet is the prime necessity for student life. East India has no service to offer that could be nobler self-discipline than the life on college halls, nor worthier in its results for others. So, whatever may be the difficulties of university life in the way of securing Christian activity, our college life is the best possible field for a "League for Christian Service." Out of Christian activity there is chance for the growth of all the graces of the spirit—joy, content and noble courtesy.

It was a man-poet who wrote:

"Thrice blest whose lives are faithful prayers,
Whose loves in higher love endure;
What souls possess themselves so pure,
Or is there blessedness like theirs."

He whose eyes were opened to the cruelty of his zeal in persecuting the followers of Christ, and then held himself obedient to the "heavenly vision"—this stalwart apostle plead with the Ephesians: "Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armor of God."

Each soul who enters upon the work of the new year with the wish to do Christian service just in that place where his lot is cast will find at the year's end, whatever else he may have accomplished, that he has brought himself to a higher point of view—to a mount of vision revealing the happiest possibilities of life.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 4.

REFORM.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"his is my commandment, that ye love one another even as I have loved you.—John, xv., 12.

Before study of Lesson read John, xv., 1-27

How shall we meet the questions of social reform which appeal to our consciences? Shall we select from the evils about us the one which seems the greatest, and make the attempt to put it down a life-long war? Shall we welcome and support every movement of reform, dividing our energies among them, and not giving ourselves wholly to any? Shall we assert that this, being God's world, is in good hands, and infer that he will take care of the evolution of righteousness without our help? Shall we feel that our contribution to social reform is sufficient, if we simply do our small duties in our small place, not in any way aligning ourselves with so-called reformers?

There is an old saying to the effect that ability is measured by sense of duty, not duty by ability. It is a fact that often so-called great men are not intellectually as acute as many of their fellows. Luther was not so great a scholar as Erasmus, nor was his mind as keen as that of Melancthon. George Washington was by no means as powerful and original a mind as Jefferson. Yet Luther is the central figure of the Reformation, and Washington of the Revolution; and it is simply because each had great capacity for taking responsibility—that is, for feeling duties and acting upon them. The man who translates his right-thinking or that of his time into action is the great man. So, in answering the above questions, men do not so much settle them as classify themselves. Those who take responsibility for the conditions of their times and set themselves to improve them are the relatively great men. Those who have small sense of duty are the small men. Plainly the questions cannot receive a general answer. They must be answered according to the moral capacity and local conditions of those who face them. The man who elects to deal only with his private affairs arranges for a low plane of life, on which he may be useful indeed, but in which the fullest expansion of human nature is not possible. He who gives his mind and life in part at least to world problems may not attain greatness, but he places himself in the atmosphere of greatness. So it is with the intermediate stages of life, centering on merely local, or national, or international affairs. There are in these successively broader outlooks upon life, opportunities for greater and greater unselfishness. The individual comes to include in his desire for human welfare greater and greater numbers, and to the end of their highest good will sacrifice self and the narrower circles centering upon self. Many consider the good of the family before the personal good; the number is progressively less of those who place first the good of the community, of the state, the nation, the world. Breadth of view and of spirit may be displayed in dealing with one or with many phases of evil. A man must use the tools at hand and the material at hand. As he finds himself effective, so must he apply himself, whether to the evil of intemperance, of political corruption, of the war spirit or what not. And in so doing he must realize that all others laboring for right ends are his allies. All evils are fundamentally based on the same weaknesses,—lack of dependence on divine guidance and lack of brotherly kindness. So are all reformers in all fields working together. There are no evils in the world—there is evil. It may display itself as drunkenness, as violence, as impurity, but all these are closely intertwined. If one deal with drunkenness he is brought into immediate contact with the problems of poverty, of the social evil, of crime and criminals. All forces of unrighteousness being fundamentally one, what an inexcusable thing it is when advocates of reform fall out among themselves as to methods, and as to comparative importance of their special interest. In fact, that phase of righteousness is most important to any individual in which he can labor with the greatest efficiency, whether because of his surroundings, his tastes, his special powers, and whatever he may do "heartily and unto the Lord" will help every other movement toward righteousness as well.

(Concluded on page 30)

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, FIRST MONTH 17, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE EDUCATION OF TEACHERS IN FRIENDS' SCHOOLS.

"As THE teacher is, so is the school," is an educational maxim of generally accepted belief. As men do not gather grapes of thorns nor figs of thistles, no more do the children in school gather that sort of knowledge which tends toward culture, nor the kind of inspiration which leads toward earnest search for the best gifts, from teachers who have not themselves been free partakers at the fountains of knowledge, and are not constant seekers to be wiser to-day than they were yesterday.

This is an age of normal schools, professional schools, colleges and universities. Those who, imperfectly prepared, enter upon the arduous work of teaching, come constantly into competition with men and women in their chosen calling, who have had large opportunities for obtaining knowledge, and careful training to develop skill in its use.

The field of usefulness open to Friends' Schools depends almost entirely upon the personality and qualification of the teachers who are in charge of them. The reason for sustaining such schools should reside primarily in the fact that we are able to place in charge of them thoroughly equipped teachers to whose educational guidance we may confidently ask people to intrust their children.

"Thoroughly equipped teachers" is, of course, a relative term. The knowledge of a subject in the elementary way in which it is to be taught is not an equipment for teaching it. Teachers must know much more than they expect to teach. It is impossible to give the lines of educational trend the right direction unless the teacher can fix her thought upon points far remote from the narrow environment in which they have their beginning. The instruction in the primary room, the grammar grades and the high school, are all dependent upon what lies beyond. The realms of knowledge are so closely related that the teacher must know much outside her own work in order to interpret truly to other minds her own special branches.

All kinds of force lose something in transmission. The full strength of the dynamic current cannot be utilized. Educational knowledge is no exception to the general law of loss. No person can teach all she knows, and if the stream of knowledge is shallow she is always pouring out the dregs upon her classes instead of the pure waters that abide in the deeper, stronger currents. In the light of this consideration it is doubtful whether teachers who have had only high school preparation are competent to give instruction in high school branches. The further training of the college or professional school develops not only knowledge but power, and the teacher who carries to his work a varied store of knowledge and a mind trained to select, apply, and use it, has an infinite advantage over her imperfectly educated companions who fear to move confidently lest they come upon the shallows of their preparation and suffer shipwreck.

In many cities the public has safeguarded its high school systems by admitting to the teachers' ranks none save college graduates. In order to keep pace with the rapidly increasing public appreciation of trained and skilled teachers, Friends also need to be discriminating and careful in the selection of teachers.

Not only liberal education, but the possession of the desire for continued growth and development, is to be considered in the appointment of teachers. For education is a life process, and the teacher who leans solely upon past acquired knowledge fails to be the vitalizing force to the school and the community which she might be. In other words, teachers ought not to be storage batteries, but generators of force; not inorganic masses of accumulated knowledge, but vital, organic forces developing new intellectual treasures to make the communities in which they labor, wiser, better and happier by reason of the teacher's work.

There is a growing disposition on the part of corporations to recognize labor organizations, as is evidenced by the efforts of Union Pacific officials to settle a strike of machinists in their employ. A railroad official is quoted as saying:

"Officers of the railways are coming to find that it is much better to deal with labor in a conciliatory attitude. It has been long since demonstrated that obstinacy and arrogance accomplish small results in dealing with employes. It is the duty of officials to make the best terms possible with men, whenever their demands in general are just. On the other hand, the labor leaders are coming to appreciate their responsibility more than ever before."

The secretary of the central branch of the Young Men's Christian Association of Philadelphia recently stated that no one was eligible to office in their organization except members of an evangelical church and that the (so-called) "Hicksite Quakers" were not considered evangelical. His attention being called to the paragraph on blasphemy in the book of Discipline of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting (1894), he wrote as follows:

"I have talked with several members of the employed force about our building and they agree with me that with the document which you showed me the other day before us, we cannot hesitate about receiving members of your meeting as active members of the Association, and I trust we will have a number of them." Very truly yours,
(Signed) HERBERT K. CASKEY, Secretary.

AMONG the institutions for the uplifting of the colored people in Philadelphia one of the most deserving is the Institute for Colored Youth, which has been in successful operation for more than sixty years. It has had an industrial department since 1885, with opportunities for education in nine trades. In order to increase its usefulness and afford an opportunity for agriculture it is to be removed to Cheyney Station, on the Baltimore Central railroad, where a farm has been purchased.

Fannie J. Coppin, who has been principal of the school for many years, resigned her position at the end of the school year of 1902 to join her husband, Lishop Coppin, in Africa. Her successor is Hugh M. Browne, a graduate of Princeton, who for three years had charge of the Summer School for teachers at Hampton, Va.

BIRTHS.

BATTIN.—At Selma, Ohio, Eleventh month 25, 1902, to Orlando T. and Esther M. Battin, a son, who is named Edward Matthews Battin.

MULLER.—At Easton, Maryland, First month 2, 1903, to Joseph and Lizzie Willson Muller, a son, who is named Joseph Willson.

PATTON.—In West Chester, Pa., on Fifth month 9, 1902, to Frank P. and Sarah S. Patton, a daughter, who is named Lydia S. Patton.

MARRIAGES.

LEWIS—LUKENS.—At Plymouth Meeting, Pa., Third-day, First month 6, 1903, at the home of the bride's parents, Samuel Bunting Lewis and Helen, daughter of William E. and Sybella T. Lukens.

WEBSTER—LOWNES.—On First month 1, 1903, at the home of the bride's mother, Bennet, Nebraska, William Webster, of Monroe, Nebraska, and Nellie C. Lownes, daughter of Alice B. and the late Samuel Coale.

DEATHS.

ALLEN.—In Germantown, Philadelphia, First month 6, 1903, of acute pneumonia, Norwood Penrose Allen, a member of Green Street Monthly Meeting of Friends.

BIRDSALL.—On the morning of Ninth month 15, 1902, Hannah Schooley Birdsall, widow of the late William Birdsall, of Camden, Ind., in her 78th year.

She was born near Waterford, Loudoun county, Va. She came with her parents, William and Abigail Schooley, who moved to Green county, Ohio, and settled on a farm near Cedarville in 1847. She was united in marriage with William P. Birdsall in 1873, who died in 1880. After the death of her husband she returned to the parental home in Ohio, where she spent the remainder of her life in good deeds and loving acts. She was a great sufferer from cancer for many years preceding her death, which she bore with Christian fortitude. She was a member of Green Plain Monthly Meeting, near which her remains were laid to rest Ninth month 18, 1902.

COCK.—At his home, Cornwall-on-Hudson, N. Y., First month 8, 1903, Charles E. Cock, in the 82d year of his age; a member and for many years an elder of Cornwall Monthly Meeting.

After a very short illness of pneumonia he passed peacefully away, surrounded by his three daughters and two sons. It is nineteen years since his wife's death. His funeral was a very large one, all business in the village being suspended at the time. Joel Borton and his life-long friend, Joseph T. McDowell, spoke very acceptably to the large assemblage. An exemplary Friend, a kind neighbor, and an affectionate parent, his example of strict integrity and motto of "Doing as you would be done by," will long be remembered. It was his custom while his family was about him to read every morning at breakfast from the Bible or other good books.

HALL.—On First month 3, 1903, Lydia H., widow of Samuel R. Hall, aged 87 years; a member of Concord Monthly Meeting. Interment at Chichester Friends' Burial Ground.

MULLER.—At her home in Easton, Md., on the 2d of First month, 1903, H. Lizzie Willson Muller, wife of Joseph Muller, and daughter of the late Hannah W. Willson.

The deceased was forty-five years of age, and leaves an infant son born on the day of her death. She was a consistent and valued member of Third Haven Monthly Meeting, taking active part in philanthropic work. Generosity of spirit and self-sacrifice marked the life of this young Christian woman, whose death bereaves a large circle of friends and relatives.

RICHARDSON.—In Byberry, Philadelphia, on First month 7, 1903, Ruth Anna Richardson, daughter of the late Nathaniel and Hannah Y. Richardson. Funeral on Seventh-day, the 10th inst. Interment at Byberry Friends' graveyard.

SHAW.—At Friends' Home, Newtown, Pa., on Seventh-day morning, First month 3, 1903, Martha B. Shaw, aged 83 years, 7 months and 26 days.

WATSON.—In Newtown, on First-day, First month 4, 1903, Davis Watson, in his 77th year.

WATSON.—Near Mechanicsville, Bucks county, Pa., on First month 3, 1903, Emaline P. Watson, wife of Henry Watson, in her 81st year. A beloved elder of Buckingham Monthly Meeting.

WEBSTER.—At the home of her nephew, Joseph Webster-Locksley, Pa., on First month 2, 1903, Susan D. Webster, aged 91 years. She was a member of Chester Monthly Meeting. Interment at Middletown Friends' grounds.

SOCIETY NOTES.

CLEAR CREEK Monthly Meeting of Friends was held on the 3d instant at the Illinois Yearly Meeting-house, to which place it has been changed until the 1st of the Fourth month. There was a fair attendance, some coming eight and some thirteen miles to be present. Our friends David and Lydia F. Wilson, although the former is past four score years, were of those who came the greatest distance, and gave encouragement by their presence and vocal utterance. Isaac P. Wierman also spoke from the text, "I am the vine, ye are the branches," enlarging upon it and expressing an earnest desire that all might abide in the true vine, and not become as withered branches.

The next day, First day, the meeting for worship convened as usual with thirty-six in attendance, some that mostly attend being absent on account of a funeral in an adjacent neighborhood. After a season of unbroken silence our venerable friend, David Wilson, appeared very acceptably in ministry, followed by Abel Mills with an earnest appeal for Christian morality, and a few appropriate remarks by our esteemed friend Joshua L. Mills.

While the meetings were not large they were felt to be good, and a sense of tranquility and the Father-love seemed to overshadow the small assembly. M. E. P.

The memorial meeting for the late Clement M. Bidle in Darby meeting-house, on First-day afternoon, the 11th inst. was attended by nearly one hundred of his friends notwithstanding the downpour of rain and the icy streets. Joseph Powell presided over the meeting. Joseph T. Bunting read a paper compiled by him, containing tributes from several friends. After this a number of those present spoke of their personal relations to Clement M. Biddle, and of his various fields of usefulness. One told of his open-handed generosity, another of his wise counsel, another of his enthusiasm, another of his love for children and his efforts to interest them, and others of his influence in the meeting, especially in the yearly meeting. Teachers testified to his sympathy and helpfulness, employees told of his justice and kindness, a neighbor spoke of what he had done for the borough of Darby, and one who is now an eminent minister in the Society of Friends told of an invitation to visit a meeting and afterward the home of Clement M. Biddle years ago, and of the encouragement that had thus been given to him. It was evident that those assembled were all mourners, who felt that they had sustained a great personal loss.

On the morning of the 11th instant Isaac Clothier attended the Lansdowne First-day School (which precedes the meeting) and read an interesting paper describing the life and ministry of Paul. He remained to meeting, which was also visited by Mordecai Bartram, who spoke very acceptably. In the afternoon both of these friends attended the memorial meeting at Darby for Clement M. Biddle.

The time of holding Merion Preparative Meeting has been changed to the Fourth-day of the week preceding Radnor Monthly Meeting (which is the Fifth-day of the month), at 10.30 a. m., at George's Institute, 5100 Lancaster Avenue, Philadelphia.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 4.

(Concluded from page 37.)

But in what spirit shall the work of reform be undertaken? Things that need reform are evil, or at least obstructive of good. How shall we have patience with such things and with those whose support makes it possible to continue them? How shall we avoid denouncing and defying those who thus place themselves athwart the path of progress? Shall we not thus exhibit a righteous indignation—"be angry and sin not?" The right method of dealing with evil and evil doers is again one of effectiveness. The question is not one of defiance or of condemnation, but of right judgment as to the best way of reaching results. There are times when the sharp, unmistakable word of condemnation is called for. Jesus himself used it to the Pharisees without stint. But the occasions when his wrath flashed out are very few. Nearly always the spirit of "sweet reasonableness" was that which marked his relations with men. He was in the midst of drunkenness, impurity, falsehood, unbrotherliness of every type. But none of these things drew the lightnings of his anger. That was reserved for the sinning and self-contented Pharisee. The "woman who was a sinner" was tenderly forgiven and told to sin no more; in general he aimed to remove the underlying cause of sin—to put into the life of the sinner a spirit which would cleanse it. This method of sweetness and light applies to most of our dealings with the sinners of our time. We should deal with them as we would be dealt by—tenderly and lovingly; and this is also true of him whose sin is that of perverse preference for his way as against our better one. It is always possible that his light after all may be brighter than ours. Only those whose knowledge is great, and whose love is deep and pure should dare to be very angry—to condemn very severely.

WHAT IS THE GREATEST NEED OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS?

BRIEF ANSWERS SENT TO FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

WHEN this question was propounded at the last session of the conference my mental response to one of these needs, if not the greatest, came quickly—a more aggressive movement in the direction of proselyting. This method has always been more or less objectionable to Friends, and those who have applied for membership have generally done so voluntarily.

I believe it to be an individual duty to discover to those with whom we come in contact, the tenets of our faith and our manner of worship, as opportunity offers. There are many who are seeking just such truths as we hold, and if they have not found them, are we not, in a measure, responsible? Some of these would come "within the pale" were they certain of the right hand of fellowship being extended to them.

I have been told that Friends were too exclusive, that they made no effort to disseminate their religious views, and that their business meetings were regarded as secret.

It is surprising how comparatively few have correct knowledge of us. It is known that our Society is always to the front in works of philanthropy, and for the betterment of human kind, but withal we are "heretics."

"Quaker oats," "Quaker bread," "Quaker wheels," used to symbolize all that is pure and unadulterated, goes for naught, in the face of the fact that we do not "believe." This erroneous estimate of us could be overcome by putting into their hands our literature portraying "Quaker" beliefs and ideals.

Our ministering Friends are sowing the good seed in holding religious meetings in the "Methodist house," the "Presbyterian house," and others. If the world at large does not seek us, we must take the gospel to them.

I have known persons who have professed themselves convinced, after reading the leaflets and pamphlets issued by Friends, containing the highest and best that our cultured and consecrated members are capable of. These bearers of the message should find their way to the firesides of "all sorts and conditions of men."

Are Friends, as a whole, interested in enlarging their borders, or are we over-cautious as to whom we admit to the respectable body of already members. Are we always careful to remember those at our elbow who have worshipped with us for years? Have they been invited to come into closer fellowship with us?

The opportunity for young and old in this aggressive movement is far-reaching. The outlook was never brighter since the days when martyrdom brought ready recruits to our standard. To-day a happier spirit animates us. May it continue steadfast and earnest. The young and zealous of our advance guard, like the pioneers, are blazing the way for a more spiritual religion and life in the future.

Detroit, Mich.

EMILIE P. JACKSON.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

CLEAR CREEK MONTHLY MEETING.

THE town of Wenona is fifty years old, and I have been near it all these years. This morning it is snowing and drifting, but is not so very cold; and while in many other localities they are complaining of coal famine we have an abundance of coal mined right in the corporation from a depth of some five hundred feet, which costs three dollars per ton. I believe there are but three members of Friends in town, but quite a good many of Quaker parentage. I am fourteen miles from the Friends' settlement at Clear Creek, and on last Seventh-day we went there to monthly meeting. While I am not its reporter I will say that we had a very comfortable meeting, and good counsel was given by our friend, Isaac P. Wierman, more particularly to those young in years.

We were also at the regular service on First-day, and it seemed good to be there, even the silent service; but it was not all silence, for utterance was given by several, and the wish expressed that the new year just ushered in might show a renewed zeal and activity, that love might more and more abound, and that the resurrection of the pure, spiritual religion might be ever "uppermost"—a resurrection from dead works to serve the living God. Every person we meet in friendly greeting is an opportunity; our every act should be an expression of love. As children of infinite love we should be faithful and true; love uplifts the fallen, instructs the ignorant, strengthens the weak, revives the disappointed, and gives new energies to all who accept it. So every one in a measure is his brother's keeper, for "there is a power in human sympathy, and it is the great lever that moves the world to action." The blessed Master has said, "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world," and as he overcame and sat down with the Father on his throne, so we must do the same to sit down on his throne, for "unto him that overcometh, to him will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the paradise of God."

First month 7, 1903.

DAVID WRISON.

JOURNALISM.

The Philanthropic Conference held in Swarthmore Meeting-house on First month 11, was a very spirited meeting, though the attendance was not large on account of the rain storm. Senator Wm. C. Sproul gave an address, "Some Thoughts on Modern Journalism," which was short and good, and was followed by an animated discussion. We give here some extracts.

The subject of the influence of journalism is so comprehensive and complex that I should not attempt to cover it completely in the small scope of this paper, nor could I should I try, but I shall endeavor to present a few phases of the matter as they occur to me, especially in the relation of the subject to our everyday life and the ideals which we, as Friends, hold dear

... A cause of much concern is the fact that the Sunday newspaper has become so universal and is so widely read.

... The publishing of a newspaper which appears on First-day is not, in so far as the actual work of preparing it is concerned, so much of a desecration of the Sabbath as might be supposed, most, and in fact all, of the work necessary in preparing it being finished during the week, but the reading of the average Sunday journal is hardly a suitable occupation for the Sabbath. I would consider the readers of most of the Sunday papers more guilty of violating the sanctity of the day than the printers who prepared the paper. But there are Sunday newspapers which are free from sensationalism and are given over to the presentation of news and the giving of reading matter which is not only unobjectionable, in so far as its character is concerned, but is undoubtedly beneficial. I do not defend the practice of reading newspapers on First-day, but on the contrary regard it as an influence which must have an effect, in the long run, in breaking down the institution of the Sabbath and making First-day a day of recreation and worldly enjoyment rather than the period of reflection and religious duty which it was intended it should be.

... How much greater would the effect and influence for good of the newspaper press be were journals to eliminate the more objectionable features which now find place in their news columns, and print the news of the day in a way which would free the public from the danger of the effects of sensationalism and that familiarity with vice which invites toleration. How much greater would the good influence which undoubtedly is exercised by the press be were it not to some extent nullified by the vulgarity, viciousness and loose regard for morality too often shown in the reports of current happenings.

The effort of all whose concern for matters of such great importance is evident in any way, should therefore be to help by their words and writings and influence to build up newspapers which contain the qualifications which most work for good and to labor with those who are responsible both as writers and as readers, for the sensational tendencies which are to be found in so many journals. The effort should be in the direction of having the readers demand and the publishers provide matter which would work entirely for good, and every little that is done in that direction must soon show itself in that great mirror of daily events to which the people have come to look for so much of their knowledge and information and even for their guidance in the everyday affairs of life. In this way the general influence of the press may be made greater and the character of its influence greatly improved.

The Friends may very well take the lead in this great movement, as they have in so many of the other great reforms which have been accomplished in the past three centuries. I know of absolutely no field for philanthropic effort in which the opportunities for effective work are so great, and the quiet, inoffensive methods of our Society could accomplish more and better results than could be done through other means, which would arouse resentment and hostility at the beginning. A general effort to uplift the press and make it what it should be would be a fitting labor of love for the imperial century which we have just entered

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

BYBERRY, PA.—The Friends' Association met on First-day afternoon, the 4th instant, with a larger attendance than usual despite storm and bad roads. The new president and secretary, Edwin K. Bonner and Caroline J. Atkinson, were in their places.

Attention was given to the consideration of several questions of interest, not only to the Association but to the Society at large. The first one was, "Does the future attendance of meeting depend on the older members?" A short paper prepared by Hannah Tomlinson on this subject was read by Edwin K. Bonner, and dwelt principally on the thought that it must depend on the younger members else meetings in many districts will be laid down. Interesting discussions followed, which Edward Comly, Arabella Carter, Nathaniel Richardson, Percival Woodin, and Sarah C. James participated.

"How shall we spend our First-days?" was answered by Caroline J. Atkinson. She advocated attendance of meeting (in right spirit) and First-day school, and Association when held on First-day which she considered proper and profitable. She deplored social visiting on First-day, since it often kept the expectant hostess home from morning meeting. She felt we needed to give more of our First-days to reading and study of the Bible; and believed if First-day was rightly lived all the other days of the week would be strengthened thereby. Anna Comly and Nathaniel Richardson commented on the subject briefly.

"What part have Friends taken in the help of the Indian?" was briefly but comprehensively answered by Hannah W. Comly in an interesting paper, also quoting from letters from Barclay and Howard White in relation thereto. William P. Bonner, Sarah C. James, and Nathaniel Richardson also spoke on this subject.

"Should we as a religious society enter foreign missions?" was answered concisely by Miriam Tomlinson, who felt that while the plain, direct principles of Friends might meet the requirements of some in fields of foreign mission, yet with much at our very doors to do we'd best "do the duty which lies nearest."

Sarah C. James answered affirmatively the question, "Can a citizen be a true patriot and still be a peace man?" quoting also from William S. Haywood on "True Patriotism."

Percival S. Woodin gave a paper on "Freedom of the Religious Ideal." He said in part, "Man has been slowly crawling upward, physically, mentally, and spiritually for centuries. All spiritual leaders have been destroyers, leaving the outgrown case behind when no longer of use. In the religion of God there are no sects; in the religion of man sects seems indispensable. Every man is vibrant with religion if he is attuned to receive it. Not creeds but words reveal the true man. Barriers are being thrown down, the tendency is toward the freedom of the human soul. Let us not hinder it, let it come, 'if God's in his heaven all's right with the world.'"

Recitations on "New Year" and "Peace" were given by C. Willis Edgerton and Carrie Ivins. A. C.

WEST CHESTER, PA.—The Young Friends' Association met on Fourth-day evening, Twelfth month 31, 1902. The president, Lewis K. Stubbs, opened the meeting with a selection from "God's Light on Dark Clouds."

The Committee on First-day evening Bible meetings reported that they consider it advisable to defer these meetings until next year.

Dr. William I. Hull, of Swarthmore College, then gave his illustrated lecture on William Penn. In the course of his lecture Dr. Hull referred to many of the ideas advanced by William Penn, which have since come to be recognized and accepted generally.

EDITH JOSEPHINE HECKMAN, Sec'y, pro. tem.

WRIGHTSTOWN, PA.—The Young Friends' Association held its regular meeting on First-day, First month 4, 1903. Owing to the inclement weather the attendance was small.

This being the annual meeting, the nominating committee presented the following names for officers for the ensuing year:

president, Lillian R. Brooks; vice-president, S. Wilfred Smith; secretary, Clarence H. Smith; treasurer, Eleanor M. Warner; executive committee, Elizabeth Woodman, Elizabeth Mathews, and Beulah Betts.

Elizabeth Mathews read "Friends' Testimonies and Principles," by Isaac H. Hillborn. Remarks on this most excellent paper were made by Eleanor M. Warner and Wilfred Smith. An excellent collection of Current Events were read by Eleanor Warner. Among the subjects she touched was the work of Mrs. Ballington Booth, the child labor laws, and views of the liquor question. LILLIAN R. BROOKS.

CHESTER, PA.—A regular meeting of the Chester Friends' Association was held in Friends' meeting-house, on Sixth-day evening, First month 9, at 8 o'clock.

After the customary silence, and Scripture reading by Irwin D. Wood, the program for the evening was taken up. It had been decided to devote the evening to the discussion of "Longfellow and his Works." A short account of the poet's life was first given by Ida E. Houston, followed by the reading of "The Wreck of the Hesperus," by Laura C. James. Chester Cutler gave a short paper, entitled, "Longfellow's Prose Works," and Katherine Stevenson's reading of "The Legend Beautiful" was much enjoyed. The last number on the program, the "Masque of Pandora," given by Dora A. Gilbert, was greatly appreciated by the audience. The meeting adjourned after a brief silence.

IDA E. HOUSTON, Cor. Sec.

CAMDEN, N. J.—The Young Friends' Association met Third-day evening, First month 6, 1903.

It being the first meeting after the election of officers William H. Ivins, in a few well chosen words introduced the new president, Harry Avis. Isaac H. Hillborn gave an address on "The Principles and Testimonies of Friends." Friends in general expressed themselves well pleased in hearing this interesting, instructive, and elevating address, and the thanks of the Association were extended to Isaac H. Hillborn for the information which he gave.

EDUCATIONAL.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

STUDENTS returned from the Christmas vacation on Second-day, the 5th instant, and regular work began at 8.30 the following morning.

On the evening of the 5th President Swain gave a short sketch of the life and work of President Jordan of the Leland Stanford University. This was done in anticipation of the lecture to be given by President Jordan on the evening of the 7th, and made the latter more interesting. President Jordan gave as his subject, "The Call of the Twentieth Century." He spoke of the century as being strenuous, complex, and democratic. It would be strenuous because there is so much to do in one hundred years, complex because of the varied relations we bear each other and because of the many decisions there will be to make. We have to say yes, or no, one hundred times where our fathers did once. Democratic here means the shortest distance between two points. The work of to-day calls for the man best fitted. A man is valued for what he can do, not for himself, but for the world. Opportunity to rise means at the same time opportunity to fall, but the best thing a young man can have is hard luck for a time, for then he learns to overcome it. He then named some of the many fields in which the right kind of a man can rise. Hopeful men, men of high ideals, men of loyalty, and men of sober minds are needed, for as knowledge is defective, so actions are defective. "The first and greatest duty of a young man is to so live that the man that ought to be, will be."

On the following morning collection was called at 8 o'clock, and Dr. Jordan gave a talk on Agassiz. The talk was interesting and instructive, especially so because the personal touch of regard for his teacher ran through the incidents related. We congratulate ourselves on our good fortune in having Dr. Jordan at Swarthmore.

After the lecture on Fourth-day evening an informal reception was held in Dean Bond's parlor.

Dean Bond gave an address at our First-day meeting this week. It gave some valuable advice and suggestions which would be well to follow in our college life. P. M. W.

PLYMOUTH FRIENDS' SCHOOL.—The condition and promises of the Friends' School at Plymouth Meeting, Pa., during the present school year, says the Ambler Gazette, have been most gratifying to those interested in its welfare. At the opening in the Fall it became evident the accommodations in the higher department would be inadequate to provide comfortably for the increased number of applicants. The committee at once prepared to meet the need by the addition of a new and cheerful class room over the vestibule. New desks have been added also in the assembly room, of the same improved make as those in use, thus providing comfortably for the present growth and needs of the school.

LITERARY NOTES.

AN interesting article in the last Review of Reviews is a sketch of Herbert W. Bowen, who has figured so prominently in the Venezuelan affair. He comes of distinguished ancestry. His father was Henry C. Bowen, so many years editor and proprietor of the Independent, his mother was Lucy Maria Tappan, daughter of Lewis Tappan, the New York silk merchant and abolitionist who paid William Lloyd Garrison's fine and released him from Baltimore jail. He is also a lineal descendant of the Indian apostle, John Eliot, and a great great-grand-nephew of Benjamin Franklin. At the outbreak of the war with Spain he was American consul at Barcelona, where he narrowly escaped being mobbed; after this he was made United States minister to Persia and then to Venezuela, where he seems to have gained the good will and confidence of all the parties to the controversy. Another notable article is an elucidation of the British Education Bill, by W. T. Stead; the purpose of this bill is to give the Anglican Church virtual control over all of the national schools.

Systems and plans for educating children come and go, but Jacob Abbott's book on "Gentle Measures in the Management and Training of the Young" stands the test of time and remains a standard. The Harpers, complying with a demand, are bringing out a new edition of this wise and valuable work. Jacob Abbott is famous, also, as the author of that series of histories of which Abraham Lincoln said: "I have read them with the greatest interest. To them I am indebted for about all the historical knowledge I have."

COMMUNICATIONS.

APPRECIATIVE WORDS.

Editors FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

IN the tributes to the varied services of our beloved friend, Howard M. Jenkins, almost nothing has been said of his connection with George School. He was appointed in 1888 by the Yearly Meeting on the first Committee, after the bequest of John M. George became available, and continued an active and efficient member of the committee until his death, rarely missing a meeting. His last public act was the attendance of a meeting of the General Committee at the school. Believing that the liberal bequest of John M. George for the endowment of a Boarding School for Friends' children gave more enlarged opportunities for a better and more liberal education of our young people, which would increase their usefulness and add to the strength and influence of the Society of Friends, he devoted much time and thought to its organization. His views were enlightened, and he earnestly promoted its foundation on a broad and solid basis, having in mind its future growth and development. With a wise conservatism, he stood for simplicity and the economical management of the school, at the same time he encouraged whatever would be for the welfare and the proper advancement of the students. Concerned that all the children of Friends might have the benefits which the school offered, he always advocated an adequate appropriation, by the Committee, of the endowment fund for that purpose.

As chairman of the Library Committee he had a great care that the library should be started on a good foundation, with a view to its steady growth, and that only the best literature and that of permanent value should be placed on its shelves.

He took an active part in all committee work, and his clear and discriminating judgment was most helpful in solving many of the problems which claimed the consideration of the committee. Though holding closely to his own opinions, he ever manifested, in his intercourse with his associates, a contagious good humor, courtesy, and a kindly consideration for their views and feelings.

A MEMBER OF THE COMMITTEE.

LESSON LEAVES AGAIN.

Editors FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

When I wrote you in regard to the Lesson Leaves I had not received any of the Intermediate (or Old Testament) Lessons. I use them for my class, and wrote for the number desired. They reached me yesterday and I have just read one of them through. I am as well pleased with them as with the International. They are written in such a loving spirit they cannot fail of being helpful. The questions I consider a great improvement, as without them it is so much more difficult to impress the truths taught upon the mind of the scholar. I am so glad to see First-day School Lessons—International and Intermediate—prepared with such careful thought.

LYDIA J. MOSHER.

Granville, N. Y., First month 7, 1903.

JUSTICE FOR THE NEGRO.

Editors FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

At a recent meeting of the Chicago Political Equality League a paper was read by Ida Wells Barnett entitled, "The Negro Woman of America, Past, Present, and Future." The writer is an educated, refined colored woman, who went abroad a few years ago, and lectured upon the condition of her race in this country, especially of the great number of lynchings of negroes and their persecution in the Southern States. She had large audiences in England, and was listened to with respectful attention. She was invited to many of the best homes, and kindly entertained socially. Among other things she said:

"The greatest work of the American negro woman of the future is to emancipate the white women of the country from the thralldom of race prejudice which fetters their noblest endeavor and renders inconsistent their most sacred professions.

"This colored woman will be able to do by reason of a culture more general and broader than that of her mother of to-day; by a bearing so dignified and courteous, and withal so tempered by a nature absolutely incapable of race hatred; by a genius which shall delight the world; by a love which beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.

"Those who have followed Booker Washington's idea of industrial education have found that the trade union will not permit the negro to become a member, and refuses to permit him to work outside of them. In the half dozen unions which admit colored men, they find that again color is a handicap, since they are the first laid off and the last put to work. The same spirit of discrimination applies to the professional man, who is not in a locality composed mostly of his own people."

Her paper aroused a good deal of feeling among the women of the League who were present, and many expressions of sympathy. Cecelia Parker Woolley, always the faithful friend and advocate of the negro woman, said it was not so much sympathy that was needed as justice. Something was said about the necessity of the race making its own way and rising in spite of difficulties. Another member, always a consistent and helpful friend of the race, asked, "How can they rise when we are sitting on them?" An English woman, Miss Valence, who is in America lecturing, said the English people were also guilty; that in India, where a large portion of the English people are military men, the women are forbidden to associate with the East Indians, however cultivated and refined they might be. She attributed this prejudice to the fact that the conqueror always considers himself superior to the conquered, and the served to those who serve him. These facts, together with the prejudice of the white race against the dark races, form the principal causes of the conflict.

Booker Washington has said in substance that when the colored race becomes educated, both in head and hand, and develops into an able, intelligent people, acquires property and means, thus becoming independent of the white race, and possessing something which the latter wants, the question of color will no longer be considered.

So it would seem that what is necessary is for the white race to "get off" and give the colored race a chance, then "lend-a-hand" when possible. We may force them up, but they will not stay unless they rise by their own inherent leaven. This they will certainly do in time.

I believe the day is coming when negroes will come into their own, and no longer be treated as inferiors. I believe the day is coming when women will not be treated as minors, but will walk abreast with men, equal in responsibility, and as citizens of the world. Great reforms generally move slowly. They may move as a glacier, but the bond will break when the hour comes, and a new era may begin. They may move as a cyclone and astonish the world, or as a river whose course may be altered by obstacles placed in their way. They may be hindered by mankind, but they cannot be prevented for ever. Our own prophet Whittier tells us—

"Nothing fails of its end. Out of sight sinks the stone
In the deep sea of time, but the circles sweep on Till the low-rippled murmurs along the shores run,
And the dark and dead waters leap glad in the sun."
And this—

"A little while the world may run
Its old mad way, with needle gun
And iron-clad, but truth, at last, shall reign;
The cradle-song of Christ was never sung in vain."

Glencoe, Ill., First month 9, 1903. H. A. P.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

FLORENCE R. KENDERDINE, daughter of the late Watson Kenderdine, of Lumberville, Pa., who recently went as a kindergartner to the Indian school at Truxton, Arizona, is having an experience that she did not anticipate. Smallpox has broken out in the school, the servants have departed, and she and another teacher are doing the cooking for the establishment.

Allen and Sarah B. Flitcraft expect to attend Caln Quarterly Meeting to be held at Christiana on the 22d instant.

The Friends and other temperance people of Newtown Square, Pa., are rejoicing because the ancient hotel on the trolley line between West Chester and Philadelphia, which has long been a half-way house for travellers on the West Chester pike, has been refused a license by the Delaware county court.

Peter Verigin, the Doukhobor leader who recently arrived in Canada after fifteen years' exile in Siberia, is thus described by a reporter of the Manitoba Free Press: "His manner is marked with a natural courtesy and simple dignity that would single him out for notice anywhere. His voice is low and of singular sweetness. Physically he is a splendid type of his race, tall and strongly built; of erect and graceful carriage, he would attract attention among hundreds of good-looking men. His features are regular and his skin of an olive pallor. His hair and beard are luxuriant and black as jet. His eyes are dark and thoughtful, and his whole expression is that of a man who has suffered much, and has triumphed over everything through the force of kingly courage and constancy."

A daughter of Charles E. Cock (whose death is noted in this paper) writes that she thinks her father has been a subscriber to the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER ever since his marriage in 1850, and that all his children will continue to read it.

THE new electrical plant at the White House is the result of six months' hard work. It includes a lighting system which supplies current to 3,000 incandescent bulbs; a power system which works ventilating motors, automatic pumps, and elevators; and also a bell system and a telephone system. There are also watchman's clock, a burglar alarm system and apparatus for protection against fire, all operated automatically.

LOSS.

Who that hath lost some dear-beloved friend
But knoweth how—when the wild grief is spent
That tore his soul with agony, and did lend
E'en to the splendor-bearing firmament
The blighting darkness of his shadowed heart—
There surely follows peace and quiet sorrow
That lead his spirit, by divinest art,
Past the drear present to that glorious morrow
Where parting is not, neither grief nor fear!
—Hildegarde Hawthorne, in Atlantic Monthly.

ENCOURAGEMENT.

'Twas long ago I read the story sweet,
Of how the German mothers, o'er the sea,
Wind in throughout the yarn their girls knit,
Some trinkets small and tiny shining coins;
That, when the little fingers weary grow
And fain would lay aside the tiresome task,
From out the ball will drop the hidden gift,
To please and urge them on in search of more.

And so I think the Father, kind, above,
Winds in and out the skin of life we weave,
Through all the years, bright tokens of his love,
That, when we weary grow and long for rest,
They help to cheer and urge us on for more;
And far adown within the ball we find,
When all the threads of life at last are spun,
The grandest gift of all—eternal life.

—Selected.

THE FALLEN PINE-CONE.

I LIFT thee thus, thou brown and rugged cone,
Well poised and high
Between the flowering grasses and the sky;
And, as sea-voices dwell
In the fine chambers of the ocean-shell,
So fancy's ear
Within thy numberless, dim complexities
Hath seemed oftimes to hear
The imprisoned spirits of all winds that blow;
Winds of late autumn that lamenting moan
Across the wild sea surges' ebb and flow;
Storm-winds of winter mellowed to a sigh,
Long-drawn and plaintive: or—how lingeringly—
Soft echoes of the spring-tide's jocund breeze,
Blent with the summer's south wind, murmuring low.

What wonder, fairy cone, that thou should'st hold
The semblance of these voices, day and night,
Proudly enthroned upon the wavering height
Of yon monarchical pine, thou didst absorb
The elemental virtues of all airs,
Timid or bold,
Measures of gentle joys and wild despairs,
Breathed from all quarters of our changeful orb;
Whether with mildness freighted or with might,
Into thy form they entered, to remain
Each the strange phantom of a perished tone,
An eerie, marvellous strain
Pent up in this tiny Hades made to fold
Ghosts of the heavenly couriers long ago,
Sunk as men dreamed by ocean and by shore,
Into the void of silence evermore.

—Hamilton Hayne.

A DESPATCH from Boston to the Philadelphia Ledger states that Paul Revere's old home, one of the few structures of pre-Revolutionary interest in Boston, has been bought by John P. Reynolds, Jr., a real estate dealer, who proposes to preserve it. The house is in North Square, in the heart of the thickly settled North End, and was built in 1676, Revere buying it four years later. The purchaser will ask others to assist him in restoring the building before handing it over to the care of some patriotic society.

PETER VERIGIN'S EXILE.

WHEN the Doukhobour leader reached Winnipeg he was asked by a reporter of the Free Press to say something concerning his exile.

"That would be a long story," he said. "If I could talk English I should much like to tell you. But you cannot always trust interpreters. I was sent to exile from the Caucasus for five years; when that was passed I was sentenced for another five years, and when that, too, had gone, I was given yet another five years. When I was allowed to go free I wanted to go to the Caucasus to see my wife and son, but the government would not allow me, nor would they allow them to come to see me. They might have come to Canada with the Doukhobors four years ago, but they would not because it would take them farther from me; I do not know whether the government will give them passports to come to Canada, and perhaps I shall never see them."

As Verigin talked of his wife his voice broke several times. He sprang up from his chair and paced up and down the room while speaking of them, and it was some minutes before he regained his composure.

"What did you do while in exile?" next asked the reporter.

"Do?" repeated Verigin, "why we ate and slept, of course. I used an axe and carpentered and built stores. We had all to earn our own living, for the Russian Government allows nothing for the sustenance of its exiles. Many times I asked for a trial, but it was always refused. I was never condemned by a judge, or by due process of law, but by an 'administrative order' of the government which enables them to detain any person objective to it."

"Are the reports of cruelty and ill-usage of the exiles, of which we sometimes hear, true?"

"In what way you mean, ill-use?" answered Verigin, "the exiles are sent to a village. They have to walk all the way. If any are tired and fall behind they are beaten. If they try to run away they are shot. If they go outside the village boundaries they are punished—maybe sent down the mines. In Irkutsk there were some student exiles. They said they wanted the limits of their walks extended, that it was ridiculous to confine them in such a small space. Soon after they were told to march into a building. Expecting to hear a reply to their request they went. The building was surrounded by soldiers. They fired a volley, wounding many of the students and killing two."

At Moscow, Verigin saw Count Tolstoj, who was rejoiced at his release. "I wonder if the government hasn't made a mistake," he said, "you'd better get to Canada soon, for they may change their minds and give you another five years."

By this time Verigin's sister and the others had completed their preparations for the meal. The kettle was set on the white table cloth—woven by the Doukhobor women—it was spotlessly clean and did not soil it in the least—to use as a samovar. Bread and Cross & Blackwell's jam were the staples. Loat sugar was poured out on a plate and eaten as a relish. Verigin cut a lemon in thin slices, and poured tea, inviting the Free Press representative to join him at his meal. During the progress of the repast, Verigin chatted with perfect ease on general topics. He said he wanted to take a walk around the city that evening, as his Doukhobor friends had often written to him of its marvels. He looked with some surprise at the electric light, when it was turned on, but merely remarked, "I am seeing new things all the time."

THE EVILS OF LYNCHING AND CONVICT CAMPS.

A committee of the Howard Association, London, England, of which Henry Gurney is chairman, Alfred F. Buxton, treasurer, and Edward Grubb, secretary, has sent the following appeal to the conductors of the newspapers and public journals of the United States.

WILL you pardon this intrusion on your attention by the Committee of the Howard Association of Great Britain—a society having for its object the promotion of the best methods of the treatment and prevention of crime?

We have long labored in the advocacy of improvements in the penal systems of our own and other nations, and, although considerable progress has been made in this direction, we are conscious that there is still much room for improvement in many of the social and legislative conditions on this side of the Atlantic. Some of your own countrymen, both from the Northern and Southern States, have very usefully co-operated in furthering various reforms in the penal and prison systems of Europe, and their labors have especially deepened our interest in the extension of similar movements amongst our own people. With much satisfaction we have heard of the greatly increased public attention which, of late years, has been directed to the improvement of the prisons in many of the United States, and in particular to the extension of efforts to prevent juvenile crime.

At the same time, we may confess that this gratification at American progress has been accompanied by a strong and friendly desire that similar practical earnestness could be manifested in the Southern section of your country, in regard to the suppression of the evils of lynching and of the convict camps, especially those connected with the leasing-out system. The inhumanities of these camps, which have been acknowledged in some of the official reports issued by the authorities of certain Southern States, are peculiarly apt to elude public knowledge and attention, by reason both of the remote localities in which they are situated and the privacy of management which usually characterizes them. These conditions also render it very difficult to bring home to the perpetrators the cruelty and vice which are almost necessary accompaniments of the systems still prevalent in some of the Southern States.

But far more open to public cognizance are the cruelties attendant upon the lynching of offenders in the South, who, if brought to legal trial and proved guilty, would certainly be punished in accordance with the State Laws. We learn that, of late years, many hundred persons (some of them only suspected of crime, and possibly innocent) have been slowly burned to death, with horrible ingenuities of torment, and in the presence of multitudes of men, women and children, sometimes brought together, from far and near, by excursion trains, as for a public holiday.

The people of the United States deservedly enjoy a very high position in the world's estimation; and it is precisely because we, with innumerable others, desire to see this honorable appreciation maintained and further exalted, that we venture thus to invite your special endeavors, gentlemen, as powerful moulders of the public opinion and action of your great country, to strengthen the influence of the more humane and intelligent class of your citizens who are opposed to the evils in question.

The Southern States have furnished some of the noblest types of character, such, for example, as those of George Washington, Henry Clay, "Stonewall" Jackson, and others like-minded. The scenes connected with lynching horrors and convict camp vices should be strenuously suppressed by the compatriots and successors of those illustrious men.

The many excellent persons in the Southern States, to whom the profession of religion and the honor of God are heartfelt realities, will doubtless welcome, on the part of their own influential journalists, any measure of encouragement and co-operation which you, gentlemen, may be willing to afford them. And you, yourselves, in rendering this needed service to God and to humanity, cannot fail to derive a solid satisfaction and reward.

THE ACCLIMATIZATION OF THE PEACH.

J. Russell Smith in the Journal of Geography.

ONE of the recent discoveries in pomological science shows a rather curious phase of the adaptation of plants to their environment. Many plants take advantage of the fact that dark colors absorb heat, and in unfavorable localities they assume reddish, rather than greenish tints, so that they may absorb heat and live. This is particularly noticeable in Alpine plants, many species having a reddish variety for high altitudes and a variety of lighter color for warmer locations. The oak buds in spring and the dying leaves in the early blossoms, are white in midsummer, and in autumn are reddish; some roses have a pink color again red in autumn. Many plants can assume the warmer color if occasion demands, as was shown in the Leipzig botanic garden this spring. The exceptionally cold weather of May caused some species to put forth leaves so red as to make the specimen almost unrecognizable. The workings of this law are not without their economic aspects.

Professor Whitten, of the University of Missouri, has discovered that the American peach crop suffers from the fact that the trees of many varieties have purple twigs, absorb too much heat in the winter sunshine, bloom too early and perish from frost. The varieties of peaches cultivated in America are the descendants of those that have come from France and England, where, having struggled for centuries against a cool climate, they have developed reddish twigs and have only prospered when spread out flat against a sunny wall. The selection of early-ripening specimens for propagation has hastened the reddening process, which becomes a disadvantage in the warmer climate of America.

The danger of early blooming due to purple twigs may be avoided by whitewashing the twigs, thus giving them the desired color, or by getting new varieties of peaches, having more favorably colored twigs. Unfortunately the winter rains in most sections of the United States wash off the whitewash spray that may be put on to protect the tree. The greater part of the country must therefore await the appearance of the new varieties.

We have at present many half-wild seedling trees of the green color. They sometimes produce a fence corner crop under surprisingly adverse conditions, but those with marketable fruit have not yet appeared. To get them we will probably have to disown the results of European culture and go back to Central or Western Asia, the ancient home of the peach. There it has struggled with heat, not cold, and consequently these varieties may be better fitted to thrive in our continental climate, but it is yet to be learned whether or not Asia Minor, Persia or China have peaches of the quality that we require. While these facts are yet unknown Professor Whitten and others are trying to solve the problem at home by hybridization—mixing the strains of good peaches and hardy peaches so that the new variety may have the good qualities of both parents and the faults of neither.

JUST THREE THINGS.

"I ONCE met a scholar," said Bishop Whipple, "who told me that for years he had read every book he could which assailed the religion of Jesus Christ, and he said he would have become an infidel but for three things.

"First, I am a man. I am going somewhere. To-night I am a day nearer the grave than I was last night. I have read all such books can tell me. They shed not one solitary ray upon the darkness. They shall not take away the only guide and leave me stone-blind.

"Second, I had a mother. I saw her go down the dark valley where I am going, and she leaned upon an unseen arm as calmly as a child goes to sleep on the breast of its mother. I knew that was not a dream.

"Third, I have three motherless daughters—and he said it with tears in his eyes—they have no protector but myself. I would rather kill them than leave them in this sinful world if you blot out from it all the teachings of the gospel."

At a recent election the town of Collinwood, Ohio, voted against license. The Lake Shore railroad thereupon resolved to expend $1,000,000 in new shops, in addition to their extensive buildings in the place. Had the town voted for license this money would have gone elsewhere.

The American Invasion.

THE proofs of the extent to which American manufacturers are invading the globe continue to accumulate. It is not, indeed, particularly surprising that we should now be sending locomotives to Guatemala and Brazil, agricultural implements to Argentina and harvesting-machines to France, electrical apparatus to Japan, a shoe-manufacturing plant to Mexico, and mining machinery to Johannesburg. We may well open our eyes, however, when we learn that engineers from Central Asia are expected soon to reach this country for the purpose of placing contracts with American firms for cotton-seed-oil-mills. Strange to say, too, the German government is purchasing from the Philadelphia Pneumatic Tube Company pneumatic tubes for the Imperial Navy Yard at Kiel; American capitalists have started a factory at Glasgow, Scotland, for the manufacture of golf-balls; large engines for British blast-furnaces are about to be shipped by a foundry and machine company in Philadelphia; and King Edward VII. has requested a Pittsburg firm to provide the charging stations for his automobiles at Sandringham with the electrical portion of the apparatus.

It is well known that the finer qualities of women's shoes, which used to be made exclusively in France, are now manufactured so much more skilfully in the United States that they have driven the French products out of the fashionable shops in Paris itself. For cheap watches we used to have to go to Switzerland, but now watches can be made nowhere so cheaply as in the United States. There is scarcely any product of human industry, from a battle-ship to a gimlet-screw, as to which the American inventor does not outstrip his competitors. It is true that our war-ships cost more to build and more to run, owing to the higher wages claimed by American labor. On the other hand, there is reason to believe that the ships are better.—[Harper's Weekly.]

Skimming It.

"If you are going to give a pan of milk, don't skim it first," the old grandmother used to say, meaning: If you are going to do a favor, don't spoil it by an ungracious word or manner.

Haven't we noticed how much of the skimming goes on in ordinary family intercourse?

"Another errand? I never can go down-town without a half-dozen commissions!" complains Rob, when his sister asks him to bring a book from the library. He never refuses to oblige her; he does not really count it an inconvenience; he only takes the cream off his kindness.

"Those gloves ripped again!" exclaims Mary, when John wants her to take a few stitches. "It seems to me they always need mending when I'm in a hurry with something else." She would be shocked at his going shabby, and distressed if anyone thought her unwilling to render such office, but she makes it a little unpleasant to ask the favor.

The children follow the fashion. Tommy shuts the door at Bridget's request, but he grumbles at having to leave his top. Susie goes to the door when she is sent, but she departs with a protest that it is Tommy's turn. Thus all day long people who love one another skim the sweetness from every service they render.—[Nashville Christian Advocate.]

Two Views of a Boy.

I WAS visiting his school, and the Boy sat in the back row. Three times I saw him slyly punch his neighbor, who calmly continued his work; the fourth time the neighbor, exasperated, leaned over and gave the Boy "a good one." Unfortunately, just at that moment the teacher happened to look that way; and, of course, the teacher spoke reprovably to the neighbor, and the Boy giggled behind his book. When the Boy came to class, he seemed to feel that his whole duty was to be social and entertain the whole company. Nothing was serious to him, and I, being a relative, felt aggrieved to think that he had reached the age of thirteen and was so foolish. He seemed to have no depth, no appreciation of anything, and I have no doubt that I looked my disgust.

Two weeks passed. I sat at the funeral of the Boy's grandfather—a grand, calm, dear old man. The Boy was opposite to me. No one was attempting to "manage" him. With head erect, eyes big with a solemn sadness, he sat, without moving even to ease his position, through three long sermons and the solemn silence of a Friend's funeral.

What held him so motionless—him who I felt sure could not sit still five minutes at a time? I had measured only the laughing exterior and called him shallow; what was his measure of himself? What is my measure for my character? What is your measure for yours? Each of us knows something of his own possibilities and measures himself by his deepest depth. Our truest friends, those who influence us the most, are those who believe in our possibilities. We look into their eyes, and we can do because they believe we can do. Since I silently pressed the hand of the Boy after that funeral, and met his self-restrained, dignified look, we have met on a different level. I have never seen the shallow boy since. Might I not have met the deep boy before?—[E. S. Scott, in Sunday School Times.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

THE Coal Strike Commission has continued its investigations. Owing to the indisposition of Judge Gray, General Wilson has presided for several days. Witnesses for non-union workers testified to many deeds of violence, but only in a few instances could they give positive proof that they had been committed by strikers. On the other hand there was no evidence to show that the unions had made any earnest effort to prevent attacks upon non-union men. In regard to child labor the representative of the Delaware and Hudson Company stated that that company would join with the United Mine Workers in support of legislation making it unlawful to employ any child in or about the mines who is under sixteen years of age.

THE large gathering of the citizens of Boston in Faneuil Hall on the 8th instant to demand of Congress the removal of the tariff duties on coal has been followed by similar demands from many other parts of the country. Several measures for relief have been presented in Congress, and it is reported at this writing that Republican leaders in Senate and House have agreed to pass a joint resolution allowing a rebate for one year on all coal imports equal to the amount of the duty paid. This will virtually remove the duty on coal without interfering with the Dingley tariff.

AN appendix to the report of the Philippine Commission states that from the time of its first appearance in Malolos, Bulacan province, to Ninth month 1, 1902, the total number of recorded cases of cholera was 52,536, of which 37,473 resulted fatally, the mortality being 71 per cent. In addition to the cholera there is much distress in the islands owing to the destruction by rinderpest of 90 per cent. of the carabaos, the draft animals of the island, and the consequent failure of the rice crop. Secretary Root recommends that Congress appropriate $3,000,000 to relieve the distress, and President Roosevelt has endorsed the recommendation.

THE recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of the Western Union Telegraph Company vs. the Borough of New Hope, Pa., is likely to have a far-reaching effect. It sustains the right of a municipality to exact from such companies reasonable annual license fees for the maintenance of its poles and wires within the municipal limits. For some years past boroughs have been adopting ordinances like this, but the telegraph companies have vigorously resisted the collection of the fees.

THE new English liquor law, known as the licensing act, makes habitual drunkenness of either husband or wife a ground for legal separation, and authorizes the police to arrest an inebriate anywhere except in a private house. Convicted drunkards are blacklisted for three years and selling liquor to them during that period is forbidden under severe penalties.

To get drunk while in charge of a child under seven years of age is forbidden under penalty of imprisonment.

HENRY PHIPPS, of New York, a former partner of Andrew Carnegie, will establish in Philadelphia an institute for the study, treatment and prevention of tuberculosis, and will endow it with $1,000,000 or more. The institute will be modeled somewhat on the Pasteur Institute of Paris, but will be devoted exclusively to the study and treatment of consumption, and will be made the centre of the distribution of knowledge as to the treatment and prevention of tuberculosis in this country.

ANDREW CARNEGIE has offered $1,500,000 to the city of Philadelphia for the erection of thirty branch free libraries on sites to be purchased by the city, or presented to the latter by private donors for the purpose, provided that the city agrees to furnish the sites for the libraries, purchase the books, and guarantee the cost of maintenance. This offer has been formally accepted by the Board of Trustees of the Philadelphia Free Library, subject to the approval of City Councils.

NEWS NOTES.

DANIEL H. HASTINGS, ex-Governor of Pennsylvania, died of pleuro-pneumonia on the 9th inst., at his home in Bellefonte, Pa.

A DESPATCH from South Bend, Indiana, on the 9th instant states that coal cannot be had at any price and that people are burning beans at $1.50 a bushel.

DURING the past two years the post-office money-order department handled $602,596,930, and the total loss on account of dishonesty or carelessness amounted to $251.

FOR four hours, on the 7th inst., not a trolley wheel turned in Lancaster county, Pa., while the nearly 500 employes of the railway and light company attended their annual banquet.

THE Colonial House and ancient grist mill and barn comprising the Curzon estate, near Newburyport, Mass., which were widely known for their antiquity and as subjects for artists were burned to the ground on the 9th instant.

A DESPATCH from Manila states that the Filipinos, including many of the former insurgents, are begging Governor Taft to remain in the Philippines, and not to accept the tender of a place on the bench of the United States Supreme Court.

THE Springfield Republican states that 500,000 tons of coal are being either brought across the Atlantic or are ready for shipment to this country. Vessels returning from English ports find it a source of profit to bring back the coal instead of returning empty or in ballast.

A DESPATCH from Peking dated the 7th instant says that all the foreign Ministers, except United States Minister Conger, signed the joint note informing the Chinese Government that a failure to pay the war indemnity on a gold basis as provided for by the peace protocol, would entail grave consequences.

THE Reading Railway, including all its railroad tributaries and dependencies and its coal properties, has passed into the hands jointly of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Vanderbilts. Control of the Reading is lodged, for the Pennsylvania, with the Baltimore and Ohio; for the Vanderbilts, with the Lake Shore.

JUSTICE HOLMES has delivered an opinion in the United States Supreme Court that the clause in the constitution of California prohibiting dealings in margins on stocks does not violate the 14th amendment of the federal constitution. Justice Holmes' view that the clause was sound was sustained by all the bench except Justices Brewer and Peckham.

THE General Assembly of Pennsylvania met and organized on the 7th instant. Senator Scott was elected President pro tem. of the Senate and Henry F. Walton Speaker of the House. A joint resolution was adopted providing for final adjournment on Fourth month 16. United States Senator Boies Penrose was nominated to succeed himself by the Republican joint caucus of the Legislature. Thirteen Republicans were absent from the caucus.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

1ST MO. 17.—THE SUB-COMMITTEE ON Temperance and Tobacco of the Committee on Philanthropic Labor of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends will meet in Room No. 1, 15th and Race Streets, Philadelphia, at 11 o'clock a.m.

The Sub-Committees will meet as follows:

Educational and Publication Committee at 10 a. m., in Room No. 1.

Legislation Committee 10 a. m., in Race Street Parlor.

1ST MO. 17.—MANSFIELD, N. J., YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Mary L. Bowne.

1ST MO. 17.—GIRARD AVENUE (PHILADELPHIA) Friends' Association, at 8 p. m.

1ST MO. 18.—AT WILMINGTON, DEL., in the Friends' meeting-house, the Annual Philanthropic Conference under the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting, at 2.30 p. m. Subject, "Equal Rights for Women." The meeting will be addressed by Elizabeth Lloyd and others.

1ST MO. 18.—WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Friends' meeting at 11 a. m., at the home of Sarah A. Knowlton, 52 South Lexington Avenue. Visiting Friends will be welcome.

1ST MO. 18.—FRANKFORD MEETING, visited by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee, at 10.30 a. m.

1ST MO. 19.—FAIRFAX QUARTERLY MEETING, at Fairfax, Va., at 10 a. m. Meeting of Ministers and Elders the preceding Seventh-day, at 3 p. m.

Friends and others wishing to attend will take the train at Sixth Street Station, Washington, for Paconian Springs, where carriages will be in waiting to take them to homes. Trains leave at 8.50 a. m., 1.00 and 4.35 p. m.

1ST MO. 20.—WESTERN QUARTERLY Meeting, at London Grove, Pa., at 10 a. m. Meeting of Ministers and Elders the preceding day at 11 a. m.

1ST MO. 21.—THE MONTHLY MEETING OF Friends of Philadelphia held at Race Street will be held on Fourth-day next, in the evening, at 7.30 o'clock.

1ST MO. 22.—THE MONTHLY MEETING OF Friends held at Green Street, Philadelphia, will take place on Fifth-day next, in the afternoon, at 3 o'clock.

1ST MO. 22.—CALN QUARTERLY MEETING, at Christiana, Pa., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders same day at 10 a. m.

1ST MO. 23.—A MEETING OF "THE Friends' Equal Rights Association" will be held in the Lecture Room at the Central School, at 15th and Race Sts., on Sixth-day, at 8 o'clock, to be addressed by Hon. William N. Ashman, followed by discussion. Cordial invitation to all.

1ST MO. 24.—AN EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE, to which an invitation is extended by the Association of Friends' Schools and the Committee on Education, will be held in the Lecture Room of Friends' Central School. Program: at 2 p. m., lecture by State Superintendent Nathan C. Schaeffer, subject, "The Core of the School Curriculum"; at 3 p. m., Round Table. Leader, Dr. Samuel C. Schmucker, subject, "Method of Nature-Work."

1ST MO. 24.—WESTBURY QUARTERLY Meeting, in New York, at 10.30 a. m. Ministers and Elders day before at 3 p. m.

1ST MO. 25.—GREEN STREET MEETING, Philadelphia, 10.30 a. m., visited by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee.

1ST MO. 25.—PENN'S GROVE YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Samuel Broomell.

1ST MO. 25.—HOPEWELL, VA., YOUNG Friends' Association.

1ST MO. 25.—AN APPOINTED MEETING will be held at the Quarterly Meeting Home, 5800 Greene St., Germantown, on First-day, at 3 o'clock p. m. Take Germantown cars on either Eighth or Thirteenth Streets for Chelton Avenue, which is 5700.

1ST Mo. 27. — CONCORD QUARTERLY Meeting, at West Chester, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 2 p. m.

1ST Mo. 27.—A MEETING UNDER THE care of the Membership Committee of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting to explain Friendly views and principles will be held at the meeting-house, 35th Street and Lancaster Avenue, on Third-day evening, at 8 o'clock.

Joel Barton, of Woodstown, N. J., will address the meeting; subject to be announced later. This will, we hope, be a help to those whose ideas of the principles of Friends have never been clear. We would especially invite those not members, whose feelings are friendly to our Society.

Friends' Library at 15th and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, will hereafter be open from 11 a. m. to 9 p. m., each weekday, except Thanksgiving, Christmas, and New Year's Days, week of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, and Seventh and Eighth months.

This is a great increase in hours and is upon a more uniform schedule. Friends and other persons are invited to make use of the Library as a Reading Room and for the borrowing of books.

An accurate topographical map of the Grand Canon of the Colorado is being made for the government. It shows a width of the canon of from eight to ten miles, and an average depth of one mile.

GOLDEN GATE TOUR.

UNDER THE PERSONALLY-CONDUCTED SYSTEM OF THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The first Pennsylvania Railroad Personally-conducted Tour to California for the present season will leave New York and Philadelphia on the Golden Gate Special, January 29, going via Chicago, Kansas City, and El Paso to Los Angeles and San Diego. An entire month may be spent on the Pacific Coast. The Golden Gate Special will leave San Francisco, returning Tuesday, March 3, stopping at Salt Lake City, Glenwood Springs, Colorado Springs, and Denver. Rate, $300 from all points on the Pennsylvania Railroad east of Pittsburg, covering all expenses of railroad transportation, side trips in California, and berth and meals going and returning on the special train. No hotel expenses in California are included. Tickets are good for return within nine months, but when not used returning on the Golden Gate Special they cover transportation only. For detailed itinerary apply to Ticket Agents, or address George W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

WASHINGTON.

THREE-DAY PERSONALLY-CONDUCTED TOUR VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The next Pennsylvania Railroad Personally-conducted Tour to Washington leaves Thursday, January 29. Rate, covering railroad transportation for the round trip, hotel accommodations, and transfer of passenger and baggage, station to hotel in Washington, $14.50 from New York, $13.00 from Trenton, and $11.50 from Philadelphia. These rates cover accommodations for two days at the Arlington, Normandie, Riggs, Ebbitt, Shoreham, Cochran, Gordon, Barton, or Hamilton Hotels. For accommodations at Regent, Metropolitan, National, or Colonial Hotels, $2.50 less. Special side trip to Mt. Vernon.

All tickets good for ten days, with special hotel rates after expiration of hotel coupons.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents; Tourist Agent, 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or address George W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

Extra Values in Men's Shirts.

Men's Shirts and Night Shirts are important features of the January Sale. We mention four numbers that will illustrate as well as a hundred the sort of values we are offering these days—values that would be difficult if not impossible to match outside of this department:

MEN'S NEGLIGE SHIRTS—of fancy percale, in new patterns; some with attached collars, others with neck bands for white collars; good value at 37 1/2¢ —the special sale price is 29¢ each.

MEN'S MADRAS SHIRTS—in spring patterns of fancy madras; attached collars or with neckbands for white collars; styles usually found in 75¢ and $1 shirts—special here at 45¢ each.

MEN'S UNLAUNDERED WHITE SHIRTS—made of "Fruit of the Loom" muslin; full size and made exceptionally well, with many points of finish usually found only in the more expensive shirts; priced at less than cost to make—3 for $1.00.

MEN'S NIGHT SHIRTS—made of good muslin and trimmed with silk; full size and roomy; with or without collar—special at 42¢ each.

Strawbridge & Clothier, PHILADELPHIA.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, Editor, 19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $6.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $8.50.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Thompson Shoups, 2212 Wallace Street, Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.

Richards & Shoups, Jobbing attended to. CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS.

1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa. Phone 3-54-78 D.

CHARLES BURTON, Practical House and Sign Painter,

Office, 907 N. Thirteenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Residence, 1714 Woodstock Street, }

The "International" Bible Series

LARGEST LINE OF SELF-PRONOUNCING BIBLES IN THE WORLD. THEY ARE RENOWNED FOR THEIR CLEAR PRINT—SCHOLARLY HELPS—SUPERIOR BINDINGS

OUR SPECIAL OFFER Price $1.40
A SELF-PRONOUNCING REFERENCE LONG PRIMER REVISED BIBLE
Only 27 cts. Plus postage

Divided into Verses, bound in Fine Flexible French Morocco, Overlapping Edges, Round Corners, Red under Gold Edges,

CONTAINING OVER

400 Pages of Bible Readers Helps Including References, Combination Concordance, History of the Books of the Bible and Ancient Monuments, Many Maps in Colors and Fine Plates Illustrating Recent Archeological Discoveries.

Same Bible Furnished with Patent Thumb Index for 30 cts. Additional

This Special Edition is recommended for Teachers, Students and all members of the Family. Shipped securely packed on receipt of price with postage.

ADDRESS The FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER S. W. Cor. 15th & CHERRY STS. PHILADELPHIA

Three Philadelphians visited Richmond, Va., and, asking as to the use and purpose of this or that building, were told in every case that it was a tobacco factory. An aged negro gave them the information; and they, tiring of the monotony of the reply, pointed to a white frame building on a hill and asked whose tobacco factory it was. The old fellow replied: "Dat, sah, am no factory. Dat am S'n John's 'Piscopal Church, where Marse Patrick Henry done get up an' ax de Lawd to gib him liberty or gib him deaf." "Well, uncle," asked one of the trio, "which did the Lord give him?" "'Pears to me yo' must be strangers hereabouts," he answered; "else, it strikes me, yo'd all know dat, in due time, de Lawd gabe Marse Henry bofe." —[Gathered.]

Merchants' Trust Company, 611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed) $500,000.00
CAPITAL (paid in) 250,000.00
SURPLUS 50,000.00
UNDIVIDED PROFITS 45,049.99

Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveyancing done. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $2 and upwards, per annum.

JOSEPH R. RHODES, President.

JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President.

HORACE B. PEARSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas.

CHARLES P. EARLY, Secretary.

WM. B. LANE, Title and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS

NICHOLAS BAICE, J. BOLTON WINFENNY,
S. DAVIS PAGE, WARREN G. GRIFFITH,
JOSEPH R. RHODES, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED J. PHILLIPS,
THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
CHAS. S. HINCHMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
EDWARD S. SAYRES, EDGAR DUDLEY FARRIS,
JOHN H. CRAVEN, HORACE B. PEARSON.

J. T. JACKSON & CO. Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

HIGH-GRADE BONDS

Yielding from 3½ to 5 per cent.

FREE OF TAXES.

INVESTMENT LIST ON APPLICATION.

NEWBURGER BROS. & HENDERSON,
BANKERS AND BROKERS, 323 Chestnut Street.

MONTGOMERY SPECIAL MILK.

CONSHOCKEN Specialty attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

JOSEPH L. JONES

CARRIE H. GAUNT,
CHIROPOD AND MANICURING,
133 South Eleventh Street, Philadelphia.
Office Hours: 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,

Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CITRUS CAMBERS, Jr.), 52nd & Media Sts., Philadelphia

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000

ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES, ASSIGNER, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. REGISTRAR AND TRANSFER AGENT.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.

Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults.

E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stock holders, . . . $ 4,577,613.08
Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,317,764.17
Assets of the Company, 61,615,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

Samuel R. Shipley, President
T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
Asa S. Wing, Vice-President
Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept.
J. Roberts Fouke, Trust Officer
David G. Alsop, Actuary
J. Barton Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
Samuel H. Troth, Treasurer
C. Walter Barton, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

Samuel R. Shipley, James V. Watson,
T. Wistar Brown, William Longstreth,
Henry Haines, Edward H. Ogden,
Richard Wood, Thomas Scattergood,
Charles Harshorse, J. Preston Thomas,
Asa S. Wing, Robert M. Janney,
Philip C. Garrett, Mariott C. Morris,
Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

REDUCED RATES TO HARRISBURG.

VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD, ACCOUNT INAUGURATION OF GOVERNOR-ELECT PENNYPACKER.

For the accommodation of those desiring to attend the inauguration of Governor-elect Pennypacker, at Harrisburg, January 20, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell round-trip tickets to Harrisburg, from all stations on its lines in the State of Pennsylvania, on January 19 and 20, good to return until January 21, inclusive, at rate of single fare for the round trip (minimum rate, 25 cents).

Disease Cured by Electricity.

WM. H. HICKOK, M.D.

10 a.m. to 4 p.m. 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.
554 North Eleventh Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

CAROLINE RAU, North side, just below 9th St.

PLAIN MILLINERY,

Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street
From 736 Spring Garden Street.

COLLINGS CARRIAGE CO.,

Broughams, Victorias, Coupes, Rockaways, Cutners, Runabouts, and Wagonettes.

1719 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Club Rates: Other Periodicals, 1903.

We announce our Club Rates for other Periodicals for 1903. Read the figures given, and also read the notes below.

We will send FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER one year, with any of the periodicals named below, for the amount stated "for both."

WEEKLIES		MONTHLIES
Periodicals.	Price for both.	Periodicals.	Price for both.
Springfield Republican, ($1),	$2.90	British Friend, (6s.6d & postage), . . .	$3.75
The Nation, ($3),	4 80	Scribner's Magazine, ($3),	$4.85
Literary Digest, ($3), (new subscribers only),	4 50	The Century Magazine, ($4),	5 60
Independent, (50c),	3 90	Harper's Magazine, ($4),	5 30
Christianity, (50c),	4 00	Atlantic Monthly, ($4),	5 30
American, ($3),	4 60	The Forum, ($3),	4 60
Monday School Times, ($1)	2 85	North American Review, ($5),	6 10
Journal of Education, ($2.50),	4 35	St. Nicholas, ($3),	4 60
The Living Age, ($6),	7 60	Lippincott's Magazine, ($2.50),	3 80
		The Chautauquan, ($2),	3 90
		Scattered Seeds, ($0.50),	2 35
		The Farm Journal, ($0.50),	2 40
		American Monthly Review of Reviews, ($2.50),	4 10

Persons wishing other periodicals than those named above should write to us, and we will give prices.

Where several periodicals in the list are wanted, find the net price of each (if ordered through us), by subtracting $2.00 from the rate given under the heading "price for both."

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, FIRST MONTH 24, 1903.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: V. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
*TELEPHONE NO. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—IV.	49
POETRY: BE STILL.	49
THE QUAKERS AS MAKERS OF AMERICA.	49
SOCIAL ASPECTS OF THE QUAKER FAITH.	51
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
Violence.	52
EDITORIAL:
The Army Canteen.	54
Notes.	55
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS.	55
SOCIETY NOTES.	56
TRIBUTE TO ANNA SMITH.	56
IS OUR RELIGION FOUNDED ON A LEGEND?	56
THE LABOR QUESTION.	57
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.,	58
EDUCATIONAL:
Swarthmore College Notes.	58
Lectures at Swarthmore.	58
COMMUNICATIONS:
Words of Appreciation.	59
The Relief of the Poor.	59
LITERARY NOTES.	59
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	60
METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR TWELFTH MONTH, 1902.	60
POETRY: The Pleasures We Have in Our Mind; Each in His Own Name.	60
INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION IN ITS PAN-AMERICAN ASPECT.	61
ENDOWED ROADS AS MONUMENTS.	62
WILL POWER.	63
MISCELLANEOUS: Idyllic Island Life; Apples in Winter; English Shopwomen.	63
CURRENT EVENTS.	64
NEWS NOTES.	64
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	iii

WANTED.

WANTED.—POSITION BY A TRAINED masseuse. Will travel or will take care of a home. Address No. 73, this Office.

WANTED.—COPIES OF FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, Twelfth month 20, 1902. Send to this Office.

WANTED.—AN EXPERIENCED GIRL for general housework, or would take a reliable woman with baby or small child, a good home. Apply 6634 N. 6th Street, Oak Lane, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—BY FRIEND, POSITION AS PRIVATE secretary. Remington operator, or traveling companion, nurse for semi-invalid, or housekeeper. Address A. D. FEATHERSTONE, 21 N. Carey Street, Baltimore, Md.

WANTED.—BY A WOMAN FRIEND, one employment during part of day at moderate salary. Well qualified to fill a position of trust. Address "EMPLOYMENT," this Office.

WANTED.—A WORKING HOUSEKEEPER in a small family. Wages $5. Address No. 70, this Office.

MAN WITH SMALL FAMILY WILL TAKE charge of farm or gentleman's country place. Has had charge of college grounds past two years. Address No. 72, this Office.

THE CO-OPERATIVE HOUSEKEEPING Association is established as a private home where the living expenses are equally shared. There is now one vacant. Apply to ELIZ. H. SMITH, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia.

FOR SALE AND FOR RENT.

FOR SALE.—TWO IRREDEEMABLE ground rents. One for $11,000 and one for $1,325. D. H. WRIGHT, 305 Crozer Bldg., 1420 Chestnut Street.

FOR SALE.—THREE HOUSES AT SWARTH- more, two on Dickinson Avenue and one on Yale Avenue, with modern conveniences and in good order. Prices from $4,000 to $4,800. Some allowance on a quick sale. Apply to CHARLES PALMER, No. 12 E. 5th Street, Chester, Pa.

BOARDING.

BOARDING.—TO SHARE A LARGE, SUNNY warm room with good board, at very moderate rate. Address No. 72, this Office.

BOARDING.—A WOMAN FRIEND OF RE- refinement is desirous of securing a home in a family of Friends. Can only pay a very moderate rate of board. Address No. 72, this Office.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATHEWS AND SISTERS, 1827 I St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

HOTEL WINDLE. Centre of city. JACKSONVILLE, FLA. Near all car lines. American and European plan. New. First-class. European plan, rooms $1 per day. American plan, $2 per day. Dr. J. D. SMITH, Prop.

MOUNTAIN SUNSET HOUSE FAMOUS HEALTH RESORT. Sun parlor; steam heat; comfortable and homelike. Dr. J. D. MOYER, Mountain Sunset P. O.

THE KATHU, 1125 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J. Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts. K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE., Atlantic City, N. J. Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet. M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

16th Annual Oyster Supper

FOR THE BENEFIT OF

FRIENDS' HOME FOR CHILDREN

TO BE GIVEN AT

Mosebach's Hall, 1207 N. 13th St.,
from 5 to 8 p.m.

Second-day, First month 26, 1903,

A Musical and Literary Entertainment will be given at 8 o'clock.

Tickets, for Supper and Entertainment $1.00.

The Executive Committee of the Young Friends' Association invite all members and friends of the Association to loan such lantern slides, mounted photographs and lightly framed pictures as they may wish, for a Photographic Display to be held in the Association Auditorium, Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Second month 9, 1903. The contributions may embrace pictures and slides of all subjects of general interest. It is desired that as far as possible the exhibit may be of individual work. All contributions must be left at Ass'n. office, 140 N. 15th Street, not later than Second month 6, 1903. For further particulars, Address HUGH S. WALKER, 100 S. Broad St.

JAMAICA, LAND OF SUMMER.

Now is the time for a trip to the Tropics, where you may escape the cold and severe Winter of the North. You can leave direct from Philadelphia on the splendid steamers Admiral Sampson and Admiral Schley. Swift passage, comfortable accommodation, excellent cuisine.

You will have a delightful Sea-voyage, and you will visit a land of sunshine whose interest and health-giving qualities are unsurpassed.

For further information and tickets call or address

ARTHUR H. MIDDLETON,
421 North Second Street (afternoon), or
282 North Broad Street (evening), Philadelphia, Pa.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,

Telephones. 617 Building and 216 W. Conlter St.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE DIFFERENCE

between good printing and bad is often a matter of taste and good judgment as it is a matter of price. A print shop that employs clever compositors and pressmen can do some surprising things for little money.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Printers,
Phone 1019-21 Market Street, Phila.

FLORIDA TOUR.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED.

Merchant & Miners Transportation Co.

Nine-day tour to Savannah and St. Augustine, $47.00; including all necessary expenses. Leave Baltimore Tuesday, February 17. Send for itinerary.

W. P. Turner, G. P. A., Baltimore, Md.

"BREVITY IS THE SOUL OF ELOQUENCE."

All good advertising contains this desirable feature. T. Vaughan-Kempner, Ad-writer, 200 S. 10th St., Phila.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS., PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }

Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal, George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal, Jenkintown, Pa.

CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City. For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE, Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment. For particulars address A. DAVIS JACKSON, B.S., Principal, Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars address ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal, Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 10 a.m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker and Embalmer

1726 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE 2-29-38 D.

"Down the O-hi-o"

By CHARLES HUMPHREY ROBERTS.

A charming story of Quaker life suitable for holiday gift. Well bound cloth; postpaid $1.00, or two copies, separate address if desired, for $1.50.

* Filled with incident and adventure, quaint character sketches and delightful humor. Moreover the literary finish of the book is rare and graceful. — Pacific Courier. Address C.H. KELLER, Mgr., 613 No. 145 La Salle St. Chicago, Illinois.

BIBLES.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

A NEW AND FULL LINE.

FAMILY QUARTO BIBLES, suitable for Friend. SELF-PRONOUNCING, REFERENCE TEACHERS' BIBLES, with maps and concordance.

TESTAMENTS, ETC., convenient, large, clear type, desirable binding. New and up-to-date Surprisingly low prices—from 50 cents up.

THE CHILD AND THE BIBLE. Syllabus of a course of twenty-five lessons in education. By George Allen Hubbell. Price, 25 cts. Postage 4 cts.

THE OLD RED SCHOOL-HOUSE. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Price, postpaid, 75 cents.

JOHN KINSEY. Speaker of the Pennsylvania Assembly. By Joseph S. Walton. Price, 50 cents.

All Friends' books for sale by FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION, N. W. cor 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 15 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week. Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night. $2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL,

Phone 1-33-55. Clerk.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet. 27 pages. * * * Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. * * * A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

* * * All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association, N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Sts., Phila.

THOMAS O. PEIRCE, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW. 815 Real Estate Trust Building, Philad'a.

ALFRED L. SELLERS, CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT, 619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW, 929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, OFFICES: 663 Walnut Street, Philadelphia. Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER, 325 SWEDER STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA ATTORNEY-AT-LAW. Practising in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK. CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna. JOSEPH L. JONES

CARRIE H. GAUNT, CHIROPYODY AND MANICURING, 133 South Eleventh Street, Philadelphia. Office Hours: 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Disease Cured by Electricity.

WM. H. HICKOK, M.D. 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. 554 North Eleventh Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Disease Cured by Osteopathy.

A System of Natural Healing. Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and Chronic diseases in general. O. O. STODDARD, E. D., D. O. 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. 554 N. 11th Street, Philadelphia.

George W. Hancock,

APPRAISER

Real and Personal Estates.

All values confidential. (12 to 2).

802 Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL,

Manufacturing Optician.

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE, AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts. 5 PHONES.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873.

PHILADELPHIA, FIRST MONTH 24, 1903.

Volume LX.
Number 4.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

IV.

As the individual responsibility deepens, the social responsibility increases. We cannot cut ourselves adrift from our fellows, or be good apart from them.

T. E. HARVEY.

From an article in the British Friend.

BE STILL.

O HEART of mine, be calm and still,
And ever trustful be ;
Learn thou that God's almighty will
Is right and best for thee ;
Though from the shore
There stretch before
The raging billows of the sea.

And dost thou deem that He whose hand
Did first the sea outpour,
Who bade it sweep the shining strand
With thunder in its roar,
Hath not the power
To make it cover
And tremble to the very core ?

He brought thee in his wisdom here
Upon its verge to stand,
With rumbling chariots in the rear,
And hills on every hand,
Thy faith to test ;
Then be at rest,
For this is God's benign command.

Behold ! The winds are beating back
The sullen, angry sea ;
The billows fly and leave a track
That leads to liberty !
So, heart be still,
A higher will Shall ever choose the best for thee.

—Selected.

THE QUAKERS AS MAKERS OF AMERICA.¹

BY DR. DAVID GREGG.

(Concluded from last week.)

GEORGE FOX had a profound sense of the length and breadth of the love which God had for mankind, and this made him the philanthropist he was. "All men are members of the family of the All Father and are brothers." In his journal he says: "I saw the infinite love of God." God's love to man inspired his love to man. To him brotherhood meant the opportunity of doing good to all men; hence he inaugurated help for the helpless, and led in prison reforms and charities, and in the organization of societies for the emancipation of all human brothers in slavery; hence he inaugurated movements looking the abolition of the horrid and ungodly practice of brother man shooting down brother man; hence he protested against imprisonment for debt and against the infliction of capital punishment for minor crimes. From the brotherhood of man he evolved, under the teaching of the spirit, the doctrine of human equality. He made woman the equal of man, and to establish her equality gave her her full half of the meeting house. He argued, if men are equal, why should some be greeted with idolatrous titles, and receive obeisance from others, and be addressed in flattering pronouns? With him every brother man stood for just one, and that one was no better than his neighbor; hence he refused to doff his hat to any man, or address any man as "your reverence," "your holiness," "your grace," "your honor;" hence he called men by their Christian name, treating all alike. William Penn, following his example, addressed even King Charles II. as "Friend Charles." There was democracy in that. Hence he introduced the use of the pronouns "thee" and "thou" into conversation as a protest against caste. William Penn has built up a grammatical argument for the use of these pronouns. "Thee" and "thou" are singular pronouns; "you" is the plural pronoun. Why should any single man be addressed as though he were plural—as though he were a regiment in one? A plural pronoun used in the place of a singular pronoun is a species of flattery for the purpose of magnifying a man or a woman.

Recognizing that man is the brother of man, George Fox labored to promote honesty and truthfulness between man and man. This led him to secure a fixity of price for goods in all the trades, a custom which is now established. This led to simplicity of speech in conversation. He argued for the abolition of the oath, for the reason that he would have every word uttered by man as true as an oath. That honesty and truthfulness might be made easy, he argued for all-around simplicity of life, and protested against extravagance and waste and vanity and idle luxury and the senseless change of fashion. Such was George Fox and such were the doctrines and practices which he contributed to civilization. George Fox was a magnificent freeman, and he introduced into the world of thought and life that genius of liberty which was calculated to make every other man a freeman like himself! How did these legacies which George Fox contributed to America reach America? He brought them himself. The man himself trod the very ground we to-day tread. He traveled through the American colonies for the express purpose of asserting himself and his gospel of liberty. After he had worked out his mission here he went back to England to find a grave, and there he died, saying, "I am clear, I am clear." And was he not clear? What man ever left the world having done his duty more fearlessly or having declared more completely all the counsel of God as he understood it, or having given the world grander ideals for the coming civilization?

¹ This sermon is reprinted by request. It was preached on "Father's Day," in a Brooklyn Presbyterian Church in 1897, and reported in the Brooklyn Eagle of Twelfth month 21, 1896.

But the principles of George Fox came to America not only in the person of George Fox himself; they came also in the persons of his many followers, who settled in all the colonies, but notably in Massachusetts and Rhode Island and Pennsylvania. In most of the colonies they had patiently to work their way into recognition. This was especially so in Massachusetts. The first thing which met the Quakers there was persecution, and that from the holy Puritans. This is one of the stains which rest on the memory of the Puritans. It is vain to try to excuse it, for it cannot be excused; it can only be admitted and apologized for. In former years I offered my service to the Puritans and made a special plea in their defense, but I now beg leave to withdraw from the case. I once uttered and published the following words: "But what have we to say concerning the Puritans' treatment of Quakers? We have this to say: That even in the harsh measures, as they dealt with these, they were the progressives of their age, and were the most merciful people of that century. The Quakers of that day were not the ideal people who walk the pages of our novels to-day, and with whom we instinctively fall in love. They were not Friend Olivia and Hannah Mettelane and Roger Pryor, the Quaker characters and heroes of Mrs. Amelia Barr's charming book. No; they were loud-voiced people, disturbers of the peace, denunciatory in their language, rudely behaved. Two of the women, Lydia Wardwell and Deborah Wilson, walked the streets of Boston unclad and tried to pass off that conduct as witnessing for God. The Puritans knew better than that, and put them behind the bars of the prison, out of sight. Thomas Newhouse rushed into the old South Church with two glass bottles in his hand, which he wildly dashed together and in pieces before the affrighted congregation, crying: 'Thus will the Lord break you all in pieces.' When the governor of the colony walked the street the Quakers used to turn and hoot at him to show their contempt for government. The Puritans would not have persecuted Quakers of the type of to-day; they would not have persecuted our poet, John G. Whittier. The Quakers have improved beyond the need of persecution. Mary Dyer was hung upon Boston Common in front of my old church, but Mrs. Dyer was hung because she wanted to be. She wanted to hang; it was her way of giving her testimony, and she refused to take no for an answer. They sent her out of the city scot free, but she came back and acted worse than ever in order to compel the Puritans to hang her. Her hanging was a piece of pure gallantry upon the part of the Puritan gentlemen. There were four thousand Quakers imprisoned in England at one time, but only a handful were imprisoned in New England."

The Puritans, who desecrated temples and destroyed the finest works of art, are not the people to condemn others for rudeness, are not the people to bore the tongues of Quakers with red-hot irons, and cut off their ears, and brand their flesh, and strip them naked and publicly scourge them for the crime of rudeness. In some cases the cruelties inflicted had unbalanced them mentally. The Quakers used no force; theirs was the strength of the martyr nature. On behalf of the Quakers I instance the letters which they wrote in their prisons, and the words which they spoke on the gallows, and the prayers which they offered for forgiveness of their murderers. I put these in the deadly parallel column with the Puritans' cruel laws and branding irons and knotted whips and public gallows, and then leave the decision of the case to posterity. There is this to be said for the Puritans: a popular reaction set in against persecution, and by this means Puritanism rectified itself. The reaction came from such outspoken men as the Puritan sea captain whose story John G. Whittier forcefully relates in a poem pertaining to the dark colonial days.

The Quaker power in America reached its height in the coming of William Penn and in the establishment and life of the colony of Pennsylvania. William Penn was second only to George Fox as a Quaker influence. The territory of Pennsylvania was given to William Penn by Charles II. in lieu of money owed his father by the Crown. The land was his to do with as he wished, and he devoted it to working into life a Quaker commonwealth. There was no man better fitted to establish such a commonwealth than William Penn. He had paid a large price for the privilege of being a Quaker, and this made him a man to be trusted. He sacrificed the friendship of his home; his father said of him, "William has become a Quaker or some such melancholy thing." He had ability; he was educated at Oxford. He was democratic in spirit; his definition of a free government shows this. "Any government," he said, "is free where the people are a party to the laws enacted." He was a kindred spirit to John Bright, the Quaker statesman of Great Britain, who for a whole generation was a leading spirit in the great movements of his country, and who was always on the right side. John Bright got his principles from William Penn. An analysis of his public life will show the Quaker principle of civil life to be this: Political power is rightly exercised only when it is possessed by the consent of the governed and is used for the welfare of the community according to the permissions of the moral law. This principle guided William Penn when he organized his colony. He gave it a constitution and laws full of the genius of humanity and full of equal justice. He allowed all reforms to be pushed within its territory. There was not one good Quaker thing which did not flourish in it. Here the Indians were treated as brothers and here they acted brotherly in return. The colony was a temperance colony; it was an anti-war colony; it was a colony noted for its religious toleration. For over one hundred years the Quakers controlled it. Its homes were full of sweetness and strength. The colony was one of the greatest powers in the American Revolution, and furnished such leaders as Logan and Mifflin and Dickinson, all of them Quakers. Benjamin West, the great painter, was born here in a Quaker home; he was one of the founders of the Royal Academy of Great Britain. The liberty of thought granted by this colony bore its products and brought the colony honor. It enabled it to grow into what it is to-day, the second State in the Union. The colony gave the country the city of Philadelphia, the one city of the republic which rivals Boston in old colonial landmarks, just as in olden time it rivaled Boston in that leadership which inaugurated the American Revolution. It gave the country Independence Hall; it was the home of the Continental Congress. Here was framed and debated and publicly signed the Declaration of Independence itself, which made the American Revolution an historic fact. All this took place not on Puritan soil, but on Quaker soil, and all this took place where it did because there was more freedom of thought in Philadelphia than there was in Boston.

The part which the Quakers have taken in building the American republic makes clear this twofold way in which patriots can effectively serve their country:

1. By uttering an emphatic protest against all destructive evils.

History can ask no grander illustration of the power of protest than Quaker life on American soil. Why is it that there is no African slavery to-day within our borders? It is because the Quakers as early as 1688 issued their protest against African slavery, and kept it issued until the nation was educated up to the emancipation proclamation. But mark this: They invested their all in their protest. They meant it, and they made the American people feel that they meant it. Their protest was strong with the moral strength of a splendid personality and a consistent life; its power was moral.

2. By keeping before one's country uplifting and inspiring ideas.

We call guns, swords, powder, forts, iron-clads and armies national powers; the Quakers have taught us that there are powers beyond these. The powers beyond these are right thoughts, high ideals, holy visions, righteous principles, burning aspirations. These make a strong manhood and a pure womanhood, and such manhood and womanhood make a strong and pure State. The men and women who have these thoughts, ideals, visions, principles, aspirations, go straight to God for them; they are exponents of God. The ideal civilization exists only in the plan of God.

This is the message of the Quaker fathers to the patriotic sons of America. If you would render your country the highest service and lead it forward to the millennial age, be an intellect to your country, think for it; be a conscience to your country, make moral decisions for it; and think and decide within the lines of God's holy law. If you would render your country the higher service, be the Lord's prophet to your country; dream dreams for it and see visions for it. It was Socrates and Plato and Aristotle, men of thought and of vision, who were the promoters and conservators of the national strength of Greece; and it was Samuel and Elijah and Isaiah, the prophets of the Lord, who were the chariots of Israel and the horsemen thereof. Be to the American republic what these men were to the kingdoms of which they were citizens. Hold up ideals before the people as they did, and then, like them, you will attain a civilization embodying your ideals.

SOCIAL ASPECTS OF THE QUAKER FAITH.¹

The greater part of this article was written by Howard M. Jenkins and was found among his papers. Whether he left it unfinished or whether the concluding page was lost we do not know. At the opening of the year 1903 Edward Grubb became the sole editor of the British Friend.—EDITORS.

THIS volume is in ten chapters, these being essays heretofore printed separately, and now collected. They may appear, the author suggests in his preface, somewhat disconnected, but they have a unity of thought and purpose which the reader will not fail to observe. The subjects are shown by the titles of the chapters, and these serve also to make plain the character of the book. The titles are: "Christ's Ideal of a Church," "The Laborers in the Vineyard," "The Superior Person," "The Need of Convictions," "The Study of Social Problems," "The Society of Friends and Some Problems," "The Simplification of Life," "Christ's Teaching on Wealth," "The Division of the Inheritance," and "Social Evolution."

The line of thought running through them, as Edward Grubb says in his Preface, "starts from the central Quaker principle of the dignity of man in virtue of the 'seed of God' or Light of the Spirit, committed to all men through their common Fatherhood, and revealed to men in the Incarnation of Jesus Christ." "When that principle," he adds, "is grasped in its breadth and fulness, all narrowness, whether Judaistic or Calvinistic, falls away." And, further: "To 'follow the Light' is to be, as Fox taught, 'of a universal spirit'; we cannot rest content while those whom we profess to regard as brothers are oppressed, or degraded, or armed for mutual destruction. But the applications of universal brotherhood are wider and closer than some of us are aware; and it is my aim in these fragmentary thoughts to help in discovering its bearings on some features of our social and industrial life."

Edward Grubb, it may be mentioned at this point, is a well-known English Friend, a minister, a teacher by profession, formerly residing at Scarborough, but in recent years at Southport. He has been for some time associated with William Edward Turner in editorial labors upon the British Friend. His interest has been largely drawn to economic and social problems, and in the volume under notice, as will be seen by the list of chapter titles above, he is addressing himself to many of the features of the social and industrial life in England and elsewhere at the present time. It is quite impossible to summarise all of these, or any considerable part of them, but we may look at a few points.

¹ Social Aspects of the Quaker Faith. By Edward Grubb, M. A. Pp. 252. London: Headley Brothers.

In the ideal of a church which the teachings of Jesus presented, Edward Grubb perceives that the word in the Greek (whence we get it) means an assembly, a gathering, a meeting of those inwardly and spiritually convinced. It was the perception by Peter of the divine life in Jesus which made him the beginning of the company whom Jesus desired. It was Peter's personal relation to the Christ spirit which made him a promise and potency of the future Church. Out of such men, "living stones," as Peter himself called them later, it was to be built.

There is nothing in this to justify the idea that Peter, as a "first bishop of Rome," was to found a vast organization, a system, a fabric, in which all mankind must find salvation, if they find it at all. There was no priesthood among the early Christians, "no hint or suggestion of any privileged order"; on the contrary, the society was "a pure democracy."

Nor was it necessary, in order for admission into this democratic association of disciples of Christ that there should be some rite or ceremony such as water baptism. It may be confidently hoped, Edward Grubb says, that as the conclusions reached by Friends on other points of interpretation have been justified by the ablest of modern commentators, so also they will in time be adopted in regard to baptism and the Supper. "We may thankfully note that already the chief critics reject in toto the sacramental idea—the notion, that is, of a special spiritual potency attaching to the outward rites." And he quotes the work of Beyschlag, the luminous modern German writer, "New Testament Theology," that there is "no trace" in the scriptures of the idea "that Jesus attached a special promise to the outer ordinance of either baptism or the Supper, or ascribed to it a power working of itself." So, too, Dr. Horton, a high authority in the Anglican Church, speaks to the same effect. And both these are among the highest modern authorities.

In his chapter on the "Study of Social Problems," Edward Grubb suggests the lines upon which the thoughtful student may do well to proceed. He proposes to look at "Present-day Facts," and while he can hardly expect people to read Charles Booth's eight volumes on English life and labor, he suggests Arthur Sherwell's "Life in West London," and Mrs. Bosanquet's "Rich and Poor," as full of instruction. The study of economic theory should be taken up, and, rejecting the old works of Ricardo, Adam Smith and John Stuart Mill, he recommends books by Professor Alfred Marshall and Professor Symes. Of Ruskin he says that it is interesting to note "how much of his thoughts on the human significance of wealth and value has been assimilated by some of our newer professors." Of works on economic problems he considers Arnold Toynbee's "Industrial Revolution" one of the most indispensable; and places a high value upon "Socialism, its Nature, Strength and Weakness," by the well-known American student of labor and its relations, Dr. Richard T. Ely.

American readers, whose interest in the conflict between labor and capital has been intensified by the coal strike, will find much food for thought in the chapter on "Social Evolution." In this the author shows how the biologic struggle for the survival of the fittest, as manifested in the various forms of animal life, is modified in human beings by reason and religion, so that the struggle to preserve one's own life is gradually being transformed into "a struggle for the life of others," making "Equality of Opportunity" the watchword of the future. But in endeavoring to make "an ordered and worthy and secure existence" possible to all, he holds it to be necessary that "the freshness and energy and spontaneity which are the fruits of liberty should not be lost." The chapter concludes with the following paragraph:

"The Industrial Revolution, with its mighty increase in production and its awful waste of manhood, shows the high-water mark of mere anarchic liberty. To-day we are on the other tack,—that of introducing order into the chaos, and organizing the social fabric in the interest of the weaker members of God's human family. Rightly to prosecute our task, it is vital that we should not overlook or lose the priceless jewel of liberty. The best guarantee for its preservation is that our inspiration for the work should be derived from the Christian thought of the dignity of the individual, of the worth of manhood, of the indefeasible claims of that Divine personality which was breathed into each soul of man when 'made in the image of God.'"

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 5.

VIOLENCE.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Blessed are the merciful; for they shall obtain mercy.—Matthew, v., 7.

Before study of Lesson read John, x., 1-18.

IN THE last lesson, while considering the subject of reforms, we noticed that in a few instances Jesus made use of the language of invective. In addition, we may remark that, according to the fourth gospel, he used a whip of small cords to drive out the money changers from the temple. Moreover, he "poured out their money" and "overthrew their tables." There are two passages which are quoted as a basis for asserting that Jesus approved of war: the first, "I came not to send peace, but a sword" (Matt., x., 34), and "He that hath none let him sell his cloak and buy a sword" (Luke, xxii., 36). Such isolated examples and passages have no value aside from their context; and even in the context, if found to support the use of violence, they are contrary to the spirit of the rest of his teaching. Christian conduct must be made to square not with every passage and every incident in the life of the Master, but with the foundation principles and ideals thereof.

Taking first the matter of violent language. Is it not safe to say that it is used only toward those whom Jesus did not hope to influence, and therefore for its indirect effect upon others? There is no instance of the use of such language to any soul seeking help. Even the Pharisees as individuals sometimes received him into friendly relations (Luke, xiv., 1; John, iii., 1-21). It was only when they sought him in a spirit of self-righteousness or of cunning sophistry that he was led to denounce them as hypocrites. Let us never forget that these so denounced were never the common "sinners," but the well-to-do and respectable. If we seldom find Jesus using strong language against people, we do find him using strong words against all things. Anger is equivalent to murder, lust is adultery of the heart, blasphemy against the Holy Spirit is an eternal sin, false prophets are ravaging wolves. Even here, however, he deals usually with the affirmative rather than the negative side, pointing out the right way rather than the wrong way, emphasizing the good rather than the evil. In this there is involved a great lesson for all who teach in the name of Jesus. Vituperation, invective, may hardly hope to win the heart. Yet this is no hard and fast rule. We are not to be imitators of Jesus, but to live by his spirit. The time might come, no doubt does come, when the blow of even extreme condemnation is needed to break down the rule of self in the soul. What we may learn is that Jesus did not usually find it a good way. There is much sentimental talk indulged in as to the anti-slavery, temperance and other agitators because of the alleged violence of their language. It is called un-Christian. It is stated that it rouses antagonism and makes conflict inevitable. Doubtless this is sometimes true. Nothing is more imperative in the work of reform than the constant effort to keep sweet. But, on the other hand, it is to be remembered that between right and wrong there is an irrepressible conflict; and the attitude of those who reserve their condemnations for violence on the side of the right is sometimes suspicious. To go into the conflict for righteousness and keep sweet is the highest ideal, but even if one fail somewhat under the burden and heat of the day he does infinitely better than the cavalier who stands by and growls at his methods. Moreover, it is common to blame the agitator for the violence of his antagonists as well as his own. He should not have provoked them to wrath by attacking their vested interests; he should have avoided calling a spade a spade, speaking of it gently as an agricultural implement. The attitude of such critics would hardly have escaped the vigorous denunciation which the Master reserved for special occasions. It is all a matter of effectiveness. Those ways are best which on the whole and in the long run most advance the interests of "the kingdom," and many experiences show that there resides in gentleness, in "sweet reasonableness," a power little used in comparison with its possibilities. By its aid slavery was abolished among Friends nearly a century ago; by it the teachings of Jesus made their way throughout the empire in its early days. Can it not be more extensively used to-day, and by us? Alas, that so frequently our gentleness with evil and evil doers is simply neglect of them. Our "optimistic phrases" are mere ignorance or laziness. Far better were it to blaze out in wrath against evil than to endure it without protest.

It ought not to be necessary to insist that the war method and the war spirit are wholly opposed to Christian teaching. But men turn and twist the gospels, strain the language of Jesus, and read false meanings into his phrases in order to excuse the licensing of their evil passions. Let us be plain in this matter. If men can prepare in advance weapons of destruction and death, can drill men into best methods of killing, and then kill and maim mercilessly in a pure spirit of love to mankind, with no deterioration of spirit, and no hardening of heart; if such process leads to real advance in brotherly kindness and unselfishness among men, then war may be justified on Christian principles—not otherwise. Probably there are those who will undertake to show that it can be so justified. Such seem to the writer of this to show a perversity and unreason which makes all discussion unprofitable, and, indeed, impossible, since they seem to fly in the face of experience, to deny all historic precedent. If war is so productive of good then the ranks of our volunteer armies should be filled not with adventurers, but with the purest and highest type of Christians. The regiments should be recruited from Christian churches—the ne'er-do-wells, the novelty-loving and thoughtless boys who fill our armies ought not to be trusted with such delicate and dangerous missions. We know in our honest moments that these things are not true that are said in praise of war. We know that it rouses and stimulates every evil passion, that it breaks down the habits of self-control won by long years of effort, that it reverses the moral law and substitutes a law of hate. We know that the quality of mercy disappears, and that men under the influence of the war spirit will slay, will torture, will destroy without a thought of the suffering involved. It is true that the spirit inculcated in peaceful days comes back at times in the midst of war, and a kind act is set like a diamond in the muck heap of war. But this is the peace spirit, not the war spirit. War deteriorates the character of the individuals concerned, whether actively or not; it lowers national ideals, and it spreads abroad among victors and vanquished a false ideal as to the test of right and wrong.

LEST WE FORGET.—The great wave of national prosperity that is swallowing everything else has a dangerous side. It seems now that no nation at present is able to withstand American influence in the markets of the world. God has given us the vantage ground now which we never had before. Like all other nations with power, we are liable to overstep due limits. Riches have not always been the strength of a nation. Sometimes wealth becomes the occasion of jealous attacks which try the foundations of nations. Envious powers will try to cripple our wealth-getting. In order to do so there may be collisions.—[Christian Instructor.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, FIRST MONTH 24, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE ARMY CANTEEN.

DURING the past year most of the leading newspapers and some of the magazines have contained articles advocating the restoration of the sale of beer and light wines in the army canteen, based on reports of disorderly conduct at army posts, many of which were proven by careful investigation to be either greatly exaggerated or wholly false. A bill has been introduced into Congress for the purpose of such restoration, and it is therefore important that the people generally should understand the real nature of the situation.

In the last number of the "North American Review" there is an article entitled, "Why the Army Canteen Should be Restored," written by Major L. L. Seaman, late Surgeon United States Volunteers, which has been widely quoted as coming from one who is supposed to speak from adequate knowledge, and to be without prejudice, because he says: "Almost a total abstainer myself, I would gladly have alcohol eliminated as a product from the face of the earth."

There are two statements in his article which greatly impair the value of his testimony, because they show either inexcusable ignorance or intentional misrepresentation of the facts. He says: "Had the canteen been called the Soldiers' Club, or Post Exchange, from the beginning, it never would have been abolished by act of Congress." He surely knows, or ought to know, that the law did not abolish the post exchange, but simply forbade the selling of beer therein. According to reliable reports there were many post exchanges that served no other purpose than to furnish beer and soldiers' supplies, and had no reading or recreation rooms connected with them; when the sale of beer was forbidden many of these were discontinued. On the other hand, post exchanges that were maintained for the comfort of the soldiers kept on with their good work, and Congress at its last session appropriated $500,000 to add to their usefulness.

Colonel Burton, writing from Cuba, said: "The post exchange has been a great comfort to the troops, notwithstanding the adverse criticism of the change wrought by recent legislation in dispensing with the sale of beer." Major Reynolds reports from Dakota that the prohibition of beer has not called for extra disciplinary measures, and adds, "As for the post exchanges, they are fulfilling their purpose, and making money."

Major Seaman himself quotes as follows, from a letter describing the first canteen: "The beginning was made in the humble way of a well-lighted room, a cup of coffee and a ham sandwich, plenty of newspapers and magazines, writing paper, envelopes, pens and ink, with credit for postage stamps." Afterward another room was added for games of various kinds, and this post exchange was a success before the sale of beer was introduced.

The other notably incorrect statement in the article is that "the liquor sellers and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union are the strongest advocates of the law as it now stands." The temperance people who worked for the passage of the law prohibiting the sale of beer know that the brewers and distillers opposed their efforts in every possible way. If space permitted, quotation after quotation could be given from liquor organs showing their attitude, but a single one will suffice. The Washington Sentinel, edited by Louis Schade, in reporting the tenth annual convention of the National Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, held in Washington two months ago, has these head lines, "Reduce the Whiskey Tax; Restore the Army Canteen."

Since statistics can be manipulated to prove almost anything, not much reliance can be placed upon those quoted in an article that contains two such glaring errors. The real reason why so many army officers are clamoring for the restoration of beer is because they are themselves beer drinkers. Major Seaman states that "a very small percentage of the army are total abstainers," and says of a regiment stationed in the Philippines, in which there were many arrests for drunkenness, "The company commander's report shows there are but eight total abstainers in the regiment."

There is no doubt that the liquor dealers will add their influence to that of the army officers to secure the repeal of the present law, and if it is to be retained temperance workers everywhere must make their influence felt. A few weeks before the death of Thomas B. Reed, Margaret Dye Ellis, the National Superintendent of Legislation of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, asked his advice concerning the repeal of the anti-canteen law, and he replied emphatically, "Madam, hold the law."

FOLLOWING the news of the closing of the postoffice at Indianola, Miss., because race prejudice had forced the negro postmistress to resign, and of the opposition to the appointment of Dr. Crum as Collector of Customs at Charleston, comes the announcement that A. D. Wimbs, a negro Republican leader of Birmingham, Alabama, has been offered an appointment as Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue and has declined. The natural inference would be that he had been frightened out of acceptance, but a correspondent of the New York Evening Post gives a reason for his declination that we are glad to record.

He is an attorney, a valued assistant in one of the best law offices in his part of the South, and as soon as the firm for whom Wimbs is working heard that he had been selected for a deputy collector, they raised his salary on the spot on condition that he would not leave them. In addition to this his old mistress declared that if he were to cease to look after her affairs as he had been doing for so long, she should not know to whom to turn. His response was prompt and to the point; if she really felt that way he would sacrifice anything rather than give her pain. And up to Washington came his definite renunciation of the honor conferred upon him by the President.

Philadelphia Monthly Meeting's Committee for the Distribution of Literature desires to send back numbers of Scattered Seeds to a Friend who is teaching a primary school in Porto Rico; those having such copies to dispose of are asked to send them to the Young Friends' Association Building, Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia. They also have a number of Chautauqua books of previous years which they will send to persons desiring to engage in study at home.

BIRTHS.

MOORE.—On First month 9, 1903, to William and Hannah G. Moore, of White Plains, N. Y., a son, who is named Robert Griffen.

WALTON.—Near Kennett Square, Pa., Eleventh month 2, 1902, to Charles S. and Edna S. Walton, a son, named Charles Eugene.

MARRIAGES.

ENGLE—HAINES.—On Twelfth month 31, 1902, at "Engleside," Hainesport, N. J., under the care of Mt. Holly Monthly Meeting of Friends, Clara Mayda Haines, daughter of Mary S. and the late Edwin B. Haines, and Clifford Lingo Engle, son of Joseph and Hannah Engle, of Hainesport, N. J.

DEATHS.

BARMORE.—At his residence, Wala Wala, Washington, First month 4, 1903, Henry Barmore, son of the late Philip and Hannah Barmore, members of Genoa Monthly Meeting.

BARMORE.—At her home, Moore's Mills, N. Y., Twelfth month 14, 1902, Mary Barmore, wife of James Barmore, aged 66 years; an esteemed and exemplary member of Oswego Meeting.

BLACKFAN.—At New Hope, Bucks county, Pa., First month 9, 1903, William C. Blackfan, in the 71st year of his age; a member of Solebury Monthly Meeting.

He was a lineal descendant of John Blackfan, of Stenning, County Sussex, England, whose son Edward, in 1688, married Rebecca Crispin, of Kinsale, Ireland, second cousin of William Penn.

GAIGE.—At her residence near Quaker Street, N. Y., First month 7, 1903, Lucy B. Gaige, in her 67th year; a member of Duanesburg Monthly Meeting.

She was for some years a valued worker in the First-day school at Quaker Street, and her influence for good and kind counsel will long remain helpful to many hearts. Her funeral was held on Seventh-day, First month 10, at Friends' Meeting-house, Quaker Street. Testimony was borne by a Friend to the worth of her high moral character and deep religious convictions. M. J. H.

HIBBS.—At her home in Newtown, Bucks county, Pa., of pneumonia, after a very short illness, Hannah Hibbs, widow of the late George Hibbs, in her 70th year.

Although not a member she was an attender of Newtown Friends' Meeting when health permitted.

LUPTON.—At 4524 Penn street, Frankford, Pa., First month 13, 1903, E. Virginia, wife of William G. Lupton. Burial services First month 17, at 2 o'clock.

RIDGWAY.—At his residence near Mickleton, N. J., First month 14, 1903, Samuel P. Ridgway, in the 77th year of his age; an esteemed member of Woodbury Monthly Meeting of Friends.

STRADLING.—At the residence of his son, George, in Northampton township, Bucks county, Pa., First month 13, 1903, Samuel Stradling, aged 86 years; a member of Makefield Monthly Meeting.

Interment at Newtown Friends' graveyard on the 17th.

TAYLOR.—At his residence, Genoa, Nebraska, First month 13, 1903, Jonathan Taylor, formerly of Loudoun county, Virginia, in the 83d year of his age; a member of Genoa Monthly Meeting.

WILSON.—At St. Elmo, Tennessee, First month 12, 1903, Jesse S. Wilson, in the 74th year of his age; a member of Goose Creek, Virginia, Monthly Meeting.

MARY WILLITS, M. D.

The death of Dr. Mary Willits, first assistant physician of the female department of the Norristown Hospital for the Insane, which took place at that institution on Twelfth month 16, 1902, brought to an earthly conclusion a gifted and useful life.

Dr. Willits was born at Maiden Creek, Berks county, Pa., of Quaker parentage. She was graduated from Swarthmore College in the class of 1876, and afterwards became a student at the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania. She received her diploma in medicine in 1881, and the same year the degree of A. M. was conferred upon her by her Alma Mater. She entered upon hospital work for a time, then established herself in Philadelphia where she engaged successfully in general practice for a number of years, relinquishing it later to accept a position in the institution where she died.

She was the first woman admitted to the Philadelphia County Medical Society, allowing her name to stand for this election as a testimony to her belief in the justice due her sex and her desire for their advancement. Always fond of study, she found leisure in her busy professional life to keep up and add to her knowledge of literature and the languages.

In disposition she was remarkably cheerful and sunny; in character steadfast, sincere, and loyal to duty; these traits fitted her admirably to care for the afflicted and enabled her to fill a difficult position honorably for eleven years. Her work had become very arduous and doubtless undermined her strength, so that she was unable to resist the encroachments of disease. Her final sickness was short and her death came as a sad surprise to her friends. Called from earth in the meridian of life, in the midst of an active and useful career, she leaves behind her in the hearts of her friends and associates the memory of a strong, genial, kindly woman whose ambitions were noble, and whose attainments are worthy of emulation.

F. L. S.

THE Circuit Court of Sandusky, Ohio, has decided that "even though a wife owns the home, a husband has a right to put his mother-in-law out, using force, if necessary;" and that "he has also the right to exclude any visitors." The decision is probably correct from a legal point of view. The common law declares that "the husband is the head of the family, and he may choose and govern the domicile, select the wife's associates, and separate her from her relatives."

SOCIETY NOTES.

A REPORT in the New York Times states that the American Purity Alliance held its annual public meeting First month 10, in the library of the Friends' Seminary, at 226 East Sixteenth Street. The object of the Alliance is the rooting out of the social evil, every form of State regulation being opposed. Reports of the work for the past year were read, and addresses delivered by Anna Garlin Spencer and Henry W. Wilbur; the latter is the editor of the Philanthropist, the organ of the Alliance.

Henry W. Wilbur read a report of the interview of the Society's representative with President Roosevelt as to the allegations of traffic in "girl slaves" on board the Atlantic liners. It was said that the women from the steerage were not protected properly by the Government officers at Ellis Island. It was declared that the girls who come second class have been met at the piers by persons intent on luring them to a life of shame. It was suggested to President Roosevelt that women inspectors could do much, and the President asked if such inspectors were not already appointed. When he was answered in the negative he replied, promptly, "Well, they shall be," and he immediately dictated an order to that effect.

The women inspectors will go out with the health officials to the incoming steamships and advise and protect the young women. The President had thanked the representative of the Alliance for giving him a "chance to do something practical."

On the 17th instant Elizabeth Lloyd attended Wilmington, Delaware, First-day School and Meeting, and addressed a conference in the afternoon on "Equal Rights for Women." The First-day School is large and well conducted. The attendance at meeting was about 125. The conference in the afternoon was not quite so large, but a lively discussion followed the address. The monthly meeting has admitted several new members recently. The mid-week meeting has been held in the evening for sometime, with an attendance about six times as large as formerly; nearly half of those who now attend are men, and several of these are young men.

On First month 11, Joel Borton, in company with Helen Lippincott, of Riverton, N. J., visited the First-day school and meeting at Stroudsburg, Pa. Though snow fell most of the day the meeting was well attended. Their First-day school is small, but quite interesting, the few who gather being well qualified. The work, we believe, will grow under the direction of Anna W. Palmer as superintendent, and Mitchell and Roberta Dixon Palmer as teachers. The former has charge of the adult class, and his wife of the primary work. This has long been a friendly locality, and Friends still carry a strong influence in the community and are glad to welcome visitors among them.

THIRTY years ago hardly any political assemblage of the people was graced by the presence of women. Had it needed a law to enable them to be present, what an argument could have been made against it! How easily it could have been shown that the coarseness, the dubious expressions, the general vulgarity of the scene, could have no other effect than to break down that purity of word and thought which women have, and which conservative and radical are alike sedulous to preserve. And yet the actual presence of women at political meetings has not debased them, but has raised the other sex. Coarseness has not become diffused through both sexes, but has fled from both. To put the whole matter in a short phrase: The association of the sexes in the family circle, in society, and in business having improved both, there is neither history, reason nor sense to justify the assertion that association in politics will lower the one or demoralize the other.—[Thomas B. Reed.]

As the experiments made by the Department of Agriculture on young men have not shown that there is any deleterious substance in our canned foods, Secretary Wilson has asked Dr. Wiley to experiment successively upon infants, children, and aged persons.

TRIBUTE TO ANNA SMITH.

Presented and placed upon the minute at a meeting of the teachers and officers of Girard Avenue First-day School, Second-day evening, First month 5, 1903.

THERE are seasons when the human heart seems satisfied with its reachings out to other hearts for comfort, strength and love. There are other times when these fail to meet the cravings of our being, and then it is we look beyond the channel through which the stream flows, upward to the source from which it emanates. The officers and teachers of our First-day School, in their late experience, have learned life's deeper lessons from these conditions.

Love flows from heart to heart as naturally as water, when unobstructed, flows from vessel to vessel, seeking a uniform level. Thus a bond of unity is formed, which, when broken, brings to each heart the bitterest pangs of sorrow. When a heart so filled with love as was that of our late lamented friend, Anna Smith, ceases its life beats, and the purified life ceases to pour forth its volume of strength, we are compelled to look to our Heavenly Father, who is the source of all life, for grace to bear the trial incident to such separation.

Here was a love that went out in its fullest measure to those who were sitting amid the shades of sorrow and mourning. Here was a love that gave of its strength to the heart of the little child, as well as to the life of developed manhood and womanhood. Here was a life that gave of its force to strengthen the bonds of unity among the members of her family, our meeting and our First-day School.

We are but voicing the feeling of every one who was permitted to come within the circle of her influence, in thus recording our estimate of the value of her life among us, and the sorrow that fills our hearts on account of her sudden removal.

Out of the depths of our sorrow goes forth to her sister in her loneliness the truest feeling of sympathy and love, and in one united aspiration our petition goes up to God, with desires for her encouragement and strength, and for the renewal of our trust.

Let us look not backward with regret, but strive to be prepared to meet life's duties as they come to each of us, with the same spirit of earnestness as she met hers.

IS OUR RELIGION FOUNDED ON A LEGEND?

In the INTELLIGENCER of First month 3d, in an article signed R. H. L., Penang Straits Settlement, Ceylon, the writer says: "Every intelligent Hindu knows that the whole theological legend of the birth, life, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ has its prototype in Krishna of India, who lived and taught some of the sublimest truths of the ages a thousand or fifteen hundred years before our era." The most unbelieving skeptic, unless utterly ignorant and unlearned, would not think of denying that the life and death of Jesus Christ were great historical facts; and in regard to his birth and resurrection, the gospel narratives have stood the test to which they have been subjected by the highest scholarship, and ac-ording to all the rules of historical criticism they are entitled to our fullest acceptance. I could bring proofs of all this, but only wish now to say a few words about Hinduism as compared with Christianity. Perhaps, however, the greatest of all proofs of the truth of the Christian religion is in the changed lives which are its fruit, and which we may constantly see.

James Freeman Clarke, in his valuable work, "Ten Great Religions," says: "An ignorant admiration of the sacred books of the Buddhists and Brahmins has succeeded to the former sweeping condemnation of them." Clarke separates the true from the mass of falsities in the heathen religions, and, with a master hand, shows in what way a truth is taught and in what respects their systems are lacking. Then he shows how Christianity not only embraces all the truths taught in each, but supplies all the many and great deficiencies in every one.

The fancied resemblances between Christ and the founders of Hinduism and Buddhism are only superficial. We learn from a study of Hinduism that Krishna's youth was full of "naughty tricks," and in manhood his conduct was "grossly immoral and disgusting." This is excused by his followers with the plea that as he was "a full manifestation of divinity," what would be wrong in others was but his privilege. This is also verified by the "grossly obscene pictures" discovered by the English soldiers on the walls of the queen's palace at Jhansi, pictures which to the queen represented religion. J. C. Clarke says that while Buddhism has been called "The Protestantism of the East," it might well be called "The Romanism of the East," so exactly do many of its customs correspond with those of Catholicism—using rosaries, beads, incense, candles, praying to images, chanting of prayers, celibacy of both sexes in monastic life, image of a virgin called "queen of heaven," etc.

While Buddha preached a religion of humanity, Buddhism was, as Clarke says, without a God, and what is Nirvana really but nothingness? What, indeed, compared to the Christian's heaven? "Christianity certainly teaches that we unite ourselves with God, not by sinking into and losing our personality in him, but by developing it, so that we may be able to serve and love him." Nirvana is almost, if not quite, synonymous with non-existence. When we consider that an error in the pronunciation of the mystic text meant destruction to the worshipper; when their sages were noted for selfishness and cursing, "and their gods for the most part worse," no wonder their great tenet is, "Existence is misery."

It has been well said, "All Brahminical ceremonies exhibit ritualism and symbolism run mad." Much more might be said, but I must not take the space. I wish to quote once more from J. F. Clarke: "One great fact which makes a broad distinction between other religions and Christianity is that they are ethnic and it is catholic. They are the religions of races and nations, limited by these lines of demarcation, by the bounds which God has beforehand appointed. Christianity is a catholic religion; it is the religion of the human race. It overflows all boundaries, recognizes no limits, belongs to man as man. And this it does, because of the fullness of its life, which it derives from its head and fountain, Jesus Christ, in whom dwells the fullness both of godhead and of manhead." I will close with the lines of our loved Whittier, which contain a great truth:

"We search the world for truth, we call
The good, the pure, the beautiful,
From graven stone and writer's scroll,
From all old flower fields of the soul,
And weary seekers of the best,
We come back laden from our quest,
To find that all the sages said
Is in the book our mothers read."

Granville, N. Y.

LYDIA J. MOSHER.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE LABOR QUESTION.

THE communication published in the issue of the INTELLIGENCER for First month 3d, and signed by John J. Janney, was of especial interest to me because the First-day School lesson on the Labor Question, the utility of which he questions, had seemed to me to be of peculiar interest and value; so much so, in fact, that I had marked it and filed it away for future reference.

It may be, and doubtless is, true that neither the columns of the INTELLIGENCER nor the pages of the First-day School lessons are the best place to discuss the labor question, but it seems equally true that the principles of the Christian religion or Christian ethics bearing upon that and other related questions may properly be presented there. When such social questions press for solution, those professing faith in Christian teaching must attempt to solve them by applying each principle to them. We will not solve such problems by running away from them, and they can only be solved aright in the light of free inquiry and fair discussion. One of William Penn's sayings that ought to be cherished in this day is that "truth never lost anything by free discussion."

That the labor question and other closely allied questions are pressing for solution no thoughtful person can doubt. One present phase of this great problem—the coal strike and its train of evils—brings this home to all of us. While there exists the earnest, oftentimes passionate demand of labor for justice, it will hardly be accepted as a satisfactory answer that the condition of the laborer in the present age exceeds that of any preceding age. The laborer has not been persuaded that that is true, and there seem to be two sides to the question.

In the coming conflict and discussion the duty of Friends would seem to be to call attention to the principles of justice and truth which they profess as offering a safe and peaceable means of settlement. Only through the application of the principle of the New Testament to these difficult problems can they be settled peaceably and with full justice to all parties. Let us trust that the time has not yet passed when this peaceable settlement is possible. Any aid to the accomplishment of such a work is surely in the line of Friendly and Christian services.

ISAAC ROBERTS.

Conshohocken, Pa., First month 10, 1903.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

PLYMOUTH MEETING, PA.—The regular meeting of Plymouth Friends' Association was held sixth-day evening, First month 9.

The program was opened by Ellic Conrad reciting "The Voice of the Poor House," followed by a recitation by Alice Ambler entitled, "The Miller of the Dec." Ruth Roberts read a paper on "Current Topics," which was followed by a short discussion. Watson K. Phillips read a selection entitled, "Look, Listen, and Learn a Little." A paper, "How may the decrease in our meetings be arrested?" prepared by Carrie Buckman, was read by Arthur Dewees. Jean Williamson then read a selection entitled, "The Man and the Newspaper." Benjamin Tomlinson answered the question, "In what ways may we hope to promote the growth of the Society?" A discussion on the last two papers followed, participated in by Benjamin Smith, Isaac Roberts, Elizabeth D. Corson, and others. The general sentiment seemed to be that our meeting is growing and we have reason to be encouraged.

WILLIAM W. AMBLER, Secretary.

QUAKERTOWN, PA.—On the evening of the 16th the Young Friends' Association met at the home of Evan R. and Kate Penrose. The new president, Frank Ball, called the meeting to order and read the thirteenth chapter of Romans.

E. Irene Meredith read "Mind the Light," from "The Life of Samuel J. Levisk." A recitation entitled, "Our Two Opinions," was given by Anna W. Ball. "The Problem of Happiness," by Alice Freeman Palmer, was read by Ella M. Ball—

"Who is the happiest of men? He who values the merits of others,

And in their pleasure takes joy even as though 't were his own."

An article written by Helen C. Borton, was read by William P. Roberts, from the Asbury Park Journal. A biographical sketch of the life of Samuel M. Janney, prepared by Ella H. Kinsey, was read by Annie S. Ball. The report of the General Conference, held in Philadelphia, was read by Phoebe Bewley, from the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER. Sentiments were given by nearly all present.

A. S. B., Cor. Sec.

BALTIMORE, MD.—A meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held in the library of Park Avenue Meeting-house, on the evening of First month 9, 1903.

After the regular business meeting, Esther Foulke Sharples, representing the History Committee, read a paper on "What produced Quakerism?" Emma J. Broomell, representing the Literature Committee, read extracts from the Journal of George Fox.

The meeting then adjourned, and the remainder of the evening was spent socially.

NAOMI LEE SPICER, Secretary.

EASTON, MD.—The Young Friends' Association met at the home of Joseph H. White, First month 14.

The officers for the ensuing year were duly installed. President, Elizabeth N. Taylor; vice-president, George L. Bartlett; secretary and treasurer, Laura Barber Shinn.

Anna White read "What is Quakerism?" from "The Principles of the Religious Society of Friends," by John J. Cornell. Pauline D. Bartlett prepared and read an interesting paper entitled, "Thoughts for the New Year." Elwood Tylor gave a little recitation about the "Boy Who Keeps on Trying." The debate, "Resolved, That a good person exerts a better influence than a good book," was ably handled by the leaders, Helen C. Shreve, Matilda J. Bartlett, and Elizabeth N. Tylor.

A very lively general discussion followed. Matilda J. Bartlett read a beautiful memorial on the death of Lizzie Willson Müller, in which loving tribute was paid to one friend who has been called from us since our last meeting. She was at one time secretary of the Association, and her loss is keenly felt by all.

"None knew her but to love her,
None named her but to praise."

After a response of New Year sentiments the meeting closed with an impressive silence.

LAURA BARBER SHINN, Secretary.

MOORESTOWN, N. J.—A regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held in the meeting-house, Sixth-day evening, First month 9, 1903.

The program for the evening was "George Fox and his Message to Men," by Dr. O. Edward Janney, of Baltimore. The speaker first gave an account of the life of Fox. In the seventeenth century politics were mixed with religion, and liberty of conscience was almost unknown. It is for rescuing this soul liberty that the world owes gratitude to Fox and his followers. Their faith stood so firm through trial after trial that finally persecution died out. The fundamental truths taught by Fox were the inner light, free ministry, and non-resistance.

Friends believe that the Bible is not the only rule of faith and practice, but religious life must conform to the truth within us. Sometimes we may risk trouble through a false sense of duty, but it was under the Quaker spirit of freedom of thought that Lincoln and William Lloyd Garrison and others worked.

The foundations of non-resistance are brotherly love and the teachings of Jesus. Christianity is incompatible with war, for the evils of war—direct and indirect—cannot be calculated. George Fox still has a message to men so long as intemperance and impurity exist.

Much appreciation was expressed for this paper, and in the discussion which followed attention was called to the fact that the Declaration of Independence could be traced to the freedom of thought of Friends, and that they had helped to shape our present nation.

Dr. Janney thought the two greatest needs of our Society to be consecration to service and individual faithfulness. One Friend said we should be willing to make more sacrifice for our religion, but another felt that we want obedience not sacrifice, that more good comes from doing good for love than for sacrifice.

E. L. G., Secretary.

EDUCATIONAL.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

DR. MAGILL lately gave his metrical translation of Molière's "Le Misanthrope" to all persons who could attend.

The young men of the College were greatly pleased when Prof. Hoadley presented to the Athletic Association a liberal offer from a friend of Swarthmore to assist in making permanent improvements to Whittier Field.

The Joseph Leidy Scientific Society held a very interesting meeting on the 13th. The questions referred to at the last meeting were answered by persons to whom they were given. Prof. Hoadley then spoke of some things which had interested him most at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Among these were the pressure of light, and the method of measuring the time of exposure for photographic shutters.

Asa P. Way read a paper on "The Holland Submarine Boats," and William Bedell spoke of the periscopes used upon them. He also gave some suggestions as to how they could be improved.

Prof. Hoadley, of Yale, Dr. W. W. Keen, of Jefferson Medical College, and President Swain spoke before the Contemporary Club in the Art Club of Philadelphia on Third-day evening, the 13th. President Swain spoke in favor of the four year's college course. He thought it better to shorten the elementary course one year than to shorten the time of college work.

President Swain is now in the West. While there he will attend the inauguration of his successor, President Bryan, of Indiana University. These exercises are of triple importance, for they are to celebrate the dedication of a new building, Founder's Day, and the inauguration of the new president. President Swain is to represent the Alumni at the Founder's Day exercises.

Stakes have been driven on the west campus preparatory to the locating of the Joseph Wharton dormitory.

The Young Friends' Association held its regular meeting on First-day evening. William Diebold and Maurice Hansell gave talks on "The Private Life of William Penn." Leidy McFarland read a paper on "The Historical Importance of William Penn." The discussion, by Asa Way, following this paper, brought out his relations with the Indians. Maud E. Rice then read a paper in which she dealt with "The Religious Principles of Penn.," and Elva Ash gave readings from Penn's "No Cross, No Crown." General remarks brought out interesting points by Dean Bond, Dr. Holmes, and J. Hibberd Taylor.

COURSE OF LECTURES AT SWARTHMORE.

The following course of lectures on the History of Friends has been arranged for at Swarthmore College, on Second-day evenings, beginning First month 19, 1903:

I. First month 19.—Social and Religious Conditions of the Time of George Fox. J. Russell Smith.

II. George Fox and His Message to Men. Dr. O. Edward Janney.

III. Some Early Friends. Edward B. Rawson.

VI. John Woolman, His Life and Times. (Lecturer not yet certain.)

V. Quakerism and Modern Thought. Professor Christie, of Meadville Theological School.

VI. A Quaker Revival. Henry W. Wilbur.

Lectures to be at 7 o'clock p. m., in the College Parlor. A general invitation is extended.

LITERARY NOTES.

"LITERARY VALUES" is a new book of essays by John Burroughs, containing ripe reflection on authors and books, literary style and the charm of poetry. The same faithful and intimate study that the writer has given to the fields and woods is apparent in the present work; the pithy thought, the keen analysis, the affectionate observation, are here in full measure. One is impressed with the sanity and sure taste of John Burroughs in these suggestive essays. So much right appraising of literary values must be the fruit of long years of reading and reflection. The freshness and independence of view may be illustrated by this extract from a passage that satirizes the "laboratory method" of studying literature,—

"To dig into the roots and origin of the great poets is like digging into the roots of an oak or maple the better to increase your appreciation of the beauty of the tree. There stands the tree in all its summer glory. Will you really know it any better after you have laid bare every root and rootlet? There stand Homer, Dante, Chaucer, and Shakespeare. Read them, give yourself to them, and master them if you are man enough.

"The poets are not to be analyzed; they are to be enjoyed; they are not to be studied, but to be loved; they are not for knowledge, but for culture—to enhance our appreciation of life and our mastery over its elements. All the mere facts about a poet's work are as chaff as compared with the appreciation of one line or fine sentence. Why study a great poet at all after the manner of the dissecting room? Why not rather seek to make the acquaintance of his living soul and to feel its power?"

(Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

"Golden Numbers" is a book of verse for youth, edited by Kate Douglas Wiggin and Nora A. Smith (McClure, Phillips & Co.) Probably no such wealth of the noblest English and American poetry has ever been brought together for young readers, unless it be in the "Heart of Oak" books of Professor Norton. Many an old volume has been turned over in search of these golden numbers, and many of the best among recent poets' works too. One can fancy the editors drawing upon their memories of years of appreciative companionship with the great singers, and perhaps putting their charming pages together at last in the summer days beneath the orchard-boughs, with the birds and brooks and flowers near at hand.

The sections of the book have cheery and fragrant titles, as "A Chanted Calendar," "The World Beautiful," "Green Things Growing," "On the Wing," "The Inglenook," "Fairy Songs," "A Garden of Girls," etc. Each section has an "interleaf" of sympathetic introduction, and the volume is prefaced by the senior editor in an essay full of the special charm that her readers know of old. Of the true poet she has this to say, "The words he uses, the method and manner in which he uses them, the cadence of his verse, the thoughts he calls to your mind, the way he brings the quick color to your cheek and the tear to your eye, all these savor of magic, nothing else." It is a heartening thing to find a book of pure gold like this stout little red volume with its pages so starred with lyrics and carols and country songs. Once it becomes a friend in early life, its possessor will cherish it always.

J. R. H.

COMMUNICATIONS.

WORDS OF APPRECIATION.

EDITORS FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

As the time for renewal of subscription for the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER is again at hand I feel to add my testimony to those who have spoken through its columns of late of their appreciation of its weekly visits; nor has it ever been more welcome during the forty years of its coming to our home than at present; for while it sometimes brings the sad news of great loss sustained by our Society in the removal of one or more of its very competent workers, yet the same issue may contain cheering words from willing and hopeful hearts, that may have been warmed into a keener sense of responsibility, and stimulated to greater zeal by the example and influence of those for whom we mourn.

And while doubtless my rather unusually large acquaintance among Friends adds much to the interest of Society matter found in its columns, yet I venture the assertion that if more of our members read it they, too, would become better acquainted with the workings of the Society and, perchance, be moved to more useful service. ISAAC WILSON.

Bloomfield, Ontario, First month 14, 1903.

THE RELIEF OF THE POOR.

EDITORS FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

"The Female Association of Philadelphia for the Relief of the Sick and Infirm Poor with Clothing," etc., presents to its friends and contributors its seventy-fourth annual report, containing a brief summary of the work accomplished during the past year with the funds so generously contributed by them. To those who have extended financial support to the society, it will be gratifying to know that their contributions brought comfort to many deserving sick and infirm.

It is now the season when sickness and misery will be evident on all sides, and assistance most necessary. This winter, in addition to the usual distress, there will be much additional suffering and want on account of the great scarcity of coal and the difficulty in the poor securing it in small quantities, except at extortionate prices.

The society again appeals to its many friends, not only to renew their annual subscriptions, but to give such additional amounts as they may feel justified in doing, and to interest their friends in the good work.

During the past season we prepared 3,395 garments for distribution, and paid poor women $662.58 for making a large portion of them.

Subscriptions and donations in money may be sent to any of the members or forwarded direct to the treasurer. Donations in goods, trimmings, shoes, etc., may be addressed to "Female Association," etc., care Benjamin Walton, No. 152 N. Fifteenth Street.

SARAH M. OGDEN, President, Riverton, N. J.

EDITH N. BRUBAKER, Secretary, 105 N. 34th Street.

CORNELIA N. WRIGHT, Treasurer, 3309 Baring Street.

First month, 1903.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

UNDER the will of the late Susanna H. Thomas, of West Chester, Pa., native of Willistown township, several bequests, amounting in all to $4,200, are left to worthy objects in that locality. The various items are as follows:

Newtown Square Preparative Meeting of Friends, $600; West Chester Relief Association, $500; Flower Mission of West Chester, $500; Chester County Children's Aid Society, $500; Chester County Hospital, $1,000; Children's Country Week Association of Philadelphia, $1,000; West Chester Library, $50; Friends' Sewing School, $50. Total, $4,000.

Half of the amount left to the Newtown Square Preparative Meeting of Friends is to be invested and the interest applied to keeping the graveyard in repair, the parents of the testator having been buried there.

Curtis Eves, who for sometime has been physical instructor of the boys of George School, has resigned, and will devote his time to the study of medicine. William H. Satterthwaite, Curtis Eves' former assistant, will take the position vacated.

The Schofield School Bulletin reports that the Christmas fair was a success, the receipts being $127.00, but adds, "not as much as when our friends sent dresses and coats that we could sell for $3.50 to $5.00."

The Laing School Visitor states that the sum of $150 is needed to fit up another class-room. One-half of this has already been contributed by the Mary Ann Longstreth Alumni Association of Philadelphia.

Helen G. Borton has recently entered Emerson College, Boston, Mass., to take a special course in reading and elocution, as a preparation for teaching.

Joel Borton went to Waterford, Virginia, on the 17th instant, to attend Fairfax Quarterly Meeting and some of the meetings composing it.

EACH IN HIS OWN NAME.

A FIRE mist and a planet,
A crystal and a cell;
A jellyfish and a saurian,
And caves where cave men dwell,
Then a sense of law and beauty,
And a face turned from the clod—
Some call it Evolution,
And others call it God.

A haze on the far horizon,
The infinite, tender sky,
The ripe, rich tints of the cornfields,
And the wild geese sailing high;
And all over upland and lowland
The charm of the goldenrod—
Some of us call it Autumn,
And others call it God.

Like the tide on a crescent sea beach
When the moon is new and thin,
Into our hearts high yearnings,
Come welling and surging in—
Come from the mystic ocean,
Whose rim no foot has trod—
Some of us call it Longing,
And others call it God.

A picket frozen on duty,
A mother starved for her brood,
Socrates drinking the hemlock,
And Jesus on the rood;
The million who, humble and nameless,
The straight hard pathway trod—
Some call it Consecration,
And others call it God.

—Carruth.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE PLEASURES WE HAVE IN OUR MIND.

'Tis a beautiful thing to have riches and love,
To comfort and gladden and cheer;
To be free as the silver-tipped cloudlets above,
All the blessings that mortals hold dear;
But happiness comes not because we can buy
All these beautiful treasures we find,
And naught can compare on the face of this earth
With the riches we have in our mind.

The days may be cloudy and life go amiss—
There are times when the whole earth goes wrong;
But if we can think of a lingering kiss,
Or there breathes in our mind some sweet song,
Or anything pleasant that can or may be,
We'll have it, for Fancy is blind,
And no one can rob us nor time e'er destroy,
The pleasures we have in our mind.

If life is prosaic and weary and stern,
Just cover it over with gold.
Give Fancy your colors, and watching her, learn
How she gilds black reality cold.
There is true art in living the best out of earth,
Nor always in grief be resigned;
The dearest of pleasures, and sweetest of love,
Are the ones that each feels in his mind!

SARAH PALMER BYRNES.

METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR TWELFTH MONTH, 1902.

Mean barometer,	30.160
Highest barometer during the month, 15th,	30.741
Lowest barometer during the month, 5th,	29.220
Mean temperature,	34.
Highest temperature during the month, 21st, 22d,	58.
Lowest temperature during the month, 9th,	17.
Mean of maximum temperatures,	39.9
Mean of minimum temperatures,	28.
Greatest daily range of temperature, 16th,	5.
Least daily range of temperature, 12th, 20th,	5.
Mean daily range of temperature,	11.9
Mean temperature of the Dew Point,	25.9
Mean relative humidity, per cent.,	76.
Total precipitation, rain, inches,	8.11
Greatest precipitation in any 24 consecutive hours, 2.13 inches of rain, on the 21st and 22d.

Number of days on which .01 inch or more precipitation, 18.

Number of clear days 13, fair days 6, cloudy days 12.

Prevailing direction of the wind from northwest.

Sleet on the 1st, 15th, 25th, 29th.

Snow on the 1st, 5th, 7th, 14th, and 29th. Total snowfall, in inches, during the month 5.9; 3 inches of which fell on the 5th and 2.5 inches on the 25th. No snow on the ground on the 15th, 1 inch at the end of the month.

SENSIBLE TEMPERATURE DATA.

Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a.m., 46.5° on 16th.

Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a.m., 15.5° on 9th.

Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a.m., 29.2°.

Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p.m., 57° on 21st.

Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p.m., 19° on 25th.

Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p.m., 30.7°.

Mean of wet bulb thermometer for this month, 30°.

NOTE.—The means of the daily maximum and minimum temperatures, 39.9° and 28° respectively, give a monthly mean of 34°, which is 3° below the normal, and 1.6° below the corresponding month in 1901.

The total amount of precipitation for the month, 8.11 inches, is 4.75 inches above the normal, and 1.04 inches more than fell during Twelfth month, 1901.

JOHN COMLY, Observer.

Centennial Avenue, Philadelphia, Twelfth month 31.

INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION IN ITS PAN-AMERICAN ASPECT.

Abstract of address delivered by Wm. P. Wilson, Director of Philadelphia Commercial Museum, reported by George B. Cock and revised by the author.

As a delegate to the Pan-American Conference in the city of Mexico, I find the mass of our people do not properly understand its purpose. I propose to discuss what it did for the commerce of the United States and the Latin-American countries; and how its work related itself to the future possibilities of peace in the Western Hemisphere.

During Monroe's administration (1817 to 1825) culminated some of the efforts inaugurated about 1810 by Bolivar, "The Liberator of South America," toward the release of a large territory from the Spanish yoke and its breaking up into the various Latin-American republics now existing. For instance, a large strip of territory, since made into the republics of Venezuela, Colombia and Bolivia, formed at that time one single government, with Bolivar as the liberator, fighting against Spain. Caracas, the capital of Venezuela, has in its center to-day Washington Square, where is located a beautiful, heroic statue of Washington. That country's constitution and laws, as those of most of the Latin-American countries, have been fashioned on our plan. Bolivar was first to conceive of an Isthmian Canal; and before the countries named were even free he attempted to raise money in the bourses of the world toward effecting this inter-oceanic communication. About this juncture he called to Panama a great conference of the American States, inviting our government, and all the other American republics so far as they had been established, to send delegates. Fearing European complications we quibbled a little over the matter; but in 1826 Monroe's successor, John Quincy Adams, appointed two delegates, though later they were taken ill and did not attend.

The next holding of a Pan-American Conference was during the Harrison administration, with Blaine as Secretary of State. It convened in Washington, October 2d, 1889, representing seventeen republics and one empire (Brazil); and propounded many questions: (1) The preservation of peace through arbitration; (2) the establishment of a customs union trade; (3) the stimulation of new steamship lines; (4) a uniform system of customs, sanitation and quarantine; (5) a common system of weights and measures (inventions, copyrights and trade-marks to be protected); (6) a common coinage (not yet established, and may not be for the next century); (7) arbitration pure and simple; (8) an international railway system; (9) such other questions as might be propounded.

That conference resulted later in the establishment of a commission of engineers which took into consideration the building of a trans-continent railway from New York to Buenos Ayres, spending five or six years and $360,000 in surveying the entire route between those terminals. They estimated that about 10,741 miles of railway would have to be built for through trains; also that that railway would cost $75,000,000—a small sum to consider now in these days of great financial operations. Every one of these different republics that later came to build their own railway systems tried to put them on the line of this survey, and help fill up the gaps; and to-day you can get into a car at St. Louis and disembark from it 4,000 miles away in the southern part of Mexico—the car passing through the City of Mexico if you wish. There are also longer or shorter lines in every one of these republics between the city of Mexico and Argentina; and to-day nearly 5,000 miles of that intervening stretch has been laid with track.

A second outcome of this conference was the Bureau of American Republics, designed to include all the Latin-American countries (our own being represented by the Secretary of State), and to collate and disseminate information regarding them all. One magnificent feature of the conference was the getting together of so many republics for common discussion and acquaintance.

The next and probably the greatest conference ever held in the world's history was The Hague Conference, called in 1898 for the disarmament of the nations. Many people thought that the circular letter of the Czar of Russia which constituted the call was a farce perpetrated to further his own purposes. Our government, however, took the matter very seriously, and sent as representatives Ambassador White from Berlin (one of the ablest diplomats the United States ever sent out), with a delegate each from the army and navy, and Seth Low; throughout a most able representation. The opening speech by De Stael, Russia's foreign minister, determined conclusively the purpose of the inaugurating government. Disarmament was in a measure thrown aside, and the proposition to arbitrate for the peace of the world was made the main scheme as presented by this able diplomat; and the great fact remaining since the passage of this conference into history is the permanent court for international arbitration.

The next great world-assemblage was the Pan-American Conference held in the latter part of 1901 and the first of 1902 in the city of Mexico, the Mexican government having prevailed upon all the others to meet in her capital, where fully $500,000 was spent for the convenience and happiness of the delegates. On arrival in the city of Mexico the delegates were not allowed to go to the pre-arranged quarters by public conveyances, but the wealthy citizens tendered their own equipages, whose progress was accompanied by bands of music. The United States delegation consisted of Messrs. Davis, Ex-Senator from West Virginia, chairman; Pepper, of Washington; Barrett, Ex-Minister to Siam; Buchanan, Ex-Minister to the Argentine Republic (who had once succeeded in arranging the difficulties between that government and Chile with such felicity that he was offered a gift of $100,000 by the former and another large gift by Chile); and Frazer, of Chicago, all appointed by President McKinley. My appointment was a later one, by President Roosevelt, with special reference to the commercial side of the conference

The opening of this conference was attended by a series of receptions and dinners to promote acquaintanceship among the delegates themselves and with their Mexican hosts. A social function in some form is an essential preliminary to the transaction of any business, no matter what the scale, with the Latin-American peoples. We all called upon President Diaz and the Foreign Minister, and in a day or two went to a reception given by Diaz attended by more than a thousand guests, where fireworks were a prominent feature. Mr. and Mrs. Diaz received us all, the latter speaking English as fluently as any American; while the manner and warmth, as a host, of Diaz (whom I regard as one of the best statesmen in the world) were beyond cavil.

The provision for the comfort and necessities of the guests was on a scale of utmost generosity. Connected with our sumptuous conference quarters, where each delegate was provided with a mahogany desk, the tapestries of which were embroidered with the Mexican coat of arms, was a restaurant at which the finest foods were served without a cent of cost to any delegate from the inauguration of the conference to its close. A servant's receipt of a fee was the signal for his discharge. There were nineteen republics represented. It was plain that the chairman of each national delegation should be chairman of some committee, so nineteen committees were organized.

The Mexican government had taken the greatest care to appoint eight of their jurists most eminent in international law; these had been at work more than six months in systematizing and skeletonizing the information relative to the questions which they knew would come up at the conference. For instance, as to the subject of arbitration (the most difficult of all to adjust), they had taken the entire work of The Hague Conference and various other conferences where this question had been discussed; had skeletonized all the information and placed it in print in such a way one could get it at a glance; they had then summarized what they thought ought to be done at this conference in the line of arbitration and published it all in a large brochure; so that when we took up the question, a copy of that pamphlet, printed in both English and Spanish, was given to every member. Some of us spoke only English; some, English and Spanish; but everything that was done in the conference was presented in both languages; while a third, the French language, was official along with the other two.

The United States being the oldest and grandest republic represented there, all planned to elect the chairman of the United States delegation president of the conference. Europe had been busy for more than a year trying to convince every one of these Latin-American republics that the United States had designs upon them in this meeting, and they had grown more or less suspicious. Our delegation had received instructions from Secretary Hay that we were to be modest and retiring, and not only that, but we were to accept no offices whatever, being merely there as an advisory body; that we should take pains to keep in the background, but to quietly see that everything led in the right direction. The first thing done was to propose ex-Senator Davis, president of the conference, which office he declined in a most happy and effective speech, in terms comporting with the language of our instructions. Then Senator Ragosa, the ablest international lawyer of Mexico (who two years previously had represented his government at the commercial congress held in Philadelphia), was elected president.

(Conclusion to follow.)

ENDOWED ROADS AS MONUMENTS.

From the Springfield Republican.

If this country had been obliged to wait for development by taxation, that is by money unwillingly wrung from its citizens, its record of progress would be far behind what it now is. It is hardly too much to say that the best things in it are monuments to the altruism and public spirit of its people. It is in this way that the interests of education, religion, philanthropy and beauty have been expanded to proportions that reflect great credit on our nationality. Still, the tentative exploitation of a new idea for public benefit generally comes through taxation. It has been so with the "good roads" idea in this State and in other States. That idea has made a gratifying advance. It has been justified by what has been accomplished, but the movement is still in its infancy, so far as general provision for the needs of our citizens is concerned, and it will take a long time for its results to develop into a system of general utility.

A suggestion that closely fits this situation was recently made by Mr. M. F. Dickinson, of this city, in an address before the State Board of Agriculture. "Enormous sums of money," he said, "are given for endowment of schools, colleges, libraries and other like useful purposes. None of these claimants presents a stronger case than the neglected road and roadway. How fine an act it would be for a loyal son to bestow upon his native town a handsome and expensive stone bridge which might well bear his name, and stand as a permanent memorial to his generosity! or he might set aside a large fund for the improvement and beautifying of the street or road on which he was born and over which he traveled to school or to mill during the years of his boyhood. Such a fund ought to be large enough to provide income sufficient to keep the road in order forever."

The legislation of the State is favorable to such endowment. It has practically made the savings banks repositories and trustees of any funds that may be given for such purposes. No part of the principal can be withdrawn, and it is exempt from attachment or levy on execution. Perhaps at this time no wealthy man can more surely enshrine his name in the grateful memory of his fellow-citizens than by giving or leaving to his town a sum that shall provide it with good roads for all time to come.

WILL POWER.

THE will is of prime importance and is deserving of much more attention than we usually give it. We see for the most part what we will see. We hear for the most part what we will hear. We taste for the most part what we will taste. We feel for the most part what we will feel. We imagine for the most part what we will imagine. We remember for the most part what we will remember. We do for the most part what we will do. In short, it is the will that has, or may be made to have, the controlling influence over body, over intellect, over sensibility, and over conduct.

The above statement by Dr. C. S. Coler is well illustrated by the following:

It is told that a telegraph operator at Springfield, Mass., was kept at his post of duty for many hours receiving special news. After losing two nights' sleep he was relieved from duty to get some rest. He went to his room at the hotel, and soon was fast asleep. When the time came for him to return to his instrument he could not be awakened. Loud pounding on the door did not result in arousing him. An operator then, with his knife-handle, tapped "Springfield" on the door, in imitation of the clicking of the instrument. At once the sleeping operator sprang from his bed, and was soon ready to continue his work.

It is said that firemen hear in their sleep the signal calling them to duty, while they sleep right on through any number of signals which do not concern them. In an article on "Heroes Who Fight Fire," Jacob A. Riis tells of a fire department chief who has a gong right over his head at his home, every stroke of which he hears, although he never hears the baby; while his wife hears the baby if it stirs in its crib, but does not hear the gong.—[The Young Idea.]

Idyllic Island Life.

In its own small way Pitcairn Island affords the most remarkable illustration of that genius of colonization which has built up the British Empire of which it is but an atom. Pitcairn is a mere dot in the Pacific, an island only seven miles in circumference. It was occupied and colonized in 1790 by a ruffianly crew, the mutineers of the Bounty. Yet absolutely isolated and never under any control of the British Government, Pitcairn is now one of the most idyllic and utopian as well as smallest communities on the face of the earth.

Its inhabitants number about 150. They are fine, tall specimens of humanity, rather dark, but favoring their European rather than Kanaka forbears. They are well educated, and speak excellent English, free from any lingual corruption or slang. Their life is one of unbroken peace and ease, for plantains, maize, bananas, oranges, pumpkins, sugar, and cocoanut trees grow in luxuriance, with no wild animals to wreck the crops. The sea swarms with fish, while goats, pigs, and poultry thrive and multiply. The climate is perfect. And though all the prospect pleases, man is not vile. On the contrary, the Pitcairn people constitute a very perfect society. They are religious, and, adhering strictly to the Fourth Commandment, observe Saturday as the Sabbath. The organ in their church was presented to them by Queen Victoria. There is no poverty, for all labor for the common weal, and there is neither prison nor policeman on the island. They elect one of themselves to fill the post of Governor or Magistrate, but his office is practically a sinecure. They have no money; alcohol as a beverage is not, being regarded strictly as a medicine, nor is the smoke of tobacco smelt in the land. Once a year the life of this Arcadia is excited by the visit of a British warship, bringing the annual mail. To the captain of the vessel any important matter is referred for settlement, and his judgment is always quietly accepted. Save for this annual visit and the occasional call of a sailing ship the little community pursues its peaceful way in complete isolation from the maddening world.—[Public Ledger.]

Apples in Winter.

I SOMETIMES think that city folk in furnace-heated houses can never know what a really good apple is, no matter how good the grocer and caterer may be. It is in the farm house with a real cellar—not a basement with heater and laundry and ashbins—that one gets apples. You sit in the "wing" beside a crackling fireplace or a wood fire in a stove that is built for service rather than for ornament. The cellar is under the "upright." You go through the buttery, through the cellar door that has a cathole in the lower front corner, and with lamp or lantern in hand you go down the stairs into a subterranean world. The snow is scurrying around the house corners, but here is a dark and snug retreat, a retreat such as no city house can have. There is no smell of ashes and soapsuds, only the cool, soft odor of the moist ground and the boxes and barrels of apples. From box to box you go—Northern Spies, Tannan Sweets, Greenings, Roxbury Russets, Seek-no-further, Rambos, Spitzenbergs, Snowapples, Non-such, Swaars, perhaps belated Kings and Fall Pippins—even Baldwins are not good enough for this company—and you take your pick.—[Country Life in America.]

English Shopwomen.

AMERICAN shopwomen have little idea of the lives and lots of the English "shop-assistants," as salespeople are called on the other side. Compared with their treatment in America, the English shopgirl is a veritable slave; and the only mitigating circumstance in her life is the outward semblance of gentility that her occupation permits, as distinguished from menial domestic employment.

Most of the large shops board and lodge their assistants, and they are thus practically bound to their employers. The hours of work are long and exhausting, and they are not allowed to sit down, except for the brief allowance for lunch at noon, from the time they begin their work at early morning until the shop is closed at night, and the subsequent work of clearing up is finished. Then and then only are they allowed to rest, and most of them are too tired to do anything but creep off to bed in their ill-lighted and ill-ventilated lodgings.

The board which they are provided with is meagre and ill-cooked. For breakfast they are given bread and jam and tea. Nothing else. Dinner consists of beef or mutton, the cheapest cuts, and potatoes. The only other variation of this fare is a concoction of scraps left from the meat during the week, which is most aptly dubbed "Resurrection Pie!" There is little of light or pleasure in their lives, and few of them are able to retain their health under the strain of it.—[Boston Transcript.]

THE protest of Secretary Hay concerning the treatment of Jews in Roumania has not been without good results. On Twelfth month 27 the Roumanian Senate, at the request of the Minister of Public Instruction, agreed that Jews residing in Roumania might be naturalized, and thus acquire the rights of citizens, which hitherto have been withheld from them.

A BILL has passed both houses of Congress providing for the retirement of Hawaiian silver coins after the expiration of this year. They may be exchanged at their face value for standard silver coins of the United States.

CURRENT EVENTS.

THE scarcity of coal continues to be the topic of greatest interest to the people, and efforts to relieve the situation have not yet materially increased the supply. John Mitchell has appealed to the miners to work more steadily, and an increased output is reported from Wilkesbarre and Scranton collieries. The railroads have endeavored to relieve the congestion of freight cars and to give coal the precedence over anything but perishable freight. The independent operators are getting all they can for the coal, but the Reading and Lehigh companies still sell at the old rates.

THE operators have continued their testimony before the Coal Strike Commission. They assert that the restrictions of the Union tend to repress individual ambition and keep all workers on a level, and that many men lose time on pay all the days immediately following, because of drunkenness. They also think that the Unions should not receive members under 21 years of age. John Mitchell left Philadelphia on the 19th to attend the United Mine Workers' Convention at Indianapolis.

FOLLOWING the passage of the bill to relieve coal of duty for one year, which was promptly signed by the President, Representative Jenkins, of Wisconsin, who is chairman of the judiciary committee, introduced a resolution that the committee be directed to investigate and report to the house as soon as possible concerning the power of Congress "to declare that a necessity has arisen for taking possession of all coal, coal beds, and coal mines in the United States, and all lines of transportation, agencies, instruments, and vehicles of commerce necessary for the transportation of coal."

ON the 15th instant James H. Tillman, Lieutenant-Governor of South Carolina, and nephew of Senator Tillman, met N. G. Gonzales, editor of the State, in the public street of Columbia, S. C., the latter being unarmed, and without a word of warning shot him with a pistol, inflicting a fatal wound of which the victim died on the 19th instant. Tillman was at once arrested and placed in jail. The trouble between the two men began with a fist fight between the two Senators from South Carolina last year on the floor of the United States Senate, when Gonzales denounced Senator Tillman in his paper. During the campaign of the nephew for the Governorship Gonzales denounced him in his paper as morally unfit for the office.

THE Wharton School of Finance and Economy of the University of Pennsylvania is to have a home of its own. Its founder, Joseph Wharton, has bought a site for the building on Woodland avenue, facing the University and extending through to Locust street. It is his intention to convey the land to the University, expend $200,000 on the building, and increase the endowment from $250,000 to $500,000. The purpose of the school is to give a sound education to those intending to go into active business.

ABRAM S. HEWITT, ex-Mayor of New York, and for many years Representative in Congress, died on the 18th instant, in his 81st year. He was honored by members of all parties for his political integrity. While directing immense business interests he found time for practical philanthropy. The acts of the Legislature by which Peter Cooper was enabled to make Cooper Union a public institution were drawn by him, and he contributed generously to the treasury and induced others to give large contributions. His personal donations approximated $1,000,000.

THE Argentine Government has sent a representative to the United States in search of teachers for its normal schools. It wants two competent men as professors of pedagogy and experimental psychology, salary $400 in gold monthly; and three men for principals of normal schools, salary $250 in gold monthly, who are both university and normal school graduates. All must have competent knowledge of Spanish. The Argentine Republic takes a profound interest in the United States educational system, and maintains thirty young men as students here.

NEWS NOTES.

GOVERNOR PENNYPACKER, of Pennsylvania, took the oath of office on the 19th instant.

DURING the year 1902 the University of Pennsylvania received gifts and bequests amounting to $936,851.67.

IN a single day last month forty-seven carloads of beer, containing 1,000,000 bottles, were shipped from Milwaukee breweries to Manila and Hong Kong.

THE Paris correspondent of the London Times states that the authorities of Tunis have forbidden pilgrimages to Mecca in 1903, because of the prevalence of cholera in Egypt.

THE laws of Indiana require the saloons to close at 11 p. m. A woman whose husband lost his life through liquor sold a few minutes after that hour received a verdict of $1,700 damages.

KING EDWARD VII. and President Roosevelt exchanged greetings and congratulations on the 19th by Marconi's wireless telegraph between Cape Cod, Mass. and Cornwall, England.

FOUR school directors of Norristown, Pa., failed to secure a renomination because they voted to accept $50,000 from Andrew Carnegie, to establish a free library to be maintained by the city.

THE American Wave Motor Company has been incorporated at Dover, Del., with an authorized capital of $1,000,000, which will erect a plant at Atlantic City for utilizing the force of ocean waves.

GOVERNOR TAFT has decided to remain in the Philippines instead of accepting a seat in the United States Supreme Court, and it is stated that Judge Day, of Canton, Ohio, will be named in his stead for the Supreme Bench.

THE sheriff who was removed by the Governor of Indiana for permitting a mob to take from him and lynch a negro prisoner, has been re-elected and is making a strong effort to nullify the law under which the Governor acted.

FORTY-FIVE Chicago coal operators and dealers were indicted on the 19th by a special Grand Jury for conspiring to restrict the coal supply, and to charge a price for coal greatly in excess of its value.

HENRI GEORGES STEPHANE ADOLPHE OFFER DE BLOWITZ, known to readers of newspapers throughout the world as having been for many years the Paris correspondent of the London Times, died of apoplexy, on the 18th inst. He was born in 1832.

NOTWITHSTANDING the surplus in the treasury the Pennsylvania Legislature at its last session cut off the appropriation for fighting contagious diseases. The smallpox is already epidemic in some towns and the State Board of Health has not a dollar at its disposal.

PENDING the arrangements for arbitration between the European Powers and Venezuela, one of the German cruisers shelled a Venezuelan fort and is reported to have been repulsed. It is also reported that President Castro has gained several victories over the revolutionists.

IN passing the Militia bill reported from the House the Senate made two important amendments. They struck out the clause which provided for a reserve force of 100,000 men who have been honorably discharged from the army, the volunteers, or the organized militia, and inserted a clause exempting from service in the militia those who have religious scruples against war.

A CONFERENCE held in Washington on the 19th to consider the danger of the spread of the bubonic plague in the United States passed a resolution censuring the recent Governor of California and the city government of San Francisco for opposing the operations of the United States Public Health Service. It is stated that 93 cases of the plague have occurred in San Francisco, 87 of these being in Chinatown.

Chimney with nobody's name on it.

Who's responsible for it?

Not MACBETH.

If you'll send your address, I'll send you the Index to Lamps and their Chimneys, to tell you what number to get for your lamp.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample, write
Farwell & Rhines, Watchtown, N. Y., U.S.A.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK
UNDERTAKER
TELEPHONE
1313 VINE STREET
ESTABLISHED 1860

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes
10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted.
Scientific Bread Mach. Co.
(STUBBENBACHER, Jr.)
52nd & Media Sts., Philadelphia

COLLINGS CARRIAGE CO.,

Broughams, Victorias, Coupes, Rockaways, Cutwaters,
Runabouts, and Wagonettes.
1719 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,

Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, Editor,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered
Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

1ST MO. 24.—DR. JOSEPH SWAIN, OF Swarthmore College, will deliver an address at Friends' Meeting-House, Fifteenth street and Rutherford place, New York, at 2.30 p. m. Subject, "A View of Nature and the Bible." All are cordially invited.

1ST MO. 24.—AN EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE, to which an invitation is extended by the Association of Friends' Schools and the Committee on Education, will be held in the Lecture Room of Friends' Central School. Program: at 2 p. m., lecture by State Superintendent Nathan C. Schaeffer, subject, "The Core of the School Curriculum"; at 3 p. m., Round Table. Leader, Dr. Samuel C. Schumcker, subject, "Method of Nature-Work."

1ST MO. 24.—WESTBURY QUARTERLY Meeting, in New York, at 10.30 a. m. Ministers and Elders day before at 3 p. m.

1ST MO. 25.—GREEN STREET MEETING, Philadelphia, 10.30 a. m., visited by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee.

1ST MO. 25.—AN APPOINTED MEETING will be held at the Quarterly Meeting Home, 5800 Greene St., Germantown, at 3 p. m. Take Germantown cars on either Eighth or Thirteenth Streets for Chelton Avenue, which is 5700.

1ST MO. 25.—PENN'S GROVE YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Samuel Broomell.

1ST MO. 25.—HOPEWELL, VA., YOUNG Friends' Association.

1ST MO. 27.—CONCORD QUARTERLY Meeting, at West Chester, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 2 p. m.

1ST MO. 27.—A MEETING UNDER the care of the Membership Committee of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting to explain Friendly visits and principles will be held at the meeting-house, 35th Street and Lancaster Avenue, at 8 p. m.

Joel Borton, of Woodstown, N. J., will address the meeting. Those not members, who are friendly to the Society, are especially invited.

1ST MO. 28.—PURCHASE QUARTERLY Meeting, at Purchase, N. Y., at 11 a. m. At the close of the business session luncheon will be served, followed by a meeting of Friends' Association, the subject being "The Greatest Need of Our Society." Meeting of Ministers and Elders the day before, at 2.30 p. m. Conveyances will meet trains both days leaving Grand Central Station, New York, at 9.08 a. m., and Brewster at 8.34 a. m.

1ST MO. 28.—NEWTOWN, PA., JUNIOR Young Friends' Association.

1ST MO. 31.—SCIPIO QUARTERLY MEETING at North Street, N. Y. Meeting of Ministers and Elders the day before, at 2 p. m.

2D MO. 1.—WRIGHTSTOWN, PA., YOUNG Friends' Association.

2D MO. 1.—AT CONCORD, DELAWARE county, Pa., a Circular Meeting, under the care of a committee of Concord Quarterly Meeting, at 3 p. m.

2D MO. 3.—PHILADELPHIA QUARTERLY Meeting, at Race street, at 10 a. m. Meeting of Ministers and Elders the day before, at 3 p. m.

2D MO. 19.—A SOCIAL, IN THE PARLOR, 1520 Race street, Philadelphia, under the care of Best Interests' Committee.

Friends' Library at 15th and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, will be open from 11 a. m. to 9 p. m., each weekday, except Thanksgiving, Christmas, and New Year's Days, week of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, and Seventh and Eighth months.

Friends and other persons are invited to make use of the Library as a Reading Room and for the borrowing of books.

FLORIDA.

TWO WEEKS' TOUR VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The first Pennsylvania Railroad tour of the season to Jacksonville, allowing two weeks in Florida, will leave New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington by special train on February 3.

Excursion tickets, including railway transportation, Pullman accommodations (one berth), and meals en route in both directions while traveling on the special train, will be sold at the following rates: New York $50; Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Baltimore, and Washington, $48; Pittsburgh, $53; and at proportionate rates from other points.

For tickets, itineraries, and other information apply to ticket agents, or to Geo. W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

A TEACHER asked her class to name five different members of the "cat" family. Nobody answered till at last one little girl raised her hand. "Well," said the teacher, encouragingly. "Father Cat, Mother Cat, and three little kittens!" — [Our Dumb Animals.]

A VISITOR to one of the fine old churches in Norfolk tells an amusing incident about the old lady who showed the party round the sacred edifice. "Yes, you've certainly got a beautiful old church here," observed one of the visitors, admiringly; "but it's a pity the acoustics are so bad." "That I'm sure they baint' ma'am.—leastways, no longer," was the reply; "for I caught and killed the last on 'em weeks ago." — [Christian Register.]

THE supply of coal was scarce and the church was not very warm. When Ethel, aged eight, returned home her mother asked for the text of the minister's sermon. Ethel replied promptly, "Many are cold, but few are frozen." — [Gathered.]

Thompson Shourds, 2222 Wallace Street,
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa.
Phone 254-78 D.

CHARLES BROWN,
Practical House and Sign Painter,
Office, 907 N. Thirteenth Street,
Residence, 174 Woodstock Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

MILTON PHILLIPSLadies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

WALL PAPER of Attractive StylesPopular Prices
Samples Free to any AddressA. L. Diamant & Co.,

1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.Real Estate BrokersChestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

HIGH-GRADE BONDS

Yielding from 3½ to 5 per cent.

FREE OF TAXES.

INVESTMENT LIST ON APPLICATION.

NEWBURGER BROS. & HENDERSON,
BANKERS AND BROKERS, 323 Chestnut Street.IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpetsand Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET,

PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. LEWATTERS.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES,
ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS AND CORPORATIONS. REGISTRAR AND TRANSFER AGENT.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

WHEN Dr. Henry van Dyke's "The Story of the Other Wise Man" was translated into Turkish, it was submitted, in the usual course, to the censor. That worthy approved all the book except its title, which he said would not do.

"Why will it not do?" the publisher asked.

"Because it is not true," was the solemn answer.

The publisher was puzzled. "Not true?" he asked. "In what respect is it not true?"

"Because," explained the censor, "there is no Wise Man but Mahomet."

The title was accordingly changed to one which, if translated freely into English, would read, "How the Other Scientist Got Left Behind."—[Harper's Literary Gossip.]

THE misery to which the dissipation of strong drink leads could hardly be more graphically illustrated than by a story which the Bishop of London tells of the way the children of the drunken poor reason from the horrible experiences of their own sad lives. A little London girl from the slums was being examined on the parable of the Prodigal Son. The teacher had got as far as the repentance of the prodigal, and his eating of the swine-husks, when she inquired, "What else could he have done?" The child replied, evidently speaking out of her experience, "He could have pawned his little girl's boots!"—[Baptist Commonwealth.]

Black Taffeta Silks.

One of the features of the January Sale of Silks is the fine collection of Black Taffetas—always a specialty in this department, but now priced even more favorably than usual for several special numbers:

Black Taffeta Silk

Good enough for waists and entire gowns, but low enough in price to use for linings and petticoats—80-cent value at 68 cents a yard.

Imported Black Taffeta

Absolutely pure dye and a rich black; a soft and pliable fabric that we can guarantee for wear—90-cent value at 75 cents.

$1.50 yard-wide Black Taffeta at $1.25

A very low special price for an exceptionally good fabric; of firm but mellow weave, 36 inches wide, and will give the utmost satisfaction in wear—$1.50 value at $1.25.

Strawbridge & Clothier,

PHILADELPHIA.

A TRAVELLER in the mountains of Scotland observed an old man standing with uncovered head who when questioned said: "Every morning for forty years I have uncovered my head to the beauty of the world."

Club Rates: Other Periodicals, 1903.

We announce our Club Rates for other Periodicals for 1903. Read the figures given, and also read the notes below.

We will send FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER one year, with any of the periodicals named below, for the amount stated "for both."

WEEKLIES		MONTHLIES
Periodicals.	Price for both.	Periodicals.	Price for both.
Springfield Republican, ($1), . . .	$2.90	British Friend, (6s.6d & postage), . .	$3.75
The Nation, ($3),	4.80	Scribner's Magazine, ($3),	$4.85
Literary Digest, ($3), (new subscribers only),	4.50	The Century Magazine, ($4),	5.30
Independent, ($2),	3.90	Harper's Magazine, ($4),	5.30
Christian Register, ($2),	4.00	Atlantic Monthly, ($4),	5.30
Scientific American, ($2),	4.60	The Forum, ($3),	4.60
Sunday Morning Post, ($1),	2.85	North American Review, ($5),	6.10
Journal of Education, ($2.50), . . .	4.35	St. Nicholas, ($3),	4.60
The Living Age, ($6),	7.60	Lippincott's Magazine, ($2.50), . . .	3.80
		The Chautauquan, ($2),	3.90
		Scattered Seeds, ($0.50),	2.35
		The Farm Journal, ($0.50),	2.40
		American Monthly Review of Reviews, ($2.50),	4.10

Persons wishing other periodicals than those named above should write to us, and we will give prices.

Where several periodicals in the list are wanted, find the net price of each (if ordered through us), by subtracting $2.00 from the rate given under the heading "price for both."

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, THIRD MONTH 7, 1903.

Friends' Intelligencer Association, (LIMITED)

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.
 To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.
 To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers.
 Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.
 WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application.
 No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
 N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
  TELEPHONE No. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—X.	145
POETRY: UNWASTED DAYS.	145
THE CHURCH AND SOCIAL ETHICS.	145
PRAYER.	147
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
The Christian.	148
A TRIBUTE TO WHITTIER.	149
THE SIN OF FRETTING.	149
EDITORIAL:
Spread the Good Tidings.	150
Notes.	150
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS.	151
SOCIETY NOTES.	152
COMMUNICATION:
Friends and Labor Reform.	152
SOME OF THE NEEDS OF OUR SOCIETY.	152
INDUSTRIAL TRAINING FOR THE NEGROES OF PHILADELPHIA.	153
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	154
EDUCATIONAL.	155
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	155
LITERARY NOTES.	156
POETRY: The Petrified Fern: The Earth and Man; and The Child with Earnest Eyes.	156
LIVABLE.	157
PATENT MEDICINES.	157
MISCELLANY: Father's Time; Bible Chronology Outline; The Fuel Problem in the Dakotas; Slavery in the Philippines; The Literary Loss of the Bible; "It Takes Two"; The Wellesley Sycamore.	158, 159
CURRENT EVENTS.	159
NEWS NOTES.	160
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	160

WANTED.—A FRIEND WITH EXPERIENCE and ability desires a position as housekeeper at the sea shore or mountains, or companion. Address Box 405, West Chester, Pa.

WANTED.—D. E. BOOKKEEPER, STENO-grapher, typewriter, experienced, desires permanent position. Salary $12. Address No. 79, this Office.

WANTED.—A COMPETENT YOUNG WOMAN to take responsibility of preparing and serving patients trays in private hospital. Must be willing to enter actively into the work, and able to do all kinds of light housekeeping. No regular cooking required. Address or call on ANNIE M. COOK, 1418 Eutaw Place, Baltimore, Md.

WANTED.—AN EFFICIENT NURSE WITH highest testimonials, desires the care of an invalid. Salary $5 per week. Address Y. O. U., West Chester, Pa.

WANTED.—A CAREFUL AND EFFICIENT person desires position as managing housekeeper and companion in private family; can furnish highest testimonials. Address Y., West Chester, Pa.

WANTED.—CHRISTIAN FARMER, APRIL 1, with wife; young or middle-aged man, strong, industrious, willing, trust-worthy. Children no objection. No Sunday labor. Wages, rent, many privileges. Life place to right man. GEO. W. SMITH, Hartford, Conn.

WANTED.—BY FRIEND, POSITION AS PR-ivate secretary. Remington operator, or traveling companion, nurse for semi-invalid, or housekeeper. Address A. D. FEATHERSTONE, 21 N. Carey Street, Baltimore, Md.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1827 1st., N. W., Washington, D. C.

SPANISH LESSONS.—SPANISH LADY DE-sires pupils. Can also speak French and Italian. M. VIVES, 3332 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
 ARCHITECTS
 Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

Buck Hill Falls

Notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Buck Hill Falls Company will be held at the N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, at 1.30 p.m., Third month 24, 1903, to take action on approval or disapproval of the proposed increase of the capital stock of said company from $20,000 to $200,000.

MORGAN BUNTING, Sec'y and Treas.

FOR SALE AND FOR RENT.

FOR RENT.—A HANDSOME FURNISHED house, centrally located in Swarthmore, Pa., for rent by the month, cheap. Also, from June to September, a large stone mansion, on the hill, completely furnished. All conveniences, Spring-field water, 225 range, 140 feet of porch, commanding a fine view. Grounds cared for by owner. Tennis court. Stabling for two horses if desired.—ALBERT N. GARRETT, 203 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia, or Box 135, Swarthmore, Pa.

NANTUCKET FOR THE SUMMER.—TO rent, a ten-room house thoroughly refitted and newly furnished. Has water, gas, toilet room, veranda, etc. Address "HOMESTEAD," care this Office.

FOR RENT.—SITTING-ROOM WITH BOARD for two, at $4 each. Address No. 75, this Office.

TO RENT FOR THE SUMMER.

FURNISHED house at Gwynedd, Pa., 18 miles from Philadelphia. House contains six bed rooms, bath room, hot and cold water, library, large porch, dining room, and two kitchens. Five acres of ground, large lawn with shade, good truck patch and orchard, the produce of which tenant may enjoy; also, if desired, cow and chickens. Stabling for four horses and cow. The house is finely situated with extended views and good air. Will be rented on reasonable terms from Sixth month 1 to Ninth month 30, or a little later if desired. Address or apply

ARTHUR H. JENKINS, 3224 Race St., Phila.
COLLINGS CARRIAGE CO.,
 Broughams, Victorias, Coupe, Rockaways, Cutdners, Runabouts, and Wagonettes.
 1719 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

SMALL, SELECT PARTIES TO EUROPE.

SNAP SHOT IN HOLLAND.

FOURTH MONTH 28, delightful Annual Spring Tour for Central and Southern Europe and Great Britain; Sixth month 20, Summer Mediterranean Tour, visiting Spain, Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Holland, Belgium, France, England, and Scotland; Sixth month 27, comprehensive Annual Long Summer Tour, with its variations, covering Great Britain and principal continental countries. If you are thinking of visiting foreign lands send for our valuable guide book "G." free.

STEAMSHIP TICKETS SUPPLIED

by all lines. Rates, sailings, and complete information cheerfully furnished on request.

BARTLETT TOURS CO.,
 EDWARD C. DIXON, President 532 Walnut Street, Philad'a.

YOUR BEST FRIEND should be your advertising. Its place is to introduce you in a convincing manner to others who need your product.
 T. Vaughan Stapler, Ad-writer,
 200 S. 10th St., Phila.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, graded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }

Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.
Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.
For catalogue, apply to

JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.
Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.
Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Or,
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogozit, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR
BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.
For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars address

A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.
For circulars address

ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE 2-2938 D.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

THOMAS O. PEIRCE,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW.
815 Real Estate Trust Building, Philad'a.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OFFICES: { 693 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
{ Amber, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
325 SWARD STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

Disease Cured by Electricity.

WM. H. HICKOK, M.D.
10 a.m. to 4 p.m. 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.
554 North Eleventh Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Disease Cured by Osteopathy.

A System of Natural Healing. Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and Chronic diseases in general.
O. O. STODDARD, E. D., D.O.
10 a.m. to 4 p.m. 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.
554 N. 11th Street, Philadelphia.

Thompson Shourds, 2222 Wallace Street.

Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS.
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa.
Phone 3-5478 D.

CHARLES BURTON,

Practical House and Sign Painter,

Office, 907 N. Thirteenth Street,
Residence, 1714 Woodstock Street, } Philadelphia, Pa.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the

New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $6.50; with Scattered Seeds $7.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
5 PHONES.

THE PENNINGTON,

Permanent and Transient Boarding for Friends.

215 E. 15th Street, New York City.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTENHAM,

E. T. Kuenig,
R. W. Richards.

Atlantic City, N. J.

THE PENNHURST,

Second House from Beach.

MICHIGAN AVENUE.

REOPENS SATURDAY, JANUARY 31.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

HOTEL WINDLE,

Centre of city. Near all car lines.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.
American and European plan. New. First-class. European plan, rooms $1 per day. American plan, $2 per day. C. B. SMITH, Prop.

MOUNTAIN SUNSET HOUSE FAMOUS HEALTH RESORT. Sun parlor; steam heat; comfortable and homelike. Dr. J. D. MOYER, Mountain Sunset P. O.

THE KATHLU,

1115 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts. K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD

THE AQUARILE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TWENESSER AVE., Atlantic City, N. J.

Steam heat, electric lights, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet. M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

Young Friends' Association.

The regular Monthly Meeting of the Philadelphia Young Friends' Association will be held in the Y. F. A. Building, Second-day, Third month 9, at 8 p.m. Prof. Nathaniel Schmidt, of Cornell University, will deliver an address, "The Legacy of the Quaker." A cordial invitation is extended to all interested.

CAROLINE F. COMLY, Secretary.

PURE FOOD,

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of

Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St.

These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

Home Kitchen Outfits

and all

House Furnishing Goods

J. FRANKLIN MILLER,

1626 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK,

Telephones. Girard Building and 215 W. Coulter St.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,

Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,

1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

PRINTERS' PROMISES.

More easily given than kept. Our customers have learnt that we mean what we say, and that when work is promised at a certain time they can depend on getting it just then. It's worth a great deal sometimes.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE BETTER KIND OF PRINTING
1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones, Phila., Pa.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER in, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, THIRD MONTH 7, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 10.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

X.

To be a fool as to worldly wisdom, and commit my cause to God, not fearing to offend men who take offense at the simplicity of Truth, is the only way to remain unmoved at the sentiments of others. The fear of man brings a snare.

JOHN WOOLMAN.

From a letter to friend, in his Journal.

UNWASTED DAYS.

The longer on this earth we live
And weigh the various qualities of men,
The more we feel the high, stern-featured beauty
Of plain devotedness to duty.
Steadfast and still, nor paid with mortal praise,
But finding amplest recompense
For life's ungarlanded expense
In work done squarely and unwasted days.

—James Russell Lowell.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE CHURCH AND SOCIAL ETHICS.

THE relation of the Church to social ethics is simply its relation to all the upward and forward movements of humanity. That is to say, the most truly ethical relations are those which most truly make for human improvement—not partial or one-sided improvement, not improvement of some at the expense of others, but improvement in the highest and completest sense, all-round, many-sided, extending in some manner and at some time to the whole human family.

If we are to take our stand on the platform of the old theology, that this world is nothing but a vale of tears, a place of probation, and mortal life to be gotten through with as much misery and mortification of the flesh as possible, in order, as Emerson says, to get our bank stock and venison in some other world, then we have no subject to discuss. Under such conditions the Church has no relation to social ethics. Its chief mission is to teach resignation, patient endurance, neglect of the present for the future; and it makes no difference whether the world is wretched or happy provided enough people can be brought through uncontaminated to make a respectable showing in the right quarter hereafter. But if we will take another standpoint, regard human life as an evolution rather than a probation, recognize its every part, from the physical on up through the mental, moral and spiritual, as proper and necessary elements in the divine plan for the development of the individual soul, then the Church has a relation to social ethics in a most vital sense.

In saying this I would frankly accept, and even double the emphasis on what we so often hear urged as the mission of the Church—the salvation of individual souls; only from our new standpoint the salvation of a man will mean something quite different from saving him from a possible future hell; it will mean saving him as a whole man, body, mind and soul, saving him from whatever is evil and for whatever is good in all the ranges of his being. It will mean saving him from physical suffering, from poverty, from vile surroundings, from ignorance, from immorality, from spiritual stagnation, or spiritual undevelopment. If the idea of salvation is broadened to cover this whole wide sweep, then the Church has a relation to all the matters that concern the man and his life in all these phases.

In urging this, I would not imply for an instant that the Church ought to neglect its special and distinctive work, that which separates it out and raises it above all other movements—its appeal to the spiritual life. If it ever fails to recognize its supreme mission as the ministering to that everlasting and profound need of the human soul, then it will certainly drop into a secular institution; perhaps a social reform club or semi-political debating society, very worthy and necessary, to be sure, but a thing of length and breadth without height, without the up-reach, without that vital touch with the Infinite from which we get the ultimate sanction and supreme justification for all our efforts for the betterment of human lives and human life. But if the Church keeps that relation strong and true, then it can reach out also and touch all these other elements in the life of man, and because they are all necessary steps in the perfecting of the higher life. The Church can and ought to have its part in the soil and rain that help bring the tree up into the light of day, as well as in the sunlight that brings out the leaves and ripens the fruit.

But there is another point right here, that needs also to be urged. Until now, through all the ages, the relation of the Church to the individual has been chiefly in the special field of his religious interests. If now it is to reach out and have to do with the salvation of the whole man, is it not vital that it shall be as well and carefully prepared for this as it has sought to be in the other? Probably there is no field where feeling and sympathy are so apt to run away with our judgment as that of social problems, and perhaps no place where the sentiment of sympathy finds so natural an atmosphere as in the Church. All this is vitally necessary to progress, but it must be guided by adequate knowledge, by the results of experience, by careful and cool-headed study, or it will lead us into the most deplorable and costly mistakes. The path of history, in fact, is strewn with the wreckage done by runaway feeling that has broken the reins of reason. I am not singling out the Church here; even social economists have been known at rare intervals to make trifling mistakes—nothing important, of course; but it is because the Church is the most tremendous engine of humane feeling and moral impulse in the community that it becomes so immensely important to have it head the right way.

For example: a man is suffering with a terrible headache;—if we acted on the first impulse of uninformed sympathy we might quite naturally try to stop the pain by cutting off his head. That would be quite as sensible as many of the snap-conclusions often reached in social problems. We are too apt to think ourselves competent to act on these grave matters in the most radical fashion, if we have just built ourselves around with a little structure of superficial information and paved it with good intentions. When we are brought face to face with poverty in its saddest forms, for instance, it is a very natural first impulse to charge it to the wealth of the rich; but if we go far enough into the matter it becomes clear that we must look deeper for the fundamental causes of poverty; for it is only since this great era of capitalism began that the lot of common humanity has really been lifted above a mere struggle for physical existence, anywhere on the globe. We shall find that poverty is no novelty in this world; that instead of being the product of modern conditions there was never so little of it, relatively, as to-day, great as that little may be; we shall find that in the process of social evolution it is a persistence of old and inferior conditions in the midst of superior conditions that have grown up and are increasing by their very fitness to survive, while the old is as surely diminishing.

We would realize how true this is if we could only put ourselves back into the conditions of the Middle Ages in England, for instance, which was better off than any other spot on the earth; yet even there the mass of the population was literally bound to the soil, with not even the freedom to choose occupations, living in huts without windows, mats of straw for beds, mother earth for floors, faring on the coarsest of food, in annual peril of famine or pestilence, while even the lords and clergy were ignorant of scores of comforts and conveniences that are ordinary necessities now in the average American workingman's home. I do not wish to deny or ignore a single one of the evils and injustices that still cling about our industrial system; they must be torn away; but we have no more right to look for perfection in capitalism than we have to expect it as a result of any social revolution to overthrow capitalism. I am only urging that before we start out on our various campaigns of social reform we need to realize that it is not so important for the abolition of poverty to strike down the forces that are bringing into existence the bulk of the world's new wealth, as it is to get behind and work with the great social influences that shall make a larger and larger portion of mankind joint heirs, through natural economic means, of all this increasing welfare.

And in this spirit we need not fear to let our sympathies and helping hand go out and take hold of this problem in a thousand wholesome and inspiring ways. We need not fear to stand in friendly relations with the organization of labor for its own betterment, however many its mistakes; in that latter particular, in fact, even organized labor may occasionally find a bond of sympathy with the Church. We need not fear to stand for the abolition of vile tenements and prevention of more of them; or for putting an end to the hideous crime of child labor, or for stamping on the sweatshop the brand of Cain, his brother's murderer. We need not fear to stand for the widest expansion of educational opportunities; in a thoroughly enlightened people the spirit of liberty and the fact of liberty are always safe. We need not fear, in brief, to stand for whatever influences can be brought into and around the lives of this great army of our brothers to rouse and wisely direct that divine discontent which is the starting point of all true, permanent betterment; for all these things are of the very essence of social ethics, and in all of them the aid of the Church can be tremendous.

But in doing this, let us not make the mistake of expecting an October harvest in the first week of June; it will not come then. Neither let us imagine that we can hurry the growth of any plant by pulling it up by the roots. As John Stuart Mill said, in substance: Only such remedies for poverty are of any permanent value as operate through the ideas and habits and instincts and demands of the people themselves. We cannot suddenly put welfare and culture on people, like a new coat; if we try it, we get demoralization; it is for them, but not of them. Some of the most heartbreaking discoveries of ardent social reformers have been made in trying to force progress along this impossible path. What we can do is to be careful what seeds we plant, keep the field watered with an abounding sympathy, make war without ceasing on the weeds of selfishness, ignorance and intolerance, and trust confidently that the same Power that determines what the precise nature of the October harvest shall be will also in the fullness of time determine what shall be the harvest of the perfected human society. Whether that shall be the socialistic ideal, everybody regulating everybody for the good of everybody, or the anarchistic ideal, where everybody is so good that nobody needs to regulate anybody, we do not know and do not need to know. We can only work between certain limits. Within these we can find out what forces are helping and what are hindering; what are bearing us away from the darkness and towards the sunrise; and we can work with these forces, hand in hand. Here the Church can put its strength; here we can all do our share towards making the kingdom of God to come, on earth, as it is in heaven.

HAYS ROBBINS.

NOTHING that is true everywhere and always is without meaning. Some time in the housekeeping of the human race the knowledge of every permanent fact will become useful.—[Christian Register.]

For Friends' Intelligencer.

PRAYER.

IN the INTELLIGENCER of Second month 7th, while reading the lesson leaf on the subject of prayer, it recalled to my mind some beautiful thoughts on the subject by George T. Flanders, in his book, "Life's Problems, Here and Hereafter." As a minister, Flanders encountered from his people the hardest questions which ever called for answer. Unwilling to attempt to answer what he felt he did not know himself, he sought by study, meditation and prayer to learn from the teachings of God's spirit the answer to the questions asked him by sorrowing, seeking souls. When he had passed through what he terms "a sort of modern Pilgrim's Progress from the City of Doubt, through the slough of Difficulty, and from thence on and up to the summit of the Celestial Mountains," he gives us the result in the book mentioned. I feel that a few quotations from the chapter on prayer would be of interest to the readers of the INTELLIGENCER.

"That prayer is natural is proven by the historical fact of its universality. Individual exceptions are not denied—very gross exceptions—but did any one ever hear or know of any utterly prayerless people? One thing is certain—prayer was not the invention of Jews, nor of Christians, nor of Pagan priests! The priesthood have always been quick enough to take up and utilize a natural tendency, but they have never yet invented one. The only rational explanation of the fact is, that among the faculties of the soul is a praying faculty, and prayer is its natural exercise and outcome. This conclusion is enforced by the fact that prayer is instinctive. The form of prayer is inconsequential. It is a recognition of spiritual realities, the cry of spirit to spirit, conscious that somewhere in the unseen is lodged the needed assistance, and that by such means forbearance or protection may be secured. It is the child who, in peril or fright, exclaims, 'Father!' Is this nothing but deception? Nothing more than spontaneous nervous or muscular action? Where, among all God's creatures, is there a cry without objective meaning, a need for which there is no supply?"

"Is it in the least surprising—seeing that prayer is both natural and instinctive—that God has promised to hear and answer prayer? He has certainly made this promise, and He has communicated it to man in two distinct, but essentially different, ways. First, through natural instinct, and, second, by direct revelation. The first meets the wants of the sceptic; the second the wants of the Christian." "Are we thus mocked by imperious nature or by an autocratic God? What animal is thus mocked? Not one. Nor is man thus mocked." "Direct revelation with regard to prayer is copious and explicit. It has been well said that the promises are so exceeding great and precious we cannot conceive that God means what he says. We 'stagger at the promises through unbelief.'"

Here are a specimen few of these promises that will serve to show how great and explicit they are:

"Ask and it shall be given you." "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more shall your Father in heaven give good gifts to those who ask him." "I say unto you if two of you shall agree on earth touching anything ye shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven: for where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." "Therefore I say unto you, whatsoever things ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall receive them." "The effectual, fervent prayer of the righteous man availeth much." "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you." "The prayer of faith shall heal the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up." (These are only a few of the promises quoted; then follow some of the answered prayers recorded in the Bible.) "The Bible is not the only book that contains the evidence. The student of ancient and modern history—particularly of biography—knows there is an enormous amount of evidence that answers to prayer have been a common occurrence."

The author then gives some very remarkable examples of answered prayer. I will not take up space to give them, though deeply interesting; such may be found in our own religious history. Some of them are similar to the story of Cornelius (Acts x., 1-4), where those in terrible need cried to God, and he sent to their relief some one, miles distant, who went reluctantly, but who went in obedience to an inward voice of command that could not be resisted.

"Elsewhere I have maintained that one characteristic of God is absolute intelligence. Absolutely intelligent, he must know—cannot help knowing. If the 1,400,000,000 of human beings upon earth were at once to offer prayer to God, he would hear each one and know precisely what was said. But how about answers to contradictory prayers? Two persons, or two parties, pray with equal sincerity for opposite results. . . . To which I reply: Intelligent prayer implies submission to the Divine will and wisdom. On other terms, prayer is simply absurd."

"Prayer has its laws—as well as the revolution of a planet in its orbit. If we are obedient to those laws we shall obtain a favorable hearing; if we be disobedient, the result will be precisely the same as if we should disobey any other law. The result of our prayers, in any case, must, with child-like confidence, be left with God, with the conviction that his way is always the right way. Sometimes the answer seems delayed; sometimes it comes in a way unexpected; sometimes it comes not at all. I have had experiences when no answer came to my prayer that I could identify, that the result was better than I had asked for or even thought. 'Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass.'"

"Some persons are perplexed with the assurance that God 'knows what we have need of before we ask him,' Why then ask? they query. Here again the relation of parent and child should be studied and understood. The parent knows what his child needs without being told. What then? Are obedience, confidence and trust less indispensable and beautiful in the formation of character fitted for earth and for heaven? I am sure that, as a loving father delights to have a son ask for the very things he knows he needs, so our Heavenly Father is pleased to have his children ask for the things he knoweth we have need of."

"Sometimes it is objected, Is not God unchangeable? How then can prayer affect him? Surely God is unchangeable, and no intelligent person expects to change him by prayer. The law of doing, being and having is irrevocable, and so, too, is the law of asking and receiving. God has suspended on effort all beneficial results. The hand of toil must be applied to the earth before it will yield its bounties. 'If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you.' That is law, and God is as unchangeable in the higher realm of spirit as he is in the lower material realm. Prayer is simply obedience to law. That is man's part. Answers to prayer are simply obedience to law. That is God's part."

"Let no one dream that without a good life prayer will be of the least avail. But when the heart is filled with love to God and love to man; when our confidence and trust are like a little child's; when faith dominates the soul; then prayer rolls its thought-waves beyond the stars and beats against the great white throne; and were we to 'pray the Father to presently give more than ten legions of angels' to assist and defend us, they would be given (Matt., xxvi., 52, 53). Nor would anything absolutely needed for our earthly and heavenly life be withheld. But not for evil uses or ends, not for personal selfishness, not for aggrandizement, will God give us anything. The jeweled key of faith and works is the only one that can unlock the treasury of God."

Granville, N. Y.

LYDIA J. MOSHER.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 10. THE CHRISTIAN.

GOLDEN TEXT.—For the Father loveth the son, and showeth him all things that himself doeth.—John, v., 20.

Before study of Lesson read Matthew, v., 43-48; Matthew, vi., 25-34.

WHAT is it to be a Christian? Some have thought it enough to accept a theory about the Christ; but that time is behind us. Even those churches in which, by ancient custom, belief alone is asserted to be necessary for salvation, evade their outgrown creed by making belief to include life. Mere assent to a creed, mere acceptance of a good bargain, is no longer offered as the way of the Christian. We know that this is not the way, but we are less straightforward in our dealing with the affirmative side of the question. We no longer stop with "What think ye of the Christ?" but we do not go courageously to "What shall I be in order to be a Christian?" Yet this is the vital question, Religion is life—Christianity is life. To label ourselves Christian does not make us Christian. We have no right to the name unless we definitely and comprehendingly accept the spirit of Jesus as the guide to conduct in business, in society, in the family. Let us this day calmly and bravely set before ourselves the aims by which we so struggle toward those ends. Our measuring rule is not a complicated one, difficult to understand and to apply—our whole difficulty is in lack of willingness to test our acts and bring them to the standard. We have no right to any other personal aim than the attainment of high character; we have no right to any principle in social dealing save love for humanity—and that not a vague sentiment, but a feeling clearly understood and made up of love to each individual, implying a willingness to sacrifice self for his upbuilding; we have no right to any guide other than that in-speaking word, the voice of God within us. An aim, a principle, a trusted guide—this is the equipment of the Christian.

It is true that the aim does not remain fixed. Like the north star, our ideal rises as we go toward it; but also like that star it never changes the direction of our path. It stands to us as did the pole star to the slave; and from our bondage to the things of the lower self we may make our way toward it with serene confidence that we are moving toward freedom.

The principle, too, varies in its application with every new human relation. But there is no right human relation which cannot be traced to love as its foundation. The Christian must have faith in it—in its effectiveness. It is no passive principle by which our love goes out without effort to those who are lovely, allowing us to recoil in disgust from disease, squalor or sin. On the contrary, it is an active agent by which the Christian must confidently attempt the mountains of difficulty in the way of human civilization. He must trust to it as he trusts to gravitation; he must not be thrown into panics by the intrusion of apparent contradiction, any more than he must as a physicist allow himself to deny gravitation when he witnesses a balloon ascent. Believing in love as the solvent of human difficulty, he must fearlessly apply it himself and advocate its use in the larger affairs of society. He must oppose force, violence and war because he knows they are less effective than loving kindness. He must urge kind methods in dealing with criminals because men are more likely to be reformed by such methods than by unsympathetic harshness. This will not, of course, be confounded with mere sentimental attempts to prevent sin from bringing sorrow in its train as it ought, and suffering, too, if need be. But the Christian must never lose sight of the soul of the sinner as being kith and kin of his own soul. He must never dispense with support and sympathy as an essential part of his criminal code.

And so again with his guide—the guide must be really trusted and followed; and that not occasionally and partially, but always and to the end. That which is presented to us as duty we must do, with no regret if we do not succeed as we expected, with no vainglory if we attain to results beyond our fondest dreams.

To press toward the mark, to hold fast to the principle, to trust our guide—this is our high calling, and this our high claim when we name ourselves by the word Christian. For a year and more our classes have had before them the experiences, character and teaching of Jesus. Now, what think we of the Christ? What are we doing to be saved? Is the man Jesus of a verity the incarnation of the Christ? Is he the right kind of a man? Is such a life the supreme success and every falling below it so far a failure? In turning now in these lessons back to the course of events at the beginning of the Christian era may we not do so with a deep sense of settled resolve to emulate that gentle and powerful life—building each for himself a noble character fit to stand before God, maintaining as our earthly atmosphere the spirit of loving kindness, electing to supreme leadership the God-self above every lower, lesser self?

A TRIBUTE TO WHITTIER.

MARY SAFFORD, a minister of Sioux City, Iowa, delivered a lecture in All Saints' Church, Chicago, on "Whittier, the Quaker Poet." Among other things she said:

"As poet and editor John G. Whittier aroused public sentiment against slavery. To him, as well as to Harriet Beecher Stowe, our country owes a lasting debt of gratitude. While his active editorial labors, as champion of a noble cause, did take some strength from his poetical work, still many of his anti-slavery poems showed his great genius. While Mr. Whittier's anti-slavery poems are less artistic than many others from his pen, they gave life to a noble cause, and, through them, the poet has inspired such life in human hearts that he should be paid a thousand fold. Among the many tributes he received on his 80th birthday none were more highly prized than those sent by some colored students.

"Although Whittier was not, like Longfellow, trained in college halls and experienced by travel, still he is by no means an unlettered poet. In the quiet of his home he has communed with Israel, Jesus, Paul; he has made excursions into the fields of art and legendary lore, and is familiar with all that is of interest to the freedom of the civilized world. He has always been interested in politics, and has brought his knowledge to bear upon the questions of the day. Unlike many men of letters, he does not declare that politics is so vile that he will have nothing to do with it; but, recognizing that to vote is a solemn duty, he never fails to cast his vote on an election day. Like Burns, by whose simple songs the boy Whittier first learned to see beauty in natural things, he sees beauty in nature. That Whittier has thus found books in running brooks and sermons in stone, none can doubt. In his poems the human element is always present. When we read Bryant we feel sure that nature is more than man; when we read Whittier we are sure that man is more than nature.

Emerson worships the ideal and loves to reach it. Whittier, however, above all others, is the poet of trust.

His service for freedom has been great, but his service for religion has been greater. He does not give us theological definitions, but spiritual light. He does not strive to comprehend God, but leaves us to trust ourselves without fear to God's infinite love. We place our poets among the great religious teachers of the age. That light everywhere is breaking forth is greatly due to Mr. Whittier and other American poets. And that, in the good time that will shortly be here, when sectarian barriers are broken down, as men together strive to rear the universal church, lofty, as is the love of God, then will the world recognize its debt to those who are now singing their sweet songs of faith, and hope, and trust.

THE SIN OF FRETTING.

THERE is one sin which it seems to me is everywhere, and by everybody underestimated, and quite too much overlooked in valuations of character. It is the sin of fretting. It is as common as air, as speech—so common that unless it rises above its usual monotone we do not even observe it. Watch any ordinary coming together of people, and see how many minutes it will be before somebody frets—that is, makes a more or less complaining statement of something or other, which most probably every one in the room, or on the stage, or car, or street corner, as it may be, knew before, and which, most probably, nobody can help. Why say anything about it? It is cold, it is hot, it is wet, it is dry; somebody has broken an appointment, ill-cooked a meal; stupidity or bad faith somewhere has resulted in discomfort. There are always plenty of things to fret about. It is simply astonishing how much annoyance and discomfort may be found in the course of every day's living, even at the simplest, if one only keeps a sharp eye out on that side of things. Even Holy Writ says we are born to trouble as sparks fly upward. But even to the sparks flying upward in the blackest of smoke, there is a blue sky above, and the less time they waste on the road, the sooner they will reach it. Fretting is all time wasted on the road.—[Helen Hunt Jackson.]

THE worst of having inflicted a wrong upon the innocent is that you can never by any means retrieve it. You can repent, and it is probable that your very repentance ensures your forgiveness at a higher tribunal than that of earth's judgment, but the results of wrong cannot be wiped out or done away with in this life; they continue to exist, and, alas! often multiply. Even the harsh and unjust word cannot be recalled, and however much we may regret having uttered it, somehow, it is never forgotten.—[Marie Corelli.]

RELIGION is the dynamic force, whether the churches have it or not.—[Selected.]

SOFT is the music that would charm forever.—[Wordsworth.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.
 BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, THIRD MONTH 7, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

SPREAD THE GOOD TIDINGS.

IF we go back for a century or two we find governments generally acting upon the theory that the best way to prevent violation of laws was to impose severe punishments; and that the deterrent effect might be still greater the punishments were usually inflicted in public. Gradually it dawned upon students of political economy that whatever progress was made in righteousness was owing much more to the attractive power of love than to the restraining force of fear. Laws have been greatly modified, so that now the death penalty is attached to very few offenses; and prisons are gradually changing from houses of torture to reformation.

The efforts of most philanthropists are now turned to the work of prevention, and the most effectual preventive of wrong doing yet discovered is a wholesome environment for the young. Just as soon as people are lifted up high enough to have a home of more than one room where there can be some approach to clean family life there is a marked diminution of vice and crime. If the children of poverty and wretchedness can be given a happy, wholesome life for only a few hours each day the uplifting influence is very perceptible. When the free kindergarten had been in existence for several years in San Francisco it was the boast of its teachers that no child who had had a term in the kindergarten had afterward been arrested for crime.

The home may be either a large or a small factor in the environment of the children. As they grow to manhood and womanhood there are often other forces that have greater drawing power for them, and the young may be led down to degradation or lifted up to higher levels according to the nature of these forces. It is well for us, then, to remember that we every one form a part of the environment of those whose lives touch ours, and to strive so to live that only helpful influences shall go out from us. Knowing that we ourselves are helped whenever we hear of brave and unselfish actions, let it become habitual with us to tell others of the kind, true, honorable deeds of men and women that come under our notice.

We have a query that is often read in our meetings, "Are tale-bearing and detraction discouraged?" Having learned that the best way to get rid of a fault is to plant a virtue in its place, let us change this query so that it will read for us individually, "Are good reports and commendation encouraged?" When we meet a friend whom we have not seen for some time let our salutation be, "What is the good word?" Thus by an interchange of glad tidings all of our better faculties will be stimulated. If we are interested in people it is inevitable that when we are thrown together we will talk about people; and if we set about it in good earnest we shall be surprised to find how many virtues are possessed by those whom we have looked upon as disagreeable or uninteresting. This effort honestly made to improve the environment of others will react upon ourselves, for virtue is as contagious as vice, and appreciation of the good qualities of our friends will cause like qualities to grow in our own hearts, until there is no room in them for selfishness and sin. Then let us keep our eyes open to perceive the little kindnesses that make life's pathway less rough to the feet, and let us spread the good tidings of these kindnesses wherever we go.

THE recent public expression of his theological views by Emperor William of Germany has called forth much comment from the religious and secular press. A lecture a year ago by Professor Delitzsch, in which he attempted to prove the Babylonian origin of the Bible by stereopticon pictures, met with such favor from the Emperor that he subscribed to the funds to send the professor again to Assyria. On his return the discussion of his more recent discoveries by the Emperor dismayed the orthodox church administrators, and they besought the Emperor to make some definite statement of his creed in order to restore the confidence of the clergy and the laity. This he has done in a letter to Admiral Hallman; his views are generally considered "orthodox," though they would not have been accepted as such a hundred, or even fifty, years ago. We quote an extract from this letter which is of especial interest to Friends because it expresses a belief in continued and immediate revelation from God to man:

"I distinguish between two different kinds of revelation—one progressive, and, as it were, historical; the other purely religious, as preparing the way for the future Messiah. Regarding the former, it must be said for me, it does not admit of a doubt, not even the slightest, that God reveals Himself continuously in the race of men created by Him. He breathed into the man the breath of His life and follows with fatherly love and interest the development of the human race.

"In order to lead it forward and develop it He reveals Himself in this or that great sage, whether priest or king, whether among the heathen, Jews, or the Christians. Hamurabi was one, so was Moses, Abraham, Homer, Charlemagne, Luther, Shakespeare, Goethe, Kant and Emperor William the Great. These He sought out and endowed with His grace to accomplish splendid, imperishable results for their people according to His will. How often my grandfather pointed out that he was only an instrument in the Lord's hands."

THE Free Religious Association, of which Ralph Waldo Emerson was one of the founders and vice-presidents, is to commemorate the centennial of his birth by devoting the principal session of its annual convention in the Fifth month to the subject of Emerson's religious influence.

The association is also arranging for an Emerson Memorial School or Conference, immediately after the meeting of the National Educational Association in Boston. This will begin Seventh month 13 and continue for three weeks. The morning sessions of the school will be held in Concord and the evening sessions in Boston. There will be thirty lectures in all, in which the various aspects of Emerson's great work and influence will be treated by the ablest scholars and thinkers who can be associated for the purpose.

On the anniversary of Emerson's birth, Fifth month 25, there is to be a celebration at Concord, with addresses by Senator Hoar, Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Charles Eliot Norton and others; and on the preceding evening, there will be a memorial observance in Symphony Hall, Boston, under the auspices of a large citizens' committee, with an address by President Eliot, a poem by George E. Woodberry, and choral music.

"If correspondents will enclose stamps without sticking them to the paper, we will take the risk on their assurance that stamps are enclosed."

This is a notice we find in one of our exchanges. Let us remark: (1) If you write to any one, asking a favor, be sure to enclose a stamp. (2) Get, if you can, a stamp with a "selvage," one of those which has been along the edge of the sheet; you can stick the selvage on your letter, and leave the stamp itself, still attached, but easy to remove. (3) If your stamp is without selvage cut two short slits close together near the top of the sheet and insert a corner of the stamp therein.

THE correspondents who send us reports of Friends' Association, conferences, etc., are kindly requested to forward them as soon after the meeting is held as possible. In some instances reports of meetings have not reached us until two, three, and even four weeks after the meeting. And if all our contributors will bear in mind the oft-repeated injunction to write on one side of the paper only, it will materially lighten our labors.

The common problem, yours, mine, every one's,
Is — not to fancy what were fair in life
Provided it could be,—but, finding first
What may be, then find how to make it fair
Up to our means; a very different thing.

—[Browning.]

MINISTER BOWEN, whose courage and good sense have proved so invaluable in the Venezuelan difficulty, is the son of Henry C. Bowen, founder of the New York Independent. He is a worthy son of the father who fifty years ago, when Southern merchants threatened to boycott New York merchants who were Abolitionists, put out a placard bearing the legend, "We sell our silks, but not our principles."

BIRTHS.

BURDSALL.—At Port Chester, N. Y., Second month 25, to Richard and Mary R. Burdsall, a son, who is named Benjamin Rogers Burdsall.

HAYES.—In West Chester, Pa., First month 11, 1903, to J. Carroll and Louella P. Hayes, a daughter who is named Margaret.

LEEDOM.—At Manoa, Pa., Second month 12, 1903, to L. Walter and Zaidee T. Leedom, a daughter, who is named Emily Prudence.

PAXSON.—To Charles and Anita Paxson, of West Chester, Pa., Second month 18, 1903, a son who is called Alfred Paxson.

TAYLOR.—At Philadelphia, Pa., Second month 15, 1903, to Franklin S. and Hannah B. Taylor, a daughter, who is named Alice Barton.

YARNALL.—At Yeadon, Delaware county, Pa., Second month 20, 1903, to William D. and Mary A. Yarnall, a daughter named Gertrude Briggs.

MARRIAGES.

HICKS—BARNESLEY.—At the residence of Joseph Sellers, Philadelphia, Second month 24, 1903, Edward Penrose Hicks and Lydia Harper Barnesley, both of Newtown, Pa.

DEATHS.

COOK.—On Second month 28, 1903, Julia A., widow of William Cook, in her 83d year; a member of Green Street Monthly Meeting, Philadelphia.

The funeral was held on the 3d instant at the residence of her son-in-law, Samuel N. Longstreth, Germantown, Philadelphia. Interment at Fairhill Burying Ground.

ELY.—At Doylestown, Pa., on Second month 25, 1903, Laura W. Ely, daughter of Warren S. and Hanna S. Ely, aged 16 years.

Interment at Solebury Friends' graveyard.

ELY.—At Forest Grove, Pa., Second month 23, 1903, Lewis S. Ely, aged 65 years; a member of Wrightstown Monthly Meeting of Friends.

ENGLE.—At Pasadena, California, Second month 27, 1903, Maurice D. Engle, of Haddonfield, N. J., in his 34th year; son of Margaret T. and the late Joseph Engle.

GAUSE.—Second month 14, 1903, Hannah Richardson Gause, wife of Richard Gause, aged 76 years.

POWNALL.—At Christiana, Pa., on Second month 27, 1903, Jenette Turner, daughter of Dr. Levi and Emilie Broomell Pownall, aged 17 months.

Interment at Sadsbury burial ground.

SPEAKMAN.—After an absence of one year and six months, in Colorado, on Second month 24, in Coatesville, Pa., Walter Perdue, eldest son of Claud N. and Ida J. Speakman, in his 21st year.

A thorough and inspiring student, a loyal and generous friend, a strong moral force in the circle in which he moved, Walter Perdue Speakman leaves to the world the record of a rounded and completed life quite beyond the measure of the few years in which it has been our privilege to meet bodily with him. His has been from earliest childhood the blessing that is promised to the pure in heart. His unassuming manner, his solicitude for the comfort of others, his high regard for everything that is ennobling, endeared him in an especial manner to us all.

Although naturally of a quiet even character, the gentleness of his manner and the sunny cheerfulness of his nature developed in a remarkable degree during his absence in the West, and were strongly manifested up to the day of his death. In his transition to the higher life, he leaves us so much that is sweet and beautiful to remember, such a strong feeling of uplift, and enduring companionship, that we recognize more than ever the abiding, eternal influence of right living. The sense of loss and grief is strong, but the sense of spiritual triumph over earthly loss and grief is stronger.

WASSON.—At Richmond, Indiana, First month 29, 1903, Anna Wasson, aged 90 years; a member of Whitewater Monthly Meeting.

THOMAS.—At his home in West Philadelphia, Third month 1, 1903, Lemuel Thomas, aged nearly 77 years.

He was the son of Spencer and Hephziba Thomas, and was born in 1826 in Upper Dublin, Pa. His early life was chiefly spent there and at Somerton, Philadelphia. Later he lived near Bridgewater, Bucks county, Pa., and for the last few years of his life in West Philadelphia.

One of an older generation, he was favored with a retentive memory, and possessed a great fund of recollections and anecdotes of the days and friends of his youth. Throughout his life he was devoted to the principles of Friends, and was most conscientious in his attendance at meeting, seldom failing to be present twice each week, until extreme weakness forced him to keep his home. For several years he was an elder of Race Street Monthly Meeting, to which he had transferred his membership upon moving to Philadelphia. Kindly, cheerful, considerate of others, upright in business and in private life, he well deserved the name of Friend.

ELIZABETH F. DARLINGTON.

Elizabeth F. Darlington was born in Fallsington, Pa., in 1842. She was the daughter of Charles and Sarah Fish Alexander. When quite young she was sent to the Friends' (Orthodox) School at Fallsington, where she pursued her studies until about fourteen years of age. At that time she underwent an examination by Joseph Fell, the well-known School Superintendent of Bucks county. Her certificate was marked No. 1 in all branches, and she began teaching in the public schools of her native county before she was fifteen years old.

Five years later she went to the Ercildoum (now Darlington) Seminary, completed her course at that institution, and became a member of the faculty just before the Civil War. As a teacher she took high rank in the school, her work being characterized by great thoroughness and marked originality.

On the 7th of Second month, 1861, she was married to Richard Darlington, at nineteen years of age, and shortly after assumed full responsibility of a large boarding school for girls, known at that time as Ercildoum Seminary.

She early became an active worker in the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and for five years was President of the organization in Chester county. After the split occurred in the organization she became President and leader of the Christian Temperance Alliance in the county, and continued in that position for over five years, giving tone and vigor to both associations.

Her work did not end with these alone. She was elected member of the Board of Managers of the Chester County Hospital about ten years ago, and for six years performed faithful service in that capacity.

When the New Century Club of West Chester was organized, she was unanimously called to the Presidency of that body, and for two years served in that capacity.

At her funeral, which was held in West Chester on the 26th ultimo, nearly seven hundred people assembled in the meeting-house to do honor to her memory. Among those who bore testimony to her worth were Lydia H. Price and Margaretta Walton.

SOCIETY NOTES.

THE little band of Friends in York, Pa., is endeavoring to let its light shine, and also to enlarge its sphere of illumination. The York Daily, issued Second month 23, says:

"There was a goodly attendance yesterday morning at the Friends' meeting-house, on Philadelphia street, to hear the address of Edward Clarkson Wilson, of Philadelphia Friends' Central School faculty, on 'The Message of the Society of Friends to the Present Day.' The address presented the George Fox principle of the Society in reference to spiritual guidance, purity of life, principles of peace, temperance, just dealing, culture of highest principles of mind, faith in the Divine, and other sterling principles. The occasion was much enjoyed; and expression of views in harmony with those of the speaker were given by Edward Farquhar, of Washington, D. C., and Edward Chalfant, of this city."

Bucks Quarterly Meeting was held at Wrightstown, Pa., on Second month 26. The day being unusually pleasant and the roads not so bad as they often are at this time, there was quite a full attendance. The only visiting minister was Sarah T. Linvill, of Philadelphia, who spoke at length of the beauty of a Christ-like life and the happiness that accompanies obedience. Brief testimonies were offered by Lewis K. Worthington, Benjamin F. Battin, and Elizabeth Lloyd. The business meeting was devoted to a serious consideration of the queries and their answers. Among those who presented helpful thoughts were Elizabeth G. Stapler, Evan T. Worthington, Jacob Livezey, and Cynthia S. Holcomb.

COMMUNICATION.

FRIENDS AND LABOR REFORM.

Editors FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

I HAVE read with pleasure and satisfaction the words in recent INTELLIGENCERS on the question of Labor Reform. I believe that Friends, both individually and as an organization, ought to take advanced ground on this subject. Barring intemperance, it seems to me to be the subject of greatest importance before the people to-day. What should be our attitude? What must be our attitude, believing as we do in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man—in the divinity of man and the humanity of God? Surely that of strong protest against the greed and oppression that enriches and aggrandizes a few and robs many. We have only to turn the search-light of the Golden Rule upon this subject, I believe, to see it in its true light. It seems to me that we, as Quakers, ought to be very careful that neither by act or word or manner do we "grind the faces" or darken the way of any who toil. Let us bear in mind that Jesus Christ worked at his bench and that George Fox was a shoe maker and shepherd. And should we not make our purchases, as far as possible of profit-sharing organizations and recommend the practice as a church, even though obliged to pay higher rates?

I have written this merely to express my satisfaction with the attitude of the INTELLIGENCER. I wish some one in our Society might prepare a pamphlet on this subject. ***

For Friends' Intelligencer.

SOME OF THE NEEDS OF OUR SOCIETY.

I AM sure there are many Friends deeply interested in what our Society needs for its perpetuation, increase in membership and continued usefulness in the world. What an individual needs a religious society needs, as religious organizations are composed of individuals. An individual needs room and opportunity for spiritual and physical growth; so does a religious society. When it is deprived of that it will dwindle and pass away. A stream cannot rise higher than its source. Spiritual-minded members are a blessing to a meeting, but a lack of these retards the growth and development of its members. It is difficult for spiritual thought and growth to be expressed through public communication unless the active members are familiar with it and qualified to comprehend it. When man's thoughts are upward and onward he is not willing to lose the present opportunity of his life's work as he sees it. When he finds this healthful condition does not exist in his meeting he is liable to become a disinterested member. A religious organization should allow its members full opportunity for their highest development in spiritual and physical growth; then it will live because it supplies their present wants. Members assuming or accepting service in the meeting should exercise great deliberation, and the duties performed should be done for the best interest of the Society in order for its growth. Man is not to look to man for his wants in that growth, but unto the Author of his spiritual and physical being. When the life, power and intelligence of God, which is spirit, comes in touch with the same spirit that has been bestowed on man, the growth will be known if man is willing to co-operate with it. I appeal to all interested persons who may read this article to enter in this service with willing hearts, that the great principles of our Society may be enjoyed by many others who do not now understand them.

JOHN STRINGHAM.

1044 Park Avenue, New York City.

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING FOR THE NEGROES OF PHILADELPHIA.

AN APPEAL IN BEHALF OF THE BEREAN MANUAL TRAINING AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

PHILADELPHIA has a negro population of about 65,000, of whom some 6,500 of both sexes are between 15 and 20 years of age. These come of families which must from their peculiar resources and surroundings train their children for labor callings. The public schools fall far short of meeting their needs; and to them the high school is of no use save in these special cases which deserve and should receive higher education. Neither public school instruction alone nor high school training can qualify those who are to fill the working ranks of domestic service, and of hard labor in mechanical and other trades. Trade unions close apprenticeship to them; the public manual training schools are not available to children who must work early and who cannot secure the preliminary common school instruction required for admission. They must learn as they work.

With them, and as untrained as they, are some 2,000 young men and women who yearly come to this city from the South, friendless and alone, and knowing no task or work they can do well.

The negro problem in Philadelphia primarily calls for the provision of industrial education and training for this standing and native army, 6,500 strong, of young men and women desirous of working, but without training, and a third as many more who come to this city seeking work, but ignorant how to work even as to the simplest operation of domestic service. With this training they will work willingly, because their work will command wages that will stimulate industry. If they are untrained they will sink from regular work to odd jobs, from odd jobs to idleness, from idleness to crime. They can only be saved by industrial training offered not only to the young, but also open to those of mature years.

The Berean Manual Training and Industrial School, at 1926 South College Avenue, opposite Girard College, of which the Rev. Matthew Anderson is the principal, is doing what it can to meet this demand.

It is teaching between two and three hundred pupils of both sexes, from the youth to the middle-aged man and woman; and they are learning such trades as they can put immediately into practical use, such as carpentry, upholstery, applied electricity, millinery, plain sewing, dressmaking, cooking and waiting, stenography, typewriting, bookkeeping, together with the primary branches of a common English education. In its present cramped condition the limit of those it can care for has been reached; and yet those attending this school number not more than one twenty-fifth of those who should be taught, would be taught and could be taught if opportunity existed. To reach as many as possible of the vast number remaining, and still deprived of its advantages, it urgently needs $35,000 to buy a site and erect a suitable building during the coming spring season, for the continuance and enlargement of its work.

This situation was made clear and the claims of the school on the community presented at the public meeting held in Witherspoon Hall, Philadelphia, December 11, 1902, at which meeting ex-President Grover Cleveland presided. So much interest was taken by the very large audience present, that it is confidently believed that had an earnest appeal for the needed funds been presented at the time, the whole amount would have been raised there and then.

Inasmuch, however, as the opportunity to make such an appeal was allowed to pass, it only remains to present in this manner the cause to the public, and to solicit the moderate amount required for this beneficent and struggling enterprise.

We, whose names are hereunto subscribed, earnestly request our fellow citizens to join with us in pledging the needed amount—$35,000.

It is important to secure the pledges promptly, but subscriptions may be paid in two installments, as needed during the progress of the work.

Contributions should be sent to E. H. Clark, 160 Bullitt Building, 139 South Fourth Street, Philad'a.

ISAAC H. CLOTHIER,

E. W. CLARK,

JOHN H. CONVERSE.

A PROFESSIONAL man, well known about town, said, recently, "I have generally thought of woman suffrage as something that busy men did not want much to do with, but I was cured of that view a day or two ago by a conviction that came to my mind with sudden force, upon overhearing the remark, simply enough made, of a well-known member of the Civic Club, in reference to a scavenger who was unable to make himself understood in English, in reply to a question put to him: "'That man,' she said, 'can vote at every election, and his vote is binding upon me. He may have been here a few years; that is very doubtful. I have lived here a lifetime, and have no voice whatever in making the laws that he and others compel me to obey.'"—[City and State.]

æ

My first wish is to see this plague of mankind (war) banished from the earth, and the sons and daughters of the world employed in more pleasing and innocent amusements than in preparing implements and exercising them for the destruction of mankind.—[George Washington.]

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The meeting of the Friends' Equal Rights Association, on the 28th ultimo was small, owing to the inclement weather, but those who attended felt amply repaid for their faithfulness by the admirable paper read by Lucretia M. Blankenburg on "The Contributions Made by Friends Toward the Advancement of Women." She said that the first school for girls in England was opened by Friends, and that this sect was the first which allowed women to share in the ministry. Perhaps more important than either of these was the institution of a marriage ceremony which recognizes the equality of man and wife.

CHRISTIANA, PA.—The Young Friends' Association met at the home of Maurice J. Brinton, on the evening of Second month 14, 1903. The president opened the meeting by reading from the Scriptures. Following this the hymn, "Wonderful Words of Life;" was sung.

"The Powerful of the Earth," was the subject of a paper prepared by Lindley D. Jackson. The writer took as the powerful force of the earth the moral force, moral equilibrium being required of man to make him the most powerful. Others thought the essential to make a man powerful was the power of concentration, the ability to direct one's energies in a certain line, having early felt an inclination towards that and pursuing that course with the idea of attaining as near perfection as possible. Ethel Brinton read a paper, "The Larger Faith," which showed the effect education and broader thought are having on religious beliefs and what progress is hoped for from the culture of the twentieth century. The rejection by the New Criticism of literal interpretation of the Bible shows a striving for sincerity, a freeing from the restrictions of creed. Education brings about reconciliation between religion and science, a fuller, diviner faith, not worship of creed but loyalty to truth.

After singing, "It Is Well With My Soul," followed by a brief silence, the meeting adjourned.

S. EDNA POWNALL, Secretary.

BYBERRY, PA.—The Friends' Association met Third month 1, with a good attendance despite bad roads. The comprehensive minutes of the previous meeting by the secretary, Caroline J. Atkinson, received favorable comment. It was decided to have Dr. Joseph Swain and Joseph Elkinton at meetings some time in the future, if possible.

Phebe Tomlinson opened the literary program by reading "The Starless Crown." "Current Topics" were discussed in a paper prepared and read by Ida R. B. Edgerton. The subjects treated were Child Labor, Juvenile Courts, Coal Strike Commission, the barring of cigarette manufacture in Delaware, the prohibition of liquor selling in Abyssinia, the Militia Bill and its special amendment exempting Friends from service, Marconi's wireless telegraph system; the establishing of the Phipps Institute; the serving of hot milk through slot machine by the Swedish Society; the recent Friends' Quarterly Meeting held in Australia; ending with tributes to the departed Friends, Charles Rhoads, Edward Strawbridge, and Aaron B. Ivins. Nathaniel Richardson spoke of the action of Senators Beveridge and Hoar in relation to the amendment to Militia Bill, expressing his grateful appreciation of their services. Arabella Carter followed, giving an account of the earnest work of members of the Peace Society, which preceded the introduction into the Senate of the amendment, and mentioned the work, especially of Belva A. Lockwood and Robert B. Warder, of Washington, and Jerome F. Manning, of Massachusetts, in this connection. Discussion of the proposed Free Library offered by Andrew Carnegie to Philadelphia followed, in which Nathaniel Richardson and William P. Bonner participated. A paper by Iva Stradling on "The Soul, and its Relation to the Body," prayed the unity of the two in the perfect life. "The soul is the Master's own breath . . . the body is the soul's abiding place during its earthly stay. . . . Some think soul and body are natural enemies, but this is a mistake; let the body be guided by and subservient to the soul." John Wood, Jr., read an appropriate article on "For the Wind was Contrary."

The next meeting is to be a Longfellow meeting; a biography will be given by one member, and recitations, readings, and sentiments by others. A. C.

PENN'S GROVE, PA.—The Young Friends' Association met at the home of Pusey Coates, Second month 22, 1903, at 3 o'clock.

After Bible reading, Will and Alice Coates played hymns on the violin and piano. Alice Coates read a short article on, and extracts from, J. G. Holland's "Bitter Sweet." Tacie C. Broomell read "The Felon; the Life of a Convict." A question, "What Part have Friends Taken in Help of the Indian?" was opened by Chalkley Webster, who thought William Penn had aided the Indians more than any other man. Discussion followed.

After roll call and prayer the Association adjourned.

ALICE R. COATES, Sec. pro. tem.

MULLICA HILL, N. J.—The meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held First month 21, in the meeting-house.

Benjamin Pancoast opened the program for the evening by reading from the discipline on Arbitration. Anna Kirby read from the life of George Fox, on his interview with Cromwell. A beautiful recitation was given by Lizzie Duell entitled "Forward." Debbie Ballinger had prepared an excellent paper on the "Ideal Friend"; it was read by Lillie H. Colson. "The Boys we Need," was a piece recited by Willis Kirby. An excellent reading entitled "Out of Doors," was given by Rachel M. Lippincott. A very interesting collection of "Current Topics" were read by Maggie Colson. Twenty-five members were present.

A. G. TONKIN, Secretary.

TRENTON, N. J.—A regular meeting of the Friends' Association was held in the lecture room of the meeting-house, Second month 23, 1903.

The literary program was opened by a paper by Joseph Willets on "The Rise, Progress, and Changes of the Christian Church." The writer gave a masterly and scholarly review of the subject, tracing the idea of the conception of the one true God from the time of Abraham on through the various epochs until the birth of Jesus, whose life, example and precepts were to revolutionize the thought and idea of God throughout the civilized nations of the earth. The efforts of Luther, the Puritans, George Fox, and other reformers were touched upon until we reached the status of the religion of the present day; closing with the idea that the ministrations of George Fox had been of great service in establishing in the minds of men a true conception of the right relation between man and his Maker. The paper called forth much interesting discussion.

We were favored in having with us our friend Mary Heald Way, of Oxford, Pa. She spoke in her beautiful manner of the sweet mantle of Christian charity which should be thrown over all frailties both personal and of the church. She and other friends spoke of the great advance in this direction which had been made in the past few years.

MARGARET PRESTON BUCKMAN, Sec. pro. tem.

MANSFIELD, N. J.—The Young Friends' Association met at George Boune's, Second month 14. A letter was read from Jesse H. Holmes. We anticipate having J. Russell Smith at our next association Third month, 7. Subject: "The Growth of the Quaker Idea."

Mary S. Harvey reported on Discipline. In answer to the question, "What is the greatest service man can render God?" she said: "I understand it to be a consecration of our lives to God, giving him the heart's best love, living it out in our daily lives and diligently seeking for aid to be guided aright by Him who knows no variability. He does not demand of us suffering or useless pain and sacrifice, but to give the heart's best love is what I believe to be true service of God." Cyrus S. Moore made some appropriate remarks.

Sara A. Biddle read an interesting paper upon the question: "It is said the pen is mightier than the sword; if so why?" She said: "It is a fact that through the medium of the pen the truth is told. No great writer is enamored of the false, the base, or the unjust. Consider our own poets, the galaxy of the last century, they have been loved and still are and long will be, because they spoke earnestly for the true and the good against the evil. Every one knows—his intellectual conscience speaks it emphatically to him—that truth and sincerity only can give life to literature and that within its folds the false and insincere have no permanence.

Cyrus S. Moore said the pen is a civilizer, a Christianizer, a protector of the lives of men. The sword may be compared to winter, that forces the unprotected to shelter and drives the weak to destruction. The pen may be compared to summer, it sheds a warm ray on the unprotected and strengthens the weak. Is barbarism mightier than Christianity? Is death mightier than life?

Anna Bunting read an article entitled "The Story of a Birthday Rose."

Martha E. Gibbs gave us many interesting current topics; she also read a paper prepared by Cyrus S. Moore upon his trip to Jamaica.

After the usual silence the association adjourned to meet at Joseph F. Taylor's, Third month 7, 1903.

MABELLE E. HARVEY, Sec'y.

CORNWALL, N. Y.—The Friends' Association met with Joseph W. and Carrie Cummin, First-day afternoon, Third month 1, 1903. The program consisted of the following readings: "Ruskin's Creed," by Carrie Cummin; "Religious Unity," a plea for liberality, by Mary W. Cocks, and "Do Not Find Fault" by James Seaman. A. M. B. Cor. Sec.

HOPEWELL, VA.—A regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held at Jonah L. Rees', Second month 22, at 7 p. m.

To the calling of the roll several answered with maxims. The committee appointed to prepare a paper of five hundred words or less setting forth the essential principles of Friends, reported two papers prepared, one by David W. Branson and one by Jonah L. Rees. They were so satisfactory the meeting requested both be sent to Jesse H. Holmes. Under the head of "History," David W. Branson prepared a very interesting account of Centre Meeting-house in Winchester, which was enjoyed by all. Bessie J. Robinson, on Literature, not being present, her father, D. Arthur Robinson, beautifully read the poem, "The Golden Time." He also read some excellent remarks on our Discipline, bringing forth George Fox's motto, "Mind the Light." E. Caroline Branson made a good selection of "Current Topics," with criticisms upon them. We think it is more interesting than just to read selections from various periodicals. Susan T. Pidgeon read a good article from The Outlook, which showed some of our beliefs are being used by other denominations. Under the head of voluntaries Grace Fries was requested to recite "High Society." It was beautifully rendered and very much enjoyed. Jonah L. Rees made a few remarks on the social part of our Association, this being a social meeting of our Young Friends' Association.

ANNIE J. REES, Jr., Sec. pro tem.

LINCOLN, VA.—The Young Friends' Association met First month 25. After singing "Wonderful Words of Life," Sarah T. Shoemaker read a well-written paper on the subject, "Give suggestions that might aid in gathering the mind in meeting and performing acceptable worship." Wm. T. Smith gave a short talk on the same subject, which was further discussed by Lydia Brown and Cornelia Janney. A. B. Davis gave a very interesting talk on the Anti-Slavery League Convention which he recently attended in Richmond.

A recitation, "Onward and Upward," was given by Mabel Roberts. Cornelia Janney followed with some very good "Current Topics," after which Wm. Brown read a paper answering the question, "Is Belief in the Supernatural Essential to Religion?" the question was further discussed by George Hoge, Wm. T. Smith, and Laura Smith. Dr. Roberts then read a poem by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, "The Object of Life." After singing, "Only Remembered by what We have Done," the meeting adjourned.

CAROLINE T. PANCOAST, Sec.

EASTON, MD.—A meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held at the home of Isaac A. Barber, Second month 17.

Sallie P. Kemp read an excellent Association paper, the subject of her editorial being the "Progress of the World During the Past Few Years." Guion Miller opened the topic for discussion, "Sunday Newspapers." He said in part, "There is a large amount of valuable information to be found in Sunday papers, but the sensational and criminal portion of the papers more than counter-balance the good." The general discussion on the subject was somewhat one-sided, as most thought the aforesaid papers were more harmful than beneficial. Laura B. Shinn gave a full account of the origin and methods of the Salvation Army.

As the other members on the program were not present the meeting closed unusually early, and the remainder of the evening was spent in social intercourse.

LAURA BARBER SHINN, Secretary.

EDUCATIONAL.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

The lecture to have been given by Henry Wilbur on "A Quaker Revival," has been postponed on account of illness in his family.

The joint meeting of the Sigma Chapter of Somerville and the Eunomian literary societies was given on the 24th ultimo. Dean Bond, Dr. Magill and Dr. Hull attended the first meeting of the Swarthmore Club of Baltimore on Second month 21. The club organized and the meeting was a great success; about eighty-five alumni, ex-students and friends of Swarthmore being present. The following toasts were given: P. Lesley Hopper, class '79, Toast Master: T. Stockton Matthews, class '02, "Words of Welcome"; Dr. Edward H. Magill, "Swarthmore's Past, Present, and Future"; Charles Lewis, "Swarthmore As I Knew It"; Dean Elizabeth Powell Bond, "From the Dean's Standpoint"; Dr. William I. Hull, "Swarthmore's Possibilities."

On Second month 23, Dean Bond addressed the Wor'an's Club of Baltimore on "Co-education."

On the 27th, Miss Anna F. Davies, a prominent college settlement worker of Philadelphia, gave an illustrated lecture on "College Settlements." Her pictures of their home surroundings furnish strong proof to support her earnest plea for a change in the environment of the children of the tenement house districts. It was pointed out how hard it is for a child to realize his full possibilities when his lot is cast in crowded tenements, narrow courts, and dirty streets. The efforts that have been made to change all this were outlined, and especially interesting were the tales and description of the playhouses that have been established, the work they are doing and their future.

The annual reception given by the college students to their friends will take place Seventh-day evening, Third month 7.

The usual debate with Franklin and Marshall will be held here on Third month 13. The question for debate is "Resolved, that the permanent interests of the United States were best served by retaining possession of the Philippines." Franklin and Marshall will have the affirmative and Swarthmore the negative side of the question. P. M. W.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

THE Doylestown, Pa. Intelligencer publishes the following item, intimating that the family referred to shows no tendency to "race suicide."

"Hannah Atkinson, mother of Wilmer, James, and Albert Atkinson, of Three Tuns, and of Mary Anna Jenkins, of Gwynedd, is in her ninety-fourth year. She is in good health, enjoys her food, can read, knit, sew, and thread her needle and move about her home easily and freely. She has five children, all living and in good health, twenty-eight grandchildren, all living but three, and twenty-one great-grandchildren, all living but one. Her husband, the late Thomas Atkinson, lived to enjoy the golden wedding."

LITERARY NOTES.

With fine imagination has Josephine Preston Peabody revived a little piece of the London life of Shakespeare's day in her drama of "Marlowe" (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.). She has brought into her scenes the dramatists Marlowe, Greene, Lodge, Nashe, and Peele, and has written charming lyrics very deftly in the manner of these Elizabethan song-writers. Thus Greene is made to sing of the lovely country-girl Alison, —who has come like a breath from Kentish meadows into the hot life of the town,—

"Her cheek is hawthorn and her voice the rain ;

Her eyes are windowlights that never wane,

So morning-clear.

Alas, dear April, when she comes again,

Shall I be here ?"

The tragic sorrow of Marlowe's wasted days, and the sunshine of Alison's innocence, are drawn with a faultless hand. Like the author's earlier play, "Fortune and Men's Eyes," this piece is a very refreshing harking back to that age when English poetry was in its glory.

The Associate Editor of The Century Magazine, Robert Underwood Johnson, an alumnus of Earlham College, has issued his collected "Poems" in a choice volume (The Century Co.). His verse is the slow, deliberate product of a meditative muse. The author is one who "hath kept watch o'er her mortality," and he holds and will hold his readers through his calm and quiet strength. His poetic view and tranquil melody may be illustrated by lines from his address to the Housatonic river,—

"Contented river! in thy dreamy realm—

The cloudy willow and the plummy elm :

They call thee English, thinking thus to mate

Their musing streams that, oft with pause sedate,

Linger through misty meadows for a glance

At haunted tower or turret of romance."

The magazines for Third month contain many valuable and interesting articles. The Atlantic Monthly contains a second thoughtful paper on "Academic Freedom in Theory and Practice," by Arthur Twining Hadley. The Review of Reviews opens with an editorial tribute to the late Dr. J. L. M. Curry, the veteran leader of the movement for popular education in the South. In Harper's Magazine Stewart Culin, of the University of Pennsylvania, endeavors to prove that America was the cradle of Asia. The Century contains the conclusion of "Lovey Mary," but the admirers of Mrs. Wiggs will hope that they have not heard the last of her admirable philosophy. St. Nicholas has a sketch by Charles F. Benjamin, "Our Boys and Our Presidents"; and two suggestive illustrations that betray "the boy in the house" and "the girl in the house." McClure's Magazine describes "The War on the Locomotive"; in an illustrated article with that title Samuel S. Moffatt portrays the inroads the trolleys are making upon steam railroads. Besides nine stories Lippincott's Magazine contains an article on "Intellectual Communion," by Sarah Yorke Stevenson.

THE PETRIFIED FERN.

In a valley, centuries ago,

Grew a little fern-leaf, green and slender,

Veinings delicate and fibres tender,

Waving when the wind crept down so low,

Rushes tall and moss and grass grew round it ;

Playful sunbeams darted in and found it ;

But no foot of man e'er trod that way :

Earth was young, and keeping holiday.

Earth one time put on a frolic mood,

Heaved the rocks and changed the mighty motion

Of the deep, strong current of the ocean ;

Moved the plain and shook the wood,

Crushed the little fern in soft, moist clay,

Covered it and hid it safe away.

Oh, the long centuries since that day !

Oh, the agony ! oh life's bitter cost !

Since that useless little fern was lost !

Useless ? Lost ? There came a thoughtful man

Searching nature's secrets far and deep ;

From a fissure in a rocky steep

He withdrew a stone o'er which there ran

Fairy pencilings—a quaint design—

Veinings, leafage, fibres clear and fine ;

And the fern's life lay in every line.

So, I think, God hides some souls away,

Sweetly to surprise us the last day.

Mary L. Bolles Branch.

THE EARTH AND MAN.

A LITTLE sun, a little rain,

A soft wind blowing from the West—

And woods and fields are sweet again,

And warmth within the mountain's breast.

So simple is the earth we tread,

So quick with life and love her fame,

Ten thousand years have dawned and fled,

And still her magic is the same.

A little love, a little trust,

A soft impulse, a sudden dream—

And life as dry as desert dust

Is fresher than a mountain stream.

So simple is the heart of man :

So ready for new hope and joy ;

Ten thousand years since it began

Have left it younger than a boy.

—Stopford A. Brooke.

THE CHILD WITH EARNEST EYES.

ERE the dawn grew red, beside my bed

Came a child with earnest eyes.

"What light have you shed through the world ?"

she said,

"Now you are old and wise?"

"'Tis a weary while," quoth I, with a smile,

"Since I dreamed it had need of me.

I found but guilt in its fairest wile."

"Then its need was greater," said she.

"So the hungry you fed, and wanderers led,

And smiled on the weary and sad?"

"Scarce I earn," I said, "my own bitter bread,

And I have no time to be glad."

She spoke not blame, nor again of fame :

"But the love that I dreamed about?"

"Bright burned that flame till gaunt Care came

And blew the rushlight out."

"But still true friends kind Heaven sends

To cheer and comfort you?"

"Nay; friendship bends to selfish ends,

And loyal hearts are few."

She raised her head. "Woman," she said,

And her voice came sobbingly,

"If joy is dead, and your high hopes fled,

You have broken faith with me."

In the dawn, still gray, she stole away,

With a grieving look at me.

"I cannot stay," I heard her say.

"I'm the Child You Used to Be!"

—Catharine Pelton in the Century.

In the mountains of the West, after a heavy snowstorm, the locomotive that clears the tracks propels a rotary plow, acting on the snow-banks like an auger; a swiftly revolving steel wheel 12 feet in diameter, having blades resembling those of a ship's propeller, cuts a passage through solid drifts at the rate of from 2 to 12 miles an hour. The snow is shot from a spout attached to the plow to a distance of 50 or 100 feet. —[Youth's Companion.]

LIVABLE.

A NEIGHBOR, speaking of another, called her "livable."

"Livable?" repeated her listener, "Livable? That must be a local word. I don't think I ever heard it before."

"It may be local," was the answer, "and it may be bad, and it may be good; but it's just what I mean. She's livable. She's been brought up in a large family, and she's had to be, if she meant to be comfortable herself and let other folks be comfortable, too. There were more livable folks when I was a girl than there are now, and I think the large families had a good deal to do with it, though of course not everything.

"There were plenty of people then who never got their corners worn down, no matter how many brothers and sisters they had; but even when they rasped, those days, they got along together after a fashion.

"Nowadays! Sometimes it stumps me fair and square why the nice people I know in nice families can't seem to stand each other's little ways.

"I don't say it is not so; when the doctors say they can't, and it generally ends in doctors, I suppose they truly can't. It's nerves, and nobody understands nerves unless the doctors, and I'm a long way from being sure that they do.

"But just count up sometime the families where there's always one member mysteriously off visiting, and then the number of folks you know that separate when they'd naturally stay together, if only they could lit it off—lone sisters, and only surviving bachelor brothers, and mothers and only daughters, and all sorts of family remnants that ought to be each other's best comforts. But as soon as they try living together, one of them gets nervous prostration, or is ordered off quick to travel somewhere where the climate don't agree with the other one.

"They're fond enough of each other, generally, and they aren't generally ugly-tempered. They're just not livable.

"It can't be endured always, and it can't be cured sometimes; but I'm firm in believing it could be often prevented. If, when folks first began to harden in their own little 'ways,' and fret over the 'cranks' of those they care most for, they'd stop and think where they were getting to, nine times out of ten they'd pull up in time, and get their nerves and feelings and foolish frettings tight in hand before they ran away with them! And outside the great, deep foundation virtues, if I had a daughter, the little virtue—if it is a little virtue—I'd choose for her, would be just that—being livable. It's an all-round, lifelong blessing to whomsoever it concerns."—[Gathered.]

THE number of saloons in Hawaii has increased from 23 in 1896 to 400 in 1902.—[New Voice.]

THE British Museum and the houses of Parliament are not insured. Parliament pays £ 3000 a year for police and firemen to protect its houses, and the Museum pays the rent of a fireman's house in Ceram street. The British Museum, believing that prevention is better than cure, has no artificial light on its innermost recesses.—[St. James's Gazette.]

PATENT MEDICINES.

From New York Evening Post.

It is one of our national inconsistencies that we enact laws and otherwise take pains to prevent incompetents from practicing medicine, but allow any quack or swindler to advertise and sell remedies for every ailment under the sun. In other words, we assume that the mass of mankind are not capable of choosing their medical advisers in person, but are quite competent to do so through the columns of the newspapers. The consequences of such laxity are that multitudes of ignorant people are cheated out of both money and health.

A very sound report was made on this subject by the Department of Health of New York city in the year 1898, embracing reasons for the public regulation of the sale of drugs and proprietary medicines. The latter are classed under three heads. The first consists of prescriptions made by regular physicians in their ordinary practice, which, having proved to be efficient in particular cases, have been seized upon by business men, put up in wholesale quantities for the trade, and extensively advertised. Such things as headache drops, eye waters, asthma cures, catarrh remedies, and other mixtures are sold and taken indiscriminately. Even when the original formula has been faithfully adhered to, the result is most commonly harmful unless the remedy has been administered by a regular practitioner. But the success of the original formula brings imitators into the field, who use a cheaper and more deleterious compound, and perhaps undersell the original.

The second class consists of nostrums which promote and intensify the very condition which they pretend to cure. These are composed largely of alcohol. Most of the so-called "Bitters" come under this classification. The annual report of the Massachusetts Board of Health for 1896 is a classic on this subject. It contains analyses of sixty-one kinds of bitters, tonics, and sarsaparillas then in vogue, some of the most notorious of which are still on the market, and many of which have been advertised as "purely vegetable," "free from alcoholic stimulant," "not a rum drink," etc. Parker's tonic, "recommended for inebriates," was found to contain 41.6 per cent. of alcohol. Ayer's Sarsaparilla contained 26.2 per cent., Hood's Sarsaparilla 18.8 per cent., and Paine's Celery Compound 21 per cent. A lot of "blood purifiers" were found to contain iodide of potassium, which is classed among poisons by nearly every writer upon toxicology. "It is not uncommon," says the Massachusetts report, "to find persons who have used continuously six, eight, or ten pint bottles of one of these preparations." They can usually be identified by their pale, sallow complexions. The third class consists of unmitigated swindles, as where bread pills are sold for the price of costly drugs. An instance of this kind was given in the Massachusetts report, where "Kaskine, a much-vaunted remedy, which sold at one dollar an ounce, was found to consist of nothing but granulated sugar."

WHAT comes to perfection perishes. [Ruskin.]

Father's Time.

"Oh, no, I cannot go with you after dinner to-night, because that is father's time, and we always have so much fun then." That is what I heard a little maiden say to her school friend, who had invited her to go somewhere with her.

"Father's time." I wondered what that meant, and so I said to the little maiden: "And what is 'father's time?'"

"Oh, 'father's time' is right after dinner at night, an hour or so before we go to bed. Father makes lots of pleasure for us then, and it is the only time we can see him, except in the early morning, and that is for such a short while. Father never goes anywhere at that time, and we do not; we give that hour to him, and he gives it to us. It is our 'together hour.' Oh, he is such a good, dear father."

What a testimonial to the high standard of fatherhood was this little girl's. Away all day, immersed in business cares, he could give no time to his children except the hour before their bedtime. With what happy, light hearts those little ones kissed him good-night when bedtime came, and with what smiling faces they went to sleep to dream beautiful dreams of father-love.—[S. T. P., in Evangelist.]

Bible Chronology Outdone.

THOSE of you who remember the day when our mothers gravely assured us that the creation of the world was according to Bible chronology put at 4004 B. C. are now able to know the manners and habits, the amusements, the life's work and belief, and the funeral customs of King Ka, who presumably found it a pleasant thing to behold the sun upon the "Persian" fields, and to feel the shadow of the palm groves at Abydos, as long ago as 4900 B. C.

But thanks to Dr. Flinders Petrie and his enthusiastic band of fellow-workers, we can now not only know the funeral furniture of the tombs of kings who were before Mena was, but we can reach back and give hand-grasp to the shadowy presences of a prehistoric race whose civilization was not far if anything behind the civilization of those predynastic kings who used the same palettes for eye paint, drank of the same alabaster drinking cups, washed hands in the same diorite wash-bowls, cut their meat up with the same flint knives, and hoed their fields with the same flint hoes. There are now known to exist seventy-five to seventy-nine prehistoric seals of sequence dates, which overlap the time of the predynastic kings, and thus for the first time it has been established that Egyptian history in the valley of the Nile runs forward from the farthest past without a break, and prehistoric man is seen to be a civilized being of consideration, before the times of the kings who preceded Aha-Mena, the first king of the first dynasty, whose date is approximately put at 4777 B. C.—[Canon H. D. Rawnsley, in Atlantic Monthly.]

The Fuel Problem in the Dakotas.

DURING the winter 1902-03, four hundred thousand tons of "green" lignite, as the coal directly from the mine is styled, will be sold at an average price of $1.30 at the mine. Throughout the greater part of North Dakota, the users of lignite save from one-third to one-half of the cost of Eastern coal. The field that the lignite reaches includes all of North and South Dakota and Minnesota as far east as St. Paul. Had the capacity of the mines been doubled during the present winter, all of the output could have been sold without reduction of price. Mine equipment that is now nearly complete indicates for next year an output that will be valued at nearly a million dollars. This means that within a very few years North Dakota will supply her own fuel and that of neighboring States on the east.

Throughout the country north and west of the Missouri River in North Dakota and Montana, the settler need go but a few miles from his ranch to a lignite bank. At hundreds of points he strips off the dirt with plow and scraper, helps himself to tons of fuel, and pays no one. Very often the lignite outcrops on his own land, and at times in his own door-yard. This cheap and abundant fuel has been one of the main stimuli that have led to the recent rapid settling of western North Dakota.—[Frank A. Wilder, in the Review of Reviews.]

Slavery in the Philippines.

Two girls were sold into slavery in this city a few days ago by Gregoria Torres, one bringing one hundred and fifty pesos, and the other one hundred pesos.

The Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States declares that involuntary servitude shall not be permitted, that the Stars and Stripes shall stand for "Virtue, Liberty, and Independence," but the American flag continues to float over slavery in these islands.

A number of cases have been reported from time to time where young girls have been bought and sold, and where they have been sold even by their own parents into a life of shame in order to satisfy a small claim of some debtor.

Girls can be bought in the provinces at an insignificant figure, especially if the parents are in debt, and there are a number of human vultures in this city that are engaged in the business of buying and selling girls, something that should receive the attention of the authorities.—[Manila Cable News]

The Literary Loss of the Bible.

THE sting of our loss lies in the perishing of the young associations which used to be entwined about the felicities and majesty of biblical phraseology. The mature and preoccupied mind will in vain seek deliberately to assimilate the purely literary charm and power of the Bible. Later and colder studies cannot give what must be drawn in almost with mother's milk. The accumulated impressions of childhood, the familiarity with sounding phrases before they are understood, the play of young imagination, of awe, and even of superstition, about the sacred page, together with the daily repetition and use of the rich English of the King James version, seem necessary to the surest and most enduring grasp on the Bible merely as a great writing. There is a certain disillusionment in studying the Bible in too cold and dry a light of reason, and though it may be a critical gain it is a literary loss.—[Rollo Ogden, in the Century.]

"It Takes Two."

A LAD of seventeen was telling an older friend, recently, of an experience he had had that day. As the apprentice of a carpenter, he had been sent to a saloon to take the measures for a new counter. It was very cold weather, and he arrived with his teeth fairly chattering in his head, for his coat was thin. The saloon-keeper immediately mixed a hot drink and pushed it over the counter to him. "It'll cost you nothing," he said; "drink it down, and you'll soon stop shivering, my boy."

"He meant it kindly, too, and didn't think any harm," said the apprentice, as he told the story. "That's what made it harder to push it back, and I didn't want it."

"It must have been a big temptation," said the friend. "That saloon-keeper might have started you on the road to ruin."

"Well," replied the lad, frankly, "I'd rather have had it than some other kinds. You see, it takes two to make a temptation. There's no saloon-keeper and no cold weather can make me drink when I don't want to. The temptation I'm afraid of is the one that I'm ready for before it comes, by hankering after it. I don't take much credit to myself for refusing that drink; and, if I had taken it, why, I wouldn't have put all the blame on the saloon-keeper, as some folks do. It takes two, every time, to make a successful temptation."

It was an honest way to look at the question. Temptation is not all a matter of outward happening, but also of inner readiness. No outsider can be responsible for our sins as we are responsible. "He tempted me," only explains one side of the temptation. The other side—the personal side—we must answer for, and no excuse will save us. "It takes two," and one of the two is always our own responsible self.—[Exchange.]

The Wellesley Sycamore.

WELLESLEY'S famous sycamore, which for two years has been in danger of destruction by the officials of that town, is now safe. The tree stands just east of Wellesley town square, on the southerly side of Washington street.

Up to the year 1900 it was at the end of a row of three trees, the other two being another buttonwood and the elm. It is still a comparatively young tree. A limb sawed from the remaining tree, at twelve feet from the ground, has an age of 62 years, indicating a tree in the vicinity of 80 years old from the seed. At the present time the measurements are: circumference, 10 feet; spread, 70 feet; height, about 85 feet.

About the year 1860 Dr. Morton, the discoverer of ether, who lived at that time where the Wellesley Library now stands, was hanged in effigy on this buttonwood tree. His name is now engraved on the monument commemorating the discovery of ether, which stands in Boston Public Garden.—[Boston Post.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

As Congress draws to a close there is the usual rush of legislation. The Democrats, angered by the unseating of James J. Butler, whom they declare a legally elected Representative from Missouri, have resorted to filibustering tactics to delay needed legislation; these have been to a great extent overcome by the adoption of drastic rules and the necessary appropriation bills have been passed. In the Senate the unavailing contest to secure the admission of new States and Senator Morgan's prolonged speech against the Panama Canal treaty have prevented the ratification of the Panama and Cuban treaties. President Roosevelt has therefore issued a proclamation calling an extra session of the Senate.

The Immigration Bill has passed both the Senate and the House, including the clause which prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors of any character within the limits of the Capitol Building of the United States. A similar provision has several times passed the House only to be killed in the Senate. This year the Senate refused to bear longer the opprobrium of defeating the measure, and the Conference Committee to which the bill was referred left this clause untouched.

The Senatorial deadlock in the Delaware Legislature is at last broken. The Democrats and Regular Republicans joined forces in the House of Representatives to repeal the "Voter's Assistant" bill. This alarmed the Union (or Addicks)

Republicans and a compromise was effected by which James Frank Allee, an Addicks man, was elected for the long term, ending in 1907, and Louis Heisler Ball, a Regular Republican, for the short term ending in 1905.

MABINI, the former President of the Filipino Supreme Court, and at one time Minister for Foreign Affairs in the Filipino Government, has been an exile in the island of Guam since his surrender in 1899. He arrived at Manila on the 26th ultimo, on the transport Thomas, and before landing took the oath of allegiance to the United States Government, which he had hitherto persistently refused to take, and has thus regained his liberty.

SENATOR WILLIAM C. SPROUL has introduced into the Pennsylvania Legislature a bill making it unlawful to employ children under 14 years of age during school hours, to employ them more than ten hours a day, to employ them under 16 between the hours of 9 p. m. and 6 a. m., to employ illiterate children between the ages of 14 and 16, and to employ children under 18 without an affidavit setting forth their age.

THE Czar of Russia has personally intervened in behalf of the famine-stricken Finns, and has ordered that extensive relief works be started without delay. Besides the immediate construction of two railroads which will cost $700,000 and $300,000 respectively, a bank is to be established with a capital of $800,000, which is to be used in making loans to peasant farmers, and $140,000 is to be expended for public works, principally the drainage of swamps.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has received a letter from Herbert Welsh, of Philadelphia, urging upon his consideration statements which show an alleged violation of the rules of war by General Frederick Funston while in service in the Philippines. The special charge against General Funston is that at the battle of Caloccan he had conveyed to the troops under his command oral instructions to "take no prisoners in that battle." The letter also calls attention to several other instances of alleged cruelty that have not been investigated.

In Paris, France, the governor-director of railways has agreed to discharge all employees who persist in using spirits and wine while on duty. In Sweden every suburban train has a compartment reserved for drunken passengers and the disgrace which attaches to traveling in this way engenders sobriety.—[New Voice.]

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

3D MO. 7.—NEW YORK MONTHLY MEETING, at 15th St. and Rutherford Place, New York, at 2.30 p. m. A meeting at 7.30 p. m., under the auspices of the Philanthropic Committee to discuss the Evils of Child Labor and the Child Labor Laws.

3D MO. 7.—GIRARD AVENUE FRIENDS' Association. Byron and Historical Characters.

3D MO. 7.—MANSFIELD, N. J., YOUNG FRIENDS' Association, at the home of Joseph F. Taylor. J. Russell Smith will discuss "The Growth of the Quaker Idea."

3D MO. 8.—PHILADELPHIA EVENING Meeting, at 17th St. and Girard Ave.

3D MO. 8.—WEST PHILADELPHIA

Friends' Meeting will be attended by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit the smaller branches.

3D MO. 8.—A CIRCULAR MEETING at Kennett Square, Pa., at 3 p. m., under the care of a committee of Western Quarterly Meeting.

3D MO. 8.—THE VISITING COMMITTEE of Abington Union will visit Plymouth First-day School at close of morning meeting.

3D MO. 8.—SADBURY YOUNG FRIENDS' Association, at the home of Annie Pownall, Christiana, Pa.

3D MO. 9.—A MOTHERS' CONFERENCE will be held at Park Avenue Meeting-house, Baltimore, at the close of the business session of the Quarterly Meeting, about noon. All women, irrespective of age, who have the care of children, or who are interested in the

(Continued on page 160.)

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

NEWS NOTES.

ON the 26th ultimo a fire broke out in Cincinnati that destroyed one-half of a square in the centre of the business district and caused a loss of over $2,000,000.

THE United States Treasury statement, for last month, shows that the available cash balance is $224,543,470. This is $49,000,000 more than the balance one year ago.

THE Snyder bill fixing the minimum salary for Pennsylvania school teachers at $35 a month has passed the House, but is encountering some opposition in the Senate.

IT now transpires that the opposition to the colored post-mistress at Indianola, Miss., was set in motion by a white Republican who wanted the office for himself.

THE Senate Philippines Committee has decided by a strict party vote not to hear any more witnesses this session on alleged atrocities by the United States troops or officers in the Philippines.

THE Vandegrift Construction Company, of Philadelphia, has obtained a franchise from the Porto Rican Commission for the building of an electric railway between San Juan and Ponce, which will cost $3,000,000.

SIXTY alumni attended the dinner of the Swarthmore Club, in the Hotel Bellevue, Philadelphia, on the 28th ultimo. Joseph Wharton, President of the Board of Managers, was the guest of honor.

ON the 27th ultimo President Roosevelt sent a message to the Senate urging the passage of the House bill providing for a reduction of tariff rates on merchandise passing between the United States and the Philippines.

FIVE bills have been introduced into the Pennsylvania Legislature for the purpose of correcting the defects in the Juvenile Court legislation of the last session, which was lately declared unconstitutional.

ON the 27th ultimo a violent gale swept Great Britain.

Telegraphic communication northward of Leeds was entirely interrupted, the Continental service was interfered with and large numbers of ships were forced to seek shelter in the harbors.

PITTSBURG, PA., was visited by a severe flood, which culminated on the evening of the 1st instant, when the river was five feet above the danger line. All of the lower streets were flooded and hundreds of families were temporarily homeless.

THE Philadelphia Grand Jury has recommended that some action be taken against the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company to compel it to relieve the overcrowded condition of the trolley cars during the busy hours of the day, and to provide the cars with heat in cold weather.

GENERAL ROBERTS, the commander-in-chief of the British army, says that 22,369 officers and soldiers in India, or about one-third of the entire number, are total abstainers, and that of 2,608 courts-martial held in one year only 73 were for the trial of members of the Army Temperance Association.

HENRY T. JOHNSON, a Negro preacher in Camden, N. J., brought suit against the Pullman Palace Car Company, because they refused to serve him a meal with the rest of the passengers, and wished him to eat with the porter. The United States Court at Trenton, N. J., has awarded him $500 damages.

AMBASSADOR CHOATE, at a dinner given by the American Society in London, in honor of Washington's Birthday, said that any kind of war on any kind of subject between Great Britain and America would be not only a great calamity, but an unspeakable crime.

KING EDWARD has signed the ratification of the treaty under which the Alaskan Boundary tribunal is to be appointed. This must be handed to President Roosevelt by Sir Michael Herbert, the British Ambassador to the United States, before the English Cabinet appoints its commissioners. President Roosevelt has appointed Senators Lodge, and Turner, and Secretary Root.

training of the young, are earnestly requested to attend. The meeting will be addressed by Alice C. Robinson and others, who will touch upon topics of vital interest.

3D Mo. 9. — PHILADELPHIA YOUNG Friends' Association, in Y. F. A. Building, at 8 p.m.

3d Mo. 9. — BALTIMORE QUARTERLY Meeting, at Park avenue, Baltimore, at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders on the 7th at 3 p. m.

3D Mo. 12. — HADDONFIELD QUARTERLY Meeting, at Moorestown, N. J., at 10 a. m. Meeting of Ministers and Elders the day before at 3 p. m. Accessible by train leaving Market Street Ferry, Philadelphia, at 8.20 a. m., or by trolley from Camden every half hour, stopping at the meeting-house.

3D Mo. 13. — PLYMOUTH, PA., FRIENDS' Association.

3D Mo. 13. — CHESTER, PA., FRIENDS' Association, in the meeting-house at 8 p. m.

3D Mo. 14. — THE ASSOCIATION OF Friends' Schools and the Committee on Education extend an invitation to an Educational Conference in the Lecture Room of Friends' Central School. At 2 p. m., lecture by Paul H. Hanus, S. B., Professor of the History and Art of Teaching, Harvard University. Subject, "A Modern Program of Studies." General discussion. Teachers and members of school committees are earnestly requested to be present.

3D Mo. 14. — BURLINGTON FIRST-DAY School Union, at Bordentown, N. J., 10.30 a. m. All are cordially invited.

3D Mo. 15. — WOODLAWN, VA., YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Jacob M. Troth.

(Concluded on page iii)

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY
Pittsburgh.
REYMER-BAUMAN
Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAFFERS
Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK
Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR
Cincinnati.
ECKSTEIN
ATLANTIC
BRADLEY } New York.
BROOKLYN }
JEWETT }
ULSTER }
UNION }
SOUTHERN } Chicago.
SHIPMAN }
SHIPMAN }
OLLIER }
MISSOURI } St. Louis.
RED SEAL }
SOUTHERN }
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO
Philadelphia.
MORLEY
Cleveland.
SALEM
Salem, Mass.
OORNELL
Buffalo.
KENTUCKY
Louisville.

IF there is an impression in the minds of any that Mixtures of White Lead and Zinc are better than Pure White Lead, it has been created by the manufacturers of the Mixtures, because a much larger profit can be made from the sale of these than by grinding and selling either White Lead or Zinc pure.

If interested in paint or painting, address

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

There isn't a lamp chimney made that isn't ashamed of its maker except MACBETH'S.

My name on every one.

If you'll send your address, I'll send you the Index to Lamps and their Chimneys, to tell you what number to get for your lamp.
MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

These trade-mark cross-grain lines on every package.
Gluten X Grits AND BARLEY CRYSTALS,
Perfect Breakfast and Digest Health Cereals.
PANSY FLOUR for Breads, Cake and Pastry.
Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample, write
FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL,
Manufacturing Optician.

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK
UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN Philadelphia given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

JOSEPH L. JONES

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

(Continued from Page 100.)

3D Mo. 15.—A CONFERENCE UNDER THE care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor, in the meeting-house at West Chester, Pa., at 2.30 p. m.

3D Mo. 15.—WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Friends' Meeting, at the residence of Mary A. Carpenter, 35 Greenridge Ave. All visitors are welcome.

MERION PREPARATIVE MEETING WILL BE held the Fourth-day of the week preceding Radnor Monthly Meeting, at 51st St. and Lancaster Ave., at 3.30 p. m.

LOW RATES TO CALIFORNIA, ARIZONA, MEXICO, AND OTHER WESTERN POINTS.

Parties desiring to make trip to California, Arizona, Mexico, or other western points, either for business or pleasure, can do so now at a small cost.

Daily until April 29, 1903, inclusive, special one-way colonist tickets may be purchased via the Southern Railway at rate of $49.75 from Philadelphia to Los Angeles, San Francisco and other points, corresponding low rates from other points.

The Southern Railway operates through Excursion Sleepers from Washington to Los Angeles and San Francisco without change, via Atlanta, New Orleans, and El Paso, leaving Washington at 8.45 p.m. every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. The berth rate in these sleepers is only $7, two people being allowed to occupy one berth if desired. Personal conductors and Pullman porters go through with each sleeper. There are other new, convenient, and economical features connected with these sleepers, which may be ascertained from Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

OLD POINT COMFORT, RICHMOND, AND WASHINGTON.

SIX-DAY TOUR VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The first personally-conducted tour to Old Point Comfort, Richmond and Washington via the Pennsylvania Railroad for the present season will leave New York and Philadelphia on Saturday, March 14.

Tickets, including transportation, meals en route in both directions, transfers of passengers and baggage, hotel accommodations at Old Point Comfort, Richmond, and Washington, and carriage ride about Richmond—in fact, every necessary expense for a period of six days—will be sold at rate of $36 from New York, Brooklyn, and Newark; $34.50 from Trenton; $33 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other stations.

OLD POINT COMFORT ONLY.

Tickets to Old Point Comfort only, including luncheon on going trip, one and three-fourths days' board at Chamberlain Hotel, and good to return directly by regular trains within six days, will be sold in connection with this tour at rate of $17 from New York; $15.50 from Trenton; $14.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents; Tourist Agent, 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or George W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

REDUCED RATES TO NEW ORLEANS, LA., ACCOUNT MEETING NATIONAL MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION, APRIL 15-17, 1903, VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

On April 11, 12, and 13, Special Excursion tickets to New Orleans and return will be sold via the Southern Railway, at greatly reduced rates. Tickets will be good to return until April 19, but by depositing ticket with Joint Agent at New Orleans on or before April 19, and payment of a fee of fifty cents, final limit can be extended until April 30, 1903.

The Round trip rate from Philadelphia will be $33.50. Corresponding low rates from other points.

The Southern Railway operates three through trains daily with Pullman drawing-room sleeping-cars from New York, Philadelphia, and Washington to New Orleans without change. Dining-car service on all through trains.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE

Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CHRIS GRAMMERS, Jr.) 529 1/2 Locust St., Philadelphia

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET,

PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. CRAWFORD.

THE UNION CENTRAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Assets, $34,000,000

Plain Life and Endowment Policies with Annual Dividends.

The Highest Grade of Life Insurance at the Lowest Cost.

The Company for Those who Think for Themselves.

Good Contracts to Good Agents.

Lawton Brothers, Managers,
338 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

WALL PAPER of

Attractive Styles

Popular Prices

Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,
1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

BIBLES.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.
A NEW AND FULL LIFE.

FAMILY QUARTO BIBLES, suitable for Friend.
SELF-PRONOUNCING, REFERENCE TEACHERS' BIBLES, with maps and concordance.

TESTAMENTS, ETC., convenient, large, clear type, desirable binding. New and up-to-date. Surprisingly low prices—from 50 cents up.

THE CHILD AND THE BIBLE. Syllabus of a course of twenty-five lessons in education. By George Allen Hubbard. Price, 25 cts. Postage 4 cts.

THE OLD RED SCHOOL-BOOK. By Elizabeth
Lloyd. Price, postpaid, 75 cents.

JOHN KINSEY, Speaker of the Pennsylvania Assembly.
By Joseph S. Walton. Price, 30 cents.
All Friends' books for sale by

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
N. W. cor 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

You can live without life insurance, but you won't live so much.
Nothing adds to the zest of living like knowing your family is protected by a policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES,
ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS.
Safe to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.

E. B. MORRIS, President

JAMAICA, LAND OF SUMMER.

Now is the time for a trip to the Tropics, where you may escape the cold and severe Winter of the North. You can leave direct from Philadelphia on the splendid steamers Admiral Sampson and Admiral Schley. Swift passage, comfortable accommodation, excellent cuisine.

You will have a delightful Sea-voyage, and you will visit a land of sunshine whose interest and health-giving qualities are unsurpassed.

For further information and tickets call or address

ARTHUR H. MIDDLETON,

421 North Second Street (afternoon), or
282 North Broad Street (evening), Philadelphia, Pa.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.

STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 30, N. Delaware Avenue
Uptown office, 808 and 1002 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
J. C. WHITEVY, ad V. P. and T. M. W. P.
TURNER, G. F. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

Men's Neglige Shirts

Four special lots that will greatly interest thrifty buyers. Good materials, desirable patterns, and making of a character that we can vouch for :

Men's Fancy Corded Madras Shirts

Some have attached collars; all are new patterns, in a variety of stripe and figured effects; every regular size in the lot—at 37½ cents.

Men's Fancy Percale Shirts, special

Two separate collars and one pair of cuffs with each shirt; all up-to-date patterns that the majority of men like—at 50 cents.

Men's Fancy Corded Madras Shirts

These have plaited bosoms, which are very popular at the present time; a great variety of patterns to select from—at 50 cents.

Men's $1.00 Laundered Madras Shirts

With plain bosoms and stripes and figures—very clean and desirable
Martha J. Warner 75 cents.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

George W. Hancock,

APPRAISER

Real and Personal Estates.

All values confidential.
(12 to 2).

802 Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week
Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL,

Phone 1-33-55.

Clerk

43 FLOWERS 30 cents

Worth $1.25. A SPECIAL OFFER made to introduce our goods. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

20 Pkts. SEEDS

1 Pkt. Rambler Rose 3 cent seed, 1 Pkt. Diamond Flower.
" " France, 10 cents mixed, " California Sweet Peas.
" Washington Weeping Palm, " Double Chinese Pink.
" Mary Semple Aster, 4 colors, " Carnation Marguerite.
" Alphonse Lilloz Gum mixed, " Heirloom mixed.
" Bouquet Chrysanthemum, " Poppy—New Shirley.
" Forget-me-not Victoria, " Umbrella Flower.
" Hibiscus Carriacou Eye, " Japan Morning Glory.
" Lovely Butterfly Flower, " Petal-de-hy, mixed.
" Blue Breasted Bird, " "

23 BULBS

1 New Red Calla Lily, " Summer Flowering Amaryllis.
1 Double Pearl Tuluber, " 2 Butterfly and " Hybrid Giant Iris, " A Fine Mixed Onions, " Rainbow Lilies, 2
2 Heavy Wind Flowers, " 2 Lovely Clematis Vines,
2 Splendid New Green Lilies—1 crimson, 1 white.

A Returns Check good for 25 cts. on 1st $1.00 order; also our New Floral Guide, all above postage, only 50c.
THE CONARD & JONES CO.
Growers of the Best
Flowers in America.
Box 2, West Grove, Pa.

Growing Ideas

What to grow in the garden. When to grow and how. Modern Ideas of agriculture and horticulture for those who plant for pleasure or profit. Illustrated in

DREER'S
Garden Calendar

Sent free to all who mention this paper.

HENRY A. DREER, 714 Chestnut St., Phila., Pa.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, THIRD MONTH 14, 1903.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers.

Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
* TELEPHONE NO. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XI.	161
POETRY: LIFE AND PEACE.	161
THE FATHER'S BUSINESS.	161
ROBERT BIDDLE (Portrait).	162
CHARLES THOMPSON.	164
OBSERVATIONS OF FIRST-DAY SCHOOLS.	165
EDITORIAL:
A True Patriot.	166
Notes.	166, 167
BIRTHS, DEATHS.	167
IMPROVEMENTS AT THE GEORGE SCHOOL.	168
NOTTINGHAM QUARTERLY MEETING.	168
SALEM QUARTERLY MEETING.	169
FAULTFINDING.	169
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	170
EDUCATIONAL.	171
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	172
COMMUNICATIONS:
Coal Operators Who Avoid Strikes.	172
A Surprise Party.	172
LITERARY NOTES.	172
POETRY: An Abandoned Nest; Whatever Is, Is Best; Nobody's Child.	173
METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR SECOND MONTH, 1903.	173
HEROES OF MEDICAL SCIENCE.	174
LOCAL OPTION IN MASSACHUSETTS.	174
MISCELLANY: Discoveries in Nippur; Revolutionary Dungeons in New York; A Boy with Presence of Mind.	175
CURRENT EVENTS.	175
NEWS NOTES.	176
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	176

WANTED.—A FRIEND WHO TEACHES DESIRES the care of children, or other employment, for the vacation months. Address A. 28 Conklin st., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

WANTED.—A MIDDLE-AGED WOMAN, AS working housekeeper in a small adult family, in West Chester, Pa. Address U. E. O., Box 54, West Chester, Pa.

WANTED.—A FRIEND WITH EXPERIENCE and ability desires a position as housekeeper at the sea shore or mountains, or companion. Address Box 405, West Chester, Pa.

WANTED.—D. E. BOOKKEEPER, STENOGRAPHER, typewriter, experienced, desires permanent position. Salary $12. Address No. 79, this Office.

WANTED.—BY FRIEND, POSITION AS PRIVATE secretary. Remington operator, or traveling companion, nurse for semi-invalid, or housekeeper. Address A. D. FEATHERSTONE, 21 N. Carey Street, Baltimore, Md.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS AND SISTERS, 1857 I. St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

SPANISH LESSONS.—SPANISH LADY DESIRES pupils. Can also speak French and Italian. M. VIYES, 3332 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

FOR RENT.—A HANDSOME FURNISHED house, centrally located in Swarthmore, Pa., for rent by the month, cheap.

ALSO, A LARGE STONE MANSION ON THE HILL from June to September. Completely furnished, all conveniences, gas range, Spring-fed water, 120 feet of porch, commanding a fine view. Grounds cared for by owner. Tennis court. Stabling for two horses if desired. ALBERT N. GARRETT, 1015 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia, or Box 135, Swarthmore, Pa.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTENHAM,

E. T. Kuendig, Atlantic City, N. J.
R. W. Richards.

THE PENNHURST, Second House from Beach.
MICHIGAN AVENUE.

REOPENS SATURDAY, JANUARY 31.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. W. M. R. HOOD.

HOTEL WINDLE, Centre of city.
JACKSONVILLE, FLA. Near all car lines.
American and European plan. New First-class European plan, rooms $1 per day. American plan, $2 per day. C. B. SMITH, Prop.

THE KATHLU, 1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts. K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD

THE AQUARILE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR
OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE., Atlantic City, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet. M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St.
PLAIN MILLINERY,
Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street
From 736 Spring Garden Street.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK.
Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.

COLLINGS CARRIAGE CO.,
Broughams, Victorias, Coupe, Rockaways, Cutdowns, Runabouts, and Cockettes.
1719 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Buck Hill Falls

Notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Buck Hill Falls Company will be held at the N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, at 7.30 p.m., Third month 24, 1903, to take action on approval or disapproval of the proposed increase of the capital stock of said company from $50,000 to $100,000.

MORGAN BUNTING, Sec'y and Treas.

Choice Lot For Sale at

BUCK HILL FALLS,
Large and attractive lot,—exceptional location. I will sell Lot No. 31, in Plotting No. 1, to acceptable purchaser. See map of Plotting at my office.

CHARLES PAXSON,
234 Dock Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

ASPARAGUS ROOTS

$2.50 per 1000.

Pear trees, Strawberry plants, California privet,—all at low rates. Catalogue free.
SAMUEL C. DeCOU, Moorestown, N. J.

Home Kitchen Outfits

and all
House Furnishing Goods

J. FRANKLIN MILLER,
1626 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

George W. Hancock,

APPRAISER
Real and Personal Estates.

All values confidential.
802 Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia.
(12 to 21).

Established 1870 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,
27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street
I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

If You're Looking for the Cheapest Price on a bit of printing, not much use in asking ours—it won't be the lowest. But if you're looking for some one who can do your work as well as it is ought to be done, then we'd like to talk with you.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,
MAKERS OF THE
BETTER KIND OF PRINTING
1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

YOUR BEST FRIEND should be your advertising. Its plan is to introduce you in a convincing manner to others who need your product.
T. Vaughan Spiller, Ad-writer,
200 S. 10th St., Phila.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES. Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.

Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to

GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Or,
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR
BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment. For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class instruction.

For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

THOMAS O. PEIRCE,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW.
815 Real Estate Trust Building, Philad'a.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OFFICES: { 693 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
{ Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa

JOHN FABER MILLER,
355 SWEDER STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

Disease Cured by Electricity.

WM. H. HICKOK, M.D.

10 a.m. to 4 p.m. 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

354 North Eleventh Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Disease Cured by Osteopathy.

A System of Natural Healing. Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and Chronic diseases in general.

G. O. STODDARD, D. D., D. O.

10 a. m. to 4 p. m. 7 p. m. to 9 p. m.

554 N. 11th Street, Philadelphia.

Thompson Shourds, 2212 Wallace Street.

Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.

Richards & Shourds, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1225 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa.
Phone 3-54-78 D.

CHARLES BURTON,

Practical House and Sign Painter,

Office, 907 N. Thirteenth Street, } Philadelphia, Pa.
Residence, 1714 Woodstock Street, }

Young Friends' Review

Published by the

New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR.
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.

5 PHONES.

PURE FOOD, skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

JOSEPH L. JONES

BIBLES.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.
A NEW AND FULL LINE.

FAMILY QUARTO BIBLES, suitable for Friend. SELF-PRONOUNCING, REFERENCE TEACHERS' BIBLES, with maps and concordance.

TESTAMENTS, ETC., convenient, large, clear type, desirable binding. New and up-to-date. Surprisingly low prices—from 50 cents up.

THE CHILD AND THE BIBLE Syllabus of a course of twenty-five lessons in education. By George Allen Hubbard. Price, 25 cts. Postage extra.

THE OLD RED SCHOOL-HOUSE. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Price, postpaid, 75 cents.

JOHN KINSEY, Speaker of the Pennsylvania Assembly. By Joseph S. Walton. Price, 50 cents. All Friends' books for sale by

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
N. W. cor 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

Specials in Black Taffeta Silks

It is natural for customers to wonder why we are constantly advertising Black Taffetas under value; but the explanation is that our immense outlet for these goods, both wholesale and retail, insures us a lower average cost, on account of the quantities we buy, and we simply turn this saving over to our customers.

To the best of our belief, no such values in Black Taffetas are obtainable elsewhere in Philadelphia:

58c Black Taffeta Silk, 19-inch—50c
65c Black Taffeta Silk, 19-inch—55c
80c Black Taffeta Silk, 19-inch—68c
$1.00 Black Taffeta Silk, 23-inch—90c
90c Black Taffeta Silk, 27-inch—75c
$1.25 Black Taffeta Silk, 27-inch—$1.00
$1.25 Black Taffeta Silk, 36-inch—$1.00
$1.50 Black Taffeta Silk, 36-inch—$1.35
$1.00 Black Taffeta Jadis, 21-inch—88c
90c Black Taffeta Jadis, 21-inch—75c

We direct special attention to a $2 Imported Black Taffeta which we are selling at $1.50—made by the famous house of Poncet, Pere et Fils, of Lyons, and our direct importation.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, THIRD MONTH 14, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 11.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903. XI.

TRUE Godliness does not turn men out of the world, but enables them to live better in it, and excites their endeavors to mend it.

WILLIAM PENN.

LIGHT AND PEACE.

OUTWARD life is light and shadow,
Mingled wrong and struggling right,
But within the outward trouble
Shines a healing, inward light.

Not to us may come fulfilment,
Not below our struggles cease,
Yet the heavenly vision gives us,
Even here, an inward peace.

—From the German.

THE FATHER'S BUSINESS.¹

LET me recall to your minds the beautiful story told in the gospel of St. Luke, of the boy Jesus, with his father and mother, at the Passover feast in Jerusalem. You remember that after a day's journey homeward he was missed from the company by his parents, and that they, returning to the city, found him in the temple with the learned doctors of the Jewish law. Nor can you have forgotten that reply which marked him at the age of twelve—a prophet of the Lord. To the mother's anxious word, "Thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing," he said, "How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

Painters have loved to make this picture for us. It may be that in more than one college room is the Hoffman head of the boy Jesus, with the far and deep-seening look of the eyes, the clear vision that illuminates them, the benediction that is in them for the pure in heart. There is much in the beautiful story to hold our thought. The Passover feast itself, with its details so foreign to our own experience, and their significance to the men and women celebrating it—all this might well be made a subject of study. Then, the doctrines upon which the learned Hebrews would ask and answer questions of the child—these appeal to us intellectually and ethically. It is hardly to be wondered at that the father and mother "understood not the saying which he spake unto them"—"Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" True, the devout man Simeon in the temple had taken the young infant in his arms and blessed him, and had said to the mother, "Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; . . . Yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also," and the mother "kept all these sayings in her heart." But the "Father's business" was a quite new saying to her—it had never been spoken before. If he had said, "Wist ye not that I must be learning the law; and these learned doctors would be authority upon all the details of the law;" that they would have understood, for they looked to the law to show them the way for food, and cleanliness, and temple-service—the way of life.

The "Father's business" is a familiar saying to us now. This is a measure of the world's progress since the boyhood of Jesus—that we, even the young among us, get glimpses of his meaning when he said, "I must be about my Father's business." For his life was the commentary upon his words. All the early years of his life, so far as we know, were lived with his father and mother, in obedience to them, increasing in wisdom and in favor with God and man, making ready for the "Father's business." And then, how short the chapter is of the three years of public service, saved for us by word of mouth, and later, in a few printed pages. It is a story wholly of service. The blind sought him to give them sight. The sick and suffering struggled to reach the hem of his garment that his virtue might heal them. The sinning came near to his heart, divinely loving, and were restored to obedience and wholeness. Mother-instinct craved for the little children the touch of his hand in benediction. "In the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed." Even the seclusion of prayer, which seemed to be necessary to him for the renewal of his spiritual strength, was pressed upon by the throng importunate for his help. Three years of spending himself for any who needed him, and speaking a few vital words—all, his "Father's business," and then the small world in which he moved put him to death! The memory of what he did, and the vital words he spoke, are leaven slowly working, very slowly it seems, unless we remember that in his sight, "a thousand years are but as yesterday when it is past"; leaven working toward the transformation of the children of men into the children of God. Perhaps it might be said that this very transformation is the "Father's business."

This thought was pressed home to me in our recent visit from one of Christ's true co-workers—the head worker of the Philadelphia College Settlement. She showed us pictures of city courts swarming with little children, many of them the very raw material of humanity. Not all of them are raw material, for sanctifying love sets its stamp upon some souls born in city slums. The mark of the Master is upon the young man who works by day for bread; then at evening avails himself of the Settlement study room for preparation for the university; and out of these precious evenings gives two each week to teaching arithmetic to a class of foreign-born boys. When I heard the story of this youth, I trembled within me, at thought of the casting down and lifting up that must come with the sitting of souls wrought by His law who is "God of things as they are." The work of the College and the Social Settlement with the very raw material of humanity is, perhaps, the most Christ-like work of all. It has close, personal contact with every form of suffering and limitation. It finds this raw material in foul places, and tries to make them clean. In summer these places are hot and ill-smelling; in winter they are cold and again ill-smelling. Hunger and scant clothing are in such habitations. There is only a narrow strip of sky overhead; and instead of broad fields and noble trees, heated walls, with here and there a flower-box for suggestion of garden. Honor and first place to those who give themselves at first hand to the "Father's business" there!

¹ Read to the students of Swarthmore College, Third month 1, 1903.

But every bit of work in the world that has to do with social forces—and what work does not?—is more or less closely allied with College and Social Settlement activities. The work of the student, which of necessity is for the most part centered upon himself, may be purely selfish and mean; or it may be redeemed from selfishness and meanness by seeing its relation to the broad interests of the world. It would seem as if very gratitude to God for "lines fallen in such pleasant places" as college life provides, would make it impossible to forget that the "Father's business" is the ultimate claim upon every human power.

How can we come to a sense of this claim upon us, if we have it not? I know of no way more direct than intimate knowledge of the life of Jesus; and these is a way more effective than listening to, or even reading the story of this life—it is to write about it. Take some incident in the life—the mother of James and John coming to Jesus to intercede for the place of her sons; Jesus setting a little child in the midst of his questioners; Jesus "at meat" with the Pharisee. If we listen, or even read for ourselves, it is easy to listen and to read in a superficial way, taking in the words, but missing the vitalizing spirit. To write of these incidents, seems to bring us into the very real presence of the Teacher; and it may be our blessedness to feel his personality, to get in some measure the baptism of his helping, strengthening, uplifting spirit. After such baptism we shall make Frances Havergal's beautiful hymn, our daily prayer:

Take my life, and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to thee;
Take my hands and let them move
At the impulse of thy love.

Take my feet and let them be
Swift and beautiful for thee;
Take my voice, and let me sing
Always, only for my King.

ELIZABETH POWELL BOND.

A PEACE is of the nature of a conquest: for then both parties nobly are subdued, and neither party loses.—[Shakespeare.]

ROBERT BIDDLE.

ROBERT BIDDLE, the second child of Clement and Mary Canby Biddle, was born the 10th of Eighth month, 1814, in the house they then occupied at 706 Arch Street. At a suitable age he was sent to a private school of excellent reputation, on Race Street, above Seventh, conducted by Jesse M. Stanley, afterward joined by George M. Haverstick, both plain Friends. He was a healthy boy, not too fond of study, but showing the leaning towards outdoor life and sports, which characterized him to his life's end.

In later life he expressed sympathy for the trials of children who are sent out into the world saddled with any peculiarity. He used to say that the plain cut and color of his dress, enforced by the conscientious scruples of his parents, brought him into certain trouble with his mates until they learned by experience that a high spirit and plenty of muscle were encased in the meek-looking garments.

In the early thirties Robert entered the employment of the hardware firm of White & Abbott, and later served as clerk with J. & J. B. Champion. It is told of this period of his career that the first money he earned by his own labor was deposited in a box and his younger brother, not yet at work, invited to use it equally with himself.

In 1837 Robert went into partnership with his brother William, under the firm name of "R. & W. C. Biddle, Wholesale and Retail Hardware." Their first store was on Market Street (then High), above Front, facing the old, mid-street, open market sheds. A second larger store to which the firm moved shortly was burned in 1865, when they moved to 509 Commerce Street.

In their early business experience, hardware was mainly imported, American goods being almost unknown. "It was before the days of railroads and commercial travelers, merchants came to town twice a year to buy," and freight was slowly carried by canal boat and Conestoga wagon along the waterways and turnpikes of the North, South and West.

Heavy clouds rose shortly on the political horizon, and R. & W. C. Biddle bore testimony to Friends' principles in business, as in social life. Disapproving of the business methods of the slave-holding South, they so withdrew from that section, that when the Civil War broke out their pecuniary losses were slight. They consistently refused, either then or later, to furnish arms or ammunition for the army. Faithful attention to business, unswerving punctuality in engagements, and steady adherence to the highest principles, made the firm known, honored and successful.

The first of Twelfth month, 1842, Robert Biddle married Anna Miller, daughter of Daniel L., and Hannah Nicholson Miller, and to them, in due course of years, five children were born: Charles Miller, Henry Canby, Hannah Miller, Elizabeth Parrish and Martha Canby, of whom three are still living.

In the hope of benefiting his wife's ill health they spent the winter, spring and part of the summer of 1863 in the south of Europe and Algiers, returning home to their children in Seventh month, in an anxious state of mind. They knew before sailing that the crisis of the war was at hand, and that Lee was raiding Pennsylvania. The battle of Gettysburg was fought while they were on the ocean, thus relieving the tense anxiety for the fate of Philadelphia, which none who felt it can forget.

A second trip, in 1869, to Egypt, Greece, Palestine and Algiers, kept them away from home till the summer of 1871. The first day of the next year Robert Biddle withdrew from active business life, though he always took the utmost interest in the affairs of the firm.

The severity of the Philadelphia climate not being suited to Anna M. Biddle's delicate health, they spent the winter of 1882 in Algiers, two seasons, 1875 and 1886, in California, and the remaining winters at Hibernia, Florida. Robert continued this custom after his wife's death, in 1891, until 1897, when two dangerous winter illnesses indicated the expediency of his making his permanent home near his family.

He was a steady attender of the meetings of the religious Society of Friends whenever health permitted. Declining a first appointment as elder of the monthly meeting held at Race Street, partly on account of his views concerning peculiarity in dress, he subsequently felt free to accept and held this office from 1886 until his death.

Though not himself a bookish man, the founding and maintenance of Swarthmore College elicited his warm sympathy and support. He served as treasurer to the institution from Twelfth month, 1875, to Twelfth month, 1901, when he declined re-election.

In 1851 nine Friends of sufficiently congenial tastes concluded to combine in order to secure for themselves pleasant, quiet and desirable summer residences. These nine were Robert and William C. Biddle, Rodman Wharton, Caleb Clothier, Daniel L. Miller, Jr., William D. Parrish, Dillwyn Parrish, Charles D. Cleveland and James Clothier. They purchased from Joseph Lippincott a farm on the eastern side of the Delaware River, about ten miles above Philadelphia. The shore thereabout retained the flowing Indian name of Cinnaminson, or "Sweet Water," supposed to refer to the sap of the sugar maples. The new town of Riverton was plotted and the bank properties divided by lot among the nine owners, who each built a house upon his portion. The Biddle brothers happened to draw adjoining lots. It is believed that Robert Biddle was the oldest of the nine founders. He outlived all of them by a number of years. He, and he alone of all the nine, continued to make Riverton his summer home from the day of its planting to the end of his life, the length of which is perhaps a convincing testimonial to the healthfulness of the Cinnaminson shore. In personal characteristics he was of a calm and even temper, though a certain surface brusqueness often led those who knew him slightly to stand somewhat in awe of him; to his friends it but lent piquancy to the wholesome sweetness within. His extreme regularity of habits was a noticeable trait, doubtless conducive to longevity. Throughout even his business life, when his dinner hour struck, he went to dinner. A sale was postponed in the midst, and his customer invited to share his meal.

A successful business man himself, with a keen appreciation of the qualities by which men make money, his human sympathies remained, nevertheless, undimmed, and he was ever ready to contribute to private distress or public need.

Unusually active, though hampered somewhat by a stiffened ankle, broken in a driving accident, in 1852, fun-loving, interested in all the doings of his young folks, his face continually gleaming with the light of anecdote and reminiscence, he was in his later years the delightful companion and center of interest of a large circle of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, unbroken save by the earlier death of a son and daughter.

With all his descendants gathered round him under the lofty trees of his own planting, with all the ease that money can bring or tender love supply, Robert Biddle watched the sunsets across the glowing river, waiting with contented patience for the summons to a higher life. On the 3d of Twelfth month, 1902, the long, useful career in this world came to a peaceful close. Seldom has a man been so enriched with outward joys and comforts; seldom has such enriching left a character so sweet and unspoiled.

In some degree Robert Biddle approached, in his own right, to the consummate flower of our engrafted civilizations. He was Hebraist; his ancestry insured that, but he was also Hellenist; the disapproval of self-mortification, the wholesome delight in nature, the appreciation of beauty, the joyous love of life—these, in their fullness, were his own. And the happy combination accounts for all the things that make his example a lesson and a sermon to those whom he has left behind. A. B. S.

There has passed from our midst, in his quiet home at Riverton, New Jersey, on the banks of the Delaware, one dearly beloved by old and young alike for that rarest of all gifts, a tender, loving heart combined with an honest sense of justice and love of truth and uprightness that has ever marked the ideal Friend. An elder of Race Street Monthly Meeting of Friends, many will remember him as he sat at the head of the meetings there in recent years on Fourth-days. His love of accuracy, and sympathy for the large body of young students gathered there, led him to carry on those occasions a cane, especially made, with a watch as its head, that the meetings might not be longer than the allotted time.

We have often been told how Riverton was one large cornfield when he went there to build a summer home, and help lay out that now prosperous town. For years Robert Biddle and his friend, Edward H. Ogden, held meeting on First-day in the Riverton Public School building, taking turns in reading a portion of Scripture each First-day. Of late years, when health would permit, he attended Westfield Friends' Meeting, and in the beautiful, quiet yard back of that meeting, his mortal frame rests by his wife and son Harry.

Robert Biddle did not profess to be a man inspired in any especial manner, but lived out hourly and daily the simple code of Friends' Discipline and the true spirit of Christianity in a remarkable manner. No one ever worked with or for him, or enjoyed the liberal hospitality of his home, or his friendship, from childhood to the last day of his life, without feeling that life was sweeter and better for his loving, kindly spirit, his purity of purpose and uprightness.

He had a keen sense of humor, and many a hard place in life was made smooth, many a worry turned aside by his jokes or stories. Some of the older Friends can appreciate this little anecdote when "plainness of apparel" used to mean the color or stripe of a piece of goods. Some one was fretting over a dress pattern, the stripes of which she feared were too wide, when Robert said, in his jesting way, "Why, if stripes are bad, the fewer of them the better, I should think." It was this sense of humor, but most of all his true, loving, Christian heart and gentle, courteous thoughtfulness for others, that made him a wonderful example to all in his devotion to his wife, for many years an invalid. Every comfort that love and money could furnish were hers, and he was never too busy or too tired to help her from chair to bed, or take her for a drive. Nor did he think of the labor it meant for him to take that dear, helpless companion to Europe three times. A lover of nature, the sunsets and cloud and river changes viewed from his own home were a never-ending delight to him. He was ever deeply interested in the young and their life-work, feeling that all should work both with hand and brain.

At his funeral it was said truly, "His was not a life lived in seclusion, but his influence went out in the busy marts of commerce, and there was ever manifested that true Christian spirit, an evidence to us that we should not withdraw ourselves from society, nor from these busy marts of commerce and trade, but should carry this spirit of Christ with us, that its influence may be felt there, and not only there, but throughout all the walks of life."

The life of this Friend was a power for good, an example of steadfastness to principle, and he has left to all who knew him a rich legacy of beautiful, helpful memories.

"He rests with the immortals; his journey has been long:
For him no wail of sorrow, but a paean full and strong!
So well and bravely has he done the work he found to do,
To justice, freedom, duty, God and man forever true."
E. H. S.

CHARLES THOMPSON.

A LATE English mail has brought word of the death of this dear Friend, on Second month 21st, at the age of eighty-three years and three months. His granddaughter writes: "Thou wilt no doubt be sorry to hear of my dear grandfather's decease; but our loss is his gain; he has gained his reward, a 'Crown of Life.' He has been ill since before Christmas. He got a little better, then fell ill again. There was no hope; he was worn out. He had every comfort and every wish gratified. His last request was for the reading of 'The Border Land.' His dear Whittier he loved to hear; some of his favorites were 'At Last,' 'The Angel of Patience' and 'The Eternal Goodness.'"

In 1876 he spent some months in America, with very great interest and satisfaction. He became much interested in Swarthmore College; and on his return to England sent one hundred rare volumes of Friends' books, each bearing the inscription, "In commemoration of my visit to America in Centennial year." From time to time he has sent other gifts of books to the Friends' Historical Library, and was instrumental in securing for it the valuable collection of Henry Thorpe's books. He was very desirous that English Friends and American Friends of our branch of the Society should have more intimate knowledge of one another. In a letter dated Eighth month 21st, 1897, he writes: "The more Friends mingle in free social intercourse, the better it will be for the Society, and the progress of the principles of truth in the world. The opening Friends from your side are finding among us should encourage you to embrace all right opportunities for making your presence felt among us. I look back with real pleasure to my visit in '76 as almost the first of English Friends who disregarded sectional differences in my travels in America; and although there were some who then regarded my freedom with suspicion, I have reason to know it has borne good fruit."

My last letter from him was written First month 27th, 1902. In this he says: "I must impress on thee, that any of thy friends coming this way will be very welcome visitors at Morland, so long as I am here; so don't forget to let them know it is a place worth seeing, and that I know something about their country."

It was indeed "a place worth seeing," while yet it was the home of this beautiful soul. The cottage was built by his great, great-grandfather, in 1722, and behind it was a sunny garden with ivy and poppies and lilies and gooseberries to be remembered. Not far away was the unique feature of the little village—the vicarage garden, which was an abandoned quarry, transformed by skillful planting into a place of indescribable charm. Like many English villages, Morland has an ancient parish church. Its architecture marks it as belonging to the tenth century. The Friends' meeting-house was opened for religious meetings only at long intervals, since, in '98, Charles Thompson was the only surviving member of the meeting. On First-day morning the "two or three" so happy as to be under his hospitable roof, gathered with him into a consecrated silence, broken, at last, by his voice in prayer, and by another voice speaking a message of cheer.

I count it one of the precious things of my life that I have known this good man.

ELIZABETH POWELL BOND.

Swarthmore College, 3d mo. 8th, 1903.

OBSERVATIONS OF FIRST-DAY SCHOOLS.¹

WHILE it has not been my privilege to see many First-day schools, it has been a great privilege to know more than one and to realize that one method cannot always be right for different schools. No two people are alike, and the same is true of First-day schools.

In the city, where access to all necessary books of reference is easy, it is interesting and profitable for the older classes to make a systematic study of the Bible. This plan has been very successful, and if adopted by others the class must be a band of conscientious and earnest workers, with an energetic leader. Much time and thought are required, but the knowledge and good gained are a fine reward. Is it not so in all the walks of life, that the things one really works for are enjoyed the most? This deep and beautiful study of the most wonderful book written enables the student to more easily see and realize the great truths contained therein, and to be able to interpret their meanings. There has been a plea made for a more thorough knowledge of the Old Testament, for "whatever tends to uplift and ennoble, as well as to combat evil, is of practical value in First-day school work."

In many of the younger classes the object lessons are believed to be the best. Yet too much of this is thought not to be a good plan, as the child will get into the way of seeing the approaching moral from the start, and if the story be a long one he will grow tired and lose interest. It is the unusual thing that makes the deepest impression. "Our First-day schools must be made worth attending. The exercises must have variety and life, if we would attract the young people, both members and those outside."

In other schools, where the lesson leaves are used, the lesson for each week should be carefully prepared by both scholar and teacher. After all, are we not all scholars in this one great school? We want to know all that is possible of the greatest teacher of men, Jesus Christ. We do know a great deal of him, and that if his example is followed one can do no more. Do we do it? Since the first great conference was held we have had many such opportunities for hearing plans and methods of work in every line of a Christian life; have been able to listen to some of the noblest and deepest thinking men and women of our Society, and have been touched in the very depths of our hearts. When we get home into the every-day, work-a-day world, do we carry out the resolutions made? It is not the large things which count, my dear people, but the every-day little things.

In connection with the lesson leaf some schools take up the study of the life of a prominent Friend who has helped to make our Society what it is. Half the class time might also be spent in reading the history of the Society. Where there is not a Young Friends' Association I feel that this study is almost a necessity, for surely the future of this body depends upon the young people of to-day, and the First-day school has a great responsibility. The Young Friends' Association, an outgrowth of the First-day school, has done much to bring the history and beliefs of Friends before the outside world. In country neighborhoods, if a Young Friends' Association were held on First-day afternoon, at the meeting house, many might attend who never go to meeting or First-day school. Howard M. Jenkins said: "If Friends have a right to be, they have a duty to increase."

A First-day school teacher cannot accomplish much unless he has the co-operation of the parents, and this means an ideal home life, where the parent does not tell the child he must study the lesson for next First-day, or that he has to go to First-day school, but aims to make him realize that it is right to go, and that pleasure and comfort come from so doing. Just so must the teacher in the class make the scholar feel that he wants to come. It takes a teacher with a strong personality to hold the interest in this way.

As we try to follow the example of him who went about doing good, so a child will follow the example of its elder. This means careful speaking at home and abroad—yes, careful, prayerful thinking, for as the heart thinketh so the mouth speaketh.

I have noticed that where the younger members speak in the school there is a greater interest shown. Every one who comes to class on First-day morning must bring one good thought locked up in his heart; perhaps he does not know, without looking, that it is there; but it is, I am sure. Oh! my young Friend, open the door and let some one else, or many others, enjoy the message which thy heavenly Father has given thee.

At the Swarthmore Conference, in one of the many excellent papers on the subject in which we are especially interested this afternoon, it was said that the proper work of the First-day school may be embraced under three heads: First, to give a knowledge

¹ Read at Baltimore Quarterly Meeting's First-day School Union, Little Falls, Md., Eleventh month 9, 1902

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, THIRD MONTH 14, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

A TRUE PATRIOT.

OF the many noble Americans who have devoted their lives to their country's service, few have left a more honorable record than Dr. J. L. M. Curry. Born in Lincoln County, Georgia, in 1825, he graduated from the University of Georgia at eighteen, from the Harvard Law School at twenty, and at the age of twenty-one became a member of the Alabama Legislature. After ten years of activity in the affairs of his State he was elected to Congress, where he served until the outbreak of the Civil War. Believing fully in the doctrine of State sovereignty, as soon as Alabama seceded he threw in his lot with the Southern Confederacy, and was almost immediately elected a member of the Confederate Congress.

When the war was over he accepted the defeat of the South cheerfully, and at once entered upon an educational career, believing that there was no better work to be done for the training of coming generations than the upbuilding of the schools and colleges of the South. In 1865 he became president of Howard College, Alabama, and three years later went to Richmond College, Virginia, where he remained until 1881. He was then appointed agent for the Peabody Fund, and entered upon an educational missionary work for the entire South, which continued, with a break of three years while he was Minister to Spain, until his recent death in his seventy-eighth year, and placed him in the front rank of the nation's educators.

At the time of the establishment of the Peabody Fund not one State in the whole South had a public school system, and legislatures and colleges were opposed to free schools. Dr. Curry addressed legislatures, urging school taxes and appropriations, and lived to see a system of public schools established in every Southern State. He attacked the conservative stand taken by universities and colleges, and gradually these became converted to his views, one after another added departments for the training of teachers, and fourteen of the universities offered him the position of president. As administrator of the Peabody Fund he fostered the establishment and growth of normal schools, and gave opportune aid in the establishment of graded schools in cities and towns, to be supported by local taxation.

When the Slater Fund for the promotion of negro education was created, Dr. Curry was made one of its trustees and chairman of its education committee, a position which he filled from 1890 until the present year. He at once recognized the great value of the Hampton and Tuskegee schools, and used the fund to give substantial aid to them and to other good schools for negroes less widely known than these. When the new movement was started for the improvement of the common schools for both races in the country districts of the South, he was its most eloquent expounder, and was made general director of the work; and last of all he was a member of the General Education Board, which was recently incorporated at Washington under a special act of Congress, for the purpose of fostering educational progress in the South.

Being a man of great tact and unusual eloquence, as well as of unswerving integrity of purpose, Dr. Curry did much to bring about a better understanding between the North and the South, and finally to weld them together educationally. No one appreciated the difficulties of the race problem better than he, or succeeded better in holding the confidence and esteem of both races. His power as a harmonizer was largely due to his broad love of humanity and his unwavering faith in his country and his God. Whittier was thinking of patriots such as he when he wrote these lines:

"The riches of a commonwealth
Are free, strong minds and hearts of health;
And more to her than gold or grain,
The cunning hand and cultured brain."

THE record of the proceedings in the Brownell and Sinclair court-martial cases has been made public, and Judge Advocate General Davis, in his review of these and other similar trials, expresses sentiments in accord with an enlightened public conscience. Concerning Captain Brownell who tortured a priest to death, he says:

"A resort to torture in order to obtain either confessions or information from a prisoner of war is a violation of the laws of war, and, as such, is triable by military commission. The taking of human life under the circumstances above disclosed constitutes a form of felonious homicide, which is triable by military commission, by a general court-martial and in certain cases by a civil court having criminal jurisdiction."

In reviewing the case of Captain James A. Ryan for inflicting the water cure on two natives, in which the Court acquitted and the President approved the findings, General Davis says:

"The United States cannot afford to sanction the addition of torture to the several forms of force which may be legitimately employed in war, and it is, therefore, recommended that the proceedings, findings and acquittal be disapproved."

In the case of Richter, whose mother recently appealed to President Roosevelt in person, the records show that his conduct was unsatisfactory, and that he died in consequence of the punishment administered by Lieutenant Sinclair. Of this case General Davis says:

"As Lieutenant Sinclair has once been tried, he is not liable to a second trial for the same offense."

Both General Davis and Attorney General Knox say that there is no legal way by which Captain Brownell can now be tried either by a military or a civil court. This is of minor importance for he has already been tried and found guilty by the public opinion of his fellow citizens, and is undergoing a punishment from which there is no possibility of escape or reprieve. There are everywhere indications that the American people are awakening to the atrocities of war in general, and of the war in the Philippines in particular.

A RICHMOND, Indiana, paper states that the Meeting on Ministry and Oversight of South Eighth Street Monthly Meeting of Friends (Orthodox), in response to a call made by the Twentieth Century National Gospel Campaign Committee for the general observance of Lent, expresses itself as "united in believing it right that we should join in the general movement, not to set apart this time for specially devout living, and then during the remainder of the year relax spiritual diligence; but to make it a time of deepening in the grace of God, increasing in his knowledge, and becoming qualified to live better in all our lives to come." Following these are directions for a number of special acts of devotion during the six weeks of Lent.

From a Chicago paper we learn that Elbert Russell, a graduate student of divinity at the University of Chicago, has recently been appointed college pastor and professor of biblical literature at Earlham College, in the same city, and that hereafter religious instruction is to be a part of the college curriculum.

From these two items it appears that Richmond Friends are going back to some of the practices against which George Fox made his most earnest protests, and are no longer bearing a testimony in favor of a free gospel ministry and of regarding all days as alike holy.

We have just received from the author, William Edward Turner, formerly editor of the British Friend, London, a limited supply of his pamphlet, "Quakerism: Its Beliefs and Messages." Those of our readers whose orders we have been unable to fill may now obtain copies.

THE twenty-seventh annual report of the American Purity Alliance, of which O. Edward Janney has been president since the death of Aaron M. Powell, records several serious problems that have been solved during the year, which have been mentioned from time to time in the INTELLIGENCER. Speaking of the work for the future it says:

"The work that lies before us seems to be the continued publication of the Philanthropist and its improvement; earnest endeavors to instruct the young in every wise way; to endeavor to arouse our public men to an active interest in social purity; to try to direct aright the currents of thought in the minds of men, so as to evolve deeds of righteousness, public and private. Withal, let us, in a spirit of mutual helpfulness and loving service, endeavor to do our duty as it is made clear to us, without fear and without reproach, hoping, under God, for victory in the end."

BIRTHS.

ATKINSON.—At Trenton, N. J., Second month 3, 1903, to Alvan Williams and Sara Cleaver Atkinson, a son, who is named Robert Mahlon Atkinson.

GRIEST.—At Guernsey Pa., Third month 1, 1903, to C. Arthur and Lola E. Griest, a son, who is named Harold Wierman Griest.

PAXSON.—At Little Britain, Pa., Tenth month 11, 1902, to James M. and Hanna Smedley Faxson, a son, who is named Alfred Moore Faxson.

DEATHS.

BROWN.—At her home in Winchester, Virginia, on the 1st of Third month, 1903, Elizabeth T. Brown, wife of the late Richard R. Brown, in the 78th year of her age; a member of Centre Preparative and Hopewell Monthly Meetings.

She was left a widow nearly twenty years ago, with six children, all of whom survive her. They, with a number of grandchildren, now deeply feel the loss of a loving parent, who has been a patient invalid for a number of years.

D. W. B.

BURGESS.—At Dyerstown, Bucks county, Pa., on Saturday, Second month 27, 1903, of catarrh of the stomach, Joseph Burgess, in the 68th year of his age.

He was a member of Buckingham Monthly Meeting, and one of the few attenders of Plumstead Meeting. His parents, the late Aaron and Esther Burgess, were long elders in said meeting.

CONROW.—On Second month 13, 1903, Sarah B., widow of the late Joseph B. Conrow, in the 78th year of her age; a member of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting of Friends.

The funeral was held Second month 16, at the residence of her son-in-law, John C. Hancock, 3722 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Interment at Fairhill cemetery. Beautiful and appropriate words of comfort were spoken by Isaac Hillborn and Mary Travilla, after which Anna Hillborn offered an earnest prayer.

CORLIES.—Entered into rest, at Poughkeepsie, Third month 3, 1903, of pneumonia, Ella H., wife of Walter Corlies, aged 34 years.

HENDRICKSON.—In Washington, D. C., on Second month 28, 1903, Benjamin E. Hendrickson, formerly of Burlington county, N. J., aged 69 years.

HUMPTON.—On Third month 7, 1903, Howard Humpton, son of Elizabeth Humpton, of Atlantic City, N. J. Interment at Pleasantville, N. J.

LEWIS.—Second month 19, 1903, at Media, Pa., Hannah R. Lewis, in the 73d year of her age.

LIPPINCOTT.—In New York, on Second month 21, 1903, Elizabeth I., widow of Jehu Lippincott, in her 88th year; a member of New York Monthly Meeting.

This dear Friend was born in Burlington county, N. J., and came to New York with her husband and children fifty years ago, where she has since lived. Throughout her life she was devoted to the principles of Friends, and was most conscientious in her attendance at meeting, seldom failing to be present until extreme weakness forced her to remain at home. A devoted mother and grandmother, kindly, cheerful, considerate of others, upright in all her dealings, she well deserved the name of Friend. Often she would say, when trials came to her and those she loved, "Whatever is, is best." In the declining months of her life she loved to have repeated to her the little poem with this title (which is printed in our poetry column), saying, "That is so good and true."

PASSMORE.—On Second month 24, 1903, Eliza Passmore, widow of the late Thomas Passmore, of Newlin township, Chester county, Pa., in her 94th year.

The funeral was held on the 27th ultimo, at the residence of her son-in-law, Edward T. Harlan, 2444 N. Seventeenth street, Philadelphia. Interment at Friends' burying-ground, Marlboro, Chester county, Pa.

PASSMORE.—On Third month 8, 1903, at his home in West Philadelphia, John A. M. Passmore, in the 67th year of his age. Interment at Pottsville, Pa.

John Andrew Moore Passmore was born in West Nottingham, Chester county, Pa. He was graduated from the Millersville State Normal School in 1860, and taught for many years, both before and after his graduation. In the face of discouragement and opposition he introduced co-education into the public schools of Pottsville, Pa., where it has been in active operation ever since. From the time of its organization until his death he was the representative of the American Book Company, in Philadelphia, and was well known to the educators of the State. Largely through his influence three separate educational organizations united to form the Pennsylvania Educational Association, of which he served as president in 1900.

He was a Friend by birth and conviction, but he removed with his family, in early life, into a community where there was no meeting of this Society, and desiring a religious home for his children, he and his family united with the Protestant Episcopal Church. After returning to Philadelphia he frequently attended Friends' meeting, and was one of the most active members of the committee which arranged for the bi-centennial celebration, in 1901, of William Penn's gift of land to the East Nottingham Friends. He was president for many years of the Board of Managers of the Friends' Home for Children, in West Philadelphia, and gave much time and thought, not only to securing good homes for the children, but also to their oversight after homes were secured. He was a genial, warm-hearted man, and will be greatly missed by many teachers and other friends who made his office their headquarters when they came to Philadelphia. E. L.

PAUL.—In Warrington township, Bucks county, on Third month 2, 1903, Joseph Paul, in his 69th year.

THOMPSON.—At Morland, Westmoreland, England, on 21st of Second month, 1903, Charles Thompson, aged 83 years and 3 months.

This Friend was a correspondent of Howard M. Jenkins, and for many years subscribed for five copies of the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER for English readers.

IMPROVEMENTS AT THE GEORGE SCHOOL.

At a meeting of the George School Committee, held Second month 27, 1903, the subject of an increase of and improvement in the school buildings was considered. At the preceding meeting a committee had been asked to consider building plans for such changes.

As respects other than day pupils, the present accommodations are sufficient for 92 boys and 65 girls, and this is accomplished by rooming 18 girls and 6 boys on the first floor, which those in charge of the school thin very undesirable.

With the proposed additional buildings there will be room for 102 boys and 98 girls, without either occupying any first floor rooms. The proposed plan would, therefore, give additional class rooms, much enlarged assembly and dining rooms, and a very much better kitchen.

It is estimated that the proposed additions to and changes in buildings, and in heating and lighting apparatus, etc., would be in the neighborhood of $60,000. A friend has offered to give toward such improvements $20,000, and in addition, the amount of the excess of their cost over $60,000, if there should be any such excess.

It was decided to try to obtain additional contributions, and proposed, if such additional contributions to the amount of $20,000 or more, can be obtained, to ask the Yearly Meeting to authorize the use of not more than $20,000 of the George School funds. Several times the amount proposed to be taken from the funds, is still to come to the school from the estates of John M. George, Jacob Fretz, and Harriet W. Paist.

It is stated that during the ten years of the school's life the income of the endowment fund has contributed about $220,000 toward reducing the charges to pupils, children of Friends, and that of this amount $80,000 has been devoted to special reductions in cases where investigation has indicated it to be needed.

It is thought that the proposed changes would enable the school to do much better for its pupils, besides allowing its advantages to an increased number. There is a large field for its work; this, to a very considerable extent, among isolated members of our Society and those who, while not members, feel near to us. Money cannot be given to a better cause than that of education, and this seems to be an opportunity to at the same time greatly help our Society.

NOTTINGHAM QUARTERLY MEETING.

NOTTINGHAM QUARTERLY MEETING was held at Little Britain, Second month 27th, 1903. The attendance was smaller than usual, and the meeting was slow in gathering. The silence was broken by Edwin R. Buffington, who opened his sermon with the questions, What was our object in coming here to-day? What did those who braved the mud come here to seek? He said that few people appreciate the silent meeting, and probably half of our own members do not understand its possibilities. Religion is the communion of God with the soul of man, and the silent meeting is the best place to allow our souls to thus commune with God.

After referring to the religious freedom enjoyed to-day, he gave a touching picture of the martyrdom of the venerable Polycarp.

The Roman pro-consul, anxious to save the Christian's life, said to him that if he would from the funeral pyre point to the Christians and exclaim, "Away, ye heretics," his life would be spared. But the saintly martyr pointed instead to the pagans and said, "Away, ye heretics," and his life went out as a sacrifice that truth might live.

If we maintain a proper relation with the Source of life and power our spiritual life will develop and unfold with the beauty and perfection of the lily of the field, which "toils not, neither does it spin."

The First-day School, the Young Friends' Association and the meeting are valuable as means to a certain end. As aids to the spiritual growth of the individual and the development of character, they serve a high purpose. But we should remember that they are only a means of bringing our souls into a proper relation with God.

The great question of life is, Are we fulfilling our part? Man must co-operate with God. We either obey or disobey his law written in our hearts. We are here to commune and investigate. All opportunities are good if embraced. We believe that Friends represent the most advanced thought, the highest type of Christian experience. But we must be a growing people; we cannot stand still. We must learn to exert ourselves in order to receive blessings, and fulfill little duties in order to gain for our souls communion with God.

The "Inner Light" has been endeavoring to assert itself in all ages. Martin Luther and John Calvin were its apostles. The belief of the Society of Friends is an outward growth of John Calvin's thought.

The speaker noted the successive epochs in church history from the triumph of the ecclesiastics in the council of Nice, through the ages of priestly control, to the days of Luther and Calvin and Fox and Wesley.

After all this heroic effort by our church fathers, what is the position of the church to-day? Everywhere the fact is recognized and deplored that its hold on the masses has loosened, and it behooves us to pause and ponder on this question. The time has come for religious people to stop talking about the total depravity of man, but rather talk about his divinity.

It is for us to rest in the love of God. God is love, and man is no longer to be frightened into heaven, but entreated into it. During the next three months, during the next year, let us become better equipped instruments in God's eternal purpose.

In the business meeting we were told that love is the greatest thing in the world, and under this feeling our work was done, and we separated and went to our several homes.

H. G. C.

SALEM QUARTERLY MEETING.

SALEM QUARTERLY MEETING was held at Woodstown, N. J., on the 4th and 5th of Third month, the meeting of Ministers and Elders convening on Fourth-day, at 3 p.m. This was largely attended by its members from the four monthly meetings, no visiting Friends being present. The one and three-quarter hours we were in session were profitably employed in vocal service and routine business. In the evening a Philanthropic Conference was held in the meeting-house. Joseph S. Walton, of George School, addressed the meeting on the subject, "The Educational Aspect of the Temperance Problem."

Though the question of temperance has been discussed so much, it was presented to us in a new light, showing there was work along this line in the education of our youth in practical lives of usefulness, which was much appreciated by all present. Two recitations were given by Mabel Davis and Bessie Kirby.

Fifth-day the Quarterly Meeting convened at 10 a.m., the house being filled downstairs and many in the upper gallery. There were several visiting Friends with us. Samuel Ash, of Philadelphia, and Margaretta Walton, of George School, gave us loving testimonies in regard to the growth of spiritual life, and made an earnest appeal to all to live closer to our Divine Master, being willing to be led and guided by his unerring Spirit. Three of our own ministers also spoke acceptably. This closed the meeting for worship. In the business meeting following, the assistant clerk being absent, Louisa Powell was appointed for the day. All the queries, with their answers, were read and considered, and sixteen representatives were appointed to attend the approaching yearly meeting. After expressions of thankfulness for thus being so favored with the Father's blessing, the meeting closed.

Woodstown, N. J.

M. E. B.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

FAULT-FINDING.

As we hold up each others' hands when we notice and commend the good we recognize in the labors of another, I feel a lie in commending Thomas Trueblood's article in a recent number of the INTELLIGENCER. Fault-finding is beyond question a source of incalculable wrong and injury; it seldom fails to irritate, arouses antagonism, placing us at once on the defensive; and, unless we are under the restraining influence of the Father's spirit, our first impulse is to find some counter-charge that will cut to the quick the fault-finder, "paying him well in his own coin." Fault-finding is in a large measure unjust, and is often the result of envy, or jealousy of those possessing something that we covet, causing a desire to take them down a step. Especially is it a great mistake to be daily nagging children, criticising and condemning every little thing not in accordance with our ideas of propriety. Their innocent, loving natures, which hunger so for approval, become either discouraged or rebellious under continuous fault-finding, until they are hardened and finally cease even trying to please.

I was intimately acquainted with, and dearly loved the stepmother mentioned in Trueblood's article, and certainly her countenance was the living impersonation of love and sweetness, and her tender, gentle voice in full unison with her face and manner. I never heard any one unfavorably criticised in her presence that she did not express some kind and plausible excuse for the criticised one, invariably following it with something good and commendable of them, which was a gentle rebuke to the fault-finder, rarely failing to be felt and remembered. Oh, if the world were full of such, what a heaven on earth we might have!

None of us like to be found fault with, even when we know we deserve it, therefore we have only to do unto others as we would be done by to end this serious drawback forever. Love is the only universal solvent that breaks the heart with contrition, opens our blind eyes to our own wrong-doing, and brings us into close communion with the Divine Father and each other.

ANNA M. STARR.

He that cannot forgive others, breaks the bridge over which he needs to pass himself; for every man has need of forgiveness.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

NEWTOWN, PA.—The Friends' Association held its regular monthly meeting on Fourth-day evening, the 4th instant, at the home of Evan T. Worthington. Julia C. Eyre read a paper on "The African Slave Trade in Colonial America," in which the fact was brought out that at some time in their history slaves were held in each of the thirteen colonies. In New England, however, the climate being so severe, the number of slaves was few, and they were allowed all the rights of apprentices.

Edward S. Hutchinson, in answering the question, "Can a man be a true patriot and still be a peace man?" reviewed the testimony of prominent Friends on this subject, showing that as a Society they had always been divided as to whether war is not justifiable under some conditions. The Friends' discipline, however, admits of no compromise.

Thomas W. Stapler furnished a reading from a book by Charles Wagner, on "The Simple Life," a protest against the strenuousness of thought, speech and action of the day and the complexities of modern education. Lettie W. Eyre represented the Current Topics Committee, and Lydretta Rice furnished a reading.

WRIGHTSTOWN, PA.—An interesting meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held on First-day afternoon in the meeting-house. After the customary opening exercises Bessie Hagaman recited "The Builders" by Longfellow. Beulah Betts followed with a paper comparing the lives of Moody and Fox. She said that both were deeply interested in education, in peace, and in working among the poorer class of people. Fox did not have music in his meetings and Moody had vocal music with only enough instruments to carry the tune. Watson Atkinson next read a short selection from the Life of Benjamin Hallowell, in which he said that everything can be moved if we touch the right spring. Lydia Thompson answered the question "How can we best give children an idea of God?" She thought that parents should be godly themselves for examples are stronger than precept.

A synopsis of the First-day School lessons was given by Walter S. Wright. The four lessons dwelling upon "Violence," "The Pharisees," "The Idea of God," and "Prayer" were mentioned. L. T. W., Cor. Sec.

KENNETT SQUARE, PA.—A very interesting meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held at the home of Anna C. Enriken Second month 4. Kester Cloud recited, "What They Caught." A review of "Sally Wister's Journal" was read by Anna C. Enriken. To show the liberal manner in which a Catholic speaks of William Penn, Anna Hicks read a chapter from "Philadelphia, the Place and the People," by Agnes Repplier. "Religious Influence in America" was discussed in a paper by Jane P. Rushmore. Walter Hannum gave Current Events.

Roll-call was responded to by sentiments from Holmes. AMELIA FARRON, Secretary.

HORSHAM, PA.—The Young Friends' Association met Second month 22, 1903, at 2.30 p. m.

Mary S. Warner read a very interesting account of the life and works of Isaac Pennington from the "Friends' History," after which Elizabeth Walton read a poem entitled "The Two Rabbits," and Laura Twining recited "The Door to the House."

Under the head of "Current Topics" Elizabeth Hallowell said that the views of the two Societies of Friends are gradually becoming common and in the future there is a possibility that the two divisions will become one with the same interests and belief. James Q. Atkinson said he thought such a thing was not only improbable but also impossible, for the same feeling that separated the Friends in the beginning will always be a barrier between them.

A very interesting and beautiful paper was then read by Florence Conrad Griscom, its subject being "What is the Greatest Need of Friends?" She thinks if we seek out our own shortcomings we will come to a solution of the difficulty.

In order to bring about this result God and his works should be freely discussed in every home, and His influence made to be felt. A parent should not merely tell a child what to do and what not to do, but explain why such an act is right or wrong so that the child can understand. A good example should be shown and the reasons for that example fully explained. If not explained and kept constantly before the mind's vision, it is like a child copying a page of script; the first page is made as nearly like the original as possible for him to do so, but as he goes on and it finally becomes mechanical he ceases to look at the copy, the lines and curves gradually fade from his mind and he becomes occupied with other thoughts, with the result that his letters become more and more imperfect. So it is with the young mind that is susceptible to all new impressions; if the true model or ideal is allowed to lose its place it soon becomes a vague memory imperfectly outlined, like the neglected script.

The story of the sailors filling their ears with wax so they could not hear the songs of the sirens that lured them to dangerous waters is somewhat like a great many examples we see to-day, of people who have to avoid temptations so they will not be put to the test and found wanting, instead of filling their hearts so full of good acts and deeds that there is no place for the evil ones. Let us keep in mind the motto, "A right principle can never fail," and aim to be true to ourselves and eventually true to our religion; we will be able to do this if we can answer truthfully the question, "Have I been true to my Heavenly vision?"

FLORENCE MOORE, Secretary.

FISHERTOWN, PA.—On the afternoon of Second month 22 the Young Friends' Association met at the home of Allen C. Blackburn.

Mary Way read a beautiful selection concerning the Beatitudes. Elias Blackburn read the "Progress of Humanity," "Never Out of Sight," was recited by Kathleen Hammaker, and "It Isn't Always Easy," by Harold Blackburn. "Every Lesson," was read by Jennie Zeigler, and Rue Hammer recited "Somebody's Darling." The rest of the exercises were devoted to Whittier. Elizabeth Blackburn read "Eternal Goodness," "The Worship of Nature," was read by Eli Griest. Margareta Blackburn read an interesting paper on the life and writings of Whittier.

Many responded to roll call with beautiful sentiments from Whittier's writings. E. B., Cor. Sec.

PENN HILL, PA.—The regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held Second month 22.

Charles S. Coates read a paper on "George Washington." It portrayed his noble character as shown by the stories of his youth, and his public and private life. He had a wonderful influence over his fellow-men and remarkable self-control. Adelaide Paxson gave us a recitation. One thought in it was to be cheerful and happy, and thereby make others likewise. A very interesting paper on "Current Topics" was read by Helen Wood. A voluntary reading was given by Howard Coates. One of the sentiments in roll-call brought forth comment on the "Power of Habit," which was so well explained by Harold B. Milward in his recent illustrated lecture at this place. C. S. C.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.—The Third month meeting of the Plainfield Young Friends' Association was held in the cozy and comfortable assembly room of the meeting-house on the evening of the 4th.

Yardley T. Brown read a paper entitled "Public Opinion and Its Power," one of the leading thoughts of which was that the Society of Friends has been one of the foremost leaders in moulding public opinion in the direction of "noblest manhood, broadest philanthropy, purest religion." A general discussion of the subject followed.

A well-selected reading was given by Horace Vail. Mary Shoemaker read Alice Cary's excellent poem, "My Creed."

Many interesting current events were presented by Edward Hutchinson in a manner that showed that he had given commendable attention to his appointment.

President Gavitt read a letter from Anna Rice Powell, who is wintering at Pasadena, Cal., which was much enjoyed by her many interested friends present.

Apropos of the paper previously read, Margaret Vail recited a well-known poem, entitled "Is It Any Body's Business?" and made it peculiarly interesting by stating that it was written and published in Plainfield, some forty years ago, by a gentleman who came here from some other neighborhood, to visit a young lady of this place. The activity of his muse was occasioned by what appeared to be unnecessary expression of public interest and opinion regarding himself and his affairs.

The meeting concluded with roll call, which brought forth many excellent quotations from Scriptural truth and poetic verse.

YARDLEY T. BROWN, Cor. Sec.

CAMDEN, N. J.—The Young Friends' Association met Third month 3, 1903. "Extracts from the Life of Edward Hicks" was the first paper of the evening, prepared by Anna L. Davis; this paper was well written and much appreciated. The second paper was "Thoughts on Striking Workmen," by Jeanette Betts.

FANNIE B. SCHEIBNER, Secretary.

MOORE'S MILLS, N. Y.—The Friends' Association has held meetings regularly the last First-day of each month, only one having been omitted on account of severe storm, and although not reported they have been of an interesting and inspiring character. Valuable articles have been read, sometimes with comments, and brief recitations given occasionally by the younger members. From John J. Cornell's book of sermons used, we have had "The One Faith," "The Golden Rule," and "Salvation from Selfishness." The Sabbath Reading and Peacemaker have furnished some practical articles and a notable selection was presented by C. Dean from The Outlook, an article of Lyman Abbott's entitled "What is a Christian?" in which the author says that "the notion that some people have that religion is something apart from life, a fringe on the garment, like art or music, for which some are capacitated and others not, is utterly antagonistic to the whole spirit of the Bible. Religion is the art of living and nothing else. People naturally desire to know what is expected of them and the ten commandments are God's answer to the question." The following officers have been reappointed for another year—James W. Skidmore, president; Susan A. Moore, vice-president; Mattie E. Alley, secretary, with Henry Alley and M. E. Barmore to serve as the Executive Committee.

A. H. Moore, Henry Alley and M. E. Barmore were appointed to prepare a memorial announcement of the death of Mary Barmore which occurred Twelfth month 15th, 1902 after an illness of several months. The committee after an unavoidable delay submitted the following and its publication was requested.

"We feel that in the removal, by death, of our esteemed friend and co-worker, Mary Barmore, the Association has met with a great loss, but that the inspiration of her quiet, thoughtful demeanor will long live with us, and we trust be an incentive to still higher aims in our individual work and labor with others."

"Weep not that her toils are over,
Weep not that her race is run,
God grant we may rest as calmly,
When our work, like hers, is done."

CINCINNATI, OHIO.—The Friends' Association met with Dora Gallagher, Second month 22. First on the program was a reading by Ruth Woolman; as appropriate to the day she selected an account of the early life of George Washington.

An excellent paper on the subject of "Harmful Diversions" prepared by Mary Johnson, was read by Grace Hall. The much discussed amusements of card playing, theatres, dancing, etc., were talked of by the writer, who thought the danger in all such "diversions" was the temptation to carry them to excess. The key note of the whole matter was found in the closing sentence of the paper: "Each one must know his own strength before he mingles with those whose diversions border on the harmful."

There was to have been a paper on the question, "Have the outward characteristics of speech and dress been a help or hindrance to the progress of the Society?" but the one who was appointed to write it was absent. The clerk called for remarks from those present, and the response was quite general. Peirce Cadwalader gave us some very good thoughts. He said that plainness of dress means "that which each individual is satisfied with." Plainness of speech—"plainly to say what each one thinks."

"Speech and dress do not lead one closer to the Inner Light, and that is the thing of vital importance,—to keep the real truth,—the real Inner Light with us."

We were most fortunate in having as our guest Charles Underhill of New York, who spoke to us very helpfully on the subject under discussion. He recited for us a charming poem by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, entitled "My Ships," and also Carleton's beautiful poem, "The First Ship's Story," which carried its lesson home to every heart.

A short stanza from the INTELLIGENCER, called "Loving Words," read by Edwin Griest, completed the program.

GRACE D. HALL, asst. clerk.
Cincinnati, Ohio, Third month 2, 1903.

EDUCATIONAL.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

The following letter has been sent to most of the Friends' Schools in Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, to some other Friends' Schools, and to certain preparatory schools in and near Philadelphia. Favorable replies have been received in several instances.

It is proposed to invite the several schools to which this invitation is being sent, to choose the representative orator of the school and to send the said representative to a contest to be held at Swarthmore College, under the auspices of the College Faculty and the Oratorical Association, on the evening of Fifth month 2, 1903.

Added interest will attach to the occasion because of the Johns Hopkins—Swarthmore Lacrosse game and the Inter-scholastic Relay Races in the afternoon.

Orations should be original, and require not more than eight (8) minutes in delivery.

First and second prizes will be awarded.

Those schools whose numbers may not be very considerable are particularly urged to select representatives with hope and confidence in the result, as in such a contest, victory depends not on numbers, but on individual ability and effort.

Any suggestions will be cordially welcomed and requests for further information promptly answered.

Hoping to receive a reply at your early convenience.

BENJAMIN F. BATTIN, from the Faculty,
WILLIAM E. HANNUM, from the Oratorical Ass'n. } Com.

The College oratorical contest was held on the evening of the 3d. The winner of first prize in this contest represents Swarthmore in the Intercollegiate contest which is held here on the 20th instant. The contestants were W. Willard Rooks, Elizabeth Sutton, Edward R. Meredith, Fannie Kilgore, Samuel T. Stewart, Maurice T. Hansell, Anna L. Curtis, J. Hibberd Taylor, Lydia Foulke. The prizes were awarded to Elizabeth Sutton, Maurice Hansell, and Fannie Kilgore, in the order named.

The joint meeting of Delphic and Omicron Chapter of Somerville was held on Sixth-day evening.

A message, dated Jaffa, at noon on the 5th, tells us that members of the Clarke cruise are all well. We all hope for more news at an early date.

Dr. Benjamin F. Battin recently gave a lecture on "The Philosophy of Quakerism," before the Young Friends' Association of Solebury.

The Fifteenth Annual Banquet of the Swarthmore Club was held at the Hotel Bellevue, in Philadelphia, on the evening of Second month 28. Frederick A. Seaman, '88, was Symposiarch, and speeches were given by Joseph Wharton [President of the Board of Managers], Prof. Hoadley, Dr. Battin, Henry J. Hancock, Howard Cooper Johnson, Gerritt E. M. Weaver, Morris L. Clothier and others. Though the number present was not so large as on some occasions, the enthusiasm ran high. A letter of greeting was forwarded from the "Old Guard" to President Joseph Swain and Isaac H. Clothier.

Dr. Appleton is giving his second course of lectures on English Literature. This course will cover the period from the Norman Conquest to Shakespeare.

The annual College Reception was held on the evening of the 7th. The committee in charge was composed of two members from each class.

P. M. W.

GEORGE SCHOOL NOTES.

The Whittier Literary Society held a meeting Second month 28th, when the following program was given: Song by the Glee Club; Recitation, "What William Henry Did," Sue Underwood; The Whittier Greenleaf, by its editor, Richard Pennock; Recitation, "The White Lily," Anna Stubbs; Dramatic sketch, "A Pair of Lunatics," Bessie Magill and Fred Dubois; Selections on the gramophone, by Prof. Fancoast.

On Sixth-day evening, Third month 6th, a mock parliament was held in the Assembly Room. The question for debate was: "Resolved: That Great Britain should appropriate five million pounds for carrying on the Boer War." The Ciceronian Debating Club, composed entirely of boys, made up the majority while all the other debating clubs of the school, composed of both boys and girls, made up the minority. The question was well debated by the various members, there being an equal number of speakers on each side. After the Prime Minister, George Eves, made his rebuttal, the judges gave their decision unanimously in favor of the minority.

Seventh-day evening, Third month 7th, the Young Friends' Association held a meeting which was devoted entirely to the subject, "The Use of Tobacco and its Effects." The program was as follows: Singing, "Lead, Kindly Light;" Paper, Richard Pennock, "The Use of Tobacco from the Young Man's Standpoint;" Recitation, Helen Fogg, "Not Fit to be Kissed;" Paper, Alice Smedley, "The Use of Tobacco from the Young Woman's Standpoint;" Quotations by several members. Paper, Samuel Ashelmann, "The Use of Tobacco in the Home;" Recitation, Norris Passmore, "One Standard for Both Sexes;" Talk, Roscoe Magill, "The Effect of Tobacco on the Mind and Body;" Paper, Florence Stackhouse, "The Effect of Tobacco on the Moral and Spiritual Life." Discussion by Dr. Walton, Prof. Hiatt, Prof. Bailey and George Barlow. Singing, "Yield Not to Temptation."

The meeting was an unusually interesting one, not only because the students took an active part in it, but also because there were many new and interesting ideas brought out. The feeling of the meeting was almost entirely against the use of tobacco, both on account of the injury to the mind and body, and of its tendency to make the user selfish and discourteous. The girls were told that they are largely responsible for the tobacco habit, and were strongly urged not to disregard their responsibilities. The hope was expressed that, in the not very distant future, it would not be necessary to have a rule prohibiting the use of tobacco in the school.

On the morning of the 8th Joseph Watson, of Buckingham, a member of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting's Committee on First-day Schools, visited one of the classes of our First-day school.

R. A. L.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

SUSANNAH TAYLOR, formerly from Fallowfield (Ericldoun), who went to California over thirty years ago, is still hale and active although she has completed her 82d year. She lives in Alameda and crosses the bay frequently to San Francisco; she does not wait for the car if the walk before her is not long. She looks after her own housekeeping and keeps well-posted in the news of the day, especially of the Society of Friends, which she dearly loves, and whose precepts and teachings she has diligently followed. Her sister, Lydia T. Walton, of New York City, is aged 96 years.

A member of Illinois Yearly Meeting writes: "Our yearly meeting is revising its queries, reducing the number, and making other changes, I hope for the better."

COMMUNICATION.

COAL OPERATORS WHO AVOID STRIKES.

Editors FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

The Southern Industrial Journal, Vol. 1., No. 5, for February of this year, contains an account of the St. Bernard Mining Company, of Earlington, Kentucky, which is interesting from the fact that while this company controls eight different mines in several districts, there is no clash between Capital and Labor.

The cardinal principle is to treat every employee as a man, and to make him, so to speak, a partner in the net earnings of the company. Its employees number on an average 1,500 annually, none of whom draw less than $1.25 per day, the greater portion receiving $2.50 per day. For over a quarter of a century, peace and harmony have been maintained between employer and employed, and it enjoys the happy and unprecedented distinction of never having had a "strike."

The president of this company, and its ruling spirit, is John B. Atkinson, a sturdy Quaker, formerly of New Jersey. He is mentioned as the prince of business men, a man of the broadest gauge, whose commanding presence and noble deeds of kindness here bound indissolubly to him those whose interests he has made his own—an example worthy of imitation everywhere.

John B. Atkinson is well known in forestry circles; he has several thousand acres on which he is experimenting with black walnuts. * * *

A SURPRISE PARTY.

Editors FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

Our dear aged friend, Ruth Dudley, fell and broke her wrist this winter, and having been such a faithful attender of meeting, we missed her during her long confinement at home. As her 80th birthday was approaching, her friends arranged to have a surprise celebration of it, so a dozen of us went with well-filled baskets, and took dinner with her on that occasion, winding up with cake and ice cream.

We had a delightful social afternoon; several selected articles were read aloud, chosen by our beloved friend, Edward Shaw, himself in his 88th year. The bright eyes and smiling face of Ruth abundantly testified to her lively appreciation of the occasion, and her happiness was fully reflected upon the countenance of each one of the surprisers; for however unselfishly we try to put sunshine into the lives of others it always comes back in brightness to ourselves.

ANNA M. STARR.

LITERARY NOTES.

FRANCIS G. PEABODY has translated for English and American readers some essays such as Marcus Aurelius might write if he were living to-day, by Carl Hilty, Professor of Constitutional Law, University of Berne, under the title, "Happiness: Essays on the Meaning of Life." The characteristics of these suggestive papers are insight, sagacity, humor and devoutness; and that which attracts his readers is his capacity to maintain in the midst of important duties of public service an interior quietness of mind. The book is commended to those who are hesitating, restless and dissatisfied,—who desire happiness but know not how to obtain it.

(The Macmillan Co., New York, pp. 149. Price, $1.25).

A paper that will be read with pleasure by lovers of flowers is "Dwellers of the Dust," by N. Hudson Moore, in the Delimitator. These dwellers of the dust are the first flowers of spring, "that have lain the sullen winter through, waiting for the warming sun to draw them above the ground"—the golden daffodil, the fair narcissus and tulip tall. They are written of with the pen of a nature lover, rather than that of a naturalist, and the legends that cluster around each flower are charmingly recounted. Poets, great and small, have sung their praises, and some of the sweetest and quaintest verses extolling the flowers are given in the paper.

A volume on Pennsylvania (The Macmillan Company, New York), by William W. Rupert, is supplementary to Tarr and McMurray's Geographies. It is a handy little volume of 100 pages, with several maps and 55 illustrations. Besides the geographical matter it contains chapters on the industries of the State, its cities and towns, history, famous men, education, and government. Of the famous men the only one of whom a biographical sketch is given is Bayard Taylor.

Houghton, Mifflin & Company, of Boston, have issued as No. 153, of the Riverside Literature Series, Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," which some students of the master poet think was written, not for the public stage, but for the private celebration of some wedding or other festivity.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

AN ABANDONED NEST.

OUT in the woods as I walked one day,
I found a vireo's vacant nest,
The leaves had fallen from bough and spray,
And the cold wind came from the clouded west.
A little snow in the nest was blown,
The birds that had lived there all had flown,
O whither, whither, whither?

I thought of my nest in the town near by,
Where my laughing little ones play and grow,—
I looked at the clouds in the wintry sky
And the empty nest with its load of snow,
And sadly I thought that my birdlings too
Must leave my nest and their ways pursue,
O whither, whither, whither?

HOWELL S. ENGLAND.

WHATEVER IS, IS BEST.

I KNOW as my life grows older,
And my eyes have a clearer sight,
That under each rank wrong somewhere
There lies the root of right.
That each sorrow has its purpose
By the sorrowing oft unguessed,
But as sure as the sun brings morning
Whatever is, is best.

I know that each sinful action
As sure as the night brings shade,
Is somewhere, sometime, punished,
Though the hour is long delayed.
I know that the soul is aided
Sometimes by the heart's unrest,
And to grow means often to suffer—
But whatever is, is best.

I know there are no errors,
But the great eternal plan,
And all things work together
For the final good of man;
And I know when my soul speeds onward,
In its grand eternal quest,
I shall say as I look back earthward,
Whatever is, is best.

NOBODY'S CHILD.

ONLY a newsboy under the light
Of the lamp-post plying his name in vain.
Men are too busy to stop to-night,
Hurrying home through the sleet and rain.
Never since dark a paper sold;
Where shall he sleep, or how be fed?
He thinks as he shivers there in the cold,
While happy children are safe abed.

Is it strange if he turns about
With angry words, then comes to blows,
When his little neighbor, just sold out,
Tossing his pennies past him goes?
"Stop!"—some one looks at him, sweet and mild,
And the voice that speaks is a tender one:
"You should not strike such a little child,
And you should not use such words, my son."

Is it his anger or his fears,
That have hushed his voice and stopped his arm?
"Don't tremble," these are the words he hears.
"Do you think that I would do you harm?"
"It isn't that," and the hand drops down;
"I wouldn't care for kicks and blows;
But nobody ever called me son,
Because I'm nobody's child, I s'pose."

O men! as you careless pass along,
Remember the love that has cared for you;
And blush for the awful shame and wrong
Of a world where such a thing could be true!
Think what the child at your knee had been
If thus on life's lonely billows tossed;
And who shall bear the weight of the sin,
If one of these "little ones" be lost?
—Hearth and Home.

METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR SECOND MONTH, 1903.

Mean barometer,	30.101
Highest barometer during the month, 19th,	30.623
Lowest barometer during the month, 4th,	29.192
Mean temperature,	37.1
Highest temperature during the month, 28th,	67.
Lowest temperature during the month, 19th,	4.
Mean of maximum temperatures,	44.6
Mean of minimum temperatures,	29.6
Greatest daily range of temperature, 21st,	24.
Least daily range of temperature, 1st,	3.
Mean daily range of temperature,	15.1
Mean temperature of the Dew Point,	28.7
Mean relative humidity, per cent.,	71.6
Total precipitation, rain, inches,	4.58
Greatest precipitation in any 24 consecutive hours, 0.90 inches of rain, on the 27th and 28th.
Number of days on which .01 inch or more precipitation, 10.
Number of clear days 12, fair days 6, cloudy days 10.
Prevailing direction of the wind from northwest.
Sleet on the 14th, and 16th.
Lunar halo on the 7th.
Thunder storm on evening of the 4th.
Snow on the 5th, 16th, 17th, 18th, and 20th. Total snowfall in inches, during the month, 7: 3 inches of which fell on the 16th, and 4 inches on the 17th, making good sleighting. No snow on the ground on the 15th, and none at the end of the month.

SENSIBLE TEMPERATURE DATA.

Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 63.5° on 28th.
Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 9° on 18th.
Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 31.2°.
Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 50.5° on 11th.
Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 11° on 19th.
Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 33.4°.
Mean of wet bulb thermometer for this month, 32.3°.

NOTE.—The means of the daily maximum and minimum temperatures, 44.6° and 29.6° respectively, give a monthly mean of 37.1°, which is 4.4° above the normal, and 7.1° above the corresponding month in 1902.

The total amount of precipitation for the month, 4.58 inches, is about half an inch more than the normal, and 1. inch less than fell during Second month, 1902.

JOHN COMLY, Observer.

Centennial Avenue, Philadelphia, Second month 28.

"It is said that the English 'Friends,' who number approximately 16,000, support 90 foreign missionaries, with their native helpers (969), at a cost of $100,000 a year. This means that each 'Friend' annually contributes over six dollars to the work of Christ in heathen lands, an average which no other denomination in the world can show."—[Record of Christian Work.]

FORTY-FOUR out of 105 countries in Kansas are without a pauper, and in 37 countries there is not a criminal case on the docket.—[Topeka Mail and Breeze.]

OBSERVATIONS OF FIRST-DAY SCHOOLS.

(Concluded from page 165.)

of the Bible, its contents, its authoritativeness, its intent and its rightful influence; second, to present and explain our principles and testimonies, the source from which derived, the circumstances which gave them birth, their reasonableness and sufficiency; third, to inspire devotion and consecration of life, and to impress upon every heart the necessity for working out its soul's salvation with fear and trembling before God.

ALICE LEE HOLLINGSWORTH.

HEROES OF MEDICAL SCIENCE.

From the Springfield Republican.

DURING the annual gathering of the American Association of Scientists in Washington a memorial meeting was held in honor of Major Walter Reed, who performed one of the most beneficial works in human history. Strange to say, his name remains comparatively obscure, and not one person in 10,000 knew his title to fame when his sudden death was announced a short time ago. Dr. Lorenz's service to humanity can scarcely be compared with Major Reed's, yet the Austrian enjoys a world-wide popularity, while the dead army surgeon sank to his grave almost unknown to the mass of the people.

It was Major Reed who demonstrated that mosquitoes are the chief medium for the transmission of yellow fever germs, and who rid the city of Havana absolutely of the yellow fever plague. The full effect of his work, of course, cannot be estimated because of its far-reaching influence upon the human race in tropical and semi-tropical countries. General Leonard Wood, in his address on Major Reed, gave us some idea of the value of the achievement, in saying:

"I know of no other man on this side of the world who has done so much for humanity as Dr. Reed. His discovery results in the saving of more lives annually than were lost in the Cuban war, and saves the commercial interests of the world a greater financial loss each year than the cost of the Cuban war. He came to Cuba at a time when one-third of the officers of the army died each year with yellow fever, and we were discouraged with the prevalence of the disease. In a month when it ordinarily had been worst he checked the disease and drove it from Havana. That was the first time in two hundred years the city had been rid of it. The value of his discoveries cannot be appreciated by persons who are not familiar with conditions in tropical countries. Hereafter it will never be possible for the yellow fever to gain such headway that quarantine will exist from the mouth of the Potomac to the mouth of the Orinoco."

The history of the final triumph over yellow fever is almost a romance, and it is also not without its tragedy. All honor to Major Reed, the master mind. But no one can ever peruse the story without also placing the martyr's crown upon Dr. Lazaar, the member of the Yellow Fever Commission who allowed himself to be bitten by mosquitoes supposed to be carrying the fever germs, and who died in consequence of the experiment. These men deserve a monument in Washington, illustrating both their sacrifices and their final victory over one of the most terrible scourges that has afflicted the race.

LOCAL OPTION IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Frank Foxcroft, in the Atlantic Monthly.

THE Local Option law of Massachusetts sprang from a tardy recognition of the fact that each community is best fitted to decide for itself whether it does or does not want saloons; and that the conditions of law enforcement are simplified when the same body of voters which has decided upon one system or the other elects the officers who are charged with the duty of carrying out the decision. To those people who would rather extirpate the liquor traffic on paper at the cost of whatever farces of non-enforcement, than restrict it and minimize its evil consequences by practical measures, the local option system must always be objectionable because it results in certain instances in giving to saloons the sanction of law. But to others the system presents itself as a wise extension of the general principle of self-government. It is significant that, while in each of the three New England States which have adopted prohibition there is increasing restiveness under the exactions of that system and the scandals which arise from it, there are no manifestations of discontent in the local option States. In Massachusetts, the alternative of constitutional prohibition was submitted to the people in April, 1889, and was rejected by a majority of nearly 46,000. On the other hand, efforts to modify the law in favor of the liquor interests have failed in Legislature after Legislature.

The question suggests itself whether the license cities and towns are not in a worse condition than they would be under a general license law, inasmuch as, in addition to the normal local burden of drunkenness and the evils attendant upon it, they have to bear a part of the burden of places which close the saloons within their own limits, but whose thirsty citizens seek the saloons and later bring up in the courts of neighboring cities. Boston, for example, is surrounded by a nearly complete cordon of no-license territory; and the cynical witticism which described "the Cambridge idea" as "no license for Cambridge and rapid transit to Boston" has enough truth in it to give it a sting. In other license cities and towns similar conditions exist, though in a less degree. But it may be said of these places that the general regulations and prohibitions of the Massachusetts law applicable to license communities make up a body of restrictive legislation, State imposed, far in excess of anything that the towns or cities affected would voluntarily frame for themselves, and probably all that can be enforced in them. It may be said, further, that the remedy is in their own hands, and that, whenever they weary of serving the uses of moral sewerage for adjoining communities, they can close their saloons by their own votes. The remedy for them, if remedy there is, lies in the infusion of a sterner purpose into their own citizens rather than in the application of further pressure from without. The principle that a stream rises no higher than its source applies in politics and government as well as elsewhere. Under American institutions the source of government is the people; and a law which very far outruns the wishes of the people is likely to become at the best a dead letter and at the worst a public scandal.

Discoveries in Nippur.

PROFESSOR HILPRECHT, of the University of Pennsylvania, in a volume entitled "Explorations in Bible Lands," gives the results of the recent expedition of that University, of which he was the scientific director.

He says that the most remarkable of all the Nippur discoveries was the temple library and priest school. The mound covering the library rises on an average 25 feet above the plain and covers about 13 acres. So far about a twelfth part has been excavated, and more than 20,000 cuneiform tablets and fragments antedating the birth of Abraham have been taken out. As has been reported before, these tablets contain mathematical, astronomical, medical, historical, linguistic and religious writings of various sorts. It was a repository for all kinds of learning, though little enough has been found of what we should call literature; while on the other hand a great deal of the remains so far unearthed are those of the pupils' exercises in the schools attached to the college and temple of Nippur,—exercises in calculation of figures, grammatical constructions, drawing and sculpture.

Also there was unearthed the beginnings of an archeological museum, in the shape of an earthen jar, containing 10 very choice specimens of then ancient date,—all which, with their original jar, are now part of the archeological museum of the University of Pennsylvania. This expedition, one of the most important in its uncovering of the past, is well set forth in the book, which is published by the University.

Revolutionary Dungeons in New York.

WORKMEN tearing down the old Hall of Records in City Hall Park uncovered six gloomy vaults, which had not seen a ray of light in nearly a century. With pick-axe and crowbar the laborers tore out a huge slab of marble in what was the first floor of the old building, giving access to the dungeons used in Revolutionary times for confining American patriots, until New York ceased to be a British town.

The doorways connecting the half dozen gloomy cells have disappeared, but the huge oak lintels on which they swung remain firmly embedded in the massive partition walls. The old dungeons were built about 147 years ago by the British as part of a prison, on what was then the northernmost limits of the city. The stone was hauled from Haddam, Conn.

Beneath the marble floors of the prison structure proper were the dungeons, separated by walls three feet thick. Four of these cells had openings far above the prisoners' heads, but two were without opening except the oaken doors.

It is known that Ethan Allen, the hero of Ticonderoga, was an occupant of one of the cells, and it is believed that Nathan Hale was here confined from the time of his capture until his execution near by. The building was refitted in 1830, and since has been used for municipal offices.—[Philadelphia Ledger.]

A Boy With Presence Of Mind.

CARL GLUCK is but thirteen years of age, but he did a service at the terrible Plainfield railroad wreck that many a man would never have thought of; and he performed it with such direct expedition that aid came to the sufferers at the earliest possible moment.

He heard the whistle of the express, and, like all boys, was never tired of seeing the train go by. He ran to the window. Just then the big engine smashed against the train that was standing on the track.

Carl did not rush out to see the terrible things that were being done. He remembered that his father's telephone was the only one in the immediate neighborhood. He rushed for it and called up the police station. In a moment all the men on hand were on a run for the scene of disaster. Then he called for fire headquarters, and the engines were immediately under way.

Even then Carl kept his wits in hand. He searched the telephone book for the hospitals, and asked them to send help. Then he called up all the doctors he could find, one by one, and asked them to come immediately, and not until then did the noble little fellow leave the telephone.

When spoken to about his service after it had been performed, all the comment he made was: "They came all right."—[New York Correspondence of Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

THIRTEEN of the Senators of the 57th Congress were not re-elected. Among these are Senators McLaurin, of South Carolina, who won notoriety by his quarrels with his colleague, Senator Tillman; Jones of Nevada, Jones of Arkansas, and Vest of Missouri. Senator Jones, of Nevada, is one of two men (Allison, of Iowa, being the other) who have served for thirty consecutive years. Senator Jones, of Arkansas, came into prominence during the consideration of the Wilson-Gorman Tariff bill, and has been a Democratic party leader ever since. Senator Vest has served for twenty-four years, and though he has been in poor health for several years and almost blind, he has maintained his interest in the proceedings and his prestige as an orator.

DR. SAJOUS, of Philadelphia, claims to have discovered, after fourteen years of investigation, the use of the two suprarenal glands, just above the kidneys. He says that they secrete a substance which, carried to the lungs, forms adrenoxin, which mixes with the blood and supplies the tissues with oxygen, a work long credited to the red corpuscles. The suprarenal glands are connected by nerves with a small organ in the brain known as the anterior pituitary body, which regulates their absorption of oxygen. A strong pituitary body enables a person to lay in a good supply of oxygen and destroy disease germs. Dr. Sajous believes that what is commonly called vitality is simply pituitary efficiency. Physicians are investigating this new physiological theory.

JOEL J. BAILEY, a pioneer in the wholesale notion business of this country, philanthropist, financier, and one of the oldest and best known citizens of Philadelphia, died at his home, 1826 Arch street, on the 5th instant, aged nearly 77 years. After retiring from business he entered with enthusiasm upon the work of aiding reform in his city and State. His active service as Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Citizens' Municipal Association since its organization in 1886, and his activity as a member of the Committee of One Hundred, bear testimony to his high conception of a citizen's duty. His life was an example of practical patriotism that Philadelphians generally would do well to follow.

AT the closing session of the national convention recently held at the University Congregational Church, Chicago, the "Religious Education Association" was organized. Twenty denominations, all Protestant, in twenty-seven States, were represented by 375 enrolled delegates. Dr. W. R. Harper, President of the University of Chicago, though he kept himself in the background, was the promoter of this new combined effort. Dr. Frank Knight Sanders, Dean of the Yale University Divinity School, was elected president of the association for the first year. It is expected that the new association will cooperate with the International Sunday School Association and supplement its work.

THE sale of intoxicating liquors in the Capitol at Washington was discontinued on the 9th instant. Major McDowell, Clerk of the House of Representatives, who has the care of the House wing of the Capitol during the interval between sessions of Congress, issued an order that the law recently enacted forbidding the sale of liquors be rigidly enforced, and that all intoxicating liquors be immediately removed from the building.

THE Executive Committee of the American Window Glass Company has issued a formal notice that all of its factories will close for the season on the 14th of this month. As soon as the factories are closed a large force of men will be put to work to equip them with the new glass-blowing machines, which it is claimed will remove from the glass factories the highest priced skilled labor known in the country, and produce glass at less than one-third of the cost of that made by hand labor.

NEWS NOTES.

THE total appropriation bills of both sessions of the 57th Congress amount to $1,554,108,154.

THE three Venezuelan warships, captured by the British during the blockade, were returned to Venezuela on the 3d instant at La Guayra.

SENATOR ARTHUR P. GORMAN, of Maryland, has been chosen by his Democratic associates in the Senate as their parliamentary leader.

A DISPATCH from Naples dated the 9th instant states that Vesuvius has again become active, throwing up ashes and explosive incandescent globes.

THE rebellion in China appears to be spreading, and popular hatred for Christians was displayed in the Shantung province by the destruction of churches.

PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON has proposed plans for the improvement of Princeton University that will cost $12,000,000, and has set about securing that amount.

A DISPATCH from St. Louis, dated the 9th instant, states that one hundred families living below Alton, Ill., have been made homeless, and many have lost their belongings as a result of the rise in the Mississippi river. Many other places along the river were reported to be in danger from high water.

THE only book saved from destruction by the eruption of Mount Pelee is said to be a story of the eruption of Mount Vesuvius and the destruction of Pompeii.

A CABLEGRAM received by the State Department at Washington reports that the Venezuelan Government has re-established the blockade of the rebel ports of Carupano and Guanito.

A DISPATCH from Manila dated the 3d instant states that the town of Ous, Albay province was captured the preceding day by Ladrone, who surprised the municipal police.

A BILL has been introduced in the States General of Holland to amend the constitution of the Netherlands so as to extend suffrage to all men and women over 21 years of age, with the exception of lunatics.

THE North Carolina legislature has passed a liquor bill which allows the manufacture and sale of liquor only in incorporated towns, and those only to vote on the question of dispensary, prohibition or license.

COLONEL R. H. PRATT, has been induced to recall his resignation as Superintendent of the Indian Industrial School at Carlisle. His consent to remain is conditioned upon the desire of the Interior Department to retain his services.

ON the third instant the twenty-fifth anniversary of the enthronement of Pope Leo was celebrated at Rome. Forty-four cardinals and 315 bishops representing the whole world, were present at the celebration. Sixty-five thousand pilgrims and other visitors witnessed the ceremonies. The Pope has since been suffering from a severe cold, but is reported to be improving.

THE Grand Jury of Union County, N. J., censures the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Company and the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey for the Westfield disaster, asserting that laxity appears to exist in the examination of the running condition of the railroads, that the cars were of weak construction and heated with stoves, and that the engine used had a leaky steam chest and was unfit for high speed.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

3D Mo. 14.—THE ASSOCIATION OF Friends' Schools and the Committee on Education extend an invitation to an Educational Conference in the Lecture Room of Friends' Central School. At 2 p. m., lecture by Paul H. Hanus, S. B., Professor of the History and Art of Teaching, Harvard University. Subject, "A Modern Program of Studies." General discussion. Teachers and members of school committees are earnestly requested to be present.

3D Mo. 14.—BURLINGTON FIRST-DAY School Union, at Bordentown, N. J., 10.30 a. m. All are cordially invited.

3D Mo. 15.—PHILADELPHIA EVENING Meeting, at 17th St. and Girard Ave.

3D Mo. 15.—WOODLAWN, VA., YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Jacob M. Troth.

3D Mo. 15.—A CONFERENCE UNDER the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor, in the meeting-house at West Chester, Pa., at 2.30 p. m. Joseph S. Walton will give an address on "The Educational Aspect of the Temperance Problem."

3D Mo. 15.—WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Friends' Meeting, at the residence of Mary A. Carpenter, 35 Greenridge Ave. All visitors are welcome.

3D Mo. 15.—SALEM QUARTERLY MEETING's Visiting Committee will attend the meeting at Mullica Hill at 10 a. m.

3D Mo. 19.—PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY Meeting, at 15th and Race Streets, at 7.30 p. m.

3D Mo. 19.—GREEN STREET MONTHLY Meeting, Philadelphia, at 4th and Green Streets, at 3 p. m.

3D Mo. 19.—QUAKERTOWN, PA., YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Joel S. Ball.

3D Mo. 20.—WEST PHILADELPHIA Junior Young Friends, at Thomas Scott's, 3437 Woodland Avenue.

3D Mo. 22.—PENN'S GROVE YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Franklin Pusey.

3D Mo. 22.—FISHERTOWN YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Uriah Blackburn.

3D Mo. 22.—GERMANTOWN FRIENDS' Meeting, 10.30 a. m., will be visited by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee.

A POLISH Jew was arrested the other day, and when taken to the city prison his condition was so uncleanly that he was told by the corporal to take a bath. "Vat, go in the water?" he asked. "Yes, take a bath; you need it. How long is it since you had a bath?" With his hands aligned upward, he answered, "I never was arrested before."—[The Monthly Record.]

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet. 27 pages. *Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. *A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $5.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

*All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,

JAMAICA, LAND OF SUMMER.

Now is the time for a trip to the Tropics, where you may escape the cold and severe Winter of the North. You can leave direct from Philadelphia on the splendid steamers Admiral Sampson and Admiral Schley. Swift passage, comfortable accommodation, excellent cuisine.

You will have a delightful Sea-voyage, and you will visit a land of sunshine whose interest and health-giving qualities are unsurpassed.

For further information and tickets call or address

ARTHUR H. MIDDLETON,

421 North Second Street (afternoon), or 282 1/2 North Broad Street (evening), Philadelphia, Pa.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co. STEAMSHIP LINES

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

C. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue, Uptown offices, 802 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philad'a. J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE

Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (TRIN SEABERS, Jr.) 524 1/2 Media St., Philadelphia

NEAR the end of the season our boy announced the height of our maple tree to be thirty-three feet.

"Why, how do you know?" was the general question.

"Measured it.

"How?"

"Foot rule and yard stick."

"You didn't climb that tall tree?"

asked mother, anxiously.

"No'm. I just found the length of the shadow and measured that."

"But the length of the shadow changes."

"Yes'm. But twice a day the shadows are just as long as the things themselves. I've been trying it all summer. I drove a stick into the ground, and when the shadow was just as long as the stick I knew that the shadow of the tree would be just as long as the tree, and that's thirty-three feet."—[Gathered.]

THE court was hearing a case of "drunk, third arrest." The judge turned to the woman who stood near, whose worn, sorrowful face had touched his heart, and said, "I am sorry, but I must lock up your husband." The injured wife, victim of the legalized liquor traffic, one of the many who "take the consequences while the husband takes the drink," had no thought of touching deep moral or economic problems, but only of plain, everyday common sense when she replied: "Your honor, wouldn't it be better for me and the children if you locked up the saloon and let my husband go to work?"—[Union Signal.]

"How would you define 'exercise,' as distinguished from 'work'?" asked the teacher. "Exercise," answered Johnny, "is work you like to do, and work is exercise you don't like to do."—[Chicago Tribune.]

REDUCED RATES TO NEW ORLEANS, LA., ACCOUNT MEETING NATIONAL MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION, APRIL 15-17, 1903, VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

On April 11, 12, and 13, Special Excursion tickets to New Orleans and return will be sold via the Southern Railway, at greatly reduced rates. Tickets will be good to return until April 19, but by depositing ticket with Joint Agent at New Orleans on or before April 19, and payment of a fee of fifty cents, final limit can be extended until April 30, 1903.

The Round trip rate from Philadelphia will be $33.50. Corresponding low rates from other points. The Southern Railway operates three through trains daily with Pullman drawing-room sleeping-cars from New York, Philadelphia, and Washington to New Orleans without change. Dining-car service on all through trains.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

THREE-DAY TOUR TO WASHINGTON.

UNDER THE PERSONALLY-CONDUCTED SYSTEM OF THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The next Pennsylvania Railroad Personally-Conducted Tour to Washington leaves Thursday, March 19. Rate, covering railroad transportation for the round trip, hotel accommodations, and transfer of passenger and baggage, station to hotel in Washington, $14.50 from New York, $13.00 from Trenton, and $11.50 from Philadelphia. These rates cover accommodations for two days at the Arlington, Normandie, Riggs, Ebbitt, Shoreham, Cochran, Gordon, Barton, or Hamilton Hotels. For accommodations at Regent, Metropolitan, National, or Colonial Hotels, $2.50 less. Special side trip to Mount Vernon.

All tickets good for ten days, with special hotel rates after expiration of hotel coupons.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents; Tourist Agent, 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or George W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

MEETING AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, NEW ORLEANS, LA., MAY 5th to 8th, 1903.

On account of the above occasion, the Southern Railway will sell tickets for the round trip, limited ten days, for one fare.

From the Trunk Line Territory the rates will be based on the regular fares to Washington or Trunk Line Western termini, added to one first-class fare therefrom, limited to continuous passage, and will be sold May 1st, 2d and 3d, with final limit ten days from date of sale. By deposit of ticket by original purchaser, and payment of 50 cents, to Joint Agent, New Orleans, not later than May 12th, extension of final limit may be obtained to enable the purchaser to reach the original starting point not later than May 30th, 1903.

The Southern Railway operates three trains daily from New York and Philadelphia, carrying Pullman Sleeping, Dining and Observation cars.

By the request of members of the American Medical Association, in the East, on Saturday, May 2d, special service has been arranged to leave New York at 4.25 p. m., Philadelphia at 6.55 p. m., via Washington, Atlanta and Montgomery. Trains composed exclusively of Pullman Dining, Drawing and Stateroom, Sleeping, Library and Observation Cars. Those desiring Pullman reservation should send in their names as soon as possible. Time New York to New Orleans 39 hours. For further information call on or write Chas. L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

Merchants' Trust Company,
611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $500,000.00
CAPITAL (paid in), 296,000.00
SURPLUSES, 50,000.00
UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 45,349.99

Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveyancing done. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $5 and upwards, per annum.

JOSEPH R. RHOADS, President.
JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President.
HORACE B. PEARSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas.
CHARLES P. EARLY, Secretary.
WM. B. LANE, Tellr and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS

NICHOLAS BRICE, J. BOLTON WINFENNY,
S. DAVIS PAGE, WARREN G. GRIPPENY,
JOSEPH R. RHOADS, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED I. PHILLIPS,
THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
CHAS. S. HINCHMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
EDWARD S. SAYRE, EUGEN DUBLEY FARRIS,
JOHN H. CRAVEN, HORACE B. PEARSON.

THE UNION CENTRAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Assets, $34,000,000

Plain Life and Endowment Policies with Annual Dividends.
The Highest Grade of Life Insurance at the Lowest Cost.
The Company for Those who Think for Themselves.
Good Contracts to Good Agents.

Lawton Brothers, Managers,
338 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address
A. L. Diamant & Co.,
1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.
902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.
Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)
Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

Seventeen Cents per year for
One Thousand Dollars of Life
Insurance for Fifteen Years!
This is the record of policy No.
43,964, maturing July 5th, 1901.
Particulars free on request.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER. ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. REGISTER AND TRANSFER AGENT.
SAVES TO RENT in Burglar-proof Vaults. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.

E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders, . . . $ 4,457,613.08
Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,317,764.12
Assets of the Company, 61,613,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

Samuel R. Shipley, President
T. Westar Brown, Vice-President
Asa S. Wiug, Vice-President
Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept'
J. Roberts Foulike, Trust Officer
David G. Alsop, Actuary
J. Burton Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
Samuel H. Troth, Treasurer
C. Walter Borton, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

James V. Watson,
William Longstrech,
Edward H. Ogden,
Thomas Scattergood,
J. Preston Thomas,
Robert M. Janney,
Marriott C. Morris,
Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

An article on the amusements of children in The Delinctor contains a wealth of practical suggestions. Most mothers are usually at their wits' ends to provide suitable entertainment for their children. The kindergarten is an aid in the solution of this problem; but it only occupies a portion of the child's time. The work of the kindergarten should be supplemented by play and instruction of a like character in the home. The seed sown in the heart and mind of the child bears abundant fruit in later years, and the good that they derive from song and story and healthful bodily exercise cannot be overestimated. A love of Nature, habits of neatness and order, politeness of manner can be instilled in the little one by intelligent effort.

LOW RATES TO CALIFORNIA, ARIZONA, MEXICO, AND OTHER WESTERN POINTS.

Parties desiring to make trip to California, Arizona, Mexico, or other western points, either for business or pleasure, can do so now at a small cost. Daily until April 29, 1903, inclusive, special one-way colonist tickets may be purchased via the Southern Railway at rate of $49.75 from Philadelphia to Los Angeles, San Francisco and other points, corresponding low rates from other points.

The Southern Railway operates through Excursion Sleepers from Washington to Los Angeles and San Francisco without change, via Atlanta, New Orleans, and El Paso, leaving Washington at 8.45 p.m. every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. The berth rate in these sleepers is only $7, two people being allowed to occupy one berth if desired. Personal conductors and Pullman porters go through with each sleeper. There are other new, convenient, and economical features connected with these sleepers, which may be obtained from Charles L. F. Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike

Table d'hote, 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL,

Phone 1-33-55. Clerk

All Round the Garden
you will see luxuriant
growths if you use

GREGORY'S SEEDS

Sold under three-warrant. New catalogue free.

2, 4, 11, Gregory & Son,
Barbourswood, Mass.

GREGORY'S SEEDS
CATALOGUE
FOR 1903

Growing Ideas

What to grow in the garden. When to grow and how. Modern ideas of agriculture and floriculture for those who plant for pleasure or profit. Illustrated in

DREER'S Garden Calendar

Sent free to all who mention this paper.
HENRY A. DREER, 714 Chestnut St., Phila., Pa.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, THIRD MONTH 21, 1903.

Friends' Intelligencer Association, (LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.
To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.
WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING, N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
* * * TELEPHONE No. 2-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XII.	177
POETRY: THE HOPE GOD GIVETH.	177
FIDELITY TO OUR PRINCIPLES.	177
THE WESTERN SLOPE.	178
THE WORD OF GOD.	179
THE SIEGE OF PEKIN.	180
"BY THEIR FRUITS YE SHALL KNOW THEM."	181
EDITORIAL:
The Need of the Church.	182
Notes.	182, 183
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS.	183
SOCIETY NOTES.	184
BLUE RIVER QUARTERLY MEETING.	184
THE GREATEST NEED.	185
GUESTS OF HONOR.	185
FROM AN ISOLATED FRIEND.	185
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	186
EDUCATIONAL.
Conferences in Philadelphia.	186
Swarthmore College Notes.	186
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	187
LITERARY NOTES.	187
POETRY: My Soul and I; The Two Crows; Dolobran; What March Does.	187, 188
EDUCATION AMONG THE DOUKHOBORS.	188
PROFIT-SHARING IN THE STEEL CORPORATION.	189
MASSACHUSETTS' ANSWER—THERE IT STANDS.	190
MISCELLANY: A Little Gentleman; A New Astrington; Drunkards Classed as Lunatics.	190
CURRENT EVENTS.	191
NEWS NOTES.	192
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	191, 192

YOUR BEST FRIEND should be your advertising. In place to introduce you in a convincing manner to others who need your product. T. Vaughan Stapler, Ad-writer, 200 S. 10th St., Phila.

WANTED.—A MOTHER'S HELPER. A competent, refined young woman for young children, and to assist with sewing and light housework. Kindly state full particulars, age, references and salary desired. Address No. 82, this Office.

WANTED.—A MOTHER'S HELPER TO assist in the care of children and do light housework. A comfortable home near a village and with city conveniences. Address Mrs. Wm. Silver, Darlington, Harford county, Md.

WANTED.—POSITION AS HOUSEKEEPER or companion by an educated, responsible lady. Either seashore or country. Address No. 82, this Office.

WANTED.—IN A BANKING AND STEAM-ship office, a young man with good education, living with parents in the city, and Friends' family preferred. No previous business experience necessary. Address Box 1253, P. O. Philadelphia.

WANTED.—YOUNG ENGLISH FRIEND (lady) seeks an engagement as companion to a lady for passage to England in May or June, in return for expenses. No objection to care of child. Address No. V. 2, this Office.

WANTED.—A MIDDLE-AGED WOMAN, AS West Chester, Pa. Address U. E. O., Box 54, West Chester, Pa.

WANTED.—A FRIEND WITH EXPERIENCE and ability desires a position as housekeeper at the sea shore or mountains, or companion. Address Box 405, West Chester, Pa.

WANTED.—D. E. BOOKKEEPER, STENO-grapher, typewriter, experienced, desires permanent position. Salary $12. Address No. 79, this Office.

WANTED.—BY FRIEND, POSITION AS PR-ivate secretary. Remington operator, or traveling companion, nurse for semi-invalid, or housekeeper. Address A. D. FEATHERSTONE, at N. Carey Street, Baltimore, Md.

SPANISH OR FRENCH LESSONS GIVEN in part payment for board, by young Spanish lady. Address No. 82, this Office.

BOARDERS DESIRED IN FRIENDS' FAMILY on farm near Conshohocken. For further particulars address S., 1800 Spring Mill Ave., Conshohocken, Pa.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTIEWS and SISTERS, 1827 1st St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

FORSALE.—AT A SACRIFICE, BRICK HOUSE, 20 rooms, all conveniences, built by owner. Three porches, fruit and shade. Corner lot, 40 x 140. Call or address E. D., 401 N. Orange St., Media, Del., or, Pa.

TO RENT FOR THE SUMMER. FURNISHED house at Gwynedd, Pa., 18 miles from Philadelphia. House contains six bed rooms, bath room, hot and cold water, library, large porch, dining room, and two kitchens. Five acres of ground, large lawn with shade, good truck patch and orchard. The price of which tenant may enjoy; also, if desired, cow and chickens. Stabling for four horses and cow. The house is finely situated with extended views and good air. We have rented on reasonable terms from sixth month 1 to Ninth month 30, or a little later if desired. Photographs furnished. Address or apply ARTHUR H. JENKINS, 2024 Race St., Phila.

FOR RENT.—A HANDSOME FURNISHED house, centrally located in Swarthmore, Pa., for rent by the month, cheap.

Also, A LARGE STONE MANSION ON THE HILL from June to September. Completely furnished, all conveniences, gas range, Springfield water, 100 feet of porch, commanding a fine view. Grounds cared for by owner. Tennis court. Stabling for two horses if desired. ALBERT N. GARRETT, 2015 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia; or Box 135, Swarthmore, Pa.

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

THE Booklet and circulars containing announcements for the coming season are now ready and will be mailed this week to all those friends who have written us for information. Those who do not receive booklets this week should write at once for one. The package contains:

1. A booklet with twenty illustrations from photographs giving a description of the location, character and aims of the settlement.
2. A circular giving rates of board, arrangements of rooms and other information relating to the Inn.
3. A circular giving a list of those who have already taken lots and of the lots that are for sale, with prices.
4. A circular giving a list of cottages to rent, the months they are available and the rent per month.
5. A circular telling of a proposed First-day School Assembly to be held at Buck Hill Falls the latter part of Sixth month.
6. A circular relating to classes in bird study to be formed at Buck Hill Falls during Sixth month.
7. A circular relating to the proposed increase in the capital stock of the Company and inviting subscriptions thereto.

All will be sent on application. Address
BUCK HILL FALLS CO., Philadelphia, Pa.
1024 Race Street,
CHARLES F. JENKINS, President,
MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary and Treasurer.

Buck Hill Falls

Notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Buck Hill Falls Company will be held at the N. W. cor. 45th and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, at 2.30 p.m., Third month 24, 1903, to take action on approval or disapproval of the proposed increase of the capital stock of said company from $40,000 to $70,000.
MORGAN BUNTING, Sec'y and Treas.

Choice Lot For Sale at
BUCK HILL FALLS,
Large and attractive lot,—exceptional location.
I will sell Lot No. 31, in Plotting No. 1, to acceptable purchaser. See map of Plotting at my office.
CHARLES PAXSON,
234 Dock Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

ELIZABETH LLOYD'S
"SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY"
placed in every school, would teach the beauty of Peace.
Send twenty cents for one copy of the music and twenty-five copies of the words, to
ARABELLA CARTER,
Universal Peace Union, 1305 Arch St., Phila.

J. H. Riege, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis, MORTGAGES, GROUND RENTS.
Law, Real Estate, Insurance, Collections, Patents.
Estates managed and settled. Peon. and New Jersey.
Keystone ad Bell 'Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH and RACE STS., PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }

Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal, George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to

GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal, Jenkintown, Pa.

Or, CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City. For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE, Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars address A. DAVIS JACKSON, B.S., Principal, Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars address ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal, Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register.

The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

THOMAS O. PEIRCE,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW.
815 Real Estate Trust Building, Philad'a.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
653 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
OFFICES: } Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
395 SWEDE STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

Disease Cured by Electricity.

WM. H. HICKOK, M.D.

10 a. m. to 4 p. m. 7 p. m. to 9 p. m.

554 North Eleventh Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Disease Cured by Osteopathy.

A System of Natural Healing. Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and Chronic diseases in general.

O. O. STODDARD, E.D., D.O.

10 a. m. to 4 p. m. 7 p. m. to 9 p. m.

554 N. 11th Street, Philadelphia.

Thompson Shourds, 2222 Wallace Street.

Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.

Richards & Shourds. Jobbing attended to.

CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS.

1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa.

Phone 3-54-78 D.

CHARLES BURTON,

Practical House and Sign Painter,

Office, 907 N. Thirteenth Street, } Philadelphia, Pa.

Residence, 1714 Woodstock Street, }

Young Friends' Review

Published by the

New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $2.95.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKSMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.

5 PHONES.

Sheets and Pillow Cases

The "S. & C. Custom-made" brand has several points of excellence in addition to low prices. It is one of the twelve distinct lines that have made this department so favorably known among buyers of Bedfurnishings in this vicinity. One has only to see the goods to realize how low these prices are:

SHEETS.

54 x 90 inches—50c each
63 x 90 inches—58c each
72 x 90 inches—68c each
81 x 90 inches—75c each
90 x 90 inches—83c each

PILLOW CASES.

42 x 36 inches—15c each
45 x 36 inches—16c each

BOLSTER CASES.

42 x 72 inches—30c each
45 x 72 inches—32c each

A small number of sheets, in Utica and other brands, used for decorating in last week's sale, are priced for clearance; values up to 85c—all now 60c each.

Strawbridge & Clothier, PHILADELPHIA.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.

STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern ports. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue. Up-town offices, 828 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philad'a. J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

Stint, stint, stint! Save, save, save!

What for?

While you are answering this question, consider whether less saving, united with a policy of life insurance, will be more conducive to the happiness of your family and yourself. Consult the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,

921-3-5 Chestnut St.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, THIRD MONTH 21, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 12.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XII.

MAY our high standard as a people, which in the past has made the name Quaker a synonym for integrity and uprightness of conduct, be conscientiously maintained. To this end may we also exemplify simplicity in our habits and ways of life.

AARON M. POWELL.

From his letter to the Richmond Conference, 1898.

THE HOPE GOD GIVETH.

These verses, which have been many years in the possession of a Philadelphia family, are not included in any of the published collections of Whittier's poems.

STILL on the lips of all we question,
The finger of God's silence lies ;
Shall the lost hands in ours be folded?
Will the shut eyelids ever rise ?

Oh, friends ! No proof beyond this yearning,
This outreach of our souls we need,
God will not mock the hope He giveth ;
No love He prompts shall vainly plead.

Then let us stretch our hands in darkness,
And call our loved ones o'er and o'er ;
Some time their arms shall close about us
And the old voices speak once more.

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

FIDELITY TO OUR PRINCIPLES.¹

THERE are three things that go to make a true Friend, one who is faithful and loyal to the religious organization of which we are members. These three elements or principles seem to me to be Light, Life and Love—the three L's—and the greatest of these is love.

I want us to-night to think of light as an existing element or principle in our human lives. We are the light of the world. Remove all the human race from off the face of the earth and the light of the world will have been extinguished. "There is a light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world," we read also. This is the Light to which I believe George Fox had reference when he said, in the beginning of his ministry, "Friends, mind the light." And they did mind the light. There were careful to observe the inward revelation of God's will that shone in their hearts, that enabled them to do the work of establishing a religious organization that has come down to us as an inheritance that we would not like to miss. They were faithful to the manifestations of Truth and Light in doing the will of God, and if we fall short to-day it is because we fail to mind that same light. It is the light of Christ shining in our hearts, just as it did in the heart of George Fox and those to whom he was speaking, in the heart of Jesus and those whom he was teaching.

Our surroundings have changed. We are not called to the same work and service that early Friends were, but there is a work for the Religious Society of Friends to-day. We are to mind this same Light which we represent to the world—each doing the thing that is revealed within him. We are all letting our light shine more or less, but we want this light of ours to shine fully in the doing of the will of God that is revealed in our human lives.

We are very careful to watch the condition of our physical health, and the moment there is a rise in the temperature we are alarmed and a physician is called in. If we are only as careful in regard to the condition of our real life—the soul life—whenever there is a rise in the temperature of our passions, our thoughts, our feelings, or our tempers, to apply to the physician, even Christ, that power of God that is in each one of us, I believe that the normal condition of the soul life can be brought back into its true relation, just as well as the human life. To live in the normal condition is to meet everything that comes to us in that quiet, deliberate manner that will enable us to exercise true judgment and be a help to one another. This is the real secret of life, and the human family everywhere is looking for it, craving and desiring it.

There are various reasons for the non-attendance at our meetings; one of them is that sometimes neighborhoods change. Friends move into other localities and meetings are made smaller by their absence; but other meetings are helped where they remove, so really this is no cause for discouragement. There are other reasons, and one of them is, I feel, that our meetings are not full of life; there is not virtue enough there. We come in rather a half-hearted way, sometimes merely to fulfill a little service that we feel it is our duty to do—simply to go to meeting, forgetting that we go there for a purpose—to be helped and to help others; for no life can ever give out of itself without receiving in return that which will help it. This is not a complaint of our religious organization alone; it is everywhere apparent among other churches as well. There is a cause for it and it may be in the ministry. The ministry should be of a character that will help, that will tend to build up life—for I believe that one of the objects of the ministry is to grow people, make them better, meet the conditions of the people, be able to fill out the lives that are before us, and then not preach at them but to them.

I believe the time has come when Friends must awake to the fact that this light that is within must so shine before the world that others may see it. That the service in the ministry must be of a character that does not partake too much of the vessel through which it passes—bringing our own troubles into the meeting. If we feel a little blue ourselves our ministry is very apt to partake of the same, and then it is not the gospel. What we want as ministers is to be so filled with the power of the Holy Spirit, of God's love, that we will not look around us with doubts and fears, but come in a simple, living way and be our real selves; look the people in the face, feel after their condition, and then speak the truth, let it be what it may.

¹Extracts from an address delivered in the Friends' Meeting-house, West Philadelphia, First month 27, 1903, at a meeting under the care of the membership committee of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting.

We need to be so filled that we shall be free men to preach the truth, whatever it may be, and it will meet with a response. Its reception will be felt, and that is the kind of preaching that will make earnest, true and lively meetings, creating an inspiration that will bring the people to them. "The fields are already ripe unto the harvest, but the laborers are few." Here, I believe, is one of the greatest needs of our religious organization: it is greater fidelity to our ministry; fidelity to our meetings; fidelity to the world around us, in order for its conversion.

No long ago a young Friend asked me if we believed in conversion. I told him that we believed in repentance, an amendment of life; that is the only way that we can return to the better, higher and truer things of life, but it is an inward operation that goes on within these human lives of ours, as silently as the sap that flows beneath the bark in the trees, causing them to grow and put forth their new wood and leaves every year. It is like this in the words of Paul, writing to the Church and to those who were his followers, who really we would suppose had accepted the Christian religion; but he said in that letter of his, "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God." (Rom. xii., 2.)

Now it seems to me that the conversion of a Friend takes place somewhat in this way, we are transformed, we cease to conform, we are our real selves; we come to ourselves like the prodigal; we understand ourselves; we just feel that there is a certain Light that is leading and guiding us; we have a true and living faith in God, and so we grow our real, natural selves. We no longer conform to the world—to the fashions, or the things that do not just seem to be like us, and no longer do certain things simply because others do them. But, on the other hand, we have come to that condition when we think for ourselves, and have been transformed by the renewing of this mind of ours. One of the greatest gifts that God has bestowed upon the human family is the power of renewing the mind, and every day this mind needs to be renewed, because we begin a new day—we begin life over again. We have new difficulties to meet; new joys and sorrows come to us each day; therefore we need this mind of ours renewed daily, that we may know what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God. This is the true conversion, and Friends believe in it. When we arrive at this condition we will be fitted and prepared for the ministry, or for elder, teacher, exhorter, or whatever may be the work to which God has called us. . . .

We ought never to stop growing, but let these principles be so inculcated in our lives that we shall never be content; each day, each year, shall be a new day and year, and as we grow we shall be enabled to look about us from every standpoint and see things in a new light—in the broader sense of view. Let us keep on growing, never being content until we reach the summit, the topmost point, the greatest virtue—love. Then it will be just one step over when this life is done, into the higher, the better world.

Oh! that we may get into this spirit of love, so that our lives may be thoroughly saturated with it; that wherever we go, in our business life, in the home, or in the church, we shall give out of our lives that spirit of love that will enable us to lead the life of love that God designed and intended we should. Oh! that we may continue to grow, as Friends, as individuals; that we may let our light so shine to the world that others, seeing it, may have heart to take fresh courage and press forward.

JOEL BORTON.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE WESTERN SLOPE.¹

THE real meaning of the title of this book is, the afternoon of life. The author resides in Chicago, and is widely known as a lecturer, a preacher, and one of the earliest promoters of Women's Clubs. She has also written several books of fiction.

Having passed the half century mark and feeling herself on the downward slope, our author seems to pause, look back and around, and give expression to her recollections, observations and reflections. This is done under nine heads as follows: A General Survey; Some of My Neighbors on the Slope; The Lost Fountain; The Way We Have Come,—Religiously; The Way We Have Come,—Social Ideals; The Way We Have Come,—The Woman's Share; The Downcast View; The Moral Balance.

The author brings to these topics a wide experience, a keen, philosophic perception, and a felicity of expression. Not often does a reader find so many good things in so brief a space.

In the "General Survey" the conclusion is "the only boon to pray for is an open vision, eyes to see, a heart to feel and respond, and with these a strength to smile at, rather than mourn, both our losses and our mistakes."

The second chapter deals mainly with the many changes that have come within the observation of those who are on the "western slope." Persons of various types are described. "But enough has been said to show that we are well companioned going down the hill. But companioned in grateful and loving thoughts, that look not all backward but run on before beckoning us to follow."

"The Way We Have Come,—Religiously," is a strong presentation of the changed ideas and ideals of the religious world, and the methods by which the changes have come about. The author finds "the most notable feature of the religious life of to-day is the tendency to unite." "We are growing ashamed of the things that separate." "Controversy has lost its interest, the era of religious brotherhood has set in, the sects emulate each other in hospitality and good manners."

¹ The Western Slope, by Celia Parker Woolley, published by William S. Lord, Evanston, Ill. Price, $1.25.

Under "Social Ideals" we have a discussion of the advances that we have made, and also of those we have failed to make, especially as to the man of color. The liquor question, woman suffrage, the servant question and the tyranny of money all receive attention. I note in this chapter a statement that I suppose rests on misinformation. It represents Lucretia Mott, during the Civil War, as "dropping the rule of non-resistance for a time, until things were somewhat more as they should be." Many Friends did this, we know, but I think Lucretia Mott was not one of them.

The "Woman's Share" in the changed conditions is interestingly presented, with this conclusion: "Fifty years' experience in being a woman and more than thirty years' of more or less active co-operation in labors for my sex convince me that we shall go on being women to the end of the chapter. I feel this sometimes to my discouragement, sometimes to my relief; and I offer this small nugget of rather cheap wisdom to friends and enemies of the cause to use as they see fit."

"The Downcast View" is addressed to the sorrow-laden, the unhappy, the pessimistic. This state of mind the author attributes to a habit of noting the things that hinder, annoy and pain us, and failing to note those of the opposite quality. We note the storm but not the calm; the belated train and not those on schedule time; the divorces and not the happy marriages. "Happiness is not an end but a means." "Happiness is the ability to recognize it."

Our author finds "it is hard to strike the moral balance. Undoubtedly the difficulty lies largely in the nature of things; in that element of the unknown and inscrutable which enters into every problem." But she is "convinced the difficulty is one we enhance by a too narrow and too personal point of view."

"The Return of the Goddess" is the ever recurring springtime, which "we figure, and always shall, in the form of a young maiden, blossom-crowned, her face radiant and full of hope." In these re-awakenings the afternoon of life is in full sympathy. "So it will be seen that we who live on the Western Slope have no wish not to be counted as much alive and living as we ever were."

This little volume of 240 pages is gotten up in a style befitting its title, the printing being of a sort easily followed by eyes more or less dimmed by lapse of time. Like most books of the present day it is sent out by the publisher in an unfinished state, and some of us who are far down on the Western Slope feel as if we would like to send the volumes back to the binder to have the front and bottom of the leaves properly trimmed.

G. D. B.

THERE is much virtue in letting things take their own course until the last moment before taking decisive action; nine times out of ten circumstances which naturally arise will settle matters just as well as the greatest genius could.—[Anonymous.]

THE WORD OF GOD.

From a sermon by William P. Tilden.

A GREAT change has taken place during the last quarter of a century in regard to the Bible. Formerly the great question between the conflicting sects was mainly one of interpretation. Nearly all accepted the Bible as an inspired and infallible guide. What does it teach? was the great question. And so various, not to say conflicting, was that teaching, that it was not difficult to find textual support to almost any opinions that might be honestly embraced. But more and more, of late years, earnest and serious readers of the Scriptures have been forced to see that there were many things in the Bible that could not, with any propriety, be called the "word of God"; that everything between the two lids could not be rationally regarded as equally inspired, or equally instructive. It was the Scriptures themselves that revealed their own mixed and miscellaneous character to the thoughtful reader. A breach once made in the old wall of infallibility, which had so long guarded the Bible against free and rational thought, a flood of criticism, reverent and irreverent, has rushed in, which has seemed to threaten for the time the destruction of all confidence in the book itself; and to sweep away all the old and revered foundations of faith and hope. So it has seemed to some; but so it will not be. God lives; man lives; the Bible lives; and all that is most inspired and inspiring in its pages will be sure to live also. The Bible wasn't given to enslave the reason, or the conscience, but rather to set them free, and make them more receptive of that real divine word which still speaks to the waiting mind and heart. It does not ask us to come to its pages with reason blindfold, and conscience dumb: "Come," it says, "let us reason together," "Why even of yourselves judge ye not what is right?" If there be a book in the world to be read with the eyes wide open, and the whole soul awake in every faculty, it is the Bible. It is when the soul is most inspired with the spirit out of which the best portions of the Bible flow, that it most clearly discerns that spirit in its pages, and most easily distinguishes between the divine treasure and the human casket which holds it. The Scriptures contain truths of unspeakable value; they have come down to us on the waves of God's great Providence, freighted with inestimable treasures; but the treasures are one thing, and the ark of gopher-wood which holds them is another. Well may we duly reverence the ark itself, and be rightfully jealous of its preservation from any rude hand that would loosen its timbers by one untruthful or irreverent blow. But reverence for truth itself, and for that real word of God which is before and above all Scripture, charges us to discriminate between the ark of wood so long in building, and upon which so many workmen of different ages were employed, and the precious freight of moral and spiritual truth with which it has replenished and enriched the world. . . .

What should we think of the shipbuilder who should go into the old forests for timber, and instead of taking his moulds with him, and selecting such trees as suited his purpose—this straight, tall trunk for a keel, that curved one for a stem, those branches and roots for knees—should sweep everything clean as he went, and have it all transported to his shipyard, without regard to fitness of construction? We have the ship of character to build: the old Bible forests are full of the trees of divine truth, the growth of ages, for our use. What though there be here and there a decayed tree, and some living ones not adapted to our use? If we know the sort of character we want to build, if we have any true model, or ideal of the life God would have us live, and the character he would have us form, then let us take our moulds with us into the Bible forests, and select the very best timber we can find there, working it into a ship of character, fashioned after the pattern shown us in the mount of our highest and clearest vision—a ship that will breast the fiercest storms of life unharmed, and bear us safely across the sea.

This is really just what intelligent and thoughtful readers of the Bible do, whatever be their theory of the divineness of its every word and letter. One in sorrow does not turn to the genealogies of unknown Hebrews, whose only record is that they lived, begat, and died, thousands of years ago; but with the sacred instinct of sorrow, seeking comfort, as sure as that of the bee seeking honey, he roams over the rich fields of divine truth, lighting now on a sweet and comforting Psalm, then on some lofty, prophetic strain, that lifts the soul out of the ruts that sorrow has worn, and again on a beatitude that cheers as the voice of God. Now sitting with Jesus in the upper chamber, hearing him tell of the upper mansions, and again with Paul as he sings his triumphant song of victory over death, or with John, on his sea-girt isle, as he tells his vision of a "new heaven and a new earth," where all tears are wiped away. And so it is, that, practically, all thoughtful readers of the Bible do select; they do discriminate; they do seek freely, for what their souls need. It is the plain dictate of common sense; and the pity is that their theory of Scripture is not such as to sanction and justify their practice.

So used, there will always be found in the illuminated pages of the Bible, something for every joy and every sorrow; something for all classes, all conditions, and all experiences of human life. And if in any conceit of modern knowledge we should ever think we have drunk those old fountains dry, it will not be because they, but we are shallow.

Still it is true that "the word of God is not bound." No Scripture can hold it all. And we need to bear this truth in mind, to attain any just conception of the nature and extent of that word. . . .

This living word of God is as old as creation, and as new as the last accent of the Holy Spirit. Not only the Jewish patriarchs and prophets heard it, but Buddha also heard it; Confucius heard it; Socrates heard it; while our own Lord Jesus not only heard it, but so followed its high behests, so wrought it into the fibre of his daily life, that in him, as we have said, it was made flesh, and the waiting world beheld the glory of a true son of God.

This brings the heavenly Father into real and vital relations with his earthly child, and gives us an assurance of "God with us," here and now. It makes of the "word of God" a volume never closed, but wide open, as long as there is a listening ear to the divine voice. I know of no truth more deeply religious than this. It shows the human soul to be indeed the temple of God, and man the real child of the Eternal, in whose image he was created. Without this truth religion is only a tradition, needing external vouchers, historic evidence, and for ever at the mercy of biblical critics. With it the evidence is within the soul, and the experience of its power is the natural miracle that assures us it is divine. It is a reconciling truth; it lifts us out of the region of negations into what is affirmative and positive; it is at once the most conservative and the most radical of truths; it would hold on to every divine word in the past, gleaning reverently from all sacred writings, heathen as well as Christian, while it would still look on and up for every fresh communication of the divine will. It is easy to see how pre-eminently fitted this truth is to unite all branches of the living vine. It lifts us up out of the letter that killeth, into the spirit that giveth life. Dogma divides; it is the life of God in the soul that unites. All living churches must be fed and inspired with the living word of the living God. Give us this, and we need not be afraid of the results of any earnest and reverent Bible criticism. It is the pruned vine that bears the richest fruit. No pruning knife can ever injure the unbound word of God. The Father's voice may still be heard in the soul:

"The word unto the prophet spoken
Was writ on tables yet unbroken."

Only let us keep the tables of the heart plastic to the finger of God, and the inward ear open to his voice, and we shall never be without a witness of his presence and love.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE SIEGE OF PEKIN.

OUR little Glencoe, Illinois, Library Club listened recently to a most thrilling recital from Mrs. Woodward of her experiences in the siege of Peking. She and her daughter, aged sixteen years, were on a visit to the Congers, and were caught in the awful affair. She had left her husband and two young children and her mother at their home in Evanston, Illinois, not expecting to be away very long. She had never left her children before.

During the siege the cannon balls fell about them daily, many soldiers and native Christians being killed, but not a member of the Legation lost his life. They had a number of horses and mules which they ate, as they had no other meat. They used every available bit of material for sand bags for barricades, cutting up most exquisite embroideries and dipping them in water and coal dust to destroy the bright colors, which would have attracted the notice of the soldiers. Flees, mosquitoes and other insects abounded and there were no screens. In their improvised hospital they used a dark lantern and turned the light on the faces as they had need, as they could not have lights in the hospital to attract attention.

She and her daughter resolved that they would not speak of home, and tried not to think of it. They became so familiar with death and suffering that they ceased to fear anything, and had little expectation of escape, but simply kept busy, doing whatever they could for the sick and wounded, though with so little to make them comfortable. There were many missionaries and native Christians in their quarters, and she said her admiration for their unselfish devotion and patience was unbounded, though she went there prejudiced against them. When the soldiers finally got through the city gates and over and under the walls, they were all simply beside themselves with joy. The officers immediately sent out into the city and got quantities of fresh provisions and they all broke their long fast.

As soon as possible she and her daughter started for home. It was a perilous journey down the river to the coast in a wretched little boat, which took several days. By the time they reached the ocean steamer she was ill, and during the voyage to San Francisco she lost forty-five pounds. Her husband met them there, and their joy was beyond expression. She has recovered her strength, however, and though she was greatly embittered against the Chinese when in China, she has gotten over it and bears them no ill will.

She said they made the most of every little humorous occurrence as a relief to the great tension they were under. They made pajamas for the sick men out of any material they could get. One leg possibly of figured creton and the other of a piece of table linen. These figures would amuse the men as they traced the designs with their fingers. Sometimes the members of the various legations would meet near the hospital windows and sing for the patients their home songs in their different languages. As there were eleven different nationalities in the Legation there was a variety of languages, and these familiar songs cheered and comforted the sick men.

This narrative brought the siege very close home to us, and we hope such a horror may never be repeated. It seems as if there must be a great mistake or wrong somewhere, that such conditions should obtain. I trust all may endeavor to discover where the wrong lies and do what may be to bring about more righteous conditions. H. A. P.

GOD has written on the flowers that sweeten the air—upon the breeze that rocks the flowers upon the stem—upon the rain-drops that refresh the spring of moss that lifts its head in the desert—upon its deep chambers—upon every penciled sheet that sleeps in the caverns of the deep, no less than upon the mighty sun that warms and cheers millions of creatures which live in its light—upon all his works he has written, "None liveth for himself."

THE soul collects its mightiest power by being thrown in upon itself, and coerced solitude often matures the moral and mental character marvelously.—[Robertson].

For Friends' Intelligencer.

"BY THEIR FRUITS YE SHALL KNOW THEM."

"A GOOD tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit." This, to my mind, is one of the most impressive truths uttered by Jesus in his wonderful Sermon on the Mount, in which we may find all we need to live by to insure us true happiness in this life, and peace and rest beyond. How easily we can see the result of a pure unselfish life; it needs no word of mouth, for these are as nothing; it is action and works by which we know them. Men may preach the most eloquent sermons, full of intellectual culture and scriptural knowledge, but if they fail to stop by the wayside and help their weaker brother, if they be not charitable toward others' views, if they be not patient and loving toward all, we know at once the tree is corrupt.

Then again, we come in contact with others whose beautiful works shine out in their homes, and wherever their presence is it is felt and we know theirs is the Christ spirit. It need not be always those that engage in great charitable works, nor those who are gifted with high mental attainments, that bring forth the best fruit, but only the most faithful in lending the helping hand, giving the cheering words, from a heart filled with love and sympathy, to the many wounded spirits that see only darkness and despair in the future before them.

The whole life of Jesus Christ was filled with tenderest sympathy for his fellow-creatures, thinking not of his own trials, but always found relieving other's woes. When He said to his followers, "By their fruits ye shall know them," He had reference to those who were not living according to his words and example, knowing that the fruit came always true to the tree that bore it, for as he says, "Do men gather grapes from thorns, or figs from thistles?" While He enjoins his hearers "to judge not, lest they be judged," yet the caution was "to beware of those that were false prophets," meaning so clearly those that did so much prophesying and yet neglected to do the will of their Heavenly Father. Let us then be ever watchful over our actions, that we may be known by our fruits.

WHEREVER thou art, if thou believest in God, He is thy roof to shelter thee, He is thy refuge and thy resting-place. If thou hast found this home and entered it, thou canst not be defenseless or forlorn, for He who remains the same amid all uncertainties and changes, He whose goodness antedates creation and whose faithfulness outwears the mountains, He with whom there is no variableness nor shadow of turning, is thy habitation and thy God.—[Henry van Dyke.]

BETTER heresy of doctrine, than heresy of heart. [Whittier.]

EVERY duty we omit obscures some truth we should have known.—[Ruskin.]

HOPF is the angel of the young, as memory is the angel of the old.—[Henry van Dyke.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.

BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

 PHILADELPHIA, THIRD MONTH 21, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE NEED OF THE CHURCH.

WHILE it is accepted that there never was a time in the world's history, when so much practical Christianity was interwoven into the warp and woof of everyday life as it is now, it is nevertheless true that the Church—the organized power for the support and dissemination of Christian faith and practice—has a relatively diminishing membership (as regards the entire population), and its public religious services are not well attended. The question which in the Society of Friends has taken the form of "Our Greatest Need," exists for all denominations in order not only to open avenues of aggressive work, but even to maintain their present membership and interest.

Manifold answers have come in response to our question, from suggestions for the use of devices and changes of form to vitalizing the central truth of Quakerism. The various branches of the Church are trying, perhaps unconsciously sometimes, all kinds of answers to the question of their greatest needs. Better music, a more talented pastor, the organization of auxiliary branches of work, social institutions, organized philanthropies, all manner of appeals to head and heart and social instincts, are urged and tried with varying measures of success.

Yet in spite of the satisfactory results often attending such efforts in the case of individual churches, the uncompromising fact remains, that church organizations are very incompletely fulfilling the mission entrusted to the followers of Him who gave his name to the Church "to preach the gospel to every creature."

We cannot doubt that the Church desires to extend its field of usefulness and interest. In view of the ever-widening scope of human philanthropy, it is an untenable theory to believe that the world is growing away from the principles of the Christian religion. Atheism may have interfered with the propagation of dogma, but has scarcely injured the vital essence of religion. One inevitable conclusion of the matter is forced upon us, viz: the organized Church throughout its branches in some way fails to fully meet the needs of humanity which it exists to serve.

Outside the pale of the Church are unnumbered thousands whose need for the message of Christianity "to give beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness," and "to preach deliverance to the captive," is just as great as were the necessities of the lame, the halt and the blind whom the Master healed, and we know not how to reach them.

The great question for organized Christianity everywhere is "How can we best meet the needs of humanity?" If its answer shall mean sacrifice of forms and creeds and organizations, the surrender of sectarian ambition, the revolution of methods, even the laying down of the life of the Church, that it may be resurrected into a better life, shall we hesitate to obey? We do not know the answer yet to our question, but we seek it earnestly, abiding in the promise that "to him that knocketh it shall be opened." When we find it, let us be prepared for the obedience and sacrifice it may entail upon us.

WE learn from the Manitoba Free Press that since the arrival of Peter Verigin, the Doukhobor leader, the religious craze that led to the pilgrimage of last winter has died out. Through his influence the pilgrims will proceed to take out naturalization papers, enter for their homesteads, and in other respects conform to the requirements of Canadian departmental regulations. In regard to the fund realized by the Government from the sale of the Doukhobor stock, it has been decided that after paying for all the charges caused by the pilgrimage the remainder, about $9000, shall be applied to the entry fees of the Doukhobors for their homesteads. About 2000 homesteads will be required in order that each adult Doukhobor may have his own farm. The questions of schools and vital statistics registration have yet to be dealt with, but owing to the moderation and firmness of the department and the personality of Verigin, it is believed that these will be satisfactorily adjusted.

Herbert Archer, who has been interested in the Doukhobors ever since he assisted the Society of Friends in England in arranging for their transportation to this country, is now conducting a school at the village of Voznesenie, twenty-seven miles from Swan River. He has between thirty and forty pupils whom he speaks of as bright and willing to learn, with extraordinary memories. He says there is no prejudice against the English among the Doukhobors but that they prefer private schools to public schools.

An extract from Joseph Elkinton's book, in this issue of the INTELLIGENCER, gives a fuller idea of the need of education among these people. All the money received for the sale of his book will go toward the support of the school under the care of Philadelphia Friends.

Joseph Elkinton is much interested in an effort to bring from Siberia a mother and daughter who accompanied a husband and father in exile and who now wish to rejoin their relatives and friends in Canada. The expense of bringing them to Canada will be about $300, which amount he is endeavoring to raise.

THE Pennsylvania Congress of Mothers will hold a conference of three sessions in the Chapel of the University on Sixth-day, Third month 20th, at 11 a. m., 3 p. m., and 8 p. m. In the morning the presidents of various women's associations will discuss "How best to secure coöperation in the efficient administration of the Juvenile Court and Probation System." In the afternoon Lightner Witmer, Ph.D., will present "Mental and Spiritual Development of the Child." In the evening Dr. Nathan C. Schaeffer will give an address on "The Relations of the Mothers of Pennsylvania to the Schools of the State."

An interesting pamphlet has been received from London, with the author's kind regards, consisting of two papers by John S. Rowntree (reprinted from the Friend), on the Friends' registers of births, deaths and marriages in England and Wales, from 1650 to 1900. Some extracts from these papers will be published later.

BIRTHS.

DECOU.—At "Altoikia," Trenton Junction, N. J., Twelfth month 8, 1902, to Samuel Satterthwaite and M. Lillian Yarnall DeCou, a son, named Harold Heacock DeCou.

JONES.—At Mamaroneck, N. Y., Fifth month 7, 1902, to Henry R. and Eliza Miller Jones, a daughter whose name is Elizabeth Cocks Jones.

MARRIAGES.

HALL—ROBERTSON.—On Second month 18, 1903, at the home of the bride, in Allegheny, Pa., Minnie A., daughter of A. C. Robertson, to Morgan B., son of the late Morgan B. and Susanna S. Hall, formerly of Willistown, Chester county, Pa.

KIRBY—EVANS.—At the residence of the bride's parents at Cinnaminson, New Jersey, Third month 11, 1903, first by Friends' ceremony and then by the Rev. Isaac D. Moore, pastor of the Baptist church of Columbus, New Jersey, Benjamin Rogers Kirby, son of Israel and Emily Amanda Kirby, to Anna, youngest daughter of Enoch and Rachel Evans.

WALTON—BLACK.—In Los Angeles, California, Second month 21, 1903, by Friends' ceremony, William Walton, of San José, California, and Sarah T. Black, of Bordentown, New Jersey.

DEATHS.

ASKEW.—At his home in Los Angeles, California, Third month 6, 1903, Edward Askew, aged 77 years; a member of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting.

He was the son of Peter and Hannah (Wilkinson) Askew, formerly of Brick Meeting House, Maryland, esteemed members of Nottingham Monthly Meeting.

BRADDOCK.—On Third month 2, 1903, Rachel Borton, wife of William S. Braddock, aged 68 years; a member of Haddonfield Monthly Meeting.

FURMAN.—At his home in Trenton, N. J., on the 10th of Third month, 1903, George Furman, son of the late George M. and Margaret Furman, in the 90th year of his age; a member of Chesterfield Monthly Meeting of Friends.

LEEDOM.—In West Chester, Pa., on Third month 12, 1903, Abbie W., wife of Edwin Leedom, aged 52 years, daughter of Hannah and the late Samuel Yarnall. Interment at West Chester Friends' Cemetery.

McNAIR.—Near Mechanicsville, Bucks county, Pa., on Third month 12, 1903, Martha R. McNair, wife of James D. McNair, aged 47 years; a member of Buckingham Monthly Meeting of Friends. Interment at Mechanicsville Cemetery.

MOORE.—In Huntington, Indiana, Second month 22, 1903, Joseph E. Moore, in his 82d year, after five years of serious affliction, which he patiently endured; a member of Maple Grove Monthly Meeting since its establishment in 1854.

He was always diligent in attending meetings when health permitted, and for many years was a valued elder. Upright in all business relations, ever thoughtful for the comfort of the needy, and active in giving relief, his benevolence is a fitting example to all.

A large number of friends assembled in token of their esteem and to mingle their sympathies with the bereft. Edward Coale spoke feelingly of the pure life of our departed friend and the priceless influence of one who had "fought the good fight." Elizabeth Coale voiced tender tribute to the memory of a life-long friend. Interment at Maple Grove Cemetery.

REYNOLDS.—Of diphtheria, Third month 12, 1903, in Media, Pa., Herman W., Jr., son of William L. and Carrie L. Reynolds (deceased) in his 7th year.

VALENTINE.—On Second-day, Third month 9, 1903, at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., Samuel T. Valentine, in his 83d year; a life-long member of the Society of Friends.

Samuel Titus Valentine was born in New York City, Eighth month 4, 1820, being the only son of Stephen and Ann Titus Valentine. He was descended on both sides from old and well-known Quaker families. He entered his father's store in 1835, at the age of fifteen, and was admitted as a partner in 1843, continuing the business up to the time of his death, running over a period of almost seventy years. His father, Stephen Valentine, being one of the founders of the New York Produce Exchange, he early in life joined the Exchange, and at his death was next to the oldest member. A man of the strictest integrity in business life, always living up to his word, fair and just in all his dealings with his associates, he enjoyed the respect and regard of all who came in contact with him. He is survived by four children, two sons and two daughters.

WALTON.—In Kennett Square, Pa., Third month 4, 1903, John C. Walton, in his 69th year.

WARD.—On the 6th of Third month, 1903, at Port Chester, N. Y., Tacy L. Ward, in the 79th year of her age. Interment at Purchase on the 9th instant.

EMILY A. BLACKBURN.

After a well-spent life of over three score years and ten, Emily A. Blackburn breathed her last on the 31st day of First month, 1903.

Being truly unselfish, she was ever ready to assist her neighbors and friends in time of trouble and need. She was early deprived of her father, but was most tenderly trained by a kind and loving mother, who daily walked by her Heavenly Father, and thus fitted herself to train her children in true humility of spirit and sincerity of purpose. At her mother's death Emily stepped into the vacant place in the same loving spirit, making home both beautiful and pleasant by her neatness and love. As years passed by, her devoted brother and sister would have been glad to lighten her daily burdens, but the spirit understood not that the flesh was tired, and each day saw the usual routine of little cares faithfully attended to.

She was a lover of Friends' principles and tried to live up to the same in her daily walk through life. And now with a feeling of love and sorrow we have laid her mortal frame in the bosom of nature, thinking, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

R. D. K.

DEBORAH L. BUTLER.

Died, in Grinnell, Iowa, Second month 28, 1903, Deborah L. Butler, wife of Charles Butler, in the 75th year of her age.

Deborah Lawrence Wilde was born in Quaker Springs, N. Y., Second month 10, 1828, and married Charles Butler, Second month 10, 1853. Two years after their marriage they moved to Easton, N. Y., where they lived until 1864, when they moved to Vineland, N. J. Their membership in the Society was then transferred to the Woodbury Meeting.

In their early married life Charles and Deborah became identified with the anti-slavery movement and were interested in woman suffrage, temperance and other allied reforms.

Deborah spoke frequently in philanthropic and other meetings, wrote cleverly and forcibly in both prose and verse, and was especially interested in the intellectual and moral life of young people. The home of Charles and Deborah, in Vineland, was a moral and intellectual center in the neighborhood, frequent meetings of a social and literary character being held there. She was a helper in her life, and she laid her burden down with hope and confidence in the future.

For the past eight years Deborah and her husband lived with their daughter, Ida M. Wiley, at Grinnell.

ISABELLA TYSON.

At a meeting of the Association for the Purification of the Press, of Baltimore Yearly Meeting of Friends, held Second month 11th, it was the earnest desire of the members that we express the realization of our great loss in the death of our beloved Chairman, Isabella Tyson, and that it be inscribed upon our minutes and published in the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

She has been the leading spirit in the work in which we have been engaged, and of which she was the instigator.

She was always full of faith and energy, always ready with encouragement to us to extend our influence through every avenue to the public for the promotion of a pure press, which she thought such a powerful factor in the education of the world.

When our hearts failed, or we doubted our ability to go forward, she helped us with words of hope and wisdom. She was uncommonly endowed with mental and spiritual perception, and entered with deep sympathy into the interests and lives of young people, and her large heart longed to save them from all impure influences.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, We, the members of the Press Association of Baltimore Yearly Meeting of Friends desire to acknowledge Divine purpose in putting into the life of Isabella Tyson an inspiration culminating in the formation of the Association, of which she was the moving, acting spirit, and in graciously permitting us, her co-workers, to labor with her for the past twelve years:

Resolved, That as God in his infinite wisdom has taken her from us, we unfeignedly declare our allegiance to the work which has fallen so unexpectedly into our hands and that we continue to work in the field into which we have been drawn by Isabella Tyson, scattering the seed thought of a pure press in our Yearly Meeting.

Resolved, That we go forward doing what our hands find to do, in remembrance of her who gave so many of the last years of her life to the cause she so faithfully and ably served.

SOCIETY NOTES.

At Clear Creek Monthly Meeting, Illinois, in Second month, minutes were granted to Abel Mills and his wife, Elizabeth, the former a minister, the latter an elder, to attend Philadelphia and New York Yearly Meetings, and also appoint some meetings in other localities, if way seems clear. This was endorsed by Blue River Quarterly Meeting, held in Chicago, Second month 28. Their prospect is to make an extended visit to Boston, where two of their sons reside.

A committee was appointed to address a letter of commendation to the Governor of the State, for his suppression of a pugilistic performance in Springfield, Illinois, to which a reply has since been received from his secretary.

Third month monthly meeting was held the 7th instant, with very few in attendance; the recent heavy rains, and the frost coming out of the ground had made the roads very heavy traveling for those living at a distance from meeting. Reports of the representatives appointed last month to attend the quarterly meeting were given, which, for those that were unable to attend, were very interesting, as it seemed to draw all closer in that bond of true fellowship so necessary for the advancement of any society. A report of the committee of Baltimore Yearly Meeting on the suppression of the impurity of the press, was read, giving us an idea of the extent of their labor. There is certainly a need of laborers. May the good work go on.

M. E. P.

BLUE RIVER QUARTERLY MEETING.

The Friends of Blue River Quarterly Meeting met with those of Chicago Central Meeting, for the third time, on Second month 28th and Third month 1st.

On Seventh-day at the meeting for worship much feeling was expressed that we might realize our opportunities as Friends and teach our children the beliefs and principles of the Society so that they may be able to appreciate them. The "Word" to which John refers in the Inner Light; and when it comes to us it gives us an inner balance. The Apostle tells us there are two things we must believe—that God exists and that we can find Him. A young Friend offered supplication that we might get nearer our Heavenly Father in spirit and in truth.

In the afternoon, the queries brought forth many helpful thoughts. Some felt the second one to be the most important of all, and if that could be satisfactorily answered, we should have no trouble in answering others. The fourth one suggested to our minds the enormous use of alcoholics and narcotics in the patent medicines so greatly advertised and used, and that we should avoid them. A young woman of Englewood told us, by request, of her work in the Loyal Temperance Legion among one hundred and fifty children in the heart of Chicago. It is felt by some that our queries should contain a clause as, to our influence in regard to capital punishment.

On First-day morning the First-day School Association met at 9.30, when several papers were read. Walter Messenger read one by Cornelia J. Shoemaker from the Young Friends' Review of Second month. Myrtle Brown sent a paper appealing to young Friends—"What are we doing and what can we do?" read by Rebecca J. Mason. "Fervent in Spirit" from Dean Bond's "Words by the Way;" was read by Emma G. Holloway. Cordelia Wilson sent a message upon "Our Sins of Omission."

An elderly Friend referred to Phil. iv., 8, in an appeal to the young people to get up higher. What are we thinking of all the time? There is no greater character builder than thought. If we think of those things which are lovely and true our characters will be in accordance. If evil thoughts come to us, we can thrust them so far away they will not return. Our accountability commences when we harbor and welcome such.

At the meeting for worship we were reminded that if we seek first the kingdom of Heaven, then all these things shall be added. What the world needs to-day is more of the Christ spirit, more divine harmony. The possibilities of him who has sought this first, are unlimited—he has a self-poise and control not seen elsewhere. As the sun and stars are manifestations of God, so his Spirit in us is the Christ to enlighten the world. In every soul is the germ of divine life and if we permit, it will grow and produce the Spirit. The greatest manifestation of God is this germ of Himself in us. E. G. H.

Chicago, Illinois.

SMALL cheer and great welcome make a merry feast.—[Shakespeare.]

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE GREATEST NEED.

Two thoughts expressed by Friends in the issue of Twelfth month 6th, "That we need to proselyte" and that "We must not hide our light under a bushel;" have, in substance, been in my mind for some months. We should be more cordial in a religious way, and ask our social acquaintances and friends to come to our religious meetings, and give them just as warm a welcome there as in our own homes. Another thing, Friends ought to talk more of our doctrines to all strangers; from experience I know they are always only too glad to hear all I could tell them, which alas! is all too little. We must "let our light so shine, that men may see our good works," and let them know upon what a firm rock we stand as a religious body. Our beliefs and testimonies are such excellent ones and so satisfying to us, that we must not fear they will not give the same satisfaction to others. It seems to me we have grown too selfish and appear to want to keep our religion to ourselves, and we seem to feel afraid that a stranger will pollute our sanctuary.

Having been thrown among many kinds of people in several localities away from Friends, I wish to testify to the great Christian kindness and cordiality which we have received from all the different denominations. There never was a word said to us about joining their churches, the ministers simply bade us welcome in a very kindly spirit and were glad and interested to know that we were Friends.

My thought in the main is, that if each Friend, young or old, would tell all he knows of our beliefs to any inquiring of him, and if we would be more cordial in inviting strangers to meet with us, that there would be a great strengthening of our Society in a short time.

EMILIE G. POLLARD.

Saltsburn, England, Twelfth month 16th, 1902.

GUESTS OF HONOR.

From the Schofield School Bulletin.

THE birth month of the founder of the Schofield School at Aiken, S. C., had several red-letter days in 1903.

A most pleasant surprise was a visit from Susanna Yarnall, of Malvern, Pa. and her cousin N. Worrall. They were in time for the Farmers' Conference and deeply interested in its proceedings. The next week we were made happy by the presence of Charles F. Jenkins and his wife. At the last meeting of the Board of Trustees he was elected to fill the vacancy of his father, the late Howard M. Jenkins.

A few days later came Frances J. Garrison, of Boston, and his sister, Mrs. Henry Vallard, of N. Y., and her son and his wife. Few can realize our pleasure in showing the Institution to all these friends. The pages of memory were opened and Martha Schofield saw herself a little girl and felt again the touch of William Lloyd Garrison, as he laid his hand on her head and blessed her. His words then have never been out of her heart and the blessing has followed her through all the years. She was at his home in the sixties when war was plowing rough furrows in lives and hearts.

Years after Lucretia Mott gave her a silk bag, sent to her from England in 1825 by a lady who said they used them to carry anti-slavery documents in favor of freedom. A few evenings later Martha Schofield, at the house of Mary Beans, in Philadelphia, showed the bag to William Lloyd Garrison, who recognized it at once as the one loaned by Lucretia Mott to Benjamin Lundy on his way from Baltimore to New England, where he first met W. L. Garrison. This bag with letter from the sender and documents is among her treasures. On one side is the picture of a slave woman holding her child and these words:

"Negro woman, who sittest pining in captivity weeping over thy sick child; though no one seeth thee, God seeth thee; though no one pitieth thee, God pitieth thee; raise thy voice forlorn and abandoned one; call upon Him from amidst thy bonds, for assuredly He will hear thee."

FROM AN ISOLATED FRIEND.

It is pleasant to be remembered by the Society that I have loved since early childhood, as even at that time and for many years after I was a regular attender of Friends' Meeting feeling that the First-day of the week was almost a blank unless spent in the dear old house of worship. The loving Father was with us and manifested his presence in the hearts of many of the young people.

Some of them were chosen to remain under the old roof-tree, while others were, no doubt, led thousands of miles away for some good purpose of his own, but his sweet promise, "I will be with thee," takes away loneliness and fear, while He is oft-times followed unknowingly to earthly pastures green where He has work for them to do.

I am not a member of the Society of Friends' except in heart and feeling. I have always loved their belief and their plain simple way of living, and having a dear mother who was a birthright member I was reared in that way and am always glad to be recognized as a Friend.

I have received the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER for several years; it seems like an old friend that I gladly welcome each week.

S. N. T.

Alameda, Cal.

HOW TO BRING UP A SON.—Make home the brightest and most attractive place on earth. Make him responsible for the performance of a limited number of daily duties. Never punish him in anger. Do not ridicule his conceits, but rather talk frankly on matters in which he is interested. Let him feel free to invite his friends to your home and table. Encourage his confidence by giving him ready sympathy and advice. Do not discourage "collection manias;" they help to give information and fix habits of investigation and perseverance. Be careful to impress upon his mind that making character is more important than making money. Live Christ before him all the time; then you will be able to talk of Christ to him with power when occasions offer. Be much in prayer for his salvation and spiritual growth.

—[Marvin.]

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—At the meeting of the Young Friends' Association Prof. Nathaniel Schmidt, of Cornell University, was the speaker of the evening, his subject being, "The Legacy of the Quaker."

He spoke of Fox, the Prophet, of Penn, the Organizer, and of Barclay, the Philosopher. Friends have originated no new doctrine since the days of the fathers, with the possible exception of Elias Hicks, and they have great need to guard carefully their legacies of the Inward Light, the Peace Principles, and the Belief in Moderation, left them by the men who dared and died for the Quaker faith.

HELEN MOORE FOGG, Sec. pro. tem.

CHESTER, PA.—A regular meeting of the Chester Friends' Association was held in the meeting-house on Sixth-day evening, Third month 13th. Prof. Edward Clarkson Wilson, of the Faculty of Friends' Central School, Philadelphia, gave us an illustrated talk on his travels through England and Scotland on a bicycle. He delighted his audience for an hour and a half with anecdotes and lantern illustrations of his summer trip through the historical land of Wordsworth, Burns, Scott, and the Cathedral towns. Chester Friends' Association feels deeply indebted to Prof. Wilson for his kindness.

IDA E. HOUSTON, Cor. Sec.

BALTIMORE, MD.—A regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held in the Library of Park Avenue Meeting House on the evening of Third month 13th.

Arthur K. Taylor, representing the Literature Committee, gave a brief review of George Fox's "Gospel Truths Demonstrated."

Dr. O. Edward Janney, in behalf of the Historical Committee, presented an interesting and instructive paper on "George Fox and his Message to Men."

NAOMI LEE SPICER, Sec.

MANSFIELD, N. J.—On the evening of Third month 26th the Young Friends' Association met at Joseph F. Taylor's. J. Russel Smith entertained the association with an interesting talk on "The Growth of the Quaker Idea."

He said that religion began by the founding of the Christian Church. Our race, the Germanic, was not its founder; it came from Palestine through the Greeks and Jews. In about 1580 printing was invented and the Bible was put into the hands of the people. Near this time George Fox arose and found a corrupt church. Quakerism rose and many came to think of the life within, the inner voice; this gave us a free religious ministry. If the life within is pure then the outward cannot be far astray. A man set apart cannot tell us how to live; he must live with us: Religion received by communion with the Maker is not bought and sold. Every man has a message for his neighbor if he has led a proper, or spiritual life.

The members showed their appreciation of the address by appropriate remarks at the close.

MABELLE E. HARVEY, Sec'y.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Friends' Association of New York and Brooklyn met in Brooklyn, Third month 8th, 1903. "Current Topics" was devoted to elucidating the reasons for the uneasiness among European statesmen regarding events likely to occur upon the death of the present aged ruler of Austria. A "Literature" report brought out some views of Macaulay concerning William Penn, in which he found reasons for praise as well as for blame. The reading of a paper followed, entitled "Friends and Philosophies." This, although highly appreciated, called out little, if any, discussion. It showed how little sympathy Friends had for the reasoning (?) of the so-called philosophies of the early times.

WALTER HAVILAND, Secretary.

GENERAL BOOTH, head and founder of the Salvation Army is a vegetarian.

EDUCATIONAL.

CONFERENCE IN PHILADELPHIA.

THE attendance at the Educational Conference of the Association of Friends' Schools and the Committee on Education, on the 14th instant, was quite large, and much interest was manifested in the lecture given by Paul H. Hanus, of Harvard University, on "A Modern Program of Studies."

Professor Hanus would limit the teaching of arithmetic in the first eight years to the fundamental rules, fractions and as much percentage as is used in the calculation of interest, and would introduce algebra and geometry in the seventh and eighth years. At the end of the third school year the child should be able to read anything that comes within his comprehension; after that the work of the reading classes should be devoted to the interpretation and expression of thought. He said that spelling comes by nature, but that nature should be assisted by judicious drilling upon words liable to be spelled wrongly.

Only the elements of English grammar should be taught. In the seventh year a modern language should be begun; in attempting to master a foreign language the child will discover the value of grammar. The lecturer gave the preference to a modern language (especially German), because after a few years of study the pupil will enjoy the literature of that language.

He said that pupils who expected to go no further than the grammar school should have some branches that would be helpful to them after leaving the school, such as sewing, cooking, and the various forms of manual training. Instruction of this kind, tending to fit pupils for vocations, should be broadened in the last years of the high school course, for the benefit of those who do not expect to go to college.

A round table followed in which questions were asked by J. Eugene Baker (who presided over the meeting), Professor Bartlett, Edward C. Wilson, Louis Ambler, Henry Arnold Todd, Joseph H. Walton and others. In reply to these Professor Hanus said that he knew of no school in which an adjustable program of the kind described was in successful operation; and that he thought girls should have fewer periods of study per week than boys as they are more apt to injure their health by hard study. He thought eighteen years was quite young enough to enter upon a college course.

At the close of the discussion a motion was carried that a committee be appointed composed of members from every school and college belonging to the association, to plan an improved program of studies that will unite all these educational institutions in a well organized system.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

The Intercollegiate Debate between Franklin and Marshall and Swarthmore was held here on the 13th. The question, "Resolved, That the permanent interests of the United States were best served by retaining possession of the Philippines," was debated, on the affirmative by Franklin and Marshall and on the negative by Swarthmore. The teams were Swarthmore, J. Hibberd Taylor, Edward R. Meredith, and Halliday R. Jackson; Franklin and Marshall, J. Nevin Schaeffer, James A. Boehm, and Frank K. Hoffman. The judges, Rev. Charles L. Fry, Philadelphia, Mr. W. B. Selvage, University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Edgar Singer, University of Pennsylvania, decided in favor of the affirmative. Although our boys failed to get the decision, we feel that they deserve great credit for the manner in which they represented Swarthmore.

The contest under the auspices of the Intercollegiate Oratorical Union will be held here on the 20th. It is hoped that the friends of the College will attend and so aid us in extending a hearty welcome to our guests.

Dr. B. F. Battin lectured before the Buckingham Teachers' Institute, Seventh-day, the 14th, on the "German University," and on First-day, the 15th, at West Grove Meeting-house on the "Principles of Quakerism."

Prof. J. R. Hayes, Dr. B. F. Battin, Carroll Hayes, and Roland G. Kent represented Swarthmore at the annual dinner of the Pennsylvania Chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa, at the University Club, on Seventh-day evening. The chief speaker of the evening was Thomas Wentworth Higginson.

The Young Friends' Association met on First-day evening. Prof. Beardsley gave a very interesting talk concerning some of the pictures and objects in the Friends' Historical Library. Blanche E. Brown read a paper on the life of Lucretia Mott. William Walker, Walker Bond, and Herbert Thatcher gave incidents of the Civil War, as gathered from the Friends of that time. Dr. Holmes and William E. Roberts were appointed delegates to the General Conference of Young Friends' Associations to be held in Philadelphia on the 21st.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The traveling library prepared by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting's Committee on Education and the Distribution of Income of the Samuel Jeanes Fund, now consists of six cases of about sixty volumes each, and is designed for the use not only of First-day Schools, but of meetings and other organizations of Friends within the limits of the yearly meeting.

They are loaned on conditions similar to those regulating the First-day School circulating libraries and like those are placed under the direction of Ellis W. Bacon, 3212 Baring St., Philadelphia, to whom Friends desiring a case will please apply.

Daniel E. Griest, who has been traveling in California with John H. Vaill, daughter and nephew, of Quakertown, N. J., has returned to his home in Ellis, Kansas. He reports that they have found a tract of 3000 acres about 30 miles south of Stockton which will be an ideal place for a Friends' settlement if the land can be obtained at a reasonable price. As to whether in Kansas, he writes that there has recently been a snowfall of 20 inches in the middle and western part of the State.

A Friend in Mickleton, N. J. writes that three lectures have been given before the Friends' School at that place, one on Second month 3, by Francis Comly, on "A trip through India;" one on Second month 27, by Dr. Wm. I. Hull, of Swarthmore, Pa., on "The George Junior Republic," illustrated by lantern slides; and one on Third month 12, by Elizabeth Lloyd, on "The Chemistry of a Candle." All were much appreciated by the school, as well as the patrons and friends in the neighborhood.

Lucretia M. Blankenburgh, President of the Pennsylvania Woman's Suffrage Association, left Philadelphia on the 16th to attend the National American Woman's Suffrage Association, which opened in New Orleans on the 18th.

LITERARY NOTES.

THE second volume of "Among Ourselves" has been received from the author, Sarah P. Morrison, whose address is 120 South Sixteenth street, Richmond, Ind. (For notice of the first volume see INTELLIGENCER for First month 25, 1902). The sub-title is "Catherine and Her Surroundings." Catherine was the oldest daughter of Benoni and Rebecca Trueblood Morris; she was born on the 1st of Ninth month, 1812, in Pasquotank county, North Carolina, and made the journey with her parents to the new home in the "North-western Territory."

The book describes her early life in Salem, Indiana; her trip on horseback, in company with her father, to the yearly meeting at Richmond; her journey in a carriage from her home to Westtown School; her life at Westtown; and the visits of the young teacher of the neighborhood school after her return home, which ended in a happy marriage. Among the letters received by her while at Westtown are some from school friends in Solebury and Buckingham, Pa.

The frontispiece is a beautiful picture, drawn by Sarah E. Trueblood, of Philadelphia, of Catherine and her father starting to yearly meeting, with the other members of the large family (not omitting the cat and the dog) on the porch and in the yard, watching the departure. Other illustrations are a sketch of Indiana Yearly Meeting in 1844, a picture of Westtown School in 1840, and a reproduction of the last photograph of "Old Westtown."

"An Old Country House" (Harpers) is a book of distinct charm, a book to be read deliberately and in favorite seasons. It dilates upon the happy life of a young couple who lease an antique house in the country, a house redolent of memories and mystery, with a quaint old garden beside it. Richard LeGallienne's old-world fancy is exactly fitted for musing upon such a theme as this; with his quiet enthusiasm for old books and old flowers and old manners, he recalls the masters of an earlier day and one thinks of him as of the same school with those sunny-hearted authors, Charles Lamb, Washington Irving, and Edward FitzGerald.

The pictures by Elizabeth Shippen Green are conceived in sympathy with the writer's delicate and pleasant narrative.

Two pamphlets have been received from Headley Brothers, London, that will be read with especial interest by the many friends of the author, John William Graham. One is the Presidential Address given at the Ackworth Old Scholars' Meeting, in 1902, on "Education and Religion," in which it is claimed that education produces "a sympathetic consciousness of human brotherhood, a worshipful awe in presence of nature and nature's God, a love of truth, and humility of mind," and therefore "produces the very qualities which go to help the growth of the best kind of religion." The author also shows how the power of the ministry among Friends is largely proportionate to the general intelligence of the whole membership.

The second pamphlet is an address on "The Meaning of Quakerism," the reading of which is a spiritual feast. It shows that the Indwelling Power is the Inspirer to every noble action; the Consoler, when the heart cries out in its emptiness; the Rebuker and Convincer of sin when we have done wrong; and our Guide, the enlightener of our judgment.

Both of these addresses, and a companion pamphlet on "The Lord's Supper," which we have previously noticed, may be obtained from the Friends' Book Association, Fifteenth and Race streets, for ten cents each.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

MY SOUL AND I.

My soul is filled with quiet rest
And all that is, is for the best.

My garden spot is very small,
But God and Nature's over all.

I cannot see beyond the day,
Yet meet no evil on the way.

Housed in God I have no fear,
Heaven and earth are wondrous near;

For every soul that finds its own
Has won a kingdom and a throne,—

A throne of grace on which to stand,
A kingdom found in every land.

For God and Truth and Life and Love
Are sovereign in the courts above.

Third month 6, 1903.

ESTHER S. WALLACE.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE TWO CROWNS.

Two crowns there are,—a crown of Peace and Love,
Each streaming forth its beams divinely fair;
And one glows steady as the stars above,
And one with fitful radiance sparkles rare.
One crown is of the lilies sweet and pale,
Which light with airy grace the shady dell,
And one of roses red, that in the vale,
Rival the blush where Cupid's arrow fell
To strike with mortal wound some loving heart;
And blessed are they who wear the crown of light,
And calm, serene, dwell they from grief apart;
But who wears the crown of roses bright,
Must know that love, like roses, bears its thorn,
To wound the brow its beauty would adorn.

SARAH PALMER BYRNES.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

DOLOBRAN.

Suggested by a visit to Clement A. Griscom's famed Wild Garden, near Haverford.

FAIR Dolobran ! thou crown'st our hopes—
Thou Art and Nature's child,
With stately homes and sunny slopes
And garden—wondrous wild.

What marvel here the eye awaits,
What years of patient toil ;
Ah ! who shall say how many States
Gave tribute to thy soil ?

From Carolinian grove and field
To far off rocky Maine,
From where Wisconsin's beavers build,
From wood and field and plain,

Are countless wild flowers gathered here
On hillside, in ravine :
No species known but here appear,
No vacant spot is seen.

With creeping growth and trailing vine
Each rugged rock is dressed,
While drooping ferns profusely join
Their beauty to the rest.

Beyond is wealth of brilliant flowers
Enhanced by human skill :
Here, Nature in her quiet hours
Works out her own sweet will.

Though oft the bloom induced by art
The wond'ring fancy warms,
Naught draws so close to Nature's heart
As these, her simpler forms.

ROBERT TILNEY.

WHAT MARCH DOES.

IN the dark silence of her chambers low
March works out sweeter things than mortals know ;

Her noiseless looms ply on with busy care,
Weaving the fine cloth that the flowers wear ;

She sews the seams in violet's queer hood,
And paints the sweet arbutus of the wood ;

Out of a bit of sky's delicious blue
She fashions hyacinths and harebells, too ;

And from a sunbeam makes a cowslip fair,
Or spins a gown for a daffodil to wear ;

She pulls the cover from the crocus-beds,
And bids the sleepers lift their drowsy heads :

"Come, early risers ! Come, Anemone,
My pale Wind-flower, awake, awake !" calls she—

"The world expects you, and your lovers wait
To give you welcome at Spring's open gate."

She marshals the close armies of the grass,
And polishes their green blades as they pass ;

And all the blossoms of the fruit-trees sweet
Are piled in rosy shells about her feet.

Within her great alembic she distills
The dainty odors which each flower fills ;

Nor does she err, and give to mignonette
The perfume that belongs to violet ;

Nature does well whatever task she tries
Because obedient ; there the secret lies.

—May Riley Smith.

EDUCATION AMONG THE DOUKHOBORS.

From Joseph Elkinton's book, "The Doukhobors."

A PEOPLE who think they have come, in spiritual descent at least, from the three children of Israel who came out of the burning fiery furnace without the smell of fire upon their garments, and who believe the mission of evangelizing the world has been committed to them, because they have the oracles of God in the form of the new and great commandment of Jesus Christ ; such a people, exhibiting in no common degree the fruits of the spirit, should be led out of their mental darkness without offending their conscientious convictions. This is only possible through sympathy and love. The Apostle Paul dealt with such a state of mind and faith when he wrote, "Let not him that eateth (meat) despise him that eateth (it) not ; and let not him that eateth not despise him that eateth ; for God hath received him. . . . Let us not therefore judge one another any more, but judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way. . . . All things indeed are pure, but it is evil for that man who eateth with offense."

The truth has always been largely entrusted to poor, ignorant men. It was so in the first and in every subsequent century of our era. To be sure it was well-nigh buried by the Judaism and narrow-mindedness of the first disciples of our Lord, and it is still struggling for recognition in the professing church of Christ.

"But these very limitations may become a blessing. Not to supplant others in the strife after earthly position or possessions, but to gain the spiritual power to turn the limitations which defeat into the instruments of heavenly blessing, makes one a prince with God. Limitations are often the conditions of the birth of character."¹

The more I talked with these honest-hearted men and women the more fully and deeply impressed became the conviction that they possessed the very germ of moral, civil and spiritual reform, and that within a few years their children will acquire such knowledge of American life and customs as to correct the misunderstandings of their parents. One of the very pleasant scenes that I recall was the evident satisfaction which the older members of a certain family in the Saskatchewan colony showed when a little boy of ten years read to me out of an English primer, and this method of reaching the elders is the key to the whole educational situation. As soon as the parents have confidence in those who teach their children,—that they will not undermine any of their religious tenets, and are working in a truly disinterested way,—they extend their hearty co-operation.

The educational service which Nellie Baker, of Toronto, rendered to the Doukhobors is one of the brightest spots in the history of the settlement. It is graphically described in the Christian Herald of Eleventh month 7th, 1900 :

"The Doukhobors are anxious to become Canadians and to be able to communicate with the Anglo-Saxon settlers around them. Knowing this, two ladies of Kingston, Ontario, Mrs. Eliza H. Varney, a Quaker, and her young cousin, Miss Nellie Baker, determined to establish a little summer school at one of the Doukhobor villages on Good Spirit Lake. Mrs. Varney had already passed the summer of 1899 there, conducting a dispensary for the Doukhobors, who have no physicians among them. They pitched their tents near three of the Doukhobor villages: a small tent for their residence, another for the dispensary (which was under Mrs. Varney's charge), and a third 20 by 20 feet, for the school, over which Miss Baker presided, and for which her studies at Queen University (together with a natural aptitude and Christian sympathy) had fitted her. Mrs. Varney had won the affection of the villagers the previous year, and they were not slow to send their children to the new school, some of them arriving before the ladies had unpacked their luggage.

¹George A. Barton, "The Roots of Christian Teaching as found in the Old Testament."

"Miss Baker's report of her experiment, which has just been made to the Canadian Commissioner of Immigration, shows what difficulties she encountered. She found herself confronted by a tentful of boys and girls, with none of whom did she have a single known word in common. 'By signs and motions,' she says, 'I got them seated on the prairie grass of the tent floor, and holding up a pencil, said, "One." I could not detect any apparent comprehension. Then taking up another pencil, I said "Two," and then another and said, "Three." Still no response and my heart sank somewhat. However, I decided to repeat the method, and as I said "One," I noticed a look on a boy's face that told me he knew I was counting, and I saw him turn and speak to the others. Almost instantly they understood, and soon, repeating after me, they counted up to ten.'

"From this beginning the course of teaching proceeded. Some of the pupils walked five miles to school and five miles back every day. The children were never tired. The favorite method was object teaching. 'They learned the divisions of time from a watch, to count money from coins, and so on. The children had a natural taste for figures, and at the end of the two months the older children had succeeded in getting through one-half of the multiplication table, and some of the more advanced pupils were in the second (Canadian) reader.' In writing, she declares that some of them equaled or surpassed the teacher.

"The children were anxious to have tasks assigned to them to prepare at home, and never were satisfied with the amount of such tasks, they always wanted more. At first, the Doukhobors did not know that Miss Baker's work was, like Mrs. Varney's, entirely voluntary and unremunerated. When they found it out, they sent a committee to her to offer her some compensation, although they were in need themselves. When she declined it they told her that they thanked her 'all the day and all the night.' Some of the older boys, who did not know a word of any language but Russian at the beginning of July, can now, after barely two months' teaching, correspond with Miss Baker in 'fairly understandable English.'

Helen Morland, of London, has been conducting a school at Good Spirit Lake for three months, under the auspices of English Friends, and Hannah Bellows, daughter of John Bellows, expects to join her in the spring of 1903. As stated elsewhere, Friends of Philadelphia are providing a school for the Prince Albert colony, on the banks of the Saskatchewan River.

PROFIT SHARING IN THE STEEL CORPORATION.

THE method is really a very simple one. Employees subscribe for stock, one or two shares apiece. The shares cost $82.50, or less than the market value. Each employee pays in monthly installments, taken from his wages, and he may have the payments made small or large, as he likes, save that not more than 25 per cent. of his wages may be so used in any month, and he may not be more than three years in completing payment. Dividends at the rate of 7 per cent. a year go to the subscriber from the date of his first payment. Interest at 5 per cent. is charged on the deferred payments. In other words, the corporation sells stock below the market price, on credit, and pays the holder 2 per cent. a year in dividends more than he has to pay in interest. Here is a direct inducement to the investment of savings. But this is not all. Inducements are offered the employee to complete payment for his stock and to hold it. As soon as he has fully paid for it, the certificate is issued in his name, and he is free to dispose of it. But to make it worth his while to hold it and at the same time keep his place as a working partner in the company's service, the corporation says to him: "If you hold your stock, and beginning with January next year you show it to the treasurer of your company, and present a letter from the proper official that during the preceding year you have been in the employ of the company, and have shown a proper interest in its welfare and progress, and you do this each January for five years, we will give you, in addition to the dividends paid you, a bonus of five dollars per share for each year. During the second period of five years, we will pay you a further yearly bonus as a reward for your continuous faithful service." The amount of the second bonus cannot now be fixed, but it will doubtless be larger than the first one. Ample provision is made for the protection of subscribers who from one cause or another are unable to complete payment. Subscribers who discontinue payments get their money back and keep the difference between the 7 per cent. dividends and the 5 per cent. interest. In the case of subscribers who die or are disabled while faithfully serving the corporation, after having paid for their stock, the five dollars per share yearly bonus is not lost, but is paid over to them or to their estates.

It would be worth the while of any reader of the Review of Reviews to sit down and figure out the profits of a rolling-mill worker who subscribed for, say, two shares of stock and undertook to pay for them in one year. The shares would cost him $165. His monthly payments would be $13.75. Five per cent. interest on these deferred payments would be about $3.75. At the end of the year he would own his stock outright, and get the $14 in dividends, or $10.25 over the interest. If he remained in the service of the company for five years, he would in that period draw in dividends $66.25, and $50 in yearly bonuses of $5 a share. His total outgo for the five years would be $165; his total income, $116.25. And he would then have, as his own, free of all charges, an investment bringing him perpetually $14 a year, and at least $24 a year as long as he remained in the service of the Steel Corporation.—[Walter Wellman, in the Review of Reviews.]

MASSACHUSETTS' ANSWER—THERE IT STANDS.

From the Springfield Republican.

THERE ought to be no cause for taking especial notice of the fact that the man whom the comrades of the Massachusetts Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic has elected to the third highest office in their gift is of African descent; for there should be no more distinction between men of light and dark complexion now than there was when the white man and the man of color went into battle together side by side for the preservation of the Republic. Unfortunately, however, this act of the Massachusetts Encampment must be taken cognizance of—it is bound, indeed, to produce more or less comment all over the country—and a quite insignificant act in itself be made the subject of commendation and of condemnation, both alike, under right conditions, wholly irrelevant.

But if it were necessary to draw the color line to the advantage of the colored man as a protest to the discrimination which prevails to so great an extent in all sections of the land against the Negro, there is no State in which it could be done more fittingly than in Massachusetts, the State that sent the first colored regiment into the field in rebellion days, and that has never known black from white in her treatment of the soldiers and sailors who represented her in the great Civil War. The man in question, Mr. James H. Wolff, has before this been honored by his veteran associates, having been at the head of his own post and also judge advocate general of the State Encampment. He had been elevated to new honors not because he has a dark skin, but in spite of that fact. The Grand Army of Massachusetts is to be congratulated, therefore, upon having so competent a member for the place he is to occupy, and also upon showing itself above an illogical and stupid prejudice—a prejudice that by-and-by will come to be recognized for what it is—the sign of a backwoods state of provincial narrowness.

A Little Gentleman.

HE was a tiny little fellow, surely not more than five years old, and, as he called his afternoon papers at the corner of Twelfth and Market streets, many people gazed at him with mingled amusement and pity. He had long brown curls, wet with the drenching rain; and his shrill little voice had a baby lisp. A very stout, elderly woman, apparently weighing close to two hundred pounds, paused at the south side of Market street, and looked askance at the miniature river of slush and water and at the passing procession of wagons and trolley cars. The little newsboy was quick to size up the situation. Running up to her, he exclaimed: "Don't be afraid, lady. I'll help you across." Reaching up his tiny little hand, he clutched her by the arm, and together the pair threaded their way to the opposite curb. Then the stout woman opened her purse, gravely handed the little fellow a coin, and disappeared into the Reading Terminal.—[Philadelphia Record.]

Drunkards Classed as Lunatics.

THEY passed a law in Iowa last year permitting the confinement of confirmed drunkards in lunatic asylums. It made little stir, but within eight months three hundred alcoholic patients were under restraint and treatment. An Iowa dispatch says that inebriates continue to flow into the State asylums at the rate of about fifty a month, and that an Iowa court has just ruled that their constitutional rights are not violated by their detention. Some of the inebriates don't like to be shut up, but the treatment they get seems to be humane and salutary. Their liquor is stopped, and they have to work on farms, and are encouraged to improve their habits. When they seem to be cured they are discharged, and report says that, so far, about seventy-five per cent. of the cases have so resulted. This seems like excellent management of drunkards. Men who cannot, or will not, control their thirst ought not to be left at large to get themselves and others into mischief. Neither should they be sent to jail. If they are irresponsible because of their propensities, they should be shut up and looked after until they are cured, and while under restraint they should be made to work for their living. The Iowa method seems a good deal more enlightened than the New York plan of keeping up an endless chain of dipsomaniacs between Manhattan and "the Island." An easy, legal method of securing timely periods of seclusion for unmanageable drunkards ought to be made for the peace of families and the diminution of drunkenness. Men have no moral right to be drunken. If they have demonstrated a dangerous and continuous lack of self-restraint, some other sort of restraint should be substituted for it. The Iowa idea seems pretty sound.—[Harper's Weekly.]

A New Astringent.

SUPRARENALIN, a product of the packing house industry, is one of the most precious articles in existence, being worth seven thousand dollars a pound, and is so powerful that one part of it dissolved in one hundred thousand parts of water will show its presence when tested with chloride of iron.

It has been found that the suprarenal gland of the animal—which is found about the kidneys—when reduced to a drug, possesses wonderful astringent properties: so powerful that operations on the eye and nose may be performed without the loss of any blood. With the addition of cocaine, such operations are also painless. The great value of this to a surgeon will be appreciated when one realizes that when cutting around the eye he can have a perfectly clear field, and can do his work much more quickly, as a flow of blood would not only obscure the operation, but would make it necessary to stop frequently and wipe it away in order that he may see where he is cutting. The active principle has been isolated at the Armour laboratory, and has been named "suprarenalin," a word that has not yet gotten into the dictionary. It takes seven thousand grains of the fresh glandular substance to make one grain of the "suprarenalin." However, it is very powerful, and solutions employed by surgeons in performing minor operations on the eye, ear and throat vary from one ten-thousandth to one one-thousandth in strength. This suprarenalin is said, also, to be the most powerful stimulant known. It may take the place of strychnia in the pharmacopœia.—[Duluth News Tribune.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

THE Czar of Russia has issued a decree providing for freedom of religion throughout his dominions, establishing to some degree local self-government, and making other concessions to the village committees. It is believed that the religious liberty granted to "all creeds" will include the Jews. Self government will be extended to the smaller communities, corresponding to townships in the United States, with liberty to retain the communal system which now prevails extensively, or to withdraw from it. Many foreign papers express doubts of the Czar's ability to make his proclamation effective, owing to the opposition it will encounter from subordinate officials in Church and State.

AMONG the measures for the promotion of temperance and morality enacted by the Fifty-seventh Congress were the Gillett-Lodge Act, forbidding Americans to sell intoxicants and opium in the islands of the Pacific having no civilized government, and the Bowersock amendment, prohibiting the sale of alcoholic liquors in United States immigrant stations. An act was also passed forbidding dealers in tobacco from putting pictures and cards promotive of gambling and impurity in packages of tobacco or cigarettes. After the failure to restore the sale of beer in the army canteen a second $500,000 was appropriated for amusement rooms and gymnasiums at soldiers' barracks.

COLONIAL SECRETARY CHAMBERLAIN'S first appearance in the House of Commons since his return from his visit to Africa, was signalized by a very cordial reception from the Conservatives and Unionists. There was an enthusiastic Liberal counter demonstration when Will Crooks, the new Liberal member for Woolwich, took his seat. Crooks, who was the Labor candidate in his district, was supported by the entire strength of the Liberal party, and defeated the Conservative candidate, in what was considered a Tory stronghold, by an overwhelming majority. The successful candidate was outspoken in his denunciations of the Boer War and the resulting financial burdens.

ON the 17th instant the Senate ratified the Panama Canal treaty, without amendment, by a vote of 73 to 5. This must now be ratified by the Colombian Congress, which meets next month. The treaty authorizes the payment of $40,000,000 for the franchises and unfinished work of the New Panama Canal Company, and stipulates for the payment to Colombia of $10,000,000 in gold on the exchange of ratifications, and $250,000 in gold annually, beginning nine years after the date of ratification. The treaty with Cuba, which has been ratified by the Cuban Senate, is at this writing still under consideration by the United States Senate.

AFTER Ninth month first all steam railroad vehicles—engines, tenders, snowplows and cabooses as well as cars—must have automatic couplers, and all couplers on any particular train must be of the same pattern. And at least half the cars in every train must be equipped with air-brakes. Such is the requirement imposed on all interstate railroads by the amendment of the federal safety-appliance law enacted by the last Congress. This is presumably the final step in bringing about a change on behalf of the safety of railroad employees begun by the government a dozen years ago.

THE steady gain of the United States in supplying the foreign merchandise required by Mexico is the subject of special comment by an official of the British Legation at the City of Mexico, in a report made to the British Foreign Office on Mexican trade in 1901. This country now sends to Mexico 55 per cent. of all her imports. The British official gives as a reason for the increase of American and the decrease of British imports that "British manufacturers and merchants generally will not adopt more modern methods, and consequently what is lost to the United Kingdom is gain to some other country."

THE famine in northern Europe continues. It is reported that over 400,000 Finns, 200,000 Swedes, and many thousand Norwegians and Lapps are perishing of hunger. The Finnish peasants have been eating bark and unripe, frost-spoiled rye and barley made into bitter cakes. Even the birds are said to have died by thousands in the forests. The Christian Herald, New York, which is receiving and forwarding money to relieve the famine, has investigated the situation and says that there has been no such utter crop failure, owing to continued rains and early frost, for half a century.

THE Turkish Government has at last agreed to give official recognition of diplomas issued by the American Medical College at Beirut, and also to recognize the right of the wives and children of Armenians, who have become naturalized Americans, to leave Turkey.

A BERLIN despatch states that the general director of railroads has issued an order, providing for the immediate discharge of all employees who are not total abstainers, and for the retention and promotion of all those whose habits are marked by strict temperance.—[American Issue.]

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

3D Mo. 21.—A MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE Committee of the General Conference of Friends' Associations, in the Young Friends' Association Building, Philadelphia, at 1.30 p. m.

3D Mo. 21.—GIRARD AVE., FRIENDS' Association. There will be an address by Dr. Henrietta P. Westbrook.

3D Mo. 22.—NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN Young Friends' Association, in New York.

3D Mo. 22.—PHILADELPHIA EVENING Meeting, at 17th St. and Girard Ave.

3D Mo. 22.—PENN'S GROVE YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Franklin Pusey.

3D Mo. 22.—FISHERTOWN YOUNG

Friends' Association, at the home of Uriah Blackburn.

3D Mo. 22.—GERMANTOWN FRIENDS' Meeting, 10.30 a. m., will be visited by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee.

3D Mo. 24.—HORSHAM, PA., YOUNG Friends' Association.

3D Mo. 27.—FRIENDS' EQUAL RIGHTS Association will meet in the Meeting-house at 15th and Race Sts., at 8 o'clock, to be addressed by ELIZABETH POWELL BOND, Dean of Swarthmore College. Subject: "The Modern Appeal," followed by discussion. Members of the Association will please bring friends.

3D Mo. 29.—A CONFERENCE UNDER the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor will be held in the Meeting

(Concluded on page 192).

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL
BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

NEWS NOTES.

THE local option bill before the Legislature of Delaware was defeated on the 13th by a vote of 14 to 17.

THE city of New York will celebrate its 250th birthday by appropriate ceremonies Fifth month 24th to 30th.

THE woman's suffrage amendment to the Constitution of New Hampshire was defeated by a large adverse majority.

A BARTENDERS' and Saloonkeepers' Total Abstinence Union has been formed in Chicago, with a charter membership of sixteen.

THREE tombstones more than a century old were recently found by workmen excavating the cellar of 146 N. Broad street, Philadelphia.

It is announced that John Wanamaker will erect a twelve-story building on the site of his present store in Philadelphia, at a cost of $5,000,000.

AT the Association of Reformed Churches held in Philadelphia on the 16th, Dr. F. W. Santee denounced the inhuman treatment of common soldiers in the American army, and the intemperance of many of the officers.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will leave Washington on the first of next month for a trip West. After spending some time in Yellowstone National Park he will proceed to the Pacific coast, making a number of speeches en route.

DURING the second week of next month 200 Canadian teachers, conducted by James L. Hughes, Superintendent of Schools at Toronto, will visit the public schools of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

GOVERNOR PENNYPACKER, of Pennsylvania, has vetoed the bill to transfer from the Judges to the County Commissioners, in counties having over 500,000 inhabitants, the authority to appoint election officers to fill vacancies.

A SPRING GARDEN street trolley car (Philadelphia) crashed into a Tenth street car on the evening of the 16th, seriously injuring several persons. Failure of the cars to stop on the near side of the street caused the accident.

PHILADELPHIA Councils have passed an ordinance, which has been signed by the Mayor, making any person who spits on the sidewalks, in public conveyances, or in other public places, subject to a fine of $1.00 and costs.

AN American has been awarded the contract for the ownership and maintenance of thirty-five miles of electric road in Manila. First class fares are to be six cents; second class five cents; six tickets, twenty-four cents.

A DISPATCH from Manila states that the negotiations for the purchase of the friars' lands by the Government may fail, because of the excessive price asked by the religious Orders and commercial corporations interested with the Orders.

A NATIONAL pebiscite in Switzerland has resulted in the adoption of a new protective tariff schedule by a vote of 329,000 to 222,000. The new tariff will increase the cost of living, and it is expected that hotels will raise their prices to tourists.

By direction of Secretary Root, the War Department has embarked on the extensive work of compiling and publishing a complete roster of the officers and enlisted men of the Union and Confederate armies. The publication will fill at least thirty large volumes.

A DISPATCH from Ottawa, dated the 14th, says that the recommendation of the Dominion Government that the British members of the Alaskan boundary tribunal be Lord Chief Justice Alverstone and two Canadian Judges has been approved by the Imperial authorities.

OF 97 towns in Massachusetts that voted on the 9th instant, 83 voted against the licensing of saloons, this being a gain of three over last year. On the same day the Maine House of Representatives killed the bill to re-submit the prohibitory amendment to the people, by a vote of 94 to 46.

THE correspondent of the London Times at Constantinople reports that Great Britain is determined to compel the settlement of the Yemen boundary, using force if necessary. Yemen consists of nine independent cantons in the Arabian peninsula, which are under the protection of England.

FOR the first time in its career, covering seventy-nine years, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania is asking an appropriation from the State. The amount requested is $200,000, and the object is "for the purpose of improving the real estate of the said society and making additions thereto." Governor Pennypacker is President of the society.

THE Secretary of Harvard University, J. G. Hart, states that the value of the ninety-four buildings and lands of the University is $5,300,000. Official information from the Navy Department at Washington gives the total cost of the Oregon, our most expensive battleship, at $6,575,032.—[Advocate of Peace.]

House at Middletown, Pa., at 2.30 p. m. Address by Dr. Benjamin F. Battin, of Swarthmore College, on "Arbitration in Business Life."

3D Mo. 29.—CORNWALL, N. Y. FRIENDS' Association, at the home of J. Quimby Brown, at 3 p. m.

3D Mo. 29.—CINCINNATI FRIENDS' Association, at the home of Peirce Cadwalader.

STILLWATER QUARTERLY MEETING has been changed to a half-yearly meeting, to be held at Richland, near Quaker City, Ohio, the last Seventh-day of Fifth month and the first Seventh-day of Eleventh month.

TEACHER: "Correct the sentence. The liquor what the man bought was soon drank." Bright Pupil: "The man who bought the liquor was soon drunk."—[Gathered.]

ARMSTRONG & McKELEY }
Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN }
Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS }
Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK }
Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR }
Cincinnati.
ECRSTEIN }
ATLANTIC } BRADLEY }
BROOKLYN }
JEWETT }
ULSTER }
UNION } SOUTHERN } SHIPMAN }
COLLIER }
MISSOURI }
RED SEAL }
SOUTHERN }
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROE CO }
Philadelphia.
MORLEY }
Cleveland.
SALEM }
Salem, Mass.
CORNELL }
Buffalo.
KENTUCKY }
Louisville.

CONSIDERING the cost of labor, of applying it, and its great covering capacity, Pure White Lead is not only the cheapest Paint in the first cost, but because of its extreme durability is by far the cheapest in the end.

Furthermore, no scraping or burning will be required when repainting becomes necessary.

If interested in paint or painting, address,

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

When lamp chimneys don't break my name is on them.

MACBETH.

If you'll send your address, I'll send you the Index to Lamps and their Chimneys, to tell you what number to get for your lamp.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
 Unlike all other flours. Ask Grocers. For book on samples, write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

Good seed assure good gardens. Gregory's seeds have been the favorites of gardeners and florists for 40 years. Always successful.

Send for our free catalog, telling about our three warrants on seeds.
 J. J. H. Gregory & Son, Harlethead, Mass.

REDUCED RATES TO NEW ORLEANS, LA., ACCOUNT MEETING NATIONAL MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION, APRIL 15-17, 1903, VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

On April 11, 12, and 13, Special Excursion tickets to New Orleans and return will be sold via the Southern Railway, at greatly reduced rates. Tickets will be good to return until April 19, but by depositing ticket with Joint Agent at New Orleans on or before April 19, and payment of a fee of fifty cents, final limit can be extended until April 30, 1903.

The Round trip rate from Philadelphia will be $33.50. Corresponding low rates from other points.

The Southern Railway operates three through trains daily with Pullman drawing-room sleeping-cars from New York, Philadelphia, and Washington to New Orleans without change. Dining-car service on all through trains.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

A BIRD'S MEMORY.

A WRITER in Bird-Lore (The Macmillan Company) records an instance which seems to prove the possession of a surprising memory on the part of a bird. She so tamed a White-breasted Nuthatch in Central Park, New York City, in the winter of 1900, that the bird came to her at sight, whenever she appeared in the park. In April, 1901, the bird disappeared and did not return the succeeding winter; but in December, 1902, apparently the same bird reappeared, and, recognizing its friend, at once perched upon her hand in search of the nuts it had been accustomed to find there, two years before.

A SMALL girl recently brought home a pumpkin-seed, and told her mother the teacher said that, although the seed was white, the pumpkin would be yellow. "And what will the color of the vines be?" asked the mother. The little girl replied that the teacher had not taught her that. "But," said her mother, "you know, dear; for we have pumpkin-vines in our garden." "Of course I do; but we ain't expected to know anything until we are taught."—[Youth's Companion.]

THE Washington correspondent of the London Times is authority for the statement that when Ambassador Choate, thinking of political and international effects, inquired of the late Thomas B. Reed, "What would happen if we withdrew from the Philippines?" Mr. Reed answered in his smoothest tones, "Well, I don't think the Filipinos would pursue us further than San Francisco."

We're Not Strong on Making Promises.

Rather promise less and do more. Greater satisfaction in getting more than you expected rather than less.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc., MAKERS OF THE BETTER KIND OF PRINTING
 1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.
 J. J. WILLIAMS.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE
 1313 VINE STREET
 ESTABLISHED 1860

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN DAIRIES. Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
 JOSEPH L. JONES

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

OLD POINT COMFORT, RICHMOND, AND WASHINGTON.

SIX-DAY TOUR VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD. The second personally-conducted tour to Old Point Comfort, Richmond, and Washington via the Pennsylvania Railroad for the present season will leave New York and Philadelphia on Saturday, March 28.

Tickets, including transportation, meals en route in both directions, transfers of passengers and baggage, hotel accommodations at Old Point Comfort, Richmond, and Washington, and carriage ride about Richmond—in fact, every necessary expense for a period of six days—will be sold at rate of $36.00 from New York, Brooklyn, and Newark; $34.50 from Trenton; $33.00 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other stations.

OLD POINT COMFORT ONLY.

Tickets to Old Point Comfort only, including luncheon on going trip, one and three-fourths days' board at Chamberlin Hotel, and good to return direct by regular trains within six days, will be sold in connection with this tour at rate of $17.00 from New York, $15.50 from Trenton; $14.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents; Tourist Agent, 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or George W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

A CHARMING TRIP

is in reserve for those who contemplate visiting the Pacific Coast during the Spring. On May 2d, and from May 11th to 17th, inclusive, special excursion tickets will be sold to Los Angeles and San Francisco and return, via the Southern Railway at extremely low rates. These tickets permit of stop-over, and are good to return until July 15th, 1903.

Round-trip rate from Philadelphia will be $66.75, going and returning same route; going one route and returning another $68.25. Corresponding low rates from other points.

In addition to the Standard Pullman sleeping-cars, operated daily, the Southern Railway operates tri-weekly, high-class, personally-conducted excursion sleepers from Washington to Los Angeles and San Francisco without change, via Atlanta, New Orleans, and El Paso, in which the berth rate is only $7.00 from Washington to the above points. These cars leave Washington at 8.45 p. m., on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will furnish all information.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE 'Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (TRUD CHAMBERS, Jr.) 522 N. 2nd St., Philadelphia

THE UNION CENTRAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.
Of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Assets, $34,000,000
Plain Life and Endowment Policies with Annual Dividends.
The Highest Grade of Life Insurance at the Lowest Cost.
The Company for Those who Think for Themselves.

Good Contracts to Good Agents.

Lawton Brothers, Managers,
338 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,
1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,
Wall Papers and Decorations.
Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.
Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)
Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

A Great ROSE Offer

"Our Grand Success Collection"

18 splendid C. & J. Roses, including the wonderful Hardy Ever Blooming Glacier, Climbing Climax Souper, and our New Philadelphia Crimson Rambler, and 16 other choice selected varieties, making

18 Superb for $1.00
Roses

Rest postpaid on receipt of price. Also hundreds of other standard varieties in different sizes and prices to suit all tastes. Our new Floral Guide, 126 pages—FREE. Address The Conard & Jones Co., Box Z, West Grove, Pa. "Growers of the Best Roses in America."

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS.
Safe to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults.

SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES.
DEPOSITARY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
REGISTRAR AND TRANSFER AGENT.
ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
E. B. MORRIS, President.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEF AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cts.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (40 pp. in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cts. 50 copies 75 cts. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet, 27 pages. *Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the "Peace cause". This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cts. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet, 1 page. *A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cts. 100 copies 30 cts. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cts. 50 copies 75 cts. 100 copies $1.00.

*All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,

BIBLES.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.
A NEW AND FULL LINE.
FAMILY QUARTO BIBLES, suitable for Friend, SELF-PRONOUNCING, REFERENCE TEACHERS' BIBLES, with maps and concordance.
TESTAMENTS, 1/4 FC, convenient, large, clear type, desirable binding. New and up-to-date. Surprisingly low prices—from 50 cents up.
THE CHILD AND THE BIBLE. Syllabus of a course of twenty-five lessons in education. By George Allen Hubbard. Price, 25 cts. Postage 4 cts.
THE OLD RED SCHOOL-HOUSE. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Price, 15 cts. 100 copies, 75 cts.
JOHN KINSEY, Speaker of the Pennsylvania Assembly. By Joseph S. Walton. Price, 50 cts.
All Friends' books for sale by

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

Established 1818 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite P. & W. Bldg.)

MILTON
Martha J. Warner
Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETTI.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTENHAM,

E. T. Kuendig, Atlantic City, N. J.
R. W. Richards.

THE PENNHURST, Second House from Beach.
MICHIGAN AVENUE.
REOPENS SATURDAY, JANUARY 31.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator in street level. Write for booklet. WM. K. HOOD.

HOTEL WINDLE, Centre of city lines.
JACKSONVILLE, FLA. Near all car lines.
American and European plan. New. First-class. European plan, rooms $1 per day. American plan, $2 per day. C. E. SMITH, Prop.

THE KATHLU, 1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts. K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD

THE AQUARILE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR
OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE., Atlantic City, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet. M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St.
PLAIN MILLINERY,
Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street
From 736 Spring Garden Street.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,
Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.
Telephones.

COLLINGS CARRIAGE CO.,
Broughams, Victorias, Coaches, Rockwags, Cutneters, Runabouts, and Wagonettes.
1719 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Home Kitchen Outfits
and all
House Furnishing Goods

J. FRANKLIN FULLER,
1626 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

ASPARAGUS ROOTS
$2.50 per 1000.

Pear trees, Strawberry plants, California privet,—all at low rates. Catalogue free.

SAMUEL C. DeCOU, Moorestown, N.J.

Y. F. A. Building,
140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.
Convenient, Restful, Homelike
Table d'hote, 25 cts.

Dinner, 12 cts. pm.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:
One occupant, 75 cts. per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cts. each, per night.
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL,
Phone 1-33-55. Clerk.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCE

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, THIRD MONTH 28, 1903.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY Friends' Intelligence Association,
 (LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertions reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
 N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
 • TELEPHONE NO. 7-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XIII,	193
POETRY: A PREFIGURING SIGN,	193
THE REVISED DISCIPLINE OF BALTIMORE
YEARLY MEETING,	193
SELF-KNOWLEDGE,	194
EUROPEAN PEACE,	195
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
The Apostolic Age,	196
AN EARLY MINISTER'S CERTIFICATE TO TRAVEL,	196
EDITORIAL:
The Coming Revival of Religion,	198
First-day School Teachers,	199
Notes,	199
BIRTHS, DEATHS,	199
SOCIETY NOTES,	201
BELFAST—III,	201
THE CO-OPERATIVE COAL CLUB,	202
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.,	202
EDUCATIONAL,	204
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES,	204
LITERARY NOTES,	205
POETRY: Compensation; Poverty,	205
THE TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE,	205
MISCELLANY: Doukhobor Self-Control;
The Choice before the South; Science in Shovels; Snuff versus Good Humor;
Children's Amusements; Cattle versus
People in Ireland,	206, 207
CURRENT EVENTS,	207
NEWS NOTES,	208
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO
FRIENDS,	208

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
 ARCHITECTS
 Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED—BY A TEACHER EMPLOYMENT out of town during the summer months. Address C. E. W., North Wales, Pa.

WANTED.—WORKING HOUSEKEEPER. Call or address M. J. SPENCER, Lenai, Del. co., Pa.

WANTED.—A MOTHER'S HELPER TO assist in the care of children and do light housework. A comfortable home near a village and with city conveniences. Address Mrs. Wm. Silver, Darlington, Harford county, Md.

WANTED.—POSITION AS HOUSEKEEPER or companion by an educated, responsible lady. Either seashore or country. Address No. 80, this Office.

WANTED.—YOUNG ENGLISH FRIEND (lady) seeks an engagement as companion to a lady for passage to England in May or June, in return for expenses. No objection to care of child. Address X. V. Z., this Office.

WANTED.—BY FRIEND, POSITION AS PRIVATE secretary. Remington operator, or traveling companion, nurse for semi-invalid, or housekeeper. Address A. D. FEATHERSTONE, 21 N. Carey Street, Baltimore, Md.

SPANISH OR FRENCH LESSONS GIVEN in part payment for board, by young Spanish lady. Address No. 81, this Office.

BOARDERS DESIRED IN FRIENDS' FAMILY on farm near Conshohocken. For further particulars address S., 1800 Spring Mill Ave., Conshohocken, Pa.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1827 1st., N. W., Washington, D. C.

TO RENT FOR THE SUMMER.

FURNISHED house at Gwycedd, Pa., 28 miles from Philadelphia. House contains six bed rooms, bath room, hot and cold water, laundry, large porch, dining room, and two kitchens. Five acres of ground, large lawn with shade, good truck patch and orchard, the produce of which tenant may enjoy; also, if desired, cow and chickens. Stabling for four horses and cow. The house is finely situated with extended views and good air. Will be rented on reasonable terms from Sixth month 1 to Ninth month 30, or a little later if desired. Photographs furnished. Address or apply ARTHUR H. JENKINS, 1224 Race St., Phila.

FOR RENT.—A HANDSOME FURNISHED house, centrally located in Swarthmore, Pa., for rent by the month, cheap.

Also, A LARGE STONE MANSION ON THE HILL from June to September. Completely furnished, all conveniences, gas range, Springfield water, 140 feet of porch, commanding a fine view. Grounds cared for by owner. Tennis court. Stabling for two horses if desired. ALBERT N. GARRETT, 1515 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia; or Box 135, Swarthmore, Pa.

FOR RENT.—BY THE MONTH, A FURNISHED house in Swarthmore, Yale Avenue, on new trolley line. Grounds and shade for children. For particulars address HENRY KENT, Swarthmore, Pa.

EDWARD T. BLACK
 (S. W. BLACK'S SON)
 REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER

The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
 616 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis, LAWYERS AND N. J. REAL ESTATE

Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents, Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected. Keystone and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

PRINTING "AS YOU LIKE IT."

Not one style for everybody but plain, simple, strong or pretty, alone or in combination. We know how to give expression to your tastes.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,
 MAKERS OF THE
 BETTER KIND OF PRINTING
 1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

"Still when the sun of summer burns,
 My longing for the hills returns,
 I go to meet the winds of morn
 Blown down the hill gaps, mountain born,
 Breathe scent of pines and satisfy
 The hunger of a lowland eye."
 —Whittier.

The Inn this year will open Fifth month 28th, so that advantage may be taken of the holiday occurring Fifth month 30th. It is expected that there will be considerable company at the Inn at that time. Some of the cottages will be open.

No more pleasant time for a visit to Buck Hill Falls than Sixth month can be found. The laurel (Kalmia latifolia) is in bloom and columbine is in French and other spring flowers are in abundance.

The new steam heating plant will make the house comfortable during the coolish evenings and the open fires, if necessary, will lend cheerfulness to what are the longest days in the year.

Send for booklet and circulars of the Inn, if not already received.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
 1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
 CHARLES F. JENKINS, President.
 MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary and Treasurer.

LECTURES ILLUSTRATED.

DANTE.
 MUSIC OF THE BIRDS.
 OBERAMMERGAUER PASSION PLAY 1900.
 AFOOT IN HELLAS.
 AWHEEL THROUGH EUROPE.
 COLLEGE LIFE AT HOME AND ABROAD.

BENJAMIN F. BATTIN,
 Swarthmore College, Pennsylvania.

ELIZABETH LLOYD'S
 "SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY"
 placed in every school, would teach the beauty of Peace.

Send twenty cents for one copy of the music and twenty-five copies of the words, to
 ARABELLA CARTER,
 Universal Peace Union, 1305 Arch St., Phila.

Insurance from Loss by Fire

Best of Companies
 Lowest Rates . . .

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

COLLINGS CARRIAGE CO.,
 Broughams, Victorias, Coupes, Rockwags, Cutandera, Runabouts, and Wagonettes.
 1719 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

TH Swarthmore College
SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,
FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; provises a practical, graded education, and prepares for college.

EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }

Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.
Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.
For catalogue, apply to

JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted wherever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to

GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Jenkintown, Pa.
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.
Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B.

Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register.

The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

THOMAS O. PEIRCE,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW.
825 Real Estate Trust Building, Philad'a.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery County Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and Investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
623 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
[Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.]

JOHN FABER MILLER,
395 SWADE STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

Disease Cured by Electricity.

WM. H. HICKOK, M.D.

10 a.m. to 4 p.m. 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

354 North Eleventh Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Disease Cured by Osteopathy.

A System of Natural Healing. Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and Chronic diseases in general.

O. O. STODDARD, E. D., D. O.

10 a.m. to 4 p.m. 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

554 N. 11th Street, Philadelphia.

Thompson Shourds, 2212 Wallace Street.

Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1225 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa.
Phone 3-54-78 D.

CHARLES BURTON,

Practical House and Sign Painter,

Office, 907 N. Thirteenth Street, } Philadelphia, Pa.
Residence, 1714 Woodstock Street,

Young Friends' Review

Published by the

New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.

5 PHONES.

PURE FOOD skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St.

These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Meaning of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12. "The reading of which is a spiritual feast."—FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Doukhobors. By Joseph Elkinton. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated, $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

Established 1820 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOCKEN DAIRIES. Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
JOSEPH L. JONES

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets
and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET,

PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, THIRD MONTH 28, 1903.

Volume LX.
Number 13.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XIII.

SUBMISSION to Divine laws made manifest in the mind of man, will carry us through this life and prepare us for the life to come.

CHARLOTTE W. COCKS.

A PREFIGURING SIGN.

SOME have vanished whom we knew,
Souls of knighthood, fast and true,
Eyes of light and helping hand,
Brows of power that nobly planned,
Touch of love electrical,—
Touch that heartened—faded all ! . . .

Man of dolor, wait awhile !
See the morns of April smile !
Mist shall pass and skies be blue,
May shall roof these woods anew,
Pave them with unfolding fern,
June's long sunset through them burn,
And this leafy realm be stirred
With the joy of every bird
Mounting ether, haunting glen,
Making glad the hearts of men.

Time is but prefiguring sign—
Buried seed—of worlds divine !
Can aught here seem wondrous fair
And no answer echo There ?
Shall Spring brighten earthen sod,
And no life be—nearer God ?

—Joseph Truman.

THE REVISED DISCIPLINE OF BALTIMORE YEARLY MEETING.

THE revised "Principles, Advices and Rules of Discipline" of Baltimore Yearly Meeting are published in a volume similar in appearance and size to the "Rules of Discipline and Advices" of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, with the topics arranged very much in the same order. While the wording of the two books is different they are in general accord. We quote a few paragraphs in which important changes have been made.

Concerning membership: "A committee should be appointed annually in each Monthly Meeting to extend care toward children, one of whose parents only is a member, and towards others in attendance upon our meetings who manifest a friendly interest in our principles, to see that in due season an invitation is extended to such and the way opened for application to membership."

There are twelve queries, there being none to correspond to Philadelphia's eighth and fourteenth. The third and fourth queries read as follows:

"Third. Do Friends observe simplicity and utility in their apparel, and do they advise their children and others under their influence to observe the same care? Are they thoughtful to encourage plain and honest speech and kindness and gentle dignity in deportment? Do they guard against corrupting conversation and frivolous or pernicious literature, supplying that which is profitable in its stead? Do they encourage the frequent reading of the Scriptures of Truth?

"Fourth. Are Friends clear of giving aid in any way to the manufacture, sale and use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage or in the preparation of food, and are they diligent in discouraging the same? Do they avoid places where such liquors are sold, and all places of a demoralizing tendency? Are the cultivation, use and sale of tobacco and all other narcotics discouraged?"

There is a page and a half devoted to the "Treatment with Delinquents," from which we quote the concluding page:

"It is the desire of the Society that no one be disowned except when his retention would be to weaken our testimony for the Truth, impair the good example which we desire to set, or confuse our sense of right living.

"With these objects in view, Monthly Meetings have authority to exercise disciplinary labor, and, where such labor proves ineffectual, to proceed to disownment, upon the general grounds stated below, as well as upon those particularly stated elsewhere in this Book of Discipline. These grounds are:

"1. Breaches of the moral law, not acknowledged, repented and repaired to the satisfaction of the Monthly Meeting.

"2. Willful disregard of those provisions of the Discipline which by their language are made obligatory or prohibitory.

"3. Such transgression of our testimonies, continued and after labor unanswered to the satisfaction of the Monthly Meeting as clearly prove the person not to be in sympathy with the truth as held by us.

"4. Habitual absence from our meetings, without sufficient cause; or connection with other religious organizations."

The paragraph concerning "Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments" reads thus: "It is the earnest desire of the Yearly Meeting to press upon Friends a thorough acquaintance with the Bible; and that parents and heads of families should, both by example and advice, impress upon the susceptible minds of the youth a reverent esteem for the doctrines and precepts of the Christian religion contained therein, inducing them to believe that the same experience of the work of sanctification, through the operation of the spirit of God, to which the Holy Scriptures bear abundant testimony, has been and is to be witnessed by believers in all generations. Our dear youth, thus educated in the belief of these important truths, may be prepared to receive the spiritual appearance of God in their hearts, according to our holy profession."

The belief of Friends concerning Christ is thus set forth in the section on "Conduct and Conversation": "Acknowledging as we do our dependence upon God as the Great Head of the Church, and accepting as the foundation principle of our faith the Immediate Revelation of His Divine Spirit in man; believing also in the Divinity of Christ, and in the great value of the truths contained in the Scriptures, these should ever be regarded with reverence. Therefore, if any shall speak profanely of Almighty God, Christ Jesus, or the Holy Spirit, they should be timely and earnestly treated with for the conviction of their understanding, that they may experience repentance and forgiveness."

For Friends' Intelligencer,
SELF-KNOWLEDGE.

INTROSPECTION of a certain kind is undoubtedly a bad habit in which to indulge; but in this busy, practical, money-getting age there is far less tendency to err in that direction than in the unconsciousness of, and indifference to, the life of the spirit.

Circumstances have arisen recently, which have brought this subject forcibly to my mind, and I feel that too much stress cannot be laid upon the necessity for us to know ourselves. Ruskin said: "Know thyself, for through thyself only, canst thou know God," and never was truer word spoken. Jesus Christ, on the cross, cried: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." In other words, the slayers of our Master, knew not themselves nor their motives.

Do we know our motives? This is the point that requires emphasis. That duty and pleasure frequently run side by side is a well-known fact. We have long ago outgrown the old-time belief in duty as inseparable from hardship; nevertheless, it is very easy to persuade ourselves that what is easiest is the best course to pursue. Arguments, lengthy and intricate, are put forth, showing why such and such an action should be just the right one, when, in a large majority of instances, the argument is but the effort of the speaker (though he is unaware of the fact) to still the inner consciousness that all is not right. A strongly individualized person never argues. Just the realization that he is right is sufficient for him, and he cares not for the opinions of others. It does not follow that one prone to argument is necessarily insincere, but the excessive desire to have one's actions approved is usually proof positive that the one so desiring is, in his sub-consciousness, aware that he is not wholly in the right, though his conscious mind, or intellect, may not recognize the fact.

Now, how are we to know ourselves? Only by following the old, old rule of turning to the Light within, and desiring, with all our hearts, to see what we are manifesting, that we may know just where we err. But first must come a positive attitude of mind toward all personalities. It matters not how good the advice that may be given us—it is of no avail—or should be of no avail—until we have sought the Highest Advice of all. The old-time saying that relates to attending strictly to one's own affairs is an excellent one, as applied to spiritual growth. The Marthas of the age forget that the Marys have equal rights with themselves and equal access to the Spirit of Truth. If, however, those closely associated with us will not follow this saying, we must gently but forcibly resist their influence, no matter how kindly the advice may be given, for no one has the right to interfere between the individual and his God. We must not sacrifice to human sensibility the Divine right and privilege of communion with our Maker. "When thou hast shut thy door" Jesus tells us.

It is only by this quiet, fearless waiting upon the Spirit that we can hope to know ourselves, and the experience is not always a pleasant one. It is not easy to see that what we thought our greatest virtue is in reality a weakness; to find that, in our notions of what constituted high duty, we simply have been following our own selfish inclinations. And right at this point comes the struggle not to yield to the sensation of wounded vanity which immediately arises as a result of a clearer view of our mistakes, but to be thankful that we know them; for, "That thou dost know the darkness proves the light."

That we see in what way we have erred, when before, we were unconscious of the fact, proves the Light within us, proves that the glorious Light is dispelling just that much darkness. In no way, it seems to me, does our Father show us greater mercy than through the beautiful law that in all spiritual growth there must be some pain, and the greatest blessing we can desire for all humanity is that they may know themselves; for invariably, when this knowledge is thankfully received, there follows the unspeakable joy that comes through spiritual growth.

This is the introspection that can do no harm. It is absolutely distinct from the morbid dwelling upon one's emotions and sensations, trying to decide questions of right and wrong, etc., which frequently is called by that name. The remedies for all such unhealthy mental attitudes, are as we all know, vigorous bodily exercise, fresh air, congenial work; but true communion with God, our Father, inspires us with all that is healthful, normal, good, pure and true, and we turn to these things naturally.

AN OBSERVER.

READER, would'st thou know what true peace and quiet mean; would'st thou find a refuge from the noises and clamors of the multitude; would'st thou enjoy at once solitude and society; would'st thou possess the depth of thine own spirit in stillness, without being shut out from the consolatory faces of thy species; would'st thou be alone, and yet accompanied; solitary, yet not desolate; singular, yet not without some to keep thee in countenance; a unit in aggregate; a simple in composite—come with me into a Quaker's meeting.—[Charles Lamb.]

EUROPEAN PEACE.

William C. Braithwaite. In War or Brotherhood

THE reaction against militarism is evidently making headway in France at the present time. For many years France has been regarded as one of the storm-centers of Europe, and the fact that she is now becoming convinced that the interests of the Republic require a policy of peace is of great significance. This view has lately been expressed in the fine speech delivered by M. Jaurès in the Chamber of Deputies on January 23d. He is the able leader of the Socialists, who has lately been elected to the Vice-Presidency of the Chamber, and his speech throughout was applauded by the extreme Left and the Left, the Radical part of the house. It is important that the substance of this speech should be known in England, as it comes from a man whose patriotism and good faith were admitted by his opponents; and lays bare to us, as only a French speaker can, the solidly pacific spirit which animates a great part of France to-day. I take my extracts from the Journal Officiel of the 24th January, the French Hansard, kindly sent to me by M. Vasseur.

M. Jaurès declared that the dominating fact of the time was the possibility of peace in Europe, profound, durable, organized, definite peace. His opponents would say it was dangerous to proclaim this possibility at the risk of weakening national courage and paralyzing military energy. Forms of moral energy, however, like forms of physical strength, are convertible, and it is vain to immobilize national energy under some special form on the plea that it must be stored up for some special use. Let a nation possess living and healthy energies, the energy of work, the energy of thought, the energy of freedom, the energy of law, and should these living national forces be some day menaced by the brutality of a foreign power, they will at once be found to convert themselves into magnificent expansions of national courage. Militarism, in fact, is neither the only nor the best school of courage.

Three things alone lower national spirit:—falsehood, idleness, and the absence of ideals; and the Republic is at war with all these. And as the ideal of peace is neither a corrupting ideal nor a degrading one, so also it is not a mere illusion. For the first time in the history of modern Europe, thirty-two years have passed without a war between the Great Powers, apart from conflicts with the half-Eastern Turkish empire. It is true that a kind of peace reigned from 1815 to 1822, but it was the peace of tyranny, broken again by the revolts of oppressed nationalities. And not only has a long peace continued, but there is every reason to hope that it will continue because of the two counterbalancing alliances, the Double and Triple, at first ranged against each other in blind hostility, but gradually becoming more pacific in their relations, and now beginning to assume the form of an organization whose function will be the drafting of a scheme for a still vaster alliance, the European alliance for work and for peace. After stating at length the facts on which this opinion was based, M. Jaurès proceeded to inquire into the underlying causes of this development in the direction of peace. He urged that it lay in the acceptance by Europe of the principle of democracy with its corollary of national autonomy, contending that the warlike sequel of the French Revolution was due to the perversion of its spirit, and that its true principle of the rights of man looked forward to peace and nothing but peace. But besides this internationalizing of freedom and democracy which has tended to bring the unified and free peoples of Europe together, the ever-growing power of international economic life has made for peace. It is impossible to give a merely national character to economic legislation of any kind. Yesterday it was a sugar conference, the day before yesterday an exchange of views on the working hours for women and children, to-morrow it will be a code regulating the general condition of labor. As a result of these influences an unprecedented stability has been given to European peace, so that we are justified in saying that the peace of Europe is no longer a chimera, but is an actual possibility, only needing for its realization that the nations should recognize that it is possible. In the case of France the Alsace-Lorraine question has seemed an insuperable obstacle. But in the present state of the world war is not likely to bring a solution; on the contrary, a solution is only possible as a result of the establishment of a general peace and an enlarged democracy. On that day fresh strength and hope will be given to every population that is withheld by force from following its moral and historical affinities.

The importance of this speech does not lie in the actual validity or otherwise of the arguments used. Some of them will appeal to our English mind more than others. But its importance lies in the fact that these arguments and this train of thought are valid to many of the best minds in France, and are bringing about on a large scale a conviction that European peace is within reach and is a thing to work for. France is renouncing her dark ideal of revenge, and is turning her gaze to the ideal of peace as the hope of the future, which alone will satisfy the democratic principles on which her Republic is based.

MAN'S PART IN GOD'S PROVIDENCES.—God's providences are larger than our own planning. If the day is fine on a Sunday that has been set apart for special services, we are apt to think the weather "providential." But if the day should be stormy, is that any less providential? Does it not depend largely upon ourselves? If we can turn a disappointment into something that makes for righteousness, it becomes providential to us. We can thus get good in an unexpected way. It is our recognition of God's hand in our circumstances that makes them providential opportunities. Thus does God honor man in making him a co-worker. God always expects us to do something toward bringing about results. He has no use for a man who expects God to do it all.— [Sunday School Times.]

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 12.
THE APOSTOLIC AGE.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And they glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life.
—Acts, xi., 18.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, viii., 5-8; viii., 26-31; xi., 19-26.

THIS name—the Apostolic Age—is applied to the period following the life and death of Jesus, and extending about to the end of the first century. It includes, therefore, the active lives of the apostles and all those who had known Jesus, the writing of the gospels and epistles—indeed, of practically the whole of the New Testament, and the activities of Paul. In the course of these two generations Christianity burst the narrow bounds of the house of Israel, and made its way far and wide within the limits of the Roman Empire. Before its close Christianity had been firmly established in Asia Minor, in Greece, and in the city of Rome, while it had been preached probably even in far-off Spain and in Africa.

In an earlier lesson the special opportunities which the times presented for the spread of Christianity have been spoken of. Though the Roman rule was tyrannical upon the circuit of the Mediterranean, yet it was orderly and secured a large measure of freedom to the individual. Trade had every opportunity for expansion. Piracy on the sea and brigandage on land were repressed with a stern hand. Probably at no period before this time had travel been so safe and commerce so free from danger. And if Roman law and Roman justice penetrated everywhere, so also did the Greek language. While Latin was the speech of court and hall of justice, Greek was the everyday language of the East, and even to a considerable degree in Imperial Rome herself. The gospels and epistles being in Greek—and we have no certain knowledge of any other form—had no barrier of language to overcome in making their way to the farthest points reached by the disciples. Moreover, both disciples and gospels found a hungry world awaiting their coming. The faith in the old gods of Rome and Greece had long been dead. Only the forms of them remained, and these mainly because of their professional representatives. And the developed philosophies of the great thinkers of Greece giving the more intelligent classes a vague belief in one God, together with an elevated ethical system, became mere skepticism and superstition when it filtered down among the myths believed by the lower classes. Already many had turned to Judaism, with its pure and elevated God; but the rigid legalism of the Jews was a strong barrier against any great accession of Gentiles. Because of this difficulty there grew up about the synagogue a group of men and women representing a high type of character who accepted in large measure the teaching of Judaism, but who refused its forms and ceremonies. They accepted Jehovah as their God, but they did not undertake to master the sacrificial system; they subjected themselves to its moral law, but rejected its ceremonial law. It was from this great and worthy class that Christianity drew most of its converts. As we shall see in our survey of the Apostolic Age, Christianity had little permanent success among the Jews. The yoke of the law was too strong to be cast aside. The series of revolts against Rome culminating in the destruction of Jerusalem, no doubt consolidated the loyal Jews, and held them more firmly to every detail of their faith, on the one hand, while the excitement, the passion, the hatred incident to the times, would not tend toward the spiritual faith of the Christians.

Our principal direct authority for this period is the book of Acts. Uniform tradition, as well as internal evidence, indicate that it was written by the author of the third gospel. But this authorship is by no means undisputed; the various views of its origin and contents will be presented in the next lesson. Other sources of our knowledge of the period in the New Testament are the letters of Paul and the other epistles and the book of Revelation. Outside the Bible we may make use of various epistles of the early church fathers preserved in the so-called Apocryphal New Testament and the writings of Josephus on the Jewish war. Some of the Latin writers dealing with this period of the Roman Empire are Tacitus, the two Plinys, elder and younger, Suetonius, and Dion Cassius. Philo, "the Judæo-Greek" philosopher of Alexandria, is of use in explaining "certain aspects of Christian thought in the second generation."

Some of the aspects of this period remind us strikingly of our own. The safety of travel and trade, the extensive dealings of nation with nation, the freedom of religion, the wide use of English added to the general knowledge of other tongues—all these make the Apostolic Age in a measure a type of our own. And another resemblance, I fear, must be added—that official religion has lost its hold on the masses of the people. Christianity as represented by Christian churches is not a strong influence in determining conduct. If such condition is deplorable, is it not at the same time a great opportunity for a vital Christianity?

AN EARLY MINISTER'S CERTIFICATE TO TRAVEL.

FROM our Monthly Meeting held at East Nottingham in Chester County and Province of Pensilvania the 25th. day of 7th. Month 1761.

To Friends on the Island of Barbadoes.

Dear Friends.

The Bearer hereof our Well Esteemed Friend John Churchman having Laid before our Meeting a Concern that for a Considerable time Past has Rested on his mind to Pay you a Religious Visit and perhaps some of the adjacent Isles, & Requesting our Certificate for that purpose.

These may therefore Certifie you that the Usual Inquiry In such Cases has been made, & thereby It appears that his Ministry Is Sound Lively, & Edifying, his Life & Conversation Exemplary & Truly Becoming the Profession he makes; his Worldly Affairs Settled to Satisfaction for Ought Appears; & We having Unity with his Concern Recomend him to the Protection of Divine Providence & your Christian care and Notice in his Proposed Undertaking, with the sincere desire that he may be favored with Divine Wisdom to Devise the word Aright To Particulars & the General to Their Edification & Comfort, And to Return (when his service is Done) to his family & Us with Peace in his Bosom, & with the Salutation of Gospel Love we Subscribe our Selves your Loving Friends Brethren & sisters. Signed in & on Behalf of our said Meeting By.

Margt. Churchman, Dinah James, Margaret Brown, Lydia Day, Mary Hughes, Hannah Churchman, Mary Reynolds, Elin Brown, Elizabeth Kirk, Hannah Brown, Abigail Churchman, Ann Tremble, Martha Rees, Catharine Wilson, Ann Kirk, Elizabeth Knight, Joseph Hewes, Isaac Williams, Joseph Williams, Wm. Knight, Benjamin Wilson, Mordecia James, Joshua Brown, Thomas Barrett, Henry Reynolds, Junior, John Rich, Thomas Underhill, Samuel Reynolds, David Brown, Wm. Shephard, John Pugh, Wm. Rogers, George Churchman, Jun., Wm. Churchman.

To Friends on the Island of Barbadoes and the Adjacent Isles.

Dear Friends,

The within Certificate being Produced to our Western Quarterly Meeting held at Londongrove ye 17th. of ye 8th. Mo. 1761, for the Concurrence thereof, After Solid Consideration this Meeting appears to have good unity with our said Friends consent, and approves of the Recommendation therein given; Therefore with desire for his Stability & Preservation in the ever Blessed Truth, we subscribe our selves your Friends & Brethren in the Fellowship of the Gospel.

Signed in & on behalf of our Quarterly Meeting by,

William Hunt, Peter Worrall, Caleb Kirk, William Lewis, Richd. Johns, Isaac Mendenhall, Isaac Jackson, Thos. Hutton, William Webster, George Churchman, Jun., Jno. Smith, Jacob Howell, Thomas Rulla, Joshua Joanson, Wm. Harvey, Samuel England, Isaac Whitelock, William Jackson, John Jackson, Adam Redd, William Downing, Aron Musgrave, James Smith, Calvin Cooper, Wm. Swayne, Fras. Swayne, Henry March, John Hough, Swithin Chandler, Joseph Williams, John Webster.

At a Yearly Meeting of Ministers and Elders held at Philadelphia for Pennsylvania & New Jersey from the 26th. of the 9th. Mo. to the first of 10th. Mo. 1761.

Our Dear Friend John Churchman having acquainted us with his Concern to Visit Friends in Barbadoes & Probably some of the neighboring Islands and Communicated these Certificates to us. We hereby Express our Approbation thereof, and our Sympathy with our said Friend in this Exercise & recommend him as a weighty Experienced Minister of the Gospel, whom we Love & Esteem.

Signed on Behalf of said Meeting,

Anthony Benezet, Jane Hoskins, Sarah March, Mary Arnold, Rachel Pemberton, Margt. Ellison, Elin Evans, Elizabeth Hewes, Margt. Churchman, Mary Pemberton, Mary Emlen, Grace Fisher, Fran. Foster, Johannah Sykes, Sarah Cary, Elizabeth Smith, Mercy Redman, Margt. James, Jane Davis, Sarah Williamson, Hannah Foster, Sen., Joseph Parker, Isaac Whitelock, Thomas Carrington, Thomas Massey, Benja. Trotter, Joshua Morris, Thomas Milhouse, Philip Dennis, John Webster, James Moon, Nathan Yarnell, Abner Hamton, John Smith, Isaac Zane, Stephen Comfort, Thomas Rich, Jer. Elfroth, David Ferris, James Brown, Zebulen Huston, Abraham Griffith, John Pemberton, Sam. Emlen, Jun., Asher Woolman, Joseph Shotwell, Benj. Linton, Jun., Joshua Thompson, Beniah Andrews, Joseph Gibson, David Bacon, John Smith, Wm. Brown, Mordecia Yarnell, Anth. Morris, Saml. Large, Daniel Stanton, Jacob Howell, William Hunt, Josiah Foster, John Woolman, Thomas Goodin, Thomas Carlton, W. Morris, Thomas Evans, Jopah White, Jams. Pemberton, John Scarborough, Isaac Andrews, John Armit, Rebecca Jones, Millisent Reve, Ann Schofield, Mary Pusey, Grace Crosedale, Ruth Roberts, Sarah Janney, Ann Newlin, pr. friend, Mary Speakman, pr. friend, Sarah Yarnell, pr. friend, Hannah Hooper, pr. friend, Saml. Foulke, Amos Yarnell, Joshua Baldwin, John Perry, Isaac Pickering, Samuel Lypuncott.

I have in my possession the original of this certificate, with the signatures, most of which are plainly written; some are in a trembling hand, indicating age. I also have several other similar certificates, to visit other localities. The signatures are very interesting.

I quote the following taken from "An Account of the Life and Travels of John Churchman, of Nottingham": "In the year 1761, having an engagement on my mind to visit Barbadoes, I went to Philadelphia, to enquire for a passage, when my friends informed me of five vessels, three of which were nearly ready to sail, but understanding that all of them were prepared with guns for defence, I felt a secret exercise on my mind, so that I could not go to see any of them. I went to the meeting of Ministers and Elders, where I had a singular freedom to let Friends know "that I came to town in order to take passage for Barbadoes, but found myself not at liberty to go in any of those vessels, because they carried arms for defence, for as my motive in going, was to publish the glad tidings of the Gospel, which teaches the love of all men. I could not go with those who were prepared to destroy men, whom Christ Jesus our Lord and Master laid down his life to save, and deliver from that spirit in which war and fighting stands."

John Churchman, one of the most eminent ministers of our Society, traveled very extensively in the ministry. He visited many meetings in Maryland, New Jersey and Virginia, in 1738, and in New England in 1742. In 1748, with Michael Lightfoot, he traveled in Maryland; the same year, with Joshua Brown, he visited meetings in Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

John Churchman, with his brother-in-law, William Brown, traveled in the ministry in Great Britain, Ireland and Holland, during the years 1750 to 1754. After his return he traveled much among Friends in America.

KIRK BROWN.

Baltimore, Md., Third month 14th, 1903.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, THIRD MONTH 28, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE COMING REVIVAL OF RELIGION.

THERE are indications all about us that other influences than religion are dominating the most of men, and yet it is true, as Rufus M. Jones says in the preface to "A Dynamic Faith," that "no generation has ever been more seriously concerned with the things of the spirit than our own." We cannot help feeling that this undercurrent of spirituality is somehow going to break forth to the surface. When we ask how, then we think of the "revivals" of the times past, and especially of the times of "great awakening" when evangelists were stirring up the people in every corner of the land and men were turning to the better life by hundreds. More than ever are we interested in those times now that able scientists are studying the phenomena of conversion and the strange ways in which religion has manifested itself; and with the help of such books as Professor James' "Varieties of Religious Experience" we can understand better, at least as far as science can go, what these mysterious things meant and how they were related to the spiritual nature of men. But it is not so much for the light such studies throw on the future that we value them. We are not now satisfied with any experience of religion that leaves out of account or dwarfs any of our natural faculties, and we are not so much interested in unusual or sudden manifestations as in normal religious life and growth. It is very significant that the great revivalist, Moody, who was a remarkable man and did a great work along the old lines of religious awakening, turned his attention more and more in the later years of his life to the educational features of his work, and no doubt it will be by these last that he will be longest remembered. Even the founder of the Salvation Army now proposes to establish a great university.

May we not be wrong, then, in waiting around with the feeling, (as a Friend once expressed it,) that "we are not likely to have much of a future as a religious Society unless a first-class evangelist appears among us before long"? Shall we not rather consider the signs of our times and adopt our line of action accordingly. There are signs just now of a widespread and influential interest in religious education. The organization at Chicago, a few weeks ago, of the National Religious Education Association is one of the signs; and such movements are likely to have much to do with, the coming revival of religion. Professor Coe, of the Northwestern University, who is one of the leaders in the modern study of religious experience and particularly of the application of this study to religious training has, in his late book "The Religion of a Mature Mind," a chapter on "Salvation by Education" that is very suggestive along this line.

Shall we not turn our attention with fresh interest and renewed zeal to our First-day Schools and do all that in us lies to make them an important factor in making the "good tidings" mean something in the world?

FIRST-DAY SCHOOL TEACHERS.

IN the last number of the Young Friends' Review a writer advocates the hiring of qualified teachers to conduct the First-day Schools, claiming that no principle of the Society would be infringed and that the work would be better done. Without granting that such a method of obtaining teachers would not be contrary to our foundation principles, let us look at the matter from a practical standpoint.

The teacher of the day school is occupied five days in the week and her salary is supposed to be sufficient for her maintenance. The First-day school is in session one hour each week and the compensation offered for that hour could not be sufficient to bring into the community from outside one who was not already there, deriving a maintenance in some other way. The First-day school must then be taught by Friends, or those having Friendly views, who live at a convenient distance from the school. If there are any of these with superior teaching ability who are not willing to give a few hours of their time weekly to the religious education of the children, but who would do this work if they were paid for it, would not their lack of interest in things that are spiritual do a harm to the school that could not be overcome by their skill as teachers?

The main purpose of a First-day School is to quicken the moral and spiritual development of the pupils; the imparting of biblical and other knowledge, important - as it is, is a secondary consideration. A teacher who is willing to make personal sacrifices, who makes it a point to be always in her place regardless of the weather or unexpected guests at home, and who takes an individual interest in every one of her pupils, has an influence over their lives that cannot be estimated. Those who are taught by her may not be able to pass a very satisfactory examination on the matter of the lesson leaves, but they will learn that self-denial and faithfulness to duty are essential traits of Christian character.

It is not an easy matter, in any meeting, to find suitable teachers for a First-day School, but the teachers must be selected from the material at hand. If in the meeting itself the lessons are learned of self-consecration and reliance on God, those who are chosen to lead the children will realize that they must make careful preparation each week for the lesson hour, and that an essential part of this preparation consists in seeking for Divine strength and guidance.

There are many young people in our Society today who are ready and willing to make sacrifices for their religion, and who have already experienced something of the joy that comes from such sacrifice. The example of these will have its effect upon others, and if we have faith in our younger members and expect loving service from them there will soon be no lack of consecrated workers. People value a religious organization not for what it gives to them but for what they give to it, and there are none who have more love for the Society of Friends than those who have spent themselves in the service of the First-day Schools.

THE good results of scientific temperance instruction in the schools of America are attracting attention in Europe. The International Anti-Alcohol Congress, made up of representatives of the governments and universities of Europe, is to hold its ninth biennial meeting this year in Bremen, Germany, during Easter week.

A special request has been sent by the officers of this Congress to President Roosevelt, asking that Mary H. Hunt, whose untiring efforts have been a large factor in securing laws requiring such instruction in every State and Territory of the Union, be appointed to represent the United States at the Congress, to present what have proved here the best methods for such education. In response to this request, letters of credit have been issued to her by the Department of State at Washington, signed by Secretary Hay, and the courtesies of the Congress have been bespoken for her by Baron von Sternburg, the German minister at Washington.

IN view of the political corruption that has existed for several years in Delaware it is gratifying to note the adoption of the following resolutions by the Wilmington Conference of Methodist ministers:

"Resolved, That bribery of all forms and in all phases is contrary to the word of God, degrading to the individual mind, and ruinous to the tone of domestic, social and political life. He who sells his vote sells his opinion, sells his conscience, and he who sells his conscience sells his God, his country and himself.

"We, therefore, admonish all our people that any one guilty of this shameless crime stands discredited before the Church, contemptible in the eyes of his brethren and condemned in the sight of God."

THE Pocono Pines Assembly, at Naomi Pines, Pa., about fourteen miles from Buck Hill Falls, will be opened this summer for educational meetings of different kinds. A course of summer schools will be held Seventh month 27th to Eighth month 15th. Of this Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh, of the University of Pennsylvania, will be Chancellor; among the instructors will be Dr. Joseph S. Walton, of the George School; President Isaac Sharpless, of Haverford College; and E. L. Kemp, principal of the East Stroudsburg Normal School. Further information will be furnished by the Registrar, Harriet Boewig, Biological Hall, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

THE first installment of a biographical sketch of John Jackson, another "worthy Friend of the nineteenth century," will appear next week. It will be continued for three or four months, and will be similar in character to the biographies of Samuel M. Janney and Benjamin Hallowell, which appeared in the INTELLIGENCER in 1899 and 1900 respectively.

BIRTHS.

GREEN.—At Kennett Square, Pa., Second month 28, 1903, to Samuel P. and Edith A. Green, a son who is named Edward Atkinson Green.

MERRYMAN.—At Gardenville, Baltimore county, Md., Third month 1, 1903, to Eugene and Ella Corse Merryman, a daughter named Dorothy Corse Merryman.

ROBERTS.—At Maple Shade, New Jersey, on First month 30, 1903, to Howard and Carrie Deacon Roberts, a son who is named Howard Deacon Roberts.

DEATHS.

BUZBY.—At Orlando, Florida, Second month 16, 1903, Hannah Fogg Smith Buzby, daughter of Joseph Scattergood and Anna Rebecca Buzby, of Salem, New Jersey, within ten days of being ten years old.

She was the only daughter and only granddaughter. Her bright, cheerful, loving disposition endeared her to her near relatives as well as to her immediate family, who deeply feel her loss.

CHANDLER.—In Waynesville, Ohio, Second month 6, 1903, Abi, wife of Aaron B. Chandler, and daughter of Enos and Mary Ann Carroll.

Her husband and their two children, Mariana and Walter D., survive her. She had been a great sufferer for many months, but bore her affliction uncomplainingly, ever looking on the bright side, showing that she had an unswerving faith in her Heavenly Father.

DARLINGTON.—In Washington, D. C., on Third month 10, 1903, Charles Sumner Darlington, in the 26th year of his age.

DAVIS.—At her home in Harford county, Maryland, the 29th of First month, 1903, after a short illness of pneumonia, Mary Harry Davis, daughter of N. P. and Rachel E. Harry, and wife of William B. Davis, in the 34th year of her age.

Her husband and six children survive her. She was a member with Friends until after her marriage when she decided to go with her husband, who was a devoted Presbyterian. Though young in years she was truly a mother in Israel, loved by all who knew her. N. P. H.

DAVIS.—At Waynesville, Ohio, Second month 26, 1903, Elizabeth A. Davis, daughter of Joshua and Priscilla Austin, aged 80 years, 10 months and 25 days; formerly of Moorestown, New Jersey.

Her was a character made beautiful and strong by affliction and sorrow. Most truly and effectually did she adorn the doctrine she professed, and the memory of her quiet life that was so hid with Christ in God will always remain a priceless benediction.

FLITCRAFT.—At Liberty, Union county, Indiana, on Third month 17, 1903, Charles Flitcraft, in his 75th year.

He was formerly of Salem county, New Jersey, and was a brother of Allen Flitcraft, Chester, Pa.

GRIFFEN.—At Yorktown Heights, New York, Third month 13, 1903, of pneumonia, Minnie U., wife of George J. Griffen, aged 47 years.

While in the usefulness of life, this dear sister, after a few days' illness, was taken from her husband, children, and a large circle of friends, into the higher life, into a fuller realization of God's love. During the few days' sickness a wonderful power sustained her, and she passed out the door of earthly scenes into the heavenly like a child lying down to sweet sleep. The funeral was largely attended. Her mortal form was laid in the cemetery adjoining Amawalk Monthly Meeting's burial-ground.

JOHNSON.—On Second-day, Third month 23, 1903, Elizabeth Quintin Harper, wife of William Johnson, in her 63d year; a member of the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Byberry, Pa.

JONES.—In Richmond, Indiana, Third month 6, 1903, Achsah Bond Jones, aged 88 years, 3 months and 24 days.

Achsah, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Bond, was born in Wayne county, Ind., near Goshen, Twelfth month 10, 1814. She resided at the place of her birth until her marriage with Sylvanus Jones, Eleventh month 1, 1832. To this union were born twelve children, seven of whom are now living.

After her marriage she and her husband moved to another part of the State, and remained until the year 1869, when they returned to Richmond, where she resided until her death. After a brief illness she quietly passed away, no one realizing that the end was so near. Just seven years and one week ago her husband died. Since his death she has resided at their home west of the city, with her daughter Mary, who has faithfully cared for her mother.

MOORE.—Third month 17, 1903, Asenath C. Moore, widow of Henry Allan Moore, in the 82d year of her age. Interment at London Grove, Chester county, Pa.

SHOTWELL.—On Third month 3, 1903, at the home of her brother, Eli L. Shotwell, David City, Nebraska, Elizabeth Emily Shotwell, in her 58th year. Interment at Garrison Cemetery.

The deceased was born in Oakfield, N. Y. While she was yet a child her parents located in Lobo, Ontario, near what is now Coldstream, where she lived until 1872, when she joined her brothers, Jacob, Daniel, and Eli, who had previously moved to Butler county, Nebraska.

She was a life-long member of the Society of Friends. After coming West she had her membership transferred from Norwich to Genoa Monthly Meeting, where for some years she has served as an Elder. Hers was an unassuming, consistent life that found its greatest joy in the well-being of those about her.

WALTON.—At his home in Moorestown, N. J., Third month 11, 1903, Silas Walton, son of Thomas and Anna Walton, in his 84th year.

He leaves one daughter, a widow with two young children, and five grandchildren whose parents died while they were quite young. They are now making useful members in our Society and the community at large. Thus he has been a parent indeed to two generations, as testified by a friend on the occasion of his funeral.

From birth he was a conscientious, conservative member of our Society, deeply interested in the affairs of the church, ever ready to encourage or admonish in all matters that came before the body, according to the light given him by his Heavenly Father, to whose will it was his desire to be subservient. Abiding in this faith, and possessed with a sound and discriminating mind, Friends early in his life appointed him to positions of prominence in the Society, all of which he filled with a care and precision that plainly evinced the Power governing his actions. This recognition of the Divine will was not hid under a napkin, but was so manifest that the community at large recognized it, and all his life, in addition to his private business, demands were constantly made upon his time by the public to occupy positions of trust in arbitration and the settlement of estates, to all of which he gave scrupulous attention.

During the anti-slavery agitation he did what was in his power to hasten the day of emancipation, and his desire was that all God's creatures should be preserved from every species of bondage. Ever thoughtful for the poor and unfortunate he cheerfully dispensed aid and advice. Several ministering Friends gave valuable testimony to the support and encouragement rendered them by his sympathetic counsel, in the belief that the Gospel of Christ is a Gospel of love, of peace, of good will and service to all God's creatures.

His trust was in a gentle, loving Saviour, and on the beautiful afternoon of Third month 14, 1903, his remains were taken to the cemetery and quietly placed beside those of his beloved companion, who had preceded him eleven years.

WARNER.—In Waynesville, Ohio, First month 15, 1903, J. Woodrow Warner, son of Levi W. and Elizabeth W. Warner (both deceased), aged 79 years, 2 months and 21 days; a life-long member of the Society of Friends.

He looked forward hopefully and almost eagerly to the time when he would pass over into the great beyond, often saying, "There are more of us on the other side than here."

WILSON.—On Second month 1, 1903, Theodate Pope Wilson, wife of Isaac Wilson, aged 83 years; an esteemed member of Goose Creek Monthly Meeting, Loudoun county, Virginia. Formerly of Baltimore, Maryland.

ELI THOMPSON.

When a citizen whose quietly-exerted influence was ever an endeavor to be on the side of right, was a member of our own religious Society, there is a sense of loss which leads to the inquiry, Who shall fill his place? This is the feeling which confronts us in the death of Eli Thompson, whose spirit left its suffering dwelling-place, Second month 8, 1903, in his 78th year.

He was married to Deborah V. Taylor, Tenth month 29, 1846; she died Fourth month 18, 1848, leaving the joy as well as the responsibility of a young son to his care. Second month 18, 1852, he was united in marriage to Deborah Swayne, with whom he lived nearly fifty-one years in close unity. A daughter was given them who, in course of time, became the wife of William Swayne and the mother of several children. She was taken from them in their young years and we believe given an entrance to the "house not made with hands eternal in the heavens." This sore trial was met and borne by himself and his wife as those who have learned the truth that He who gives knoweth best when to take. The children of the son and the daughter were very dear to the grandfather's heart, and his desire for them was that they might seek their Creator in the days of their youth, and thereby be preserved from the many wrong influences they might meet in their life travel.

His home was on a beautifully located farm in the vicinity of London Grove Meeting-house, which meeting they attended, but as the years told upon his strength they deemed it best to remove to Kennett Square. In this change they were observant of that advice of the Discipline of our meeting which recommends that our members should, when thus removing to another meeting, early request the removal of their right of membership to the meeting they regularly attend, that they may be of service in filling the positions required. In the attendance of these meetings he was faithful when health permitted. He was appointed to the eldership and filled it with feeling; his quiet words of encouragement, given to the trembling ones in the work of the ministry, were helpful and comforting, falling at times as the rain on the dry earth.

Whenever strength permitted he enjoyed seeing his neighbors and friends, of whom many came, the younger as well as the older in years. He bore with Christian fortitude and patience his long and suffering illness, yet at times desired that the closing hour might come, in humility trusting that by redeeming love all would be well. His faithful wife, who has striven to smooth the rough places of his pathway, may truly feel that she has lived up to the spirit of that vow spoken in youth, "Loving and faithful until death shall separate us." May that Comforter who forgets no sorrowing heart be her staff of reliance.

M. WALTON.

SOCIETY NOTES.

BELIEVING that First-day School teachers and other workers will derive much benefit from a school of methods, Jesse H. Holmes, Joseph S. Walton and Charles F. Jenkins have arranged, with the co-operation of the Buck Hill Falls Company, for a conference of two weeks during the coming summer in which a study of the materials and methods used in class work will be presented and discussed.

Three courses will be offered: one on the aim of First-day School teaching, and how to use the Bible to accomplish that aim, by which Jesse H. Holmes, of Swarthmore College; one on the principles of the Society of Friends, and their History; how to select and present such material to classes, by Joseph S. Walton, of George School; and one on juvenile classes, and object lessons; the material and method of presentation.

It is expected that a course of evening lectures will be offered on kindred topics, by men and women identified with and interested in such work.

The work of the Assembly will begin on Third-day, Sixth month 23, and will continue until Seventh month 6, inclusive. Those joining the classes are expected to arrive Second-day evening, Sixth month 22d. Sessions will be held each day from 9 a. m. to 12 m., and the afternoons will be devoted to recreation—riding, tennis, bicycling, boating, walking, etc. In the evenings there will be lectures, readings and other gatherings.

Arrangements have been made to board and lodge a limited number of teachers and others in tents at reduced rates. The tents will be provided with board floors and double roofs, and furnished with cots, chairs and the necessary toilet appointments.

An assembly tent or pavilion will be provided, and also an eating tent, where those enjoying the special rate will board.

The cost will be—board and lodging in tents for two weeks, enrollment in Assembly, including all evening lectures, carriage and baggage transportation from Cresco to Buck Hill Falls and return, $15.00.

All persons wishing this special Assembly rate should apply to Joseph S. Walton, George School, Penn., before Sixth month 1st, 1903.

Others who secure board at the Inn or elsewhere in the neighborhood may become members of the Assembly and secure tickets to all lectures offered, upon payment of the enrollment fee of $3.00.

Joel and Mary Borton, accompanied by their daughter Alice, attended the meeting at Locust Valley, Long Island on the 21st instant. The pupils of the Friends' Academy were present, and notwithstanding the inclement weather there was a full attendance of Friends and others. In the evening, at the request of the students through their principal, A. Davis Jackson, Joel Borton attended the devotional meeting held at the Academy. At both of these meetings his words of counsel and encouragement were very acceptable.

BELFAST.—III.

THE city of itself has no very ancient history. A Norman knight, DeCourci, governor of the province of Ulster, erected the old castle about 1170 A. D., but it is now "non est." Fearsat, meaning a ford, was the earliest name, there being a low bridge or ford over the river Lagan which runs through the city, over which are now three good bridges. In 660 A. D., the record runs, a fierce battle was fought near here between Ulidians and the Cruithni clans and one great leader named Cathadach slain.

In 1316, Edward, brother of Robert Bruce, King of Scotland, was invited over by native clans to help drive out the English who ruled Ulster, and he accepted the offer. At the head of the united armies he fell with the fury of a devouring tempest on the English host, but in a subsequent battle was slain. If this had not happened the whole course of Irish history would have been changed.

Belfast Castle has been destroyed and rebuilt several times. In 1573 the entire district, then called Clannaboye, was granted by Queen Elizabeth to her favorite, Earl of Essex, and he was appointed governor of Ulster Province. After displeasing Elizabeth he was recalled in 1604 and Sir Arthur Chichester made Lord Deputy, the tower, manor and castle granted him, and the first Fair was held in this year. It appears that religious persecution in Scotland after this time drove great numbers of Protestants to settle in these parts, and Belfast became the nucleus of commercial life, especially shipping and mercantile pursuits. Coins were struck off in Belfast in 1656.

William III., of Orange, landed at Carrickfergus in 1690, and at the head of his troops drove in carriage and six over the sands to Belfast. (These sands, or strand, are now impassable, being overflowed by the sea.) He was met by the chief magistrate, or sovereign, as he was termed for centuries. The multitude were delighted, shouting, "God bless our Protestant King." Being well-pleased, King William stayed five days at the castle, and then, at the head of some 15,000 men advanced towards the river Boyne. On his way, near Lisnegarvey (now Lisburn), overtaken by a heavy thunder-storm, he took shelter in a house since named Orange Grove, and drinking freely of ale reposed for some hours with a headache. Being accosted by a French Huguenot refugee, Rene Balmeth, the King saluted him in Lisburn street, right on his cheek, and then saying, "Thy wife, also," saluted her heartily.

I notice in the account of provisions at this time how very cheaply they were purchased, butter 4 cents per pound, milk 1 cent per quart, fowls 8 cents each, white bread 2 cents per pound, etc. The population of Belfast in 1750 was 8,549; now it is 358,000. In 1660 it contained but five streets, houses mostly small and thatched with straw. Within a few miles' radius now we find many one story houses of stone with straw-thatched roof, and frequently only hard ground floor with flat stones or flags round the hearth-stone.

Louis Crommelin was the founder of linen manufacture in Ulster, and his family for 500 years had been large linen merchants in Picardy. Seeing the storm of persecution approaching they removed their wealth to Holland. King William did him much honor and a colony of 27 families came over to Lisburn selected by the King. His brothers and families followed with $100,000 capital. In 1707 the King was thanked by the Irish Parliament for his interest taken in the settlement.

Now to return to earlier times: the archaeology of this corner of the globe, the stone altars or "cromlechs" scattered all over the island, appear the most ancient, and ante-date those at Stonehenge, England. These mostly consist of three vertical blocks or pillars of solid stone supporting a fourth placed horizontally, and are similar in structure to those found in Palestine, Syria, etc., raised by the Hittites and thought to be older than the time of Moses. In Addison D. Coffin's life he frequently alludes to these proofs of the extensive migrations of the Hittites.

We find various specimens of pottery and stone querns, or primitive mills for corn-grinding; also old war-like weapons and tools, of which more anon. The renowned hill and halls of Tara come next in order dating from 218 A. D.; the records indicate events in Pagan civilization. The great feast of Tara was convened annually by the kings of Erin, when poets sang their lays, lawyers argued, and the chiefs discussed affairs of state and all were royally entertained. It remained the political, legal, and social centre of Irish life till 560, St. Patrick arriving in 433 A. D. The invocation of a curse by a priest in 563 caused Tara's Halls to be finally deserted, but poets have since sung of its ancient glories.

Saint Columba, the most notable early Christian missionary in the north, was born in County Donegal, 521 A. D., and founded some 300 churches, monasteries, abbeys, crosses, and round towers, round the Scotch coast and along the northern coast of Ireland, isles of Tory and Innistrahul, and through the province of Ulster, the principal being the cathedral on Iona isle. On the famous isle of Tory is a cross of slate with veins of white quartz and mica 20 feet, 6 inches high. This is on the northwest coast nine miles from land. Here is a round tower of St. Columba's time of red granite cemented with lime made from shells, 51 feet high, 17 feet in diameter, the walls 4 feet, 3 inches thick. An urn, a brazen vessel, and quern were found inside, and a bell used for centuries in the tower. Outside is a sarcophagus of red granite with a well-defined sculptured cross 4 feet 6 by 1 foot, 6 inches. The earliest crosses represent Christ as a lamb, but since the Ninth century in human form. St. Columba evidently established churches in this remote isle of the ocean as a safe refuge from persecution. The inhabitants were all tectotals and curiously built canoes were used to cross over to the main land. They were named "currachs," made originally of the trunk of a large tree, but since of raw hides of a newly-slain animal, and were similar to those shown in sculpture from Ninevah, as a means of crossing rivers. Caesar, Pliny, etc., refer to the currach, and this was still used in 1853. Latterly they have been constructed of tarred canvas. The boats have sharp pointed bows and square sterns. The crosses were mostly of one style as indicated in the one found near Droghedach on the Boyne, fifteen miles from Tara's hill. A cast is in Belfast museum, dated 923 A. D.

THE CO-OPERATIVE COAL CLUB.

The Co-operative Coal Club connected with the Starr Centre, 700 Lombard Street, Philadelphia, of which Susan P. Wharton is manager, was founded in 1893 among colored people, and since that time has steadily progressed. Its membership, especially since the strike of 1900, has been growing, and at the present time includes 500 families, about one-half of whom are visited each week at their own homes during the whole year for the collection of small sums toward buying coal.

The leaders in this work believe that there is a vital principle involved in co-operative clubs that as yet has found only feeble recognition among social workers. The strength of pulling together and abiding by rules and regulations, the good fellowship growing up among people of varied occupations and interests and belonging to many different churches is the best outcome, and this is being more and more understood in the club.

To keep such clubs up to a high standard requires time and patience. The more intelligent the visitor the larger the outcome. Spasmodic visiting with great gaps in the summer is not sufficient, and while there are good results from receiving deposits at an office, etc., by such a plan personal intercourse is almost left out, and the class most needing the education of saving is not appealed to.

The weak point in remedial social work seems to be the absence of knowledge regarding the persons involved until they are thrown out of their normal condition by some accident, such as sickness, loss of work, etc. If we know or are known as a result of natural intercourse extending perhaps over years, it is easy to see what an immense advantage such a relation is to the person in need as well as to those who wish to befriend him.

These clubs are really self-supporting. The only money needed, outside the resources of the club members, is for salaries for really trained and experienced visitors, who in turn will educate volunteers, who thus become a most important and cheering factor in what is really a work of far-reaching possibility.

In brief, the coal club is a trust of labor, thrift and mutual confidence, and its members grow more and more unselfish, and their respect and good feeling for their neighbors increase as the co-operative principle crystallizes in their own minds.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

FISHERTOWN, PA.—The regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held Third month 22d, at the home of Uriah Blackburn. After the customary opening exercises Olive Way gave a recitation entitled "Trouble." "A Song of Saturday" was then recited by Griffin Hammer. Lucretia Zeigler read a selection entitled "True Riches," showing that all riches are not true riches. "Do Thy Work" was recited by four girls; Helen Hammer then recited "Noah's Ark," "Your Day's Work Done" was read by Florence Way. "Sowing Seeds" was recited by Jessie Blackburn. The article in Baltimore's new Discipline referring to meetings for worship was read by Rebecca Blackburn. Interesting current events were presented by Ardelle Blackburn, after which many responded to their names with sentiments and after usual silence adjourned to meet at Robert McCoy's Fourth month 19. ELIZABETH BLACKBURN, Cor. Sec.

WEST GROVE, PA.—At a conference held under the care of the Philanthropic Committee of the Western Quarterly Meeting, Dr. Benjamin F. Battin, of Swarthmore College, gave an address on "The Principles of the Society of Friends." Our fundamental principles as set forth by the speaker are as follows: Belief in God, in which we do not differ from other denominations; the Inner Light; immediate revelation; freedom of the soul; immortality of the soul and belief in a future life. In the course of his remarks Dr. Battin showed that when considered from the standpoint of the philosopher these principles are sound and cannot be successfully controverted. Other important principles of our Society were referred to, such as not having a hiring ministry, the absence of form in our meetings, the equal rights of men and women, etc. The address was followed by an interesting discussion, during which the question was asked, "Is not the Society of Friends becoming more of an ethical society and losing its hold on spirituality?" This was thought by those present not to be the case. In answer to a question that had been raised Edward Pennock said he thought our objection to a paid ministry a cardinal principle of our Society, and it would be a long time before Friends would consent to change their views on this subject. The meeting was interesting and well-attended. R. P. W.

SOLEBURY, PA.—The Young Friends' Association met on the 8th instant. Mary D. Ely gave an excellent report on current events.

Henry Paxson read a selection from the Discipline. John S. Williams thought the Discipline should be conformed to as far as practicable. He dearly loved the plain language of the Society and thought it should be used in the family and among the members of the Society, but it was hardly practical among business people of the day, few of whom knew the time referred to by Fifth-day or Seventh-month. While the dress should be plain it seems advisable that it should so far conform to that of the day as to avoid special attention. Joseph Simpson and Reuben Price continued the discussion.

Reuben Price reported on history by referring to the progress made in medicine, surgery and science.

Margaret Lownes reported on literature with an excellent paper on "Sabbath Observance." She said in part: "The commandment, six days shalt thou labor and the seventh day thou shalt rest," did not imply that the day should be passed in sleep or reclining on a lounge reading a novel. On this day more than any other should we follow the command to love God with all our hearts and our neighbor as ourselves. The command was just as emphatic when it said six days shalt thou labor as it was when it said "the seventh day thou shalt rest."

The paper was discussed by J. S. Williams, Joseph Simpson and Reuben Price.

The secretary read a report of the last General Conference of the Young Friends' Associations.

"What is the greatest need of the Society of Friends?" was answered by a thoughtful paper by Agnes Michener Ely.

"What ever is, is right," said Pope; do you believe this to be true? If so, account for the saloon, political corruption, etc.," was answered in the negative in a brief paper by Eastburn Reeder.

"To what extent do circumstances influence success and failure?" was answered by C. B. Price. An animated discussion of the subject followed. Joseph Simpson thought the great essential of success was to stick; to make oneself useful to the employer, the community, and the Society.

PLYMOUTH MEETING.—At the regular meeting of Plymouth Friends' Association held Third month 13th, Sara Tomlinson opened the exercises by a reading entitled "The Book Canvasser," followed by a recitation by George Corson entitled "The Three Bells." A paper on "Thomas Ellwood," was read by Grace Wright. Elizabeth Buckman read an article from the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, by Susan Jarrett on the need of increased interest in our business meetings. Lydia C. Webster read a paper on "Current Topics." Anna Butcher then recited "The Uplifted Gates."

Isaac Roberts opened the discussion of the question, "Would it contribute to the interest of business meetings to change the time of holding them?" John Hairy, Benjamin Smith and others continued the discussion and all agreed that if we want the younger business men to attend, we must change the time to a more convenient hour; and if we get members to attend we shall have increased interest, for in numbers there is strength.

After the usual period of silence we adjourned to meet Fourth month 10th. WILLIAM W. ANBLER, Sec.

LANGHORNE, PA.—A regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held at the home of Sarah A. Eastman, on Third month 20, 1903.

The program opened with a recitation by Edna Parry, entitled, "Busy Little People." Under the head of "Current Topics," Marian Osmond read interesting accounts of the Panama Canal movement and of wireless telegraphy. Mary Bunting read a thoughtful paper on the subject of "Silence and Feeling." She said that silence was often not appreciated, especially in our meetings. That the sermons God gives us individually are often more profitable than the sermons coming from the minds of others. In an able paper presented by Andrew M. Bye, on "The Growth of National Spirit," he told of the gradual development of civilization in our country, of the growth of our schools, colleges and literature, and of the development of our women. MABEL A. ROW, Sec.

MULLICA HILL, N. J.—The Young Friends' Association met Third month 18.

The program for the evening was Discipline reading on "Wills," by Howard Avis. A selection was read by Debbie Smith, "In the Silence." A poem from Whittier, entitled "The Minister's Daughter," was read by Rena Avis. "A Little Quaker Dinner," was recited by Elizabeth Kirby. A paper was prepared by Benjamin Pancoast on the subject, "Has the Friend been selfish with his Religion?" The evening's exercises were varied by having a "Floral Salad," by Lillie Colson. A very interesting collection of "Current Topics" was given by Edward Kirby. Number present, 34. A. G. TOKKIN, Secretary.

MOORESTOWN, N. J.—A regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held in the meeting-house, Third month 13th, 1903.

The election of officers resulted as follows:—President, Henry B. Coles; Vice-presidents, Horace Roberts and Emily B. Gardiner; Secretary, Anna B. Dudley; Treasurer, Howard F. DeCoo; Executive Committee, Emily Atkinson, Charles Ford, Florence E. May, Ellwood Griscom, Jr., Elizabeth L. Gillingham, Harry Walton.

Thomas Beans presented the last half of his paper on "The King's Highway." He told us of the changes in government of the province of New Jersey and of the industrial progress of the state. Philadelphia was founded shortly after New Jersey was settled and that city's great prosperity was largely due to the products of our State. Soon the main roads of New Jersey began to point in that direction and ferries were built to better enable us to send our products there. The paper told very clearly the exact path of the King's highway by old trees and other well-known landmarks.

Emily B. Gardiner then reviewed Charles Wagner's "Simple Life." She selected some fine passages to read to us. The idea of the book is well expressed in these words: "Plain living and high thinking are simplification." "The art of living is to know how to give one's life."

ELIZABETH L. GILLINGHAM, Sec.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Young Friends' Association has held its meetings regularly on the evening of the third Sixth-day in each month. The officers for the year are.—E. Clifton Thomas, President; Sarah R. Matthews, Vice-president; Margaret L. Yelverton, Secretary; Albert Stabler, Treasurer. Until the Second month, the meetings were held at the meeting-house, but since that time they have convened at private houses with an improvement in the attendance. They have always been opened with a Bible reading by the President. At one of our meetings Dr. O. Edward Janney favored us with a most interesting discourse on "Why I am a Friend," which was followed with a very suggestive paper by Alice A. Roberts on "Personal Responsibility."

Herbert Worth's paper, on "Work for Individual Associations," was read at one of the meetings by Lena J. Stabler. This was followed by a short biography of George Fox by Sarah R. Matthews.

The principal feature of our programs for the season has been biographical sketches of prominent Friends, except at one social meeting, where each member represented the title of a book to be guessed by the others.

Dr. O. Edward Janney, who is ever ready to lend a helping hand, again entertained us with a very interesting and instructive paper on "George Fox and His Message to Men."

Dr. Jesse H. Holmes, with his pictures and vivid descriptions, afforded us a delightful imaginary trip to "The Land of Judea." When we met at the home of Albert Stabler, we enjoyed an evening with William Penn by having him introduced to us in a comprehensive sketch by Edith Farquhar. Margaret L. Yelverton then gave some reasons for his becoming a Friend. The roll-call elicited excellent quotations from his writings.

The last meeting, on the evening of Third month 20th, was held at the residence of T. Janney Brown. Alberta Wilson gave us a charming account of Elizabeth Fry and her work. Albert Stabler read an article of Washington Gladden's, on Phillips Brooks, Lena J. Stabler followed this with a very helpful selection on "The Individuality and Simplicity of Prayer." S. R. MATTHEWS.

EDUCATIONAL.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the Interscholastic Oratorical Contest at Swarthmore have received much encouragement and have decided to send out the following letter:

"The committee for the Interscholastic Oratorical Contest at Swarthmore, Fifth month 2, has received a number of cordial replies, among which several are acceptances. As some requests for further information have been made, it was decided to send this note, covering the points in question.

"The following rules are to be observed: Orations shall be original, and require not more than eight minutes in delivery.

"Three judges will be selected by the Swarthmore College Oratorical Association, to judge in the finale on thought, composition and delivery.

"Each school will select its representatives in the manner best suited to its own conditions. The following method based on successful experience in similar cases is suggested: In the upper classes of the English Department of the school, orations are written as a regular part of the department work. These are then judged, and from eight to ten selected for public delivery. The occasion of the public contest in the school can be made one of much interest to the parents and patrons of the school. Judges selected from the prominent citizens of the neighborhood are asked to judge, e. g., on (1) thought and composition, and on (2) delivery and personality. The highest award of the judges to be the representative of the school, the second award, the alternate.

"The school contest should take place before Fourth month 15.

"The name of the successful contestant, with a copy of his oration, should be sent to the committee on or before Fourth month 19.

"If there are more than ten (10) schools which send names and orations to the committee, the orations will be judged and ten (10) selected therefrom. Notice will be sent at once to the successful schools and the representative will then have considerable time for final preparation.

"It is to be hoped that this contest will stimulate the interest and work in English, composition and oratory in the several schools; and that it may also lead to further interscholastic debates.

"BENJAMIN F. BATTIN, Committee, for the Faculty.

"WILLIAM E. HANNUM, Committee, for the Oratorical Ass'n."

On the evening of the 16th, Dr. Lingelbach, of the University of Pennsylvania, gave an illustrated lecture on Napoleon Bonaparte. He sketched the life of the General from childhood until his death.

Word was received of the safe arrival of the Clarke cruise at Alexandria. All were reported well.

The contest in extemporaneous speaking for the young ladies was held on the 16th. Twelve girls took part. Of these the prizes were awarded, first, to Caroline Hadley; second, to Elizabeth Sutton; third, to Annie Ross; and honorable mention for Maude E. Rice. The judges were Dr. Joseph Walton, George School; J. Russell Smith, University of Pennsylvania; Mary Ash, Swarthmore.

The Intercollegiate contest in oratory was held at Swarthmore on the 20th. Representatives from seven colleges, Lafayette, Lehigh, Franklin and Marshall, Gettysburg, Ursinus, Muhlenberg, and Swarthmore, took part. For Swarthmore this was an evening to be remembered. Our representative, Elizabeth Sutton, received first place by a unanimous decision of the judges. Second place was awarded to J. Albert Eyer, of Franklin and Marshall. The judges for the occasion were Hon. Clinton Rogers Woodruff, Philadelphia; Dr. B. L. Whitman, Philadelphia; Prof. Pattee, State College.

Dr. Appleton lectured at the College recently on "Athens, Ancient and Modern." P. M. W.

GEORGE SCHOOL NOTES.

The annual Junior Contest was held on Sixth-day evening, Third month 20. This contest is held under the auspices of the Alumni Association, which gives to the winner a prize of five dollars to purchase a frame for the Senior class picture. The frame, upon which is engraved the name of the presenter, is formally presented to the Senior class on class-day. It is considered a great honor to take part in this contest, as the regulations governing it are very strict. The judges, Nathaniel Richardson, Robert Kenderdine, and Horace Hogeland, awarded the prize to Bertha Pancock, who spoke very effectively on "Child Labor." The other contestants, all of whom reflected great credit upon themselves and upon the school, were Mertie Croasdale, who received honorable mention, "The Value of an Ideal"; Mabel Nichols, "The Venezuelan Drama," and Arthur Bye, "The Profit and Value of Profit-sharing."

The annual Senior Shakespearean Recital was given on Seventh-day evening, the 21st, before an audience which taxed the seating capacity of our Assembly Room to its utmost. The entire evening was devoted to "The Merchant of Venice." All of the parts taken by the eighteen members of the class were well performed and showed very careful preparation.

R. A. L.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

ELMA M. PRESTON, of Kennett Square, State Secretary of the Loyal Temperance Legion of Pennsylvania, started on the 23rd instant for a three months' trip through the West. She was accompanied by her sister, Lydia R. Linvill, of Swarthmore, her sister-in-law, Margaret W. Brosius, of Cochraville and Anna Linvill, of Christiana. They expect to go by way of Santa Fe, stopping to see the Grand Canon in Arizona, the Pueblo Indians at Laguna, and the petrified forest at Flagstaff. They will spend next month visiting points of interest in Southern California, then go to San Francisco, the Yosemite, and by the Shasta route to Portland; then on to Seattle, Tacoma, Spokane and the mountains of British Columbia. In the sixth month they will return home via the Yellowstone Park, Salt Lake City and Denver.

A Friend writing from the Newtown, Pa., Friends' Home, says that the oldest of their twenty boarders is a woman in her 92nd year, and the next oldest a man in his 80th year; there are several others about 84 years of age. The general health is good.

The Living School Visitor states that since its last issue the school has received fifty dollars from "a friend" toward fitting up the new room. Twenty-five dollars more will complete the amount asked for.

Harriet Green, an English Friend who has been visiting Friends of the other branch in the United States for two years past, died in North Carolina and was buried at Guilford on the 20th instant. Her friend and companion, Sophia Fry, who was with her at the time of her death, is expected in Philadelphia this week.

LITERARY NOTES.

THOSE who are active in good works will read with interest "Constructive and Preventive Philanthropy," by Joseph Lee, Vice-President of the Massachusetts Civic League. The volume contains one sentence that is destined to be widely quoted: "The boy without a playground is father to the man without a job, and the boy with a bad playground is apt to be father to a man with a job that had better have been left undone."

Among the topics discussed are savings and loans, health and building laws, model tenements, public libraries, vacation schools, playgrounds, boys' clubs, and industrial training. Apropos of the discontent that existed in Pullman, where the owners of the car factories had done so much to make theirs a model town, the author says, "Man cannot live by bread alone, or even by drainage, theatres, and libraries supplied by an alien will, and there are some merits in democracy which those who judge government purely by its outward results have not learned, as yet, to realize."

After describing several model factory towns where the owners have spared neither expense nor effort in giving their employes comfortable homes and attractive surroundings, he adds this remark: "No amount of machinery or visible appliances are a substitute for the 'humane touch'; and the manufacturer who has done the least that appears in the catalogue may yet be among those who have done the most for the real advance and happiness of their employes."

(Published by the MacMillan Company, New York; price, $1.00).

Headley Brothers, London, have just issued a pocket edition of "The Journal of John Woolman," (price, two shillings) with a foreword by Rev. R. J. Campbell, M. A.; also addenda, bibliography, index and appendix, which includes "A Word of Remembrance and Caution to the Rich." It is printed on thin paper with limp cloth covers of bright red, which we fear would not please the eye of the plain Friend who wrote it. Besides the introduction written by Whittier for the Boston edition, the volume contains numerous explanatory notes and six illustrations,—a wood cut of Woolman's unpretending house in Mount Holly, facsimile pages from the first English selection of his journal, a specimen of his handwriting, the chair used by him in his last illness, a memorandum left by him, and the house in which he died.

POVERTY.

THE people call him rich : his lands
Stretch very far and very wide ;
They call him rich, yet there he stands
Ill-clad and bent and hollow-eyed.

The people call him rich : his gold
Is piled in many a yellow heap,
But he is all alone and old,
And when he dies no one will weep.

They call him rich, but where he dwells
The floors are bare, the walls are bleak ;
They call him rich ; he buys and sells,
But no fond fingers stroke his cheek.

They call him rich : he does not know
The happiness of standing where
Sweet winds across the meadows blow
And toss the verdant billows there.

—S. E. Kiser, in Harper's Magazine.

LOVE is of the immortal,
And patience is sublime,
And trouble, a thing of every day,
And touching every time ;
And childhood, sweet and sunny,
And womanly truth and grace,
Ever can light life's darkness
And bless earth's lowliest place.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

COMPENSATION.

IN the new world toward which our feet are set,
Shall we find aught to make our hearts forget
Earth's homely joys and her bright hours of bliss ?
Has heaven a spell divine enough for this ?
For who the pleasure of the spring shall tell,
When on the leafless stalks the brown buds swell,
When the grass brightens and the days grow long,
And little birds break out in rippling song !

O sweet the dropping eve, the blush of morn,
The starlit sky, the rustling fields of corn,
The soft airs blowing from the freshening seas,
The sunflecked shadow of the stately trees,
The mellow thunder and the lulling rain,
The warm, delicious, happy summer rain,
When the grass brightens and the days grow long,
And little birds break out in rippling song !

O beauty manifold, from morn till night,
Dawn's flush, noon's blaze and sunset's tender light !
Of fair, familiar features, changes sweet,
Of her revolving seasons, storm and sleet
And golden calm, as slow she wheels through space,
From snow to roses—and how dear her face
When the grass brightens, when the days grow long
And little birds break out in rippling song !

O happy earth ! O home so well beloved !
What recompense have we, from thee removed ?
One hope we have that overtops the whole—
The hope of finding every vanished soul
We love and long for daily, and for this
Gladly we turn from thee and all thy bliss,
Even at thy loveliest, when the days are long
And little birds break out in rippling song.

—Celia Thaxter.

THE TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE.

Max Bennett Thrasher, in the Christian Register.

"WE want to hear from some of the women, now," said Booker Washington, looking out over the fifteen hundred colored men and women gathered before him at this year's session of the Tuskegee Negro Conference. "Is Mrs. Lucy Nelson, of Dadeville, Ala., in the audience?"

A very black woman, middle-aged, neatly dressed, stood up. Whereas many of the women of her age present wore cavernous gingham sunbonnets of various colors and conditions, or had their heads bound in cloths of black or white this woman wore a neat hat, trimmed in keeping with the rest of her garb.

"Sah?" said she, her face showing evidently that she was struggling between diffidence at speaking before such an august company and a desire, now that she had been called on, to do her duty to herself and her race.

"We want to know something, Mrs. Nelson," said Mr. Washington, "about the condition of the colored people in your community. Do the people there own their homes?"

"I think they's fixin' to own 'em, sah."

"But do they own them?"

"Heap of times you can't tell, sah. But they's holdin' of 'em down."

"Do you own your home?" Mr. Washington has a way of sticking to his point.

"Yes, sah," proudly. "And I can tell you jest how I got it."

"How much land have you got?" continued Mr. Washington, in his search for concrete facts.

"Forty acres, and a good house with three rooms to it. Me and my daughter and my little grandson. He's ten years old, and I'm the boss. Some years, when cotton is good, we makes as much as a hundred dollars."

There was a wave of applause from all over the room, and the heads in sunbonnets twisted around to look at the head in a hat.

"Do you ever have to give a mortgage on your crop, Mrs. Nelson?" inquired Mr. Washington.

"Sah?" with a note of rising indignation in the tone which boded ill to the presiding officer.

"I asked if you ever had to give a mortgage on your crop in order to get food to live on until the crop was harvested," explained Mr. Washington. "Some of these men here have to."

"Didn't I tell you some years I makes as much as a hundred dollars clear? When I says clear, I means the money. What should I be givin' morgidges for?"

Mr. Washington joined in the laugh at his expense, which rippled over the room. "You said you would tell us how you got your place, Mrs. Nelson."

"Yes, sah. I swapped a little yaller puppy dog for it."

The audience laughed.

"What?" said Mr. Washington.

"Yes, sah. I means jest what I says. I swapped a little puppy dog for it."

"It was this way. When I started, I didn't have a single thing in the world at all except jest a little dog, a little yaller puppy; but a brother-in-law of mine had eight little pigs. I took the puppy over to his house, and he swapped with me, and give me a little pig for it. It was just the least little mite of a pig. Seemed like it couldn't live nohow, but I took good care of it, and I prayed to the Lord to make that pig come forward to do me good; and it lived and grew. I turned it out in the spring; and, when she came home in the fall, she brought me seven little pigs with her. That was my start. I hain't never had to buy any meat since then. This winter I killed three hogs, and I've got one more at home now ready to kill. And that's the way I got my start."

"I want you all to hear that," said Mr. Washington. "Here is a woman who owns forty acres of land and a home, and has money saved; and she got her start in the world by swapping a puppy for a pig. I wish some of you men here would go home and swap some of your dogs for pigs. Thank you, Mrs. Nelson. Now we will hear from some one else."

A LONDON auctioneer recently sold the recipe for a patent pill for $25,000. The owner had been making $5,000 a year on it. It was found to be compounded of quinine and dandelion; what gave it its value was the credulity of the public. —[New York Evening Post.]

THE creed of the Santee Normal School in Nebraska is this: "Any one who does not learn how to work and learn to like to work, is of no use in this world, and will never even enter heaven."

Doukhorbor Self-control.

THE self-control which they instill into their children may well put to shame most American families. Soon after their arrival on this continent a group of Doukhorbor children were playing with some Canadian children, when one of the latter was accidentally hurt and ran home crying. The father of this boy was so enraged that he rushed at the only Doukhorbor child who remained on the playground, and kicked this little fellow, who had not been playing at all, but innocently sitting near the scene of the trouble, so that he died shortly after from the injuries received.

The parents of the lad and all the Doukhorbors forthwith signed a memorial expressing their sorrow for the boy's death, but asking that the man who killed him should not be punished. Such an attitude of mind and heart was reflected throughout their communities in the children. Indeed, it was one of the very pleasant features of my visit among their villages to observe the gentleness of their manners. I do not recall a single instance of quarrelling among all the groups of children I saw at play, and when I gathered them together they invariably showed a courtesy toward the smaller members of the group.—[From Joseph Elkinton's book, "The Doukhorbors."]

The Choice before the South.

WE are sometimes tempted to go off upon a false and hopeless quest. We imagine that the two classes of Negroes between which the South may choose is the old-time darky and the present day Negro. But practically there is no such alternative for us to-day. We must clearly see, many of us with sorrow, that the old time darky is forever gone. He was the product of the conditions of slavery, conditions which no man at the South could or would restore. We cannot choose between the old-time darky and the new. We, as practical men, must take our choice between the two classes of the new—the class of quiet, sensible, industrious men and women (as yet a minority, but a minority steadily increasing) who seek through intelligence and skill to be useful to themselves and to their country, and the class (upon the other hand) which is backward, thriftless, profitless, which draws from the land or the community only what it may consume, which creates no wealth because it has no needs, which furnishes the murderer, the rapist, the loafer, the incendiary, which presents no theoretic competition for the job of our skilled laborer, largely because this class of Negroes is not much possessed of any skill nor much enamored of any conceivable job. There are just two classes of Negroes in our land to-day—those who are going forward and those who are going backward. I have little doubt as to the choice which the South will make. —[The Southern Workman.]

Science in Shovels

A RECENT issue of Engineering gives some interesting data of steps taken by the Bethlehem Steel Co. to reduce the cost of common labor employed in shoveling coal, oil, etc., and several highly-trained specialists were engaged to study the problem. It was found that the time taken to insert a shovel into a pile was shorter if it were shoved into the top instead of the bottom of a pile. It also varied with the material, taking longer for coke than for sand, and, of course, with the man also, a powerful laborer taking twenty-two pounds at each shovelful, while the average was not more than twelve to fourteen pounds.

As a result of this investigation, new sets of shovels, specially adapted to different kinds of work, were used, and instead of sending a man out in the morning with a shovel and allowing him to carry it all over the premises and use it indiscriminately on coke or ore, shovels of different sizes and shapes were used for different materials. The result of the study of this problem has been that the staff of common laborers, which averages 400 or 500, at wages of $1.15 per day, has been cut down, and the work is now done by eighty-five men, who are paid at the rate of $1.85 per day.

Snuff versus Good Humor.

INTERESTING notes on the snuff-taking habit are furnished by the German authorities of the district known as the Bavarian Forest. The men there consume on an average of half a pound of snuff per day, the tobacco being mixed with ground glass "to sting better." The people in this district are much given to violence, and attacks with the knife are of daily occurrence. For years the prison authorities experienced great difficulties with their charges on account of their uniform obstinacy, and finally hit upon the plan of depriving them of snuff. They say that after a while a great change for the better was noticeable, the men becoming tractable and sensible of their degrading inhumanity.—[Chicago Tribune.]

Children's Amusements.

In the nursery of a little boy who is to be many times a millionaire it has been found that the supreme joy is a carpenter's bench. The discovery began when the young man was given a box of tools, all so poor that his father wondered at the little fellow's patient efforts to use them. This led to a few of better grade and to a lesson now and again as to their use. Finally a vise seemed necessary, and then a special table, and it all culminated in a tiny bench, made to order and measure, but reproducing exactly the bench of the adult workman. For more than a year this has given unmixed pleasure to its owner, who always comes back to "making something" as his best amusement.

In this same nursery the walls have a dado of butcher's paper, which can be slipped in and out quickly, and in this the little sister has worked out the fancies and conceits of her imagination. Fairies and giants, flowers, buds and beasts, in most original form, serve to illustrate the stories she has heard or made up, and, although Raphael might correct the drawing and Titian the color, there has been no end of fun and pleasure to the little lady. It should be needless to say that hand and hand with the privilege of drawing on this dado goes the lesson that no spot of any other wall must be touched by pencil or brush.

This nursery is presided over by a very intelligent young mother, and the psychological law underlying these amusements she well understands.—[Public Ledger.]

Cattle versus People in Ireland.

In the poor West where the people have been driven off the good lands to make room for the cattle, the situation is the most painful one. "Where the lands are, there are no people; where the people are, there is no land," is William O'Brien's vivid generalization. It is too true. I rode parts of several days through rolling, fertile tracts, green in December, dotted with bullocks and sheep, and no houses except here and there the dwellings of the graziers. But down in the bogs,—in the black, grimy swamps,—the people were found swarming in their miserable huts, many of them with their few cattle, pigs, and poultry housed under the same roof with the family, trying to eke out a living from two to half a dozen acres of mud-hole, land which an American farmer would never think of trying to till, but would turn over to his pigs for a wallow.

Take Westport Union, for example. Fifteen thousand acres are devoted to raising food for the people; 151,000 acres are monopolized by the herds of a dozen graziers. In the union are 5,322 occupiers of agricultural land, and 3,041 of them pay less than twenty dollars a year rental for their holdings. They pay all the holdings are worth, one may be sure; and the annual value of the produce which a family can gather from a farm worth twenty dollars a year is the measure of these people's standard of comfort. More than one thousand other tenants are able to pay less than forty dollars a year for their holdings. Nearly all of the land held by these poor tenants is reclaimed bog or mountain heather, upon which crops are produced only by dint of incredible toil.—[Walter Wellman, in the Review of Reviews.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

THE report of the Anthracite Coal Commission, signed by all of its members, has been made public and appears to be satisfactory to miners, operators and the general public. All employés in the mines are to have a ten per cent. increase in wages from Eleventh month 1st, 1902 to Fourth month 1st, 1903. After that date firemen and engineers that hoist water are to have an eight-hour day and other employés a nine-hour day, at present wages. There is to be no discrimination by miners' organizations or the operators against men because of non-membership or membership in labor organizations. The awards made are to continue in force for three years.

AN important feature of the Coal Commission's report is the provision for a permanent Board of Conciliation, composed of six members, the operators in each of the three districts to appoint one and "an organization representing a majority of said miners" in each district to appoint one. In case of a deadlock, an umpire is to be appointed by a Federal Circuit Judge. All strikes and lockouts are forbidden and the decision of the Board is made absolute.

THE coal miners of the second bituminous district have gained a concession for which they have been working for five years—an eight-hour day for all labor inside the mines (except pumpmen and monthly men, who are to continue on present conditions with a ten per cent. advance in wages.) There is also to be a general advance in wages of from 10 to 12 per cent. The organization, on the other hand, agrees that the men will work regularly, excepting in case of funerals, legal and church holidays, with no half holiday on Seventh-day.

THE Armour, Cudahy, Swift, Hammond and Schwarzschild and Sulzberger Packing Companies, the five defendants in the ouster proceedings brought by the Attorney General of Missouri against the alleged beef combine last summer, were fined $5,000 each in the Missouri Supreme Court on the 20th instant and ordered to pay the costs of the case, which amount to $5,000. Unless the fines and costs are paid within thirty days the defendants will be ousted from the State. The packers against whom the judgment was issued have extensive branch houses in St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph.

THE Cuban reciprocity treaty was ratified by the United States Senate on the 19th instant by a vote of 50 to 16. The treaty, as ratified, provides that all agricultural and manufactured articles of the United States and Cuba now admitted free of duty shall continue on the free list of each country. It also provides for a reduction of 20 per cent. on all products of Cuban soil or industry that are not on the free list, and for a schedule of 20, 30 or 40 per cent. of existing rates on various American articles imported into Cuba. The changes in the tariff are not valid until approved by the House of Representatives and the President may call Congress together a month earlier than usual to secure such approval.

ON the 21st instant President Castro, of Venezuela, placed his resignation in the hands of the President of Congress after reading the Presidential message. The following day the Venezuelan Congress, by a unanimous vote, declined to accept President Castro's resignation and passed a resolution requesting him to reconsider his decision. On the 23d General Matos, the leader of the revolutionists, sent a cablegram to the Vice-President, who is President of the Venezuelan Congress, saying that if Castro's abdication is accepted he will use all his influence with the commanders of the revolutionary army to put an end to the war.

TO the note from the Argentine Republic proposing combined action of American States to resist the collection of debts by naval force, Secretary Hay has sent a reply in which he expresses neither assent nor dissent, but quotes the following from the President's last annual message to Congress: "No independent nation in America need have the slightest fear of aggression from the United States. It behoves each one to maintain order within its own borders and to discharge its just obligations to foreigners. When this is done they can rest assured that, be they strong or weak, they have nothing to dread from outside interference."

FREDERICK WILLIAM FARRAR, Dean of Canterbury since 1895, died in London on the 22d instant, in his 72d year. Since the death of Dean Stanley he has been the most prominent preacher of the Church of England, and has also been very active in the work of temperance reform. He was a prolific writer, his best known work being his "Life of Christ," which reached twelve editions in a single year. He is also the author of "Eternal Hope," a volume which expresses liberal views concerning the future life.

NEWS NOTES.

A CONNECTICUT labor union has been incorporated and now it can sue and be sued.

THE heaviest snow storm of the year fell in eastern Kansas and Missouri on the 22d instant.

A DISPATCH from Rome states that the Pope's health is better and that he has resumed his private audiences.

THE Friends' Home for Children in West Philadelphia has received an appropriation of $4,000 from the Legislature of Pennsylvania.

AN earthquake shock on the 18th did serious damage to Montana's new State House in Helena, wrecking three great pillars in the rotunda.

ON the 18th instant the German Reichstag appropriated $375,000 towards defraying the expenses of Germany's exhibit at the St. Louis Exposition.

DR. J. T. ROTHROCK, State Commissioner of Forestry, says that Pennsylvania has 500,000 acres of highland available for sanitariums for consumptives.

CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, of Philadelphia, author of the famous "Hans Breitmann" ballads, died on the 20th instant, of pneumonia, in Florence, Italy.

A PHILADELPHIAN has been arrested and imprisoned (having no money to pay his fine) for spitting on the floor of a trolley car, despite the remonstrance of the conductor.

ON the 23d instant the town of Surigao, on the island of Mindanao, was captured by ladrones, and Constabulary Inspector Clarke and several others were killed.

ON the 18th instant the severest snowstorm of the winter was raging around Cheyenne, Salt Lake and Denver, while in Burlington, Iowa, the mercury was reported to be 95 in the shade.

AN appeal has been made to President Roosevelt to permit the body of Father Augustine, the priest who was tortured to death in the Philippines by Captain Brownell, to be removed to consecrated ground.

DAVID R. FRANCIS, President of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company, on his return from Europe, where he went in the interest of the World's Fair was greeted at the station in St. Louis by 10,000 persons.

SHIPPENSBURG, PA., has a Prohibition Chief Burgess, who is enforcing the Sabbath observance laws. Drug stores and restaurants are closed on the Sabbath, and no Sunday news papers are allowed to be sold in the borough.

HARVARD is to have a Stadium,—an athletic field surrounded by permanent banks of seats—which is to cost $175,000 and have a seating capacity of 30,000 people. This is to be given to the university by the class of 1879, and will stand as a memorial of the twenty-fifth anniversary of that class.

THE Summer School for the South (a branch of the work of the Southern Educational Board) will hold its second annual session at the University of Tennessee, in Knoxville, from Sixth month 23d to Eighth month 1st. The school will offer 150 courses ranging from the kindergarten to the university, with a faculty of 80 men and women.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

3D Mo. 27.—FRIENDS' EQUAL RIGHTS Association will meet in the meeting-house at 15th and Race Sts., at 8 o'clock, to be addressed by ELIZABETH POWELL BOND, Dean of Swarthmore College. Subject: "The Modern Appeal," followed by an address by Frederic A. Hinckley. Members of the Association will please bring friends.

3D Mo. 29.—PHILADELPHIA EVENING Meeting, at 35th St. and Lancaster Ave.

3D Mo. 29.—A CONFERENCE UNDER the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor will be held in the meeting-house at Middletown, Pa., at 2.30 p. m. Address by Dr. Benjamin F. Battin, of Swarthmore College, on "Arbitration in Business Life."

3D Mo. 29.—CORNWALL, N. Y. FRIENDS' Association, at the home of J. Quimby Brown, at 3 p. m.

3D Mo. 29.—CINCINNATI FRIENDS' Association, at the home of Peirce Cadwalader.

3D Mo. 29.—FRIENDS' MEETING AT the Home for Aged and Infirm Colored Persons, corner 44th St. and Girard Ave. at 3 o'clock. Interested Friends are cordially invited.

4TH Mo. 1.—NEWTOWN, PA., FRIENDS' Association, at the home of William and Lettie W. Eyre.

4TH Mo. 5.—READING PA., FRIENDS' Meeting, visited by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee.

4TH Mo. 5.—AT PROVIDENCE, NEAR Media, Del. Co., Pa., a Circular meeting under the care of a Committee of Concord Quarterly Meeting at 3 p. m. Walnut St. cars via. Angora reach Providence Ave. two blocks from meeting-house.

4TH Mo. 11.—SALEM FIRST-DAY SCHOOL Union will be held at Woodstown, N. J. in Friends' meeting-house, at 10 a. m. Papers will be prepared on the following subjects: Do we show sufficient reverence (1) during Prayer? (2) for the Bible? (3) for our First-day? (4) for our Meeting? A cordial invitation is extended to all interested.

STILLWATER QUARTERLY MEETING has been changed to a half-yearly meeting, to be held at Richland, near Quaker City, Ohio, the last Seventh-day of Fifth month and the first Seventh-day of Eleventh month.

THE PHILADELPHIA YOUNG FRIENDS' Association has a number of bound copies of FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCERS which it would be glad to give to anyone desiring them. For further particulars address ELIZA H. WORRELL, 140 N. 15th St., Phila.

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL
BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

THE BRITISH FRIEND.

PUBLISHED ON THE 15th OF EACH MONTH.
Being the only religious and literary review written chiefly for the general public, but from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. The British Friend offers a unique opportunity for spreading "The Truth" among thoughtful enquirers.

The issue for March 1903, contains:
"Guidance," by Joao M. Fry.
"Social Conditions in Australia," by Joshua Rowntree.
"Criticism and the Cross" and "The Formalism of Informality," by the Editor.
"Christian Science," by John W. Graham, M. A.
"Idealism in Education," by Francis E. Pollard, M. A.
"The Society of Friends and Social Problems," by B. Seebom Rowntree.

A distinctive feature is made of Reviews, and Notices of Books, especially such as are likely to be helpful to those engaged in religious and social work.

Subscription, 6s. 6d. ($r.58) per annum, post free. Specimen copy on application.

EDITOR AND PUBLISHER:
EDWARD GRUBB, M. A.,
Devonshire Chambers,
Bishopsgate Without, London, E. C.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED TOUR.
Savannah by Sea.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.

SEVEN DAY TOUR
TO SAVANNAH $29

including all expenses. Leave Philadelphia Tuesday April 14th. Send for itinerary.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent,
Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

ASPARAGUS ROOTS

$2.50 per 1000.

Pear trees, Strawberry plants, California privet, — all at low rates. Catalogue free.

SAMUEL C. DeCOU, Moorestown, N.J.

These trade-mark crispness lines on every package.

GLUTEN FREE For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
Unlike all other brands. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample, write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

He was 57; he looked about 40, despite daily business cares and responsibilities innumerable, about which he refused to worry.

Why?
The future of his family was made secure, his own old age provided for by a policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

THREE-DAY TOUR TO WASHINGTON.

UNDER THE PERSONALLY-CONDUCTED SYSTEM OF THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The next Pennsylvania Railroad Personally-Conducted Tour to Washington leaves Monday, April 6. Rate, covering railroad transportation for the round trip, hotel accommodations, and transfer of passenger and baggage, station to hotel in Washington, $14.50 from New York, $13.00 from Trenton, $11.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points. These rates cover accommodations for two days at the Arlington, Normandie, Riggs, Ebbitt, Shoreham, Cochran, Gordon, Barton, or Hamilton Hotels. For accommodations at Regent, Metropolitan, National, or Colonial Hotels, $2.50 less. Special side trip to Mount Vernon.

All tickets good for ten days, with special hotel rates after expiration of hotel coupons.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents; Tourist Agent, 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or address Geo. W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

GREATLY REDUCED RATES TO ATLANTA, GA., AND MACON, GA., AND RETURN, VIA THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

On May 4th and 5th, the Southern Railway will sell round trip tickets from Washington to Atlanta, Ga., account the National Conference of Charities and Corrections, May 6th to 12th, 1903, at one first-class fare plus twenty-five cents, final limit May 16th, 1903. Also to Macon, Ga. on May 4th and 5th, at rate of one first-class fare, plus twenty-five cents, final limit May 10th, 1903, account of the Sugar-Cane Growers' Convention, held at that point May 6th, 8th, 1903. Corresponding low rates from other points.

The Southern Railway operates three through trains daily to Atlanta, Macon and other points South. Dining-car service on all through trains.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa., will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

Farmers and Gardeners, tens of thousands of them, for 40 years have annually relied upon
GREGORY'S SEEDS
Experience has taught that they ARE THE BEST. Sold under three warrants that our seed will do their part in the making of the crop. Catalogue free.
L. J. GREGORY & SON
Market Street, Mass.

OLD POINT COMFORT, RICHMOND, AND WASHINGTON.

SIX-DAY TOUR VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The second personally-conducted tour to Old Point Comfort, Richmond, and Washington via the Pennsylvania Railroad for the present season will leave New York and Philadelphia on Saturday, March 28.

Tickets, including transportation, meals en route in both directions, transfers of passengers and baggage, hotel accommodations at Old Point Comfort, Richmond, and Washington, and carriage ride about Richmond—in fact, every necessary expense for a period of six days—will be sold at rate of $36.00 from New York, Brooklyn, and Newark; $34.50 from Trenton; $33.00 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other stations.

OLD POINT COMFORT ONLY.

Tickets to Old Point Comfort only, including luncheon on going trip, one and three-fourths days' board at Chamberlin Hotel, and good to return direct by regular trains within six days, will be sold in connection with this tour at rate of $17.00 from New York, $15.50 from Trenton; $14.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents; Tourist Agent, 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or George W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

A CHARMING TRIP

is in reserve for those who contemplate visiting the Pacific Coast during the Spring. On May 2d, and from May 11th to 17th, inclusive, special excursion tickets will be sold to Los Angeles and San Francisco and return, via the Southern Railway at extremely low rates. These tickets permit of stop-over, and are good to return until July 15th, 1903.

Round-trip rate from Philadelphia will be $66.75, going and returning same route; going one route and returning another $68.25. Corresponding low rates from other points.

In addition to the Standard Pullman sleeping-cars, operated daily, the Southern Railway operates tri-weekly, high-class, personally-conducted excursion sleepers from Washington to Los Angeles and San Francisco without change, via Atlanta, New Orleans, and El Paso, in which the berth rate is only $7.00 from Washington to the above points. These cars leave Washington at 8.45 p. m., on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will furnish all information.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE!
Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CITY OF PHILADELPHIA)

Merchants' Trust Company,
611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $500,000.00
CAPITAL (paid in), 250,000.00
SURPLUS, 50,000.00
UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 49,349.89

Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveying done. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $5 and upwards, per annum.

JOSEPH R. RHOADS, President.
JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President.
HORACE B. PEARSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas.
CHARLES F. EARLY, Secretary.
WM. B. LANE, Title and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS

NICHOLAS BRICE, J. BOLTON WINFENNY,
S. DAVIS PAGE, WARREN G. GAFFNEY,
JOHN R. RHOADS, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED I. PHILLIPS,
THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
CHAS. S. HINCHMAN, FRANK W. FAIR,
EDWARD S. SAYRES, EDGAR DUDLEY FARRIS,
JOHN H. CRAVEN, HORACE B. PEARSON.

United Security
Life Insurance
and Trust Company
OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Capital, $1,000,000
Surplus and undivided profits, 500,000

Banking and General Trust Co. Business

OFFICERS:
WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
CLAYTON FRITCH BANKS, Assistant Treasurer.
HENRY LABARRE JAYNE, Counsel.
FRANCIS H. HEMPERLY, Actuary.
T. HEWSON BRADFORD, M.D., Medical Director.

DIRECTORS:
William M. Coates, William H. Lucas,
Caleb J. Miloe, William R. Verner,
V. C. Sweetman, J. W. Hampton, Jr.,
Charles Porter, Orlando Crease,
Robert Dornan, I. Layton Register,
John G. Carruth, Esmonde H. Austin,
William East, Silas W. Pettit,
Joel Cook.

THE UNION CENTRAL LIFE
INSURANCE CO.

Of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Assets, $34,000,000

Plain Life and Endowment Policies with Annual Dividends.
The Highest Grade of Life Insurance at the Lowest Cost.
The Company for Those who Think for Themselves.

Good Contracts to Good Agents.

Lawton Brothers, Managers,

338 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

WALL PAPER of
Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,

1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,
Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES,
ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITARY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. REGISTERAR AND TRANSFER AGENT.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders, . . . $ 4,457,613.08
Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,317,764.17
Assets of the Company, 61,615,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

Samuel R. Shipley, President
T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
Asa S. Wing, Vice-President
Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept
J. Roberts Fouler, Trust Officer
David G. Alsop, Actuary
J. Barton Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
Samuel H. Troth, Treasurer
C. Walter Borton, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

James V. Watson,
William Longstreth,
Edward H. Ogden,
Thomas Scattergood,
J. Preston Thomas,
Robert M. Janney,
Marriset C. Morris,
Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

Shoes of the Practical Sort

Shoe needs just now point toward spring and summer. We already have unusually complete lines of the new styles for men, women and children. Perhaps we were never quite so well prepared thus early in the season. We barely hint at a few of the popular-priced Shoes and Oxfords:

MEN'S WATERPROOF-SOLE SHOES

—more of a necessity than a luxury by all odds; and this style is essentially a dress shoe with a waterproofed sole: it is not clumsy, and it does not draw the feet—two points in its favor. Nearly every man is surprised when he sees it; for it is so different from most wet-weather shoes. Made of soft vici kid—$6.00.

BOYS' SHOES—we have several lines, made on lasts like the men's, but smaller; sturdy kinds for hard wear, and patent leather for dress—$2-75, $3.00, $3.50 and $4.00 a pair.

WOMEN'S OXFORDS—of ideal kid; almost as soft and gentle to the feet as a glove is to the hand. Graceful styles in which particular attention was paid to the little details—$3.50 and $5.00 a pair.

MISSES' SPRING-HEEL SHOES—made of the higher grades of leather, in shapes best-suited to growing feet. Ideal kid; black Russia, vici kid—$3.00 a pair.

CHILDREN'S HIGH-GRADE SHOES—broad and roomy at the toes, to give them plenty of space to grow. Tan, Russia calf, kid, calfskin and patent leather—$2.50.

Still good picking from the Men's Sample Shoes and Oxfords—$5.00 to $7.00 values at $2.95.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTENHAM,

E. T. Kueudig, Atlantic City, N. J.
R. W. Richards.

The Pennhurst,

MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,

1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts.
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD

THE OCEAN RILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,
Atlantic City, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. END H. M. HUMPTON.

CAROLINE RAU,

PLAIN MILLINERY,
Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street
From 726 Spring Garden Street

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,

Telephones. Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers
Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK
UNDERTAKER
TELEPHONE
1313 VINE STREET
ESTABLISHED 1860

Home Kitchen Outfits
and all
House Furnishing Goods

J. FRANKLIN MILLER,
1626 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, FOURTH MONTH 4, 1903.

Friends' Intelligencer Association, (LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISEMENT RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING, N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia. *TELEPHONE NO. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XIV.	209
POETRY: NO UNBELIEF.	209
WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson.	209
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
Political Industry.	211
THE VALUE OF NON-RESISTANCE.	212
WEALTHY, NOT RICH.	213
THE WHOLE TRUTH.	213
"THE POOR ARE ALWAYS WITH US."	213
EDITORIAL:
The Inefficiency of Christians.	214
Notes.	214, 215
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS.	215
SOCIETY NOTES.	216
COMMITTEE ON ISOLATED FRIENDS.	216
HISTORY OF FRIENDS' REGISTERS.	216
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.. . . .	218
EDUCATIONAL.	219
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	219
LITERARY NOTES.	219
POETRY: A Royal Heart; April; Early Spring Gladness; To Lydia Maria Child.	220, 221
THE NEW HAMPSHIRE VOTE.	221
LAW AND GOSPEL.	221
MISCELLANEOUS: White House Impressions; Heavy-Weight Books Doomed; Negro Physicians; My First Meeting with Emerson.	222
CURRENT EVENTS.	223
NEWS NOTES.	223
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	223

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING AND SHRIGLEY
 ARCHITECTS
 Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—A WOMAN, WELL RECOMMENDED, with some training as nurse to take care of an old lady and assist with sewing. Address, with reference, No. 84, this Office.

WANTED.—BY MARRIED MAN CHARGE OF country place as care-taker or gardener. Experienced in care of lawns. Address No. 83, this Office.

WANTED.—AN INTELLIGENT YOUNG woman as mother's helper. Apply or write 6705 Cresham Road, Germantown, Pa.

WANTED.—A YOUNG MAN FOR STEWARD. One who has a knowledge of meats. Also a first-class pastry cook. Address The Penhurst, Atlantic City, N. J.

MOTHER'S HELP.—A YOUNG WOMAN, Friend preferred, bright disposition, as companion, reader and assistant to semi-invalid part of each day. May be at home at night. Address A. B. C., this Office.

WANTED.—BY FRIEND, POSITION AS PRIVATE secretary. Remington operator, or traveling companion, nurse for semi-invalid or housekeeper. Address A. D. FEATHERSTONE, 21 N. Carey Street, Baltimore, Md.

SPANISH OR FRENCH LESSONS GIVEN IN part payment for board, by young Spanish lady. Address No. 8, this Office.

FRIENDS FROM A DISTANCE, WHO EXPECT to attend Yearly Meeting, can be accommodated with rooms and board at a moderate rate, in a Friends' family, by applying at an early date to H. E. GREEN, 1707 Mt. Vernon Street.

BOARDERS DESIRED IN FRIENDS' FAMILY on farm near Conshohocken, for further particulars address S., 1800 Spring Mill Ave., Conshohocken, Pa.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1829 1st St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

TO RENT FOR THE SUMMER.

FURNISHED house at Gwynedd, Pa., 18 miles from Philadelphia. House contains six bed rooms, bath room, hot and cold water, library, large porch, dining room, and two kitchens. Five acres of ground, large lawn with shade, good truck patch and orchard, the produce of which tenants may enjoy; also, if desired, cow and chickens. Stabling for four horses and cow. The house is finely situated with extended views and good air. Will be rented on reasonable terms from Sixth month to Ninth month 30, or a little later if desired. Photographs furnished. Address or apply

ARTHUR H. JENKINS, 1024 Race St., Phila.

FOR SALE.—AT BUCK HILL FALLS, NORTH View Cottage in Plotting No. 1, Lot 64. For particulars apply to Franklin's Facker, George School, Pa.

FOR RENT.—AT SWARTHMORE, PA., a large stone mansion on the hill from June to September. Completely furnished, all conveniences, gas range, Springfield water, 140 feet of porch, commanding a fine view. Grounds cared for by owner. Tennis court, bathing for two horses if desired. ALBERT N. GARRETT, 1015 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia; or Box 135, Swarthmore, Pa.

FOR RENT.—BY THE MONTH, A FURNISHED house in Swarthmore, Yale Avenue, on new trolley line. Grounds and shade for children. For particulars address HENRY KENT, Swarthmore, Pa.

ELIZABETH LLOYD'S
 "SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY"
 placed in every school, would teach the beauty of Peace.

Send twenty cents for one copy of the music and twenty-five copies of the words, to

ARABELLA CARTER,
 Universal Peace Union, 1305 Arch St., Phila.

THE PENNINGTON,
 Permanent and Transient Boarding for Friends.
 215 E. 15th Street, New York City.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

Hast thou named all the birds without a gun?
 Loved the wood rose, and left it on its stalk?
 —Emerson.

BIRD TALKS AND CLASSES AT
 BUCK HILL FALLS.

OF all branches of nature study, the study of birds is one of the most delightful, and of all the year the Sixth month is the most satisfactory for the purpose. To foster an interest in bird lore, arrangements have been made with Mary Mann Miller, daughter of Olive Thorne Miller, to take charge of bird classes and give a number of bird talks with outdoor study and observation, during Sixth month at Buck Hill Falls. No better place for bird study and observation could be found.

Mary Mann Miller has had considerable experience in this line of work, having conducted similar classes at the Lake Placid Club and elsewhere, and brings to it an earnest enthusiasm and wide knowledge of the subject. Those who have attended her classes speak highly of the pleasure and profit they have obtained and of the abiding interest she has aroused in this subject.

It is expected that enough interested ones will be enrolled in the Classes by Third-day, Sixth month 7, to make a start in the work. A reduction is made in board at the Inn during Sixth month.

Send for circular relating to Bird Classes.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.
 1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHARLES F. JENKINS, President.
 MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary and Treasurer.

LECTURES ILLUSTRATED.

- DANTE.
- MUSIC OF THE BIRDS.
- OBERSAMMERGAUER PASSION PLAY 1900.
- AFoot IN HELLAS.
- AWHEEL THROUGH EUROPE.
- COLLEGE LIFE AT HOME AND ABROAD.

BENJAMIN F. BATTIN,
 Swarthmore College, Pennsylvania.

Young Friends' Association

will hold its regular meeting on Second-day evening, Fourth month 13th, at 8 o'clock. A program of unusual interest has been arranged.

MISS M. E. RICHMOND
 General Secretary of Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity will deliver an address on the subject:

HOW TO USE THE CHARITIES
 OF PHILADELPHIA

BENJAMIN C. MARSH
 will speak on the subject:

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES IN THE
 WORLD OF GRAFT
 CAROLINE F. COMLY, Secretary.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under the care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }

Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.

Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to

GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Jenkintown, Pa.

CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR
BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars address

A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class instruction.

For circulars address

ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONS, POPLAR 59-38 D.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

THOMAS O. PEIRCE,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW.
815 Real Estate Trust Building, Philad'a.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery County Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and Investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
621 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
OFFICES: { Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
325 SWEDER STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

Thompson Shourds, 2212 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa.
Phone 3-54-78 D.

CHARLES BURTON,

Practical House and Sign Painter,
Office, 907 N. Thirteenth Street,
Residence, 1714 Woodstock Street, } Philadelphia, Pa.

EDWARD T. BLACK

(S. W. BLACK'S SON)

REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER

The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.),
REAL ESTATE.

Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents, Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
Keystone and Bell' Floors. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, Editor,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50 with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
5 PHONES.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTENHAM,

E. T. Kuendig, Atlantic City, N. J.
R. W. Richards.

The Pennhurst,

Second House from Beach.
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,

1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE., Atlantic City, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St.

PLAIN MILLINERY,
Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street
From 736 Spring Garden Street.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,

Telephones. Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of

Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St.

These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

WALL PAPER of

Attractive Styles

Popular Prices

Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,

1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, FOURTH MONTH 4, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 14.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903. XIV.

How often have we come to a decision for our own good, and it has turned out badly; but how seldom have we made a decision under a feeling of duty, and involving sacrifice or danger, which we have regretted.

JOHN WILLIAM GRAHAM.

From "The Meaning of Quakerism."

NO UNBELIEF.

THERE is no unbelief!
Whoever plants a seed beneath the sod,
And waits to see it push away the clod,
He trusts in God.

Whoever says, when clouds are in the sky,
"Be patient, heart, light breaketh by and by,"
Trusts the Most High.

Whoever sees, 'neath winter's field of snow,
The silent harvest of the future grow,
God's power must know.

Whoever lies down on his couch to sleep,
Content to lock each sense in slumber deep,
Knows God will keep.

Whoever says "to-morrow," "the unknown,"
"The future"—trusts unto that Power alone
He dares disown.

The heart that looks on when the eyelids close,
And dares to live when life has only woes,
God's comfort knows.

There is no unbelief:
And still by day and night, unconsciously,
The heart lives by the faith the lips decry,
God knoweth why.

—Charles Kingsley.

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

JOHN JACKSON.

[The first of a series of articles under the general title, "Worthy Friends of the Nineteenth Century" was published in FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER for 1899, the subject being Samuel M. Janney. The second narrative, a biography of Benjamin Hallowell, appeared in 1900. In continuation of the series we now begin the third narrative, which concerns the life and labors of John Jackson.

The author of this biography has received much valuable information from Mary S. Pancoast, a former teacher in the Sharon Female Seminary of which John Jackson was principal, who has in her possession many of his letters. She is also greatly indebted to Joseph Powell, David Ferris, and others who have furnished her with interesting reminiscences; and she has made free use of published memoirs by James Andrews, Ann A. Townsend and Elizabeth Peabody.

—EDITORS FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.]
The genealogy of John Jackson, a successful teacher and eminent minister in the Society of Friends, has been traced without break to one of the Jackson brothers who were converted to the doctrines of George Fox, soon after he began his ministry. Anthony Jackson was born at Eccleston, in the parish of St. Michael, Lancashire, England, about 1625. In 1649 he and an elder brother, Richard Jackson, removed to Lurgan, in the province of Ulster, Ireland. A year before this George Fox began preaching the gospel of Christ as it was revealed to him; his doctrines were soon carried to Ireland and were embraced by Richard and Anthony Jackson. In the spring of 1654 they were among the six who assisted William Edmundson to establish the first Friends' meeting at Lurgan.

Anthony Jackson's son Isaac is the only one of his children concerning whom existing records give definite information. He was carefully educated in the principles of Friends and seems to have been a prominent member of the Society. In the year 1696 he married Ann Evans and settled near Ballitore, within the limits of Carlow Monthly Meeting, of which he was a member. He had a family of ten children. An old memoir says of Isaac and Ann Jackson: "They were Friends in good esteem, who, by their industry and care, in part by farming, but principally in the weaving business, maintained their large family with reputation."

Their eldest daughter Rebecca married Jeremiah Starr and removed to Pennsylvania, and when the parents were nearly sixty years old they began to look toward America as their future home. The memoir states that they had the subject of their emigration "under weighty consideration" for several years. "While they were under exercise and concern of mind and desirous that best wisdom might direct, Isaac had a dream or vision to this import,—that having landed in America he traveled a considerable distance back into the country till he came to a valley between two hills. Through this valley ran a pretty stream of water. The prospect and situation of the place seemed pleasant, and in his dream, he thought his family must settle there, though a wilderness unimproved." Tradition adds that he was shown in his dream a spring of water on the hillside, and that it was impressed upon him that not only he and his family should dwell there, but that his descendants should occupy the land for generations.

After landing at New Castle he went to the home of his son-in-law, in New Garden township, Chester county, Pa., where he told his dream. He was informed that there was such a site near by, and when he had examined it he located upon this tract of four hundred acres of which the valley of his dream formed a part. One of his descendants still held the family seat, known as Harmony Grove, in 1875, when, after the lapse of one hundred and fifty years, nearly a thousand members of the Jackson family gathered there in family reunion. The house now standing at Harmony Grove is a comfortable, old-fashioned building, the western end of which, of stone, was erected in 1775; the remainder, built of brick, occupies the site of the primitive cabin of the first settler. An acre and a half of land back of the house was planted by John Jackson, grandson of Isaac, as a botanical garden, and many noble trees still attest his care and skill. The waters of the legendary spring, in a corner of this garden, after supplying a spring-house were collected by him in a pond in which aquatic plants were cultivated.

Isaac Jackson brought with him from Ireland a certificate of membership from Carlow to New Garden

Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, to instruct them in various industrial pursuits. He remained with them about two years, and his labors received a favorable endorsement from the Yearly Meeting. In 1803 he obtained a certificate of removal from New Garden Monthly Meeting to the meeting at Darby, Delaware county, Pa., and settled within its limits. In 1830 he published the results of his own observations and those of co-workers in the Indian cause in a work entitled, "Civilization of the Indian Natives."

John Jackson, son of Halliday and Jane Jackson, and great-great-grandson of Isaac Jackson, the emigrant, was born in Darby, Ninth month 25, 1809. He manifested his love for his mother while very young by many kind little attentions, and often relieved her by the care he took of the younger chil-

"HARMONY GROVE," THE JACKSON HOMESTEAD NEAR WEST GROVE, PA., AS IT APPEARED AT THE TIME OF THE FAMILY REUNION, EIGHTH MONTH 25, 1875.

Monthly Meeting, for himself and his wife; he was soon after appointed an overseer and later an elder of that meeting. In this latter station he continued to serve until he reached his eighty-fifth year, when the infirmities of age induced him to resign. He died in 1750 in his eighty-seventh year. He left all his landed estate to his son William, who had remained with him and assisted him in his struggles with the hardships of a frontier life, bequeathing pecuniary legacies to his other children.

John Jackson, the ninth child of Isaac and Ann, married Sarah Miller of Kennett. Their second child, Isaac, married Phoebe Halliday, of New Garden. Their second child, Halliday, married Jane Hough, of Philadelphia. To them were born ten children, of whom the subject of our sketch was the fourth.

Halliday Jackson, when a young man, offered his services with two others to go among the Seneca Indians in New York State, then under the care of children. Although he loved the sports and pastimes of childhood, when only eight or nine years old he would sit by the hour and rock the cradle of his twin brother and sister, or take them upon his lap and repeat poetry he had learned, or some rhyme made up for their amusement.

He was very fond of books and it is related of him that when a boy of ten he would leave the other children at play and go off by himself to read William Penn's works or Sewel's history. The time occupied in going to and returning from market he frequently spent in reading, and often after leaving the harvest field or plough he would seek some shady spot, either to read or to enjoy the beauties of nature. It is said that at the age of sixteen, besides being well read upon many other subjects, he was familiar with most of the prominent works of early Friends.

It was customary in the days of his childhood for Friends and others to use spirituous liquors in the harvest fields. His father was much concerned about this pernicious practice, and assembled his neighbors to advise some way to abandon it; this was the first temperance movement in the neighborhood. John became deeply interested in the subject and a few years afterwards, "while still a boy wearing a round-about jacket, he surprised the old and young by speaking at length in one of these meetings on the evils of intemperance."

He often alluded in terms of gratitude to the religious care of his beloved parents, and his own spiritual development seems to have begun at an early age. In a week-day meeting a year or two before his death, while addressing the little boys, and encouraging them to listen and give heed to the restraints and teachings of "the still, small voice" within them, he told them of the joy he had felt when a very little boy, sitting with the other school children where they then sat, and wetting with his tears the floor at his feet, while his full heart was lifted up in praises to his heavenly Father for His goodness in preserving him in the hour of temptation.

For some other incidents of John's boyhood we are indebted to a sketch of his life by Elizabeth Peabody, who says: "He loved the society of girls and was much loved in his turn by them. In a thousand gentle ways he would insinuate serious aims into their youthful pursuits. His eldest sister told me many anecdotes of his playful ministry to their improvement. Sometimes when a sewing group of girls were gathered at his father's house, conversing in the wild way common to a certain age of girlhood, her brother would sit by unobserved, write down all that was said, and read it to them afterwards, to convict them of their nonsense. But he could do such things with that genuine tact of the heart which healed the disease without wounding painfully. He had no quarrel with the merriment, for he was himself full of practical jokes, which were the innocent overflowings of the vitality of his mirthful nature.

"But it must not be understood that, because he was thus refined and lovely to woman, he was in the smallest degree effeminate. On the contrary he was an athlete. He lived and worked on his father's farm, who had not a more efficient laborer. A description of his feats of wood-cutting and other farm work would sound fabulous to those who knew him only in the later years of his life. But those too strenuous labors of his early years undermined his constitution. In telling me, within a year or two of his death, of one of those feats of wood-cutting, after which he most sensibly felt the decay of muscular power, he confessed to some excess of that natural ambition of young men for pre-eminence in physical power, which sends so many into the military camp."

During his boyhood, a lecturer on botany coming into the village, he became at an early age quite an adept in vegetable physiology. "He was the only one of the class," said one of the other members, "who learned botany; and after the lecturer was gone he collected us together into a voluntary class, and roamed the fields with us gathering and analyzing flowers." Thus he really taught his sisters and their companions the delightful science he never ceased to love.

His early opportunities for obtaining a scholastic education were very limited, compared with the extensive acquirements of his later years in science and literature. He was a pupil in the village school until his seventeenth year, which he spent at Westtown Boarding School. During that year he was earnest in study, and devoted his hours of relaxation chiefly to the reading of history and biography. He was industrious in all his agricultural pursuits in order that he might have more time for intellectual culture. He considered it a blessing that it was necessary for him to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. In winter he was found lighting his lamp long before dawn, for uninterrupted study. In summer he spent his seasons of recreation among the hills and streams, drawn thither by his love of botany and mineralogy. A biographer says of him: "The powers of his intellect, thus expanding by vigorous cultivation, he continually sought new accessions of knowledge by tracing out that exquisite connection of the physical sciences, which proves that—

"All are but parts of one stupendous whole, Whose body nature is, and God the soul."

ELIZABETH LLOYD.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 13.

POLITICAL INDUSTRY.

GOLDEN TEXT.—God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to him.—Acts, x., 34, 35.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, xii., 1–24.

It will not have been forgotten that on the death of Herod the Great a few years after the birth of Jesus, his kingdom, which included what is now known as Palestine, as well as some districts beyond it, was divided among three sons. Philip was made Governor of the district north of the Sea of Galilee; Herod Antipas was given the rule of Galilee and the district east of the Jordan; and Archelaus with a superior title became ruler of Judea and Samaria. The last proved inefficient. He showed no capacity for the difficult duties of his position. Revolt and bloodshed with growing disaffection marked the whole period of his rule. About the time when Jesus at twelve years of age made his first recorded visit to the Passover the patience of the Roman masters was exhausted, and Archelaus was banished to Spain, while Judea passed under the more direct government of Rome, authority being vested in an officer known as "procurator." This officer "resided at Cæsarea, was allowed a small army of auxiliary troops—that is, troops gathered from the province—received his salary from the imperial treasury, exercised supreme judicial authority within the province, deciding matters of life and death, and administered the department of finance. Until the time of Agrippa I. (41–43 A.D.) he also could appoint the high priest." (Riggs.) Little is known of the first four procurators (6–26 A.D.). In the time of the first, Quirinius, the Roman legate in Syria undertook, by order of Augustus, a census of the people of Judea for purposes of administration and of taxation. This is the Quirinius referred to in Luke as engaged in taking a census at the time of the birth of Jesus; some think the historian of the third gospel has confused the dates, writing, as he did, long after the event, and has used this census to explain the presence of the mother of Jesus in Bethlehem at the time of his birth. The taking of the census provoked a serious revolt by a band of enthusiasts called "zealots," whose creed was "no Lord but Jehovah; no tax but the temple tax; no friend but the zealot." The revolt was led by one Judas, called the "Galilean." It was put down with severity, the leader being killed. The rule of the four procurators, already referred to, coincided very nearly with the period of Jesus' private life. During this time "the Sanhedrin, the highest tribunal of the nation, enjoyed a large degree of power." It was supreme in all matters relating to the religious life of the people; and it was the policy of the Romans to allow its authority in all matters not affecting the empire. Its power was limited to Judea, though its decisions were received as valid among the Jews everywhere. At its head was the high priest, at this time appointed by the procurator, and removable by him at pleasure. In the year 27 A.D., Pontius Pilate became procurator, holding the office for ten years. He is described by a contemporary as a man of "unbending and recklessly hard character." He had no sympathy with Jewish prejudices, and provoked many violent measures of opposition, but with the strength of the Roman machine behind him he was able to sustain himself for ten years.

In Galilee Herod Antipas proved a fairly able administrator. Like his father he was a great builder. The city of Tiberias on the Sea of Galilee was built by him, and named in honor of the Emperor who succeeded Augustus in the year 14 A.D. He became infatuated with his brother's wife, whom he married after a double divorce. In 37 A.D. Caligula became Emperor, and two years later Herod was banished. Philip was an able ruler. Soon after his death in 34 A.D. his province was given by Caligula to his favorite Herod Agrippa, a grandson of Herod the Great, with the title of king. In 39 the provinces of Herod Antipas were added, and in 41, after terrible experiences with the incapacity of procurators following Pilate, Samaria and Judea were annexed by Claudius to his possessions. His reign was a period of rest for the troubled land. His persecution of the Christians was a part of his Jewish policy. He honored the law and himself observed its requirements. But the period of quiet was all too short. In 44, in the very climax of his career, he died suddenly. His son was not entrusted by the Romans with his father's responsibilities. All Palestine passed under the control of Roman procurators, of whom Felix and Festus, both of whom we shall meet in studying Paul's career, were two. Their rapacity and ignorance or carelessness of Jewish feelings led to repeated and bloody conflicts, and to ever-growing hatred. The last of them, Gessius Florus (64-66), probably the most wicked of all, goaded the Jews into the desperate war which only ended with the destruction of Jerusalem in a smother of blood in the year 70.

=====

"BREEDING counts more for men than gold."

THE VALOR OF NON-RESISTANCE.

From a Speech by William Lloyd Garrison.

It happened to me to be born in the center of the great moral struggle of the century, culminating in the bloodiest civil war in history, and yet into an atmosphere of peace. For, while throughout the country there raged a conflict of violence, within the walls of home I heard from infancy only inculcations of non-resistance. Not that non-resistance which implies cowardice, the surrender of right for the sake of personal safety, but that ideal and self-forgetful gospel which reaches the loftiest limit of courage.

I know of no word more misunderstood. Men use it with contempt who fail to understand its faintest spirit. The few who catch its high inspiration marvel at the strength of character which dares exemplify it. Abject? Were ever reformers more righteously defiant than the non-resistants? Passive? They were the embodiment of activity. Did their religion—for it was their religion before Tolstoi called it his religion—include subservience, suppression of conviction or curbing of speech? History preserves the story of no body of men and women more devoted or courageous. In their ranks there was no room for cowards.

Does it require great courage to resent an injury, to return blow for blow? The brute and the bully deal in such coin. Indeed, cowardice is the inability to suffer wrong without retaliation. When I seek for the ideal types of chivalry and moral courage I turn to the non-resistant Abolitionists. For, literally following the injunctions of Jesus, they were the scoff of a nation calling itself Christian.

There is a wide difference between the non-resistants and the so-called Peace men. When the occasion arrived for putting the precept into practice the first held to their principles in spite of consequences. The second, by a mental process, were able to suspend their principles for the time being, and find excuse for bending to the popular breeze. Hence, he who would countenance no deviation from the moral law was held to be an unpractical fanatic. The man who could fold and put away his creed like an umbrella, when its prominence was uncomfortable, was esteemed sensible and practical.

In the Boston Pro-slavery mob of 1835, the Liberator office was besieged, and the editor, whom the rioters sought, was inside. He was a non-resistant. "At this juncture," he says, "an abolition brother, whose mind had not been previously settled on the Peace question, in his anguish and alarm for my safety, and in view of the helplessness of the civil authority said, 'I must henceforth repudiate the principle of non-resistance. When the civil arm is powerless, my own rights are trodden in the dust and the lives of my friends are put in imminent peril by ruffians. I will hereafter stand ready to defend myself and them at all hazards.' Putting my hand upon his shoulder, I said, 'Hold, my dear brother! You know not what spirit you are of. Of what value or utility are the principles of peace and forgiveness if we may repudiate them in the hour of peril and suffering? Do you wish to become like one of those violent and blood-thirsty men who are seeking my life? Shall we give blow for blow and array sword against sword? God forbid! I will perish sooner than raise my hand against any man, even in self-defense, and let none of my friends resort to violence for my protection. If my life be taken the cause of emancipation will not suffer."

Surely such a spirit is the farthest removed from cowardice. If Jesus, in his hour of trial, had drawn a sword upon his persecutors, or knocked them down with his fists, it is safe to say he would never have been capable of preaching the Sermon on the Mount, or have been the Messiah of the Christian faith. Yet so illogical are we that no surprise is occasioned, when, after nineteen centuries of Christianity, the clergyman exchanges his surplice for the chaplain's uniform. One would think that the rapid transition from a sermon inculcating the return of good for evil, to the martial prayer invoking Divine assistance for men seeking "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth," would dislocate the logical process.

There is a recent picture by a French artist, a copy of which should hang in every household where peace is exalted. It is the pathetic figure of the Christ upon the Cross, with bleeding hands and feet, and beneath him a lifeless soldier and his steed slain in battle. The artist has chosen for his pictorial sermon these efficient words: "For Humanity—for Country." The Cross ever towers above the Sword.

"WEALTHY, NOT RICH."

THOSE Englishmen who imagine and assert that in the United States the dollar is almighty overlook the profound respect, amounting at times almost to reverence, with which Americans regard men, like Ralph Waldo Emerson, who believe in plain living and high thinking. Emerson has had many disciples in public as well as in private life, and the position which they occupy in the esteem and confidence of their fellow citizens is one unapproached by any of our multi-millionaires. A few years ago the annual income of one member of the Federal Senate was reputed to exceed $14,000,000 from one source alone. So far as we know, that gentleman's voice has never been heard but twice in the Senate chamber, and were he to speak oftener he would be listened to with more surprise than respect. On the other hand, there is no Senator who deserves and commands so much attention when he rises to discuss a public question as does the Hon. George F. Hoar, of Massachusetts; indeed, we do not hesitate to say that, since the death of Daniel Webster, there has never been a Senator whose utterances bear so well the searching test of type. Yet this man, who for a quarter of a century has worthily represented the commonwealth of Massachusetts in the Upper House of the Federal Legislature, has never known what it is to possess so modest an income even as two thousand dollars a year, outside of his salary. Up to a twelvemonth ago, he had been unable to rent even a humble dwelling but had lived in boarding houses, some tolerable, some intolerable, during the whole of his useful and honorable career in Washington. Has the fact impaired his social dignity or his political weight? We reply, not an iota. That is a truth well known to men who have lived in the Federal capital, and it is a truth as creditable to the American people as it is to Senator Hoar himself.—[Harper's Weekly.]

THE WHOLE TRUTH.

WHEN a witness is put on the stand in the court of justice, to testify as to the matter on trial, he solemnly swears, in the sight of God, that in his testimony he will speak "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." Yet there is a familiar saying that has properly gained wide currency: "The truth is not to be spoken at all times." How are these two declarations to be reconciled? If they are irreconcilable, which is to be our guide? When a court of justice is seeking to ascertain the full truth about a matter, it is one's duty to tell the whole truth so far as he knows it, and therefore he swears that he will do this. But between man and man in ordinary intercourse it is a different matter.

We are not bound to tell a person all that we think about him, or all that we think about another, or all of our personal trials or feelings, even though this be utterly true. All that we do say should be the truth in any case, but it would in many a case be unreasonable, or unkind, or absolutely wrong, to tell the whole truth. We may know much that the one to whom we speak ought not to know, or that we ought not to tell. Duty, propriety, kindness,—above all, love,—should control and restrain us in truth-telling. Refraining from speaking the whole truth to all and always is as clearly a duty as refraining from murder, or theft, or personal abuse, or lying. Let us remember that.

—[S. S. Times.]

For Friends' Intelligencer.

"THE POOR ARE ALWAYS WITH US."

Do not the poor in physical and mental power, in ideality, in energy and persistence in high purpose, determination to make an exemplary path in life, make the world, the true Humanity as we see it to-day?

All the art we see is the result of leadership, the few scheming, thinking, orderly planning to use the power element to produce in architecture, in ship-building, in agriculture, in commerce. This humanity, whether rich or poor, applauds and gives the leader, the schemer, planner, and persistent executor, due credit for his production! Materialism, thus resulting in money-making, draws imitators and encourages an ambition in a practical, world-wide field, in which egotism, domineering, selfishness, and power, sways the controlling sceptre.

Where, in the rank of every-day life, is the spiritual thinker, evangelist, minister? They seem to come and go, sing their heavenly songs in peace, and vanish as do the feathered songsters of the fields and forests, while poor humanity plods on life's journey receiving its daily bread in temporal and spiritual joy.

Mayten, Cal.

G. A. N.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, FOURTH MONTH 4, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE INEFFICIENCY OF CHRISTIANS.

If we had not become accustomed to the fact it would occasion surprise us to observe how small is the influence of professing Christians as such, or their principles in determining public questions. This lack of efficiency is not due to lack of machinery. In addition to its multitudes of churches Christendom has a world-wide woman's union, homes for many kinds of unfortunates, anti-saloon leagues, prohibition parties, Christian Endeavor societies, Epworth Leagues, and other associations without number. Its missionary societies encircle the globe. Its educational institutions are numerous and wealthy. Its special newspapers and magazines are widely read. Yet with all these advantages the Christian men and women of our country—or of any other—have vastly less influence than their numbers would lead us to expect. A political party of four million voters would be a force to reckon with in every election. Its principles would appear in party platforms, its votes would be eagerly sought by the leaders of party campaigns. Yet as a matter of fact while the German vote, the Irish vote, the Negro vote are looked after and bid for in every election by the introduction of special "planks" in their interest, there is little or no effort to placate or to win the Christian vote. A shocked and grieved voice now answers, perhaps—"But we have total separation of Church and State in this country." True—but have we therefore also a separation of Christianity and national righteousness?

It is true that there are many public questions in which the right course is not yet clear and it is in the interest of truth and right that earnest and honest men should be on both sides. But there are many practical affairs on which there can be no question as to the attitude of the Christian. Christian men and women with hardly a dissenting voice will agree that the licensing of the saloon is not a final solution of the liquor problem. At the best or worst it will be asserted that it is a stepping stone to something better. Yet there is no strong demand from the Christian church that the next step be taken, no deep interest on the part of Christendom at large as to what the next step should be. There is no difference —in theory—among Christians as to the growing custom of practically licensing the social evil, but the theoretical objection does not have a perceptible influence in the matter. The unspeakably evil conditions of many of our municipal governments are weakly deplored by good men who even more weakly keep the evil administrations in authority.

The fact is that Christianity needs Christians. As a matter of fact we do not,—most of us,—really care very much if our fellow Christians are hungry and cold, unless they happen to be near enough at hand to offend our sight and hearing. Christian men and women do not care very much that half a dozen of their "brothers" die of drink every hour of every day of every year. They do not care enough to put themselves out for it, if young and innocent girls from foreign lands are systematically induced to come to our country by glaring accounts of abundant work and liberal pay, and are then sold into lives of vice and degradation. They object to these things, it is true, but how faint and feeble the protest! There are, of course noble exceptions to these statements, but in the main are they not true? The protest is too faint to bring about effective legislation; it hardly concerns itself with enforcement after legislation is secured. Societies organized for such enforcement, like the Law and Order Society of Philadelphia, for instance, do not command even a fraction of the loyal support that does the corrupt party against whose leaders it finds itself pitted.

Are these statements exaggerated? If true Christian brotherhood existed among the millions who use the name would it be impossible to unite them against any of the evils under the sun? would the increasing preparation for universal war be accepted as the best means to bring in universal peace? If Christians desired righteousness with half their hunger and thirst for riches, power or position, would we be confronted by the spectacle of stolen franchises, bribed officers, and police-protected vice which has been shown in some of our greatest cities?

We need more than machinery, or money, or new parties, or new schemes—a genuine heart-searching revival of religious life, a rethroning of ideals, a new birth of Christian manhood, clean-hearted and of right purpose toward God and man. We have plenty of organizations; let us have a renewal of motive power. The machines we have are good enough; let us build up the fires under the boilers.

THE commanding officer of the United States troops stationed in Alaska complains that drunkenness has increased since beer has been forbidden in the post exchange and says that the soldiers frequent the many vile saloons that surround the barracks. A few years ago the sale of liquor was entirely forbidden in the territory of Alaska; had not the prohibitory law been repealed it would be an easy matter for the military authorities to close these saloons.

The evils that accompany license and the wrongs done to the natives are forcibly stated in "A Plea for the Indians of Alaska," in a recent issue of the Red Man and Helper, published at Carlisle, Pa. The article is written by F. A. Golder, who was teacher of the United States public school at Unga, Alaska, from 1899 to 1902, and was then made United States Commissioner. His story of outrages committed by drunken and vicious white men upon helpless Indian women, and of the indifference and open connivance of immoral officials, is not pleasant reading for American citizens.

We have received an interesting pamphlet entitled "Science the Arbitrator," published by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Pennsylvania. It is a reply to criticisms on school physiologies, which have appeared in several successive numbers of the Pennsylvania Medical Journal. The criticisms were written by a committee appointed for that purpose by the Pennsylvania Medical Society, of which Dr. L. J. Lautenbach, of Philadelphia, is the chairman. The reply is made by the Advisory Board of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, six of whom are eminent physicians. Every one of the 167 criticisms on the endorsed physiologies is answered in detail, and eminent authorities on both sides of the Atlantic are quoted to show that alcohol is a poison, that it tends to lessen physical vigor and mental power, and is a large factor in tuberculosis, insanity, and many other diseases. The evil effects of tobacco, especially upon the young, and the degeneracy consequent upon its general use, are also clearly set forth. The pamphlet will be sent to 8,000 physicians in Pennsylvania, 1,000 newspapers, and 200 school superintendents.

In the first number of the Friends' Quarterly Examiner (London) for 1903 Joseph S. Walton has an able article on "The Legacy of William Penn and His People to the Federal Government of the United States." The author claims that the following governmental ideas are based on practices introduced by William Penn; a general government composed of independent sovereignties; the right of legislative assemblies to adjourn at their own pleasure; the ideas of the referendum and of a supreme judiciary; and the nomination of candidates in an open convention composed of delegates from different sections.

THE report of the Superintendent of Indian Schools, Estelle Reel, shows the great advance that has been made in the industrial training of the Indians. At Chilocco, Oklahoma, there is an agricultural school which owns 8,600 acres of land; here hundreds of pupils are receiving instruction in farming, dairying, and stock raising. In many of the schools the pupils are taught the Indian arts of basket-making, blanket-weaving, bead-work, pottery, etc., and also how to make lace of modern designs. The Indian mother who by any of these arts is a bread-winner during the long winter months commands more respect and consideration.

THE Ministerial Union of Philadelphia, at its quarterly meeting in Wesley Hall, on the 30th ultimo, passed resolutions against the Phillips Racing bill which has been introduced in the State Legislature for the purpose of legalizing horse racing and race-track gambling. There is very great danger that this bill will pass, and as Friends have always borne a testimony against gambling in every form, they should send their protests without delay, individually and collectively. If too late to reach Senators and Representatives let them appeal to Governor Pennypacker to interpose his veto for the honor of the Commonwealth.

BIRTHS.

CANBY.—At "Greenwood," Hulmeville, Pa., Third month 5, 1903, to Joseph Paxson and Maria Abbott Canby, a son, named Arthur Mauleverer Canby.

FOULKE.—At Ambler, Pa., Second month 21, 1903, to Joseph T. and Laura L. Foulke, a son, who is named Edward Foulke.

JOHN.—At Millville, Pa., Third month 6, 1903, to Charles D. and Laura M. John, a son, who is named Charles Harold John.

MARRIAGES.

FELL—BROWN.—In Penn Township, Pennsylvania, Third month 25, 1903, by Friends' ceremony, Mary H., daughter of George and Sarah Brown, to Wilmer M., son of the late Richard H. and Eliza T. Fell, formerly of London Grove, Chester county, Pa.

MATTHEWS—STARR.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Fawn Grove borough, York county, Pa., Third month 12, 1903, by Friends' ceremony, Wesley Royston Matthews, son of the late Eli and Clara Matthews, of Monkton, Maryland, and Lua Mary, daughter of Jeremiah J. and the late Lucy L. B. Starr, of Fawn Grove, Pa.

NICHOLS—PYLE.—At the home of the bride's foster parents, at 8 p. m., Tenth month 14, 1902, Fred Nichols, of Minerva, Iowa, son of Warren Nichols, and Minnie D., adopted daughter of Lewis and Eliza M. Pyle. Ceremony legalized by Nathan Edsall, a minister of Marietta Monthly Meeting, of the Society of Friends, of which the bride is an interested member.

NICHOLS—SEAMAN.—At the home of the bride's parents in Marietta, Iowa, at 7.30 p. m., the 25th of Third month, by Friends' ceremony, legalized by Nathan Edsall, minister of Marietta Monthly Meeting of Friends, Margaret A., daughter of William and Orvilla Seaman, and Walter S. Nichols, son of Horace M. Nichols, of Hartland, Marshall county, Iowa, both members of Marietta Monthly Meeting of Friends.

RALEY—TOMLINSON.—On the evening of Third month 11, 1903, at Salem, Ohio, at the home of the bride, by Friends' ceremony, Kersey Raley, of Rogers, Ohio, and Lydia B. Tomlinson.

DEATHS.

HOLBERT.—In Jamison, Pa., Third month 18, 1903, Mary H. Holbert, wife of Edward Holbert, aged 79 years.

HOLLINSHEAD.—On Third month 6, 1903, near Medford, N. J., Charles Hollinshead, in his 77th year; a member of Medford Monthly Meeting.

KESTER.—At Millville, Pa., Third month 14, 1903, of paralysis, Mary Ann Kester, widow of John P. Kester, aged 82 years, 3 months and 21 days; a member of the Monthly Meeting of Friends held at Millville, Pa.

She had been gradually failing for several months, but was able to be about the house until the last four days. She was the oldest of a family of nine children, all of whom survive her except one brother, the youngest being a sister in her 62d year. These reside in five different States, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Nebraska, and South Dakota. None of them were able to be present at her funeral, but the combined ages of five brothers and sisters-in-law and five cousins present was 755 years, the oldest being 86, and the youngest 67. She is also survived by a daughter, Sarah J. Kester.

Home was the place that knew her life-work best, and from it her remains were interred in Friends' Cemetery on the afternoon of the 18th. "Give her the fruit of her hands and let her own works praise her in the gates."

LEEDOM.—In Pineville, Pa., on Third month 22, 1903, John E. Leedom, aged 83 years.

MOSHER.—Of typhoid pneumonia, at the residence of her father-in-law, Dr. B. D. Mosher, Granville, N. Y., on Third month 17, 1903, Laura, wife of Charles I. Mosher, aged 17 years.

Hers was a beautiful life and her death particularly sad, as she had only been in Granville six months a bride. Of a sweet disposition and lovable nature, she endeared herself to all, and her presence always cast a radiance as of sunshine. An affectionate and devoted wife and daughter, and dearly beloved by all who knew her for the gentle manner and evidences of a pure and Christ-like spirit which she constantly showed.

In the family of Dr. B. D. and Lydia J. Mosher, her husband's parents, she was loved with all the fondness that could have been given to an own daughter, and by them the memory of her presence in their home will be cherished as one of the brightest and most beautiful events of their lives. She was the only child of her mother, who is a widow. While we sympathize with all her loved ones in the deep sorrow which her sudden departure has caused them, we trust that they will find consolation in the great and ever-abundant source of all good. We especially desire for the dear young husband thus early bereft of his chosen companion the support which can only be found in our Heavenly Father's love, and in His precious promise of life eternal, with all the joy which the infinite mind of God can provide.

The deceased was active in the Trinity church, of which she was a member, her husband and his parents being members of the Society of Friends. H. B. A.

SOCIETY NOTES.

THE Centennial Anniversary of the establishment of Dunning's Creek Monthly Meeting will be observed by appropriate exercises in a public meeting to be held by both branches of the Society, on Second-day, the 13th inst., in the "Hicksite" Friends' Meeting-house, at Fishertown, Pa. E. Howard Blackburn, of Bedford, a member of the committee on arrangements, writes that a friendly invitation is extended to all who may feel inclined to be present on that occasion. Friends from a distance who contemplate attending should arrange to be there on the Seventh-day preceding and should give him early notice of their coming, that arrangements may be made for meeting them.

A member of White Plains Friends' Meeting, N. Y., writes that on Third month 29 Dana Cluff, from Brooklyn, attended their meeting. His presence was very acceptable and he offered many words of encouragement.

OWING to the immense fields of ice that gathered on the rocks above Goat Island, the American fall at Niagara was practically dry on the 22d instant, so that it could have been crossed at the brink by men with high boots. The river bed in the vicinity of the Three Sister Islands was quite dry, and the center fall, between Goat and Luna Islands, was a skeleton of itself.

POSTMASTER GENERAL PAYNE, Secretary Moody, Senator Proctor, and Congressmen Cannon and Foss, after arriving in Santiago from Havana, expressed their surprise and enthusiasm at the wonderful resources of the interior of the island.

A MAN only twenty-nine years of age, who eight years ago was a plain clerk, has been made manager of a street railway system in New York city including 460 miles of tracks and an army of 14,000 employees.—[Wilmington Morning News.]

COMMITTEE ON ISOLATED FRIENDS.

THE Joint Committee of the Several Yearly Meetings for Work among Isolated Friends, in accordance with the minute of adjournment made at Coldstream, Ontario, last summer, will meet at Richmond, Indiana, at the time of Indiana Yearly Meeting, and its members are urged to arrange their plans for the summer so that they will be able to attend. The Yearly Meeting begins its business sessions Eighth month 24, the meeting of Ministers and Elders being held the Seventh-day preceding. It is important that all the yearly meetings should have their lists of isolated members revised by that time. Baltimore Yearly Meeting has already made a complete revision.

Members of monthly meetings included in Philadelphia Yearly Meeting are requested to examine the lists published in last year's Extracts, and send necessary additions and corrections before the time of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting.

ELIZABETH LLOYD, Clerk.

Lansdowne, Pa.

HISTORY OF THE FRIENDS' REGISTERS.

From a pamphlet by John S. Rowntree.

THE very early establishment of the Friends' registration system appears to have been principally due to the sagacity of George Fox. It was a striking piece of constructive legislation. The Friends of the Commonwealth period do not formally assign, in documents that have come down to us, many reasons for establishing these registers: in a memorandum to be presently quoted it will be observed that the example of Scripture is appealed to. There is, however, no difficulty in seeing that a register of births, deaths, and marriages, was a virtual necessity for the Society then in process of organization upon the principles proclaimed by Fox and his colleagues. As an outcome of their spiritual apprehension of Christian truth, the Friends had ceased to have their children christened, their weddings celebrated, and their funerals conducted by the clergy, and consequently these great events in human life had ceased to be recorded in the parochial registers. It was of prime moment for securing the validity of marriages solemnized by the Friends' ceremonial that authentic registers should be preserved, whilst the transmission of property, and the security of the legal status of children demanded that proofs of births and deaths should be easily accessible.

In the following passages from documents of the Commonwealth era, enjoining the registration of births, deaths, and marriages, the use of the term "members" is observable.

"16thly. And also that Friends buy necessary Books for the registering of Births, Marriages, and Burials as the holy men of God did of old, as you may read through the Scriptures that every one may be ready to give testimony and certificate thereof if need require or any be called thereunto." From Paper signed "G. F." with note—"Copies of this to be sent all abroad amongst Friends in their men's Meetings."

"3. That a record be kept (as Friends are moved) of the births of children of such as are Members or Friends and of the burial of the dead who die in the Lord (as they depart out of the body), which be done after the manner of the Holy men of God recorded in the Scriptures and not after the custom of the heathen that know not God."

The period over which the Friends' registers in England and Wales extend may be taken at 250 years. The earliest entries antedate the appointment of the Lord Protector, and they have since been uninterruptedly maintained down to the reign of Edward VII. The entries in these registers rapidly increased in number after the Monthly and Quarterly Meetings were established 1660-1670, attaining their maximum just prior to the colonization of Pennsylvania. In their subsequent history two dates stand out conspicuously—1737 and 1837—the former because the line of membership in the Society was then more clearly defined by London Yearly Meeting, the latter because the State then established a complete system of civil registration throughout England and Wales. It is hardly correct to say, as is sometimes done, that membership did not exist among Friends before 1737; we have seen that the word "member" occurs in the official documents of the Commonwealth period, and—what is more important—the substance of membership, community in a body, carrying with it reciprocal duties between the individual and the congregation, had long been recognized. For eighty or ninety years this membership was determined almost automatically by entry in worship, in manner of life, by pecuniary contributions to common objects, by participation in suffering, and when the need arose, by participation in the charity so generously extended to the poor and the persecuted of "the people called Quakers."

As years passed the relief of the poor became attended with growing difficulty. It is a curious illustration of the perversity of human nature that even when persecution was hottest there were persons who preferred to live upon alms, though in a prison, to doing honest work; and when persecution was relaxed the same spirit manifested itself in an aggravated form. In 1710 the records of the Yearly Meeting contain a long document, introduced by John Wyeth, showing the difficulty there was both in determining who were entitled to receive the relief of the Society, and, in some cases, upon whom the obligation of giving relief rested. Persons claimed relief who were not thought deserving by their Monthly Meeting, and these meetings sometimes quarrelled among themselves as to which was liable to give relief. Hence grew up a body of legislation, and of practice, determined sometimes by appeals to superior meetings. The often-quoted minute of 1737 was largely a consolidation of previously existing law. It occupies nearly six pages of the Yearly Meeting's Proceedings. The opening sentence shows its connection with the system of poor relief. Edmund Gurney presented the report or draft minute which declared "that all Friends shall be deemed members of the Quarterly, Monthly, or Two Weeks Meeting within the compass of which they inhabited or dwelt, the first day of Fourth-month, 1737, except such who are settled pensioners to, or have within one year last past been relieved by, any other such Meeting. In that case he, she, or they shall be deemed a member or members of the Meeting to which they are a pensioner, or by whom they have been so relieved."

The results of this legislation have been far-reaching; as respects registration, they only became apparent gradually. Previous to 1737 the births of all the children of Friends, whose parents so desired, had been registered in the Society's books. Henceforth those not in membership were marked "N.M." The Yorkshire registers of births contain 13,280 entries prior to 1760, of which only twenty-four are marked non-members, whilst, between that year and 1800, out of 5,078 entries, one-fifth, 979, are so described. In the remaining interval between 1800-1837 there were 4,168 entries, 1,625, or nearly two-fifths being those of non-members.

On the establishment of the civil registration in 1837 the Friends' registration of non-member children entirely ceased conformably with a regulation of the Yearly Meeting of 1836. The change in respect to death was less abrupt. The register of mortality after 1837, so far as non-members were concerned, became virtually a register of burials; a considerable, but diminishing number of non-member entries are still made, of persons not in membership interred in the Friends' burial-grounds. In 1840 the Friends' registers were surrendered to the Government. They were stated in round figures to contain entries of 260,000 births, 310,000 burials, and 40,000 marriages.

It is clear that the seventeenth century Friends' registers do not indicate the existence of a Friend population, nearly so large as on other grounds there is reason to believe did exist. It is patent that the number of entries in times of relaxed Church government, e.g., 1740-60, diminished, and again recovered when the discipline was re-established. We see that, at the present time, of the whole number of persons who would have been accounted Friends in the latter part of the seventeenth and the earlier part of the eighteenth centuries, about one-third are not so closely identified with the Society as to be "in membership." In every religious community there is a margin of borderers, persons more or less sympathetic, like Judge Fell in the days of the Commonwealth, yet not fully identified with the body. Undoubtedly many persons occupied this position in the seventeenth century, and it must be doubtful how far this class employed the Friends' registers. A close examination of the early registration entries shows that the record of births is less complete than that of burials. It is, however, wonderful that the seventeenth century registers are as complete as they are; they are a monument to the care of the Friends of those days, especially in view of the constant and terrible persecution which, during the Commonwealth and the reign of Charles the Second, a period of nearly forty years, was constantly consigning to prison those on whom the care of registration would naturally devolve. We do not, however, think that these registers represent the vital statistics of the whole Friend population, in the same sense in which those of the Registrar-General now represent the births, deaths, and marriages of the whole English population.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The fifth meeting of the Friends' Equal Rights Association, on the 27th ultimo, was the largest yet held. Susan W. Janney in a few well-chosen words introduced Elizabeth Powell Bond, who read a paper showing the evolution of woman's condition during the past two centuries, and the extent of the influence wielded by Friends. She said that the need of woman's help during the persecutions of early Friends was a large factor in securing the recognition of her equality in the Society. She also stated that there are now 1,125,000 women who have the right to vote upon all questions on which men vote.

The second speaker was Frederic A. Hinkley, pastor of the Spring Garden Unitarian church. He said he was sincerely thankful that he had grown up in a home where the mother was esteemed the companion and equal of the father, and his advice to young men entering upon married life is, "Do all you can to keep your own thought and the thought of your wife running along together in parallel lines." The addresses were followed by a discussion in which several participated.

WEST CHESTER, PA.—Herbert P. Worth, acting president in the absence of Lewis K. Stubbs, opened the Young Friends' Association, Third month 25, by reading an article by George Matheson.

After the reading of the minutes, the representatives to meet with the Executive Committee of Young Friends' Associations reported a program for the meeting to be held Yearly Meeting week. William P. Sharples, in his paper on "Current Topics," reported the news of the day. Much interest was shown in the fact that liquor has been abolished from our national Capitol. Beulah D. Pratt read a paper on "The Spirit of Whittier's Religious Poems." A short biographical sketch preceded a character sketch of the poet. Quotations from his works showed him the impregnation of the virtues of man. Selections from many of his "Songs of Labor" and "Anti-Slavery Poems" were read to show his belief in the dignity of labor and his attitude on the slave question. That bigotry was not in him was proved by reading his poem "Trust." The paper closed with the poems, "Requirement" and "Adjustment." Anna Green read "The Organ Builder." A discussion on "The Personal Touch of our Community of Friends," was opened by a paper by Anna B. Smedley, which told us what our community should be. Many Friends expressed the feeling that we as Friends are having an influence and are cordial among ourselves. Others felt that we might be more so than we are. ABIGAIL JACKSON, Sec.

QUAKERTOWN, PA.—The regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held Third month 19, at the home of Joel S. Ball.

History reading was continued by Anna E. Jordan from "The Life of Benjamin Halliwell." "Cheerfulness" was the subject of a reading given by Letitia Roberts. Hannah M. Penrose read "Uncle Peter at the Big House." Another reading, by Hannah M. Smulling, entitled "Saved by a Hymn," brought forth some discussion, as it touched on the kindly feeling between the "Blue and the Gray." A voluntary reading was given by Frank Ball from the Outlook, subject, "A Southern View of the Negro." A letter received from Abby D. Munro, of Mt. Pleasant, was then read, and a good report of the school was given. An essay written by one of the pupils of the first grade of the same school was read from the Laing School Visitor, subject, "The History of our Flag." Sentiments were then given, and after the usual silence the meeting adjourned. A. S. B., Cor. Sec.

NEWTOWN, PA.—The Junior Friends' Association met at the home of Lydretta Rice on Fourth-day evening, Third month 25. Martha Wilson, chairman of the supper committee, reported progress in regard to the arrangements for a supper to be held at the home of Evan T. Worthington on Fifth-day, Fourth month 2, the proceeds to be given to the Friends' Neighborhood Guild, and Home for Destitute Children, of Philadelphia.

The following were elected officers for the next six months:—President, Harry Eyre; Vice-President, Morell Smith; Secretary and Treasurer, Marion Leedom.

The literary part of the program was then taken up—Peace being the subject under discussion. Martha Wilson read a very good paper on "Friends' Reasons for Their Peace Principles"; Eva Doan and Hanna Smith read papers in answer to the question—"Is it practical for our Government to adopt a peace policy?" Although the general sentiment of the meeting was in favor of peace, we did not come to any definite plan or conclusion that would establish "peace on earth and good will to man." HANNAH T. SMITH, Sec.

NEW YORK.—Friends' Association of New York and Brooklyn met in the library at 16th street and Rutherford Place, New York, Third month 22, 1903.

The Treasurer reported that he had in hand $25.00 for the General Committee for the Advancement of Friends' principles, and it was agreed that he should forward the sum at once.

The Committee in charge of the proposed meetings for the promulgation of Friends' principles in New York, announced that it had been decided to incorporate the idea into our First-day School and that a class would be formed for which different ones would be invited to write papers or make suitable addresses, having in view the object with which the committee was charged.

The paper of the evening was entitled "The Teachings of Jesus." The author set the teaching of the Master himself as far above and quite separate from the theology of the Christian Churches—which latter he considered of comparatively little value, if worth considering at all.

WALTER HAVILAND, Sec.

CORNWALL, N. Y.—The regular meeting of the Friends' Association was held First-day afternoon, Third month 29, at the home of J. Quimby Brown.

Two papers were read in answer to the question, "What is the Greatest Need of the Society of Friends?" Gilbert T. Cocks, the writer of the first paper, spoke briefly of the general apathy of our time concerning spiritual matters which seems to have affected to some extent the Society of Friends. He urged Friends to remember the saying, "Example is better than precept," to lead pure lives, to live up to our reputation for simplicity, strength, and worth. Rowland Cocks, in the paper which followed, emphasized the need of individual zeal, faithfulness in the attendance of meetings, and the desirability of social intercourse among Friends. These papers were discussed by Elizabeth K. Seaman, Edmund Cocks, J. Quimby Brown, James Seaman, and others. A selection entitled "The Right View of Life," was read by Mary B. Cocks. An extremely interesting account of the meeting of the Committee of the General Conference was given by Edmund Cocks. After the giving of sentiments and an announcement of a Friends' Social to be held at the home of Joseph W. Cummin, Fourth month 3, the meeting adjourned. A. M. B., Cor. Sec.

PURCELLVILLE, VA.—The Young Friends' Association was held First-day afternoon, Third month 22. The meeting was opened by singing "Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me," followed by the reading of a Psalm. Thomas Smith read some selections from the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER on "The Greatest Need of the Society." Henry B. Taylor recited "Thanatopsis." The question, "Is our meeting performing its full duty toward the education of the children?" was opened for discussion in an excellent paper by Bertha J. Smith. George Hoge and William T. Smith gave talks on the same subject. Mary P. Brown read an article entitled "Self-Sacrifice," after which the question, "What books written by Friends ought we as Friends to read?" was discussed by Eliza F. Rawson, William Brown, and Jesse H. Brown. After singing, "Jesus is Tenderly Calling," the meeting adjourned.

CAROLINE T. PANCOAST, Secretary.

HOPEWELL, VA.—The regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association met Third month 22.

Under the head of literature, Charles Clevenger read an article on the Christian Sabbath. The article showed that we not only need rest mentally and bodily once every seven days, but we need it for a higher end, to serve a spiritual need.

Under the head of history, Daniel Lupton read a short account of George Fox, by Thomas Ellwood, who knew and loved George Fox for years, and said, the most historical happening of Europe was the coming of George Fox. Carrie D. Lupton had an interesting collection of Current Topics.

A paper on the "Greatest Need of the Society of Friends," was prepared and read by Lydia Irish. After the reading of the paper, there was some discussion.

Some thought we needed a better knowledge of our principles, especially among the young, and more earnest individual work and thought. One member said our whole need was "consecration." Others thought we live too much in the glories of the past, and do not make ourselves worthy successors of our forefathers. We need individual faithfulness in little things, to do our little in the best way we can.

C. P., Cor. Sec.

ACCOTINK, VA.—The Woodland Young Friends' Association met at the home of Jacob M. Troth, Third month 15, 1903.

Ann W. Troth read extracts from John Woolman's Journal and Sarah Anthony read an article from the Outlook, which spoke of the value of the Journal. Jane Pidgeon recited, "One Little Act," and Ellen Lukens read John J. Cornell's paper on the "Greatest Need of the Society of Friends." Lidia Gillingham gave a review of the first part of Janney's History, and Sarah Anthony recited "The Jericho Road."

After the reading from John J. Cornell's "Principles of the Society of Friends" by Mary W. Cox, the meeting adjourned to meet at the home of Courtland Lukens in Fourth month.

LEWETTA COX, Sec.

EDUCATIONAL.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

The Historic-Economic Conference held on Third-day evening was very interesting. The chief topics of the evening were a paper on "Self-Government among Children," and another "Aaron Burr's Conspiracy."

A native Armenian, H. S. Jenanyan, lately gave a short talk in morning collection concerning life and habits in his native land. He gave very encouraging reports concerning the missionary work being done there.

The Swarthmore Audubon Club held its regular meeting this week. This is the time of year for the most active work among the members, for the next few weeks will see the migration season at its best.

Spring holidays began on the 28th. Work will be resumed on Fourth month 7.

Dr. Hull lately gave an illustrated lecture in Philadelphia before the Betsy Ross tent of the Daughters of Veterans.

P. M. W.

FRIENDS' ACADEMY, LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND.

On Third month 11th, Charles T. Underhill entertained the pupils of Friends' Academy and their friends with his impersonations from "Rip Van Winkle." Both students and the large number of visitors present expressed their appreciation of the speaker's able rendering of this favorite story and his remarkably skillful delineation of character.

On Third month 10th, several teachers and students from the Academy attended an illustrated lecture in Glen Cove, on Norway, by Rev. M. O'Brien from Brooklyn.

Joel Borton visited the meeting on First-day morning, the 22d and encouraged all present to strive for greater soul growth. In the evening he appealed strongly to the students in the First-day evening exercises to rise above the petty things of life and conquer their troubles and difficulties—to overcome—striving ever onward and upward. His words were greatly appreciated by all present.

On Third month 24th, Clarence Broomall, of West Chester, Pa., lectured, taking for his subject, "In the Footsteps of Washington." Aided by a large number of lantern slides Mr. Broomall brought vividly before us again familiar scenes in the life of our great first President and held the close attention of his audience to the end. Many visitors were present.

The exercises at the next meeting of the Students' Literary, Fourth month 2d, will be devoted to birds and nature. A large number of students will take part. A bird song with words written especially for the occasion will be sung by the Primary Quartette.

The school closes for the Spring vacation on Fourth month 3d, students returning Fourth month 13th. M.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

ANNA M. JACKSON, of New York, has received a letter from Abby D. Munro which says: "We have gotten along all right up to this month,—but funds come in slowly now. As small as the Endowment Fund is, the interest helps out very much. I do wish it could be increased. I keep very well, and I am busy from early morning till bed-time. I have the new room nearly finished. It is over the sewing-room—a nice large airy room that will seat forty and upwards, forty-eight, I think. I would like to enlarge the little building No. 4 occupies, and then I would be well satisfied with our accommodations. It makes children so uneasy to be crowded. School continues large and well attended. Farm work has hardly begun, so the pupils haven't commenced to drop off yet."

Anna M. Jackson adds: "If meetings or individuals who are willing to contribute to the support of our schools for colored children, will make their contributions now, it will be an advantage both to the collector and to the schools."

A letter from Isaac H. Clothier to the editors, written Third month 5th, between Beirut and Joppa, says: "As you are personally interested in President Swain I would add that the trip thus far seems to be just what he needed, as he is now sleeping well and enjoying fine health."

LITERARY NOTES.

Two books a little out of the usual order have found their way to the editor's table. One of these is called "The Road," by Charles Clark Harrah, "minister of the Gospel." The book takes its name from the Greek word hodos, which occurs one hundred and two times in the New Testament. Paul used it in Acts, xxiv., 14, when he said, "After the Road which they call a sect, so serve I the God of our Fathers." The views expressed in the book are generally in harmony with Friends' principles. The inscription reads "To all who love God, of all religious or Christian cults; and to all brotherhoods, of all who seek to do good; and to all men who walk alone, of the scattered Friends of mankind, this book is dedicated—to point the way to universal Religion and a Brotherhood of all mankind."

(Published by Scott Heights Book Company, Des Moines, Iowa. Price 25 cents.)

The other volume, "The Dawn of the New Era," is a story dedicated "to the seekers for the new day." It describes the growth of a soul from the gloom of a sensitive boyhood, misunderstood and unappreciated, to the ripeness of an understanding manhood. The central thought of the book is that "the healthy condition is the normal condition" both for body and soul.

(Published by James H. West Company, Boston, Mass.; price 75 cents.)

The leading article in the Atlantic Monthly this month, by Charles A. Conant, describes "The Function of the Stock and Produce Exchanges," showing that they are a necessity of our modern civilization, and that the gambling connected with them is simply an ugly excrescence. "The Honorable Points of Ignorance," by S. M. Crothers, is very comforting to those who are conscious of their limitations. "The Foe of Compromise," by William Garrett Brown, is a strong paper; and lovers of Emerson will welcome his letters to Herman Grimm. There are also several readable stories in this number.

The Century and St. Nicholas both have their usual complement of good things. In the former "Sonny's Father's" monologue concerning riches and wealth, as told by Ruth McEnery Stuart, is sound philosophy; and an illustrated article, written by Charles Moore, describes "The Restoration of the White House." In the latter, the story of "Ben," written by H. S. Canfield, relates the bravery of as lovable and intelligent a sheep-dog as ever gladdened a lonely shepherd's life.

Mormonism, in its economic aspects, is the subject of a graphic article by Professor Richard T. Ely in Harper's Magazine. He points out the practical nature of the Mormons' religion, and the close associations between their secular and religious life. The magazine also contains a portrait of Benjamin Franklin's only daughter, Sarah Bache, engraved on wood by Henry Wolf from the original painting by Hoppner, and a story by William Dean Howells which deals with the supernatural relations between a peculiar man and his wife.

The Review of Reviews is well stocked with good articles on live topics and contains a reproduction of the famous Sargent portrait of President Roosevelt, recently completed, about which so much has been written. The award of the Anthracite Strike Commission is reviewed and analyzed by Dr. Walter E. Weyl. "Political Conditions in Russia," apropos of the Czar's recent manifesto, is the subject of a well-informed article by N. I. Stone. David E. Cloyd, a representative of the General Education Board, has made a detailed study of the school situation in two Georgia counties. The results of this are valuable for the light that they throw on educational conditions throughout the South.

The Home-Maker is a new dollar magazine published in Denver, Colorado. It is edited by Emma F. A. Drake, M. D., who is introduced to the readers by Sylvanus Stall, D. D., of Philadelphia. There are 48 pages of clean and helpful reading matter for parents and children, and no advertisements.

A ROYAL HEART.

RAGGED, uncemely, and old and gray,
A woman walked in a Northern town,
And through the crowd as she wound her way
One saw her loiter and then stoop down,
Putting something away in her old torn gown.

"You are hiding a jewel," the watcher said,
(Ah, that was her heart— had the truth been read!)
"What have you stolen?" he asked again.
Then the dim eyes filled with sudden pain,
And under the flickering light of the gas
She showed him her gleaming. "It's broken glass,"
She said; "I hae lifted it up frae the street
To be oot o' the road o' the bairnies' feet!"

Under the fluttering rags astr
That was a royal heart that beat!
Would that the world had more like her
Smoothing the road for its bairnies' feet!

—Will H. Ogilvie, in Spectator.

"Oh, power to do! oh, baffled will!
Oh, prayer and action! ye are one.
Who may not strive, and yet fulfill
The harder task of standing still,
And good but wished with God, is done."

For Friends' Intelligencer.

APRIL.

SAW ye April by the way?
Was she grave or was she gay,
Breath of March or smile of May
Brought she from far lands?

Flowers in her wind-tossed hair,
Tears upon her cheek so fair,
Yet a smile of beauty rare.
Blossoms fill her hands.

In her fluttering robe of green,
Matched by naught that e'er was seen,
Seems she not a very queen?
Eyes of dove's breast hue.

By her side the shadows troop
At her feet white daisies group,
To her brooklet mirror stoop,
Now her eyes are blue.

Light of foot and light of heart,
Fairies could not play her part,
Frowning brow and winsome art
Fill her blithesome reign.

If you meet her on your way,
Meet her fair some springtime day,
She will win your heart away,
You resist in vain.

M. ALICE BROWN.

EARLY SPRING GLADNESS.

Now clap your hands together,
For this is April weather,
And love again is born;
The west wind is caressing,
The turf your feet is pressing
Is thrilling to the morn.

To see the grass a-greening,
To find each day new meaning
In sky and tree and ground;
To see the waters glisten,
To linger long, and listen
To every wakening sound!

To feel your nerves a-tingle
By crackle's reedy single
Or starling's brooky call,
Or phœbe's salutation,
Or sparrow's proclamation
Atop the garden wall!

The maple trees are thrilling,
Their eager juices spilling
In many a sugar camp.
I see the buckets gleaming,
I smell the smoke and steaming,
I smell the fragrant damp.

The mourning dove is cooing,
The meadow-lark is wooing—
I see his flashing quills;
Cock-robin's breast is glowing;
The wistful cattle loving,
And turning to the hills.

I love each April token
And every word that's spoken
In field or grove or vale;
The hyla's twilight chorus,
The clanging geese that o'er us
Keep well the northern trail.

Oh, soon with heaping measures
The spring will bring her treasures
To gladden every breast;
The sky with warmth a-beaming,
The earth with love a-teeming—
In life itself new zest!

—John Burroughs, in the Century.

TO LYDIA MARIA CHILD,

ON READING HER POEM IN "THE STANDARD."

[A friend writes us that this poem, which includes the three stanzas published in the INTELLIGENCER, Third month 21, is found in a volume entitled "Miriam and Other Poems," published in 1871, by Fields, Osgood & Co.—EDITORS.]

THE sweet spring day is glad with music,
But through it sounds a sadder strain ;
The worthiest of our narrowing circle
Sings Loring's dirges o'er again.

O woman greatly loved ! I join thee
In tender memories of our friend ;
With thee across the awful spaces
The greeting of a soul I send !

What cheer hath he ? How is it with him ?
Where lingers he this weary while ?
Over what pleasant fields of Heaven
Dawns the sweet sunrise of his smile ?

Does he not know our feet are treading
The earth hard down on Slavery's grave ?
That, in our crowning exultations,
We miss the charm his presence gave ?

Why on this spring air comes no whisper
From him to tell us all is well ?
Why to our flower-time comes no token
Of lily and of asphodel ?

I feel the unutterable longing,
Thy hunger of the heart is mine ;
I reach and grope for hands in darkness,
My ear grows sharp for voice or sign.

Still on the lips of all we question
The finger of God's silence lies ;
Will the lost hands in ours be folded ?
Will the shut eyelids ever rise ?

O friend ! no proof beyond this yearning,
This outreach of our hearts, we need ;
God will not mock the hope He giveth,
No love He prompts shall vainly plead.

Then let us stretch our hands in darkness,
And call our loved ones o'er and o'er ;
Some day their arms shall close about us,
And the old voices speak once more.

No dreary splendors wait our coming
Where rapt ghost sits from ghost apart ;
Homeward we go to Heaven's thanksgiving,
The harvest-gathering of the heart.

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

THE NEW HAMPSHIRE VOTE.

Alice Stone Blackwell, in Woman's Column.

THE vote on the woman suffrage amendment in New Hampshire is most encouraging to the friends of equal rights for women. It is the largest proportional vote ever given for this reform in a New England State.

In Rhode Island, the woman suffrage amendment received only about one vote in five. In Massachusetts, on the so-called referendum eight years ago, less than one male voter in three favored giving women even the municipal ballot. In New Hampshire, more than one voter in three favored giving them full suffrage. These figures speak for themselves. They show clearly the growth of public opinion on this question, even in conservative New England.

This is evident on the face of it. When the three votes are analyzed, the progress made becomes more marked. Rhode Island had for many years had an active Woman Suffrage Association, including some of the most highly respected and influential women in the State. A vigorous campaign was made ; Massachusetts contributed $1,000 to aid it, and her best speakers gave their services free of charge. There was no Anti-Suffrage Association in the field. Yet the amendment was beaten four to one.

Massachusetts had by far the strongest Suffrage Association in New England. Its most famous and most honored men and women have been advocating the reform for a generation. It was a center of equal suffrage activity. Yet the men's vote was more than two to one against giving women even the small fraction of municipal suffrage. The women's vote was more than 25 to one in its favor ; but that did not count.

New Hampshire, on the other hand, was regarded as the deadest place in New England on the woman suffrage question. For years it had been the only State in New England without a Suffrage Association. Effort after effort had been made to form one, but without success until recently, when a small Association was organized. Two active Anti-Suffrage Associations, those of Massachusetts and New York, flooded the State with literature. The amendment had against it the solid hostility of all the vicious elements, the inertia of conservatism, the political machine of the dominant party, and, unless appearances were misleading, the great railroad corporation that is said to own New Hampshire. Yet the vote against it was much less than two to one.

LAW AND GOSPEL.

IN one of our current magazines there is a humorous story of a little girl who was set at a tedious task by a Puritan aunt, who had required of her the hemming of a lot of napkins. The little fingers stood it for a time, and at last grew tired and resolved to strike. With a quaint fancy she determined she would stop at the one hundred and first stitch, and under no condition would she make the "one hundred and twelfth." Very slowly did she carry out her stern resolve, for she felt it meant a great crisis. The last two or three stitches were held back long and gravely, but at length the fatal number struck, and the napkin was thrown aside with its unfinished task. The punishment was inexorable ; no food until the work was finished. But the little will was as resolute as the Puritan aunt, and supper passed and the night rolled on with no relenting. The story is told in much greater detail than would suit our purpose to repeat. Suffice it to say that it was pathetic to see the little hungry girl watching the chickens eat their corn, and wondering how it tasted. It was still more heart-rending to watch her as she slept and dreamed that night, and see the suppressed sob and hear the half-uttered sentences that told of the feasts that were passing before her slumbering mind.

At last the auntie could stand it no longer. She went to her minister for advice, but the minister's wife gave her little comfort, and suggested some sharp things about the spirit of the Gospel rather than the Law, which must have had their effect, for the good lady broke down, awakened the slumbering child, and told her to hurry up and dress and come down for supper. You may be sure this did not take very long, and when they met in the dining room, and looked at that laden board with plates for two, it turned out that good auntie, with a better heart than she had been given credit for, had fasted too. The little child, before she sat down at the table or touched the viands for which she was famished, flung herself into her auntie's arms, and cried, "Auntie, I took the one hundredth and twelfth stitch before I came down stairs."—[Baptist Commonwealth.]

White House Impressions.

By the restoration of the east and west terraces the White House now rises from a stylobate 460 feet in length, thus greatly enhancing the dignity of the structure. The roofs of these terraces (which are level with the ground on the north) are surrounded with stone balustrades bearing electric lamps. Brilliantly lighted at evening, and adorned with well-trimmed orange and bay trees, they form promenades and places for out-of-door enjoyment during the long months when the Washington climate permits such diversion.

Now, on the occasion of large receptions, the guests drive into the grounds by a new entrance, opposite the west front of the Treasury. Alighting at a spacious porte cochère, they enter a corridor formed by the east terrace, where are boxes to accommodate the wraps of twenty-five hundred guests, the limit of the capacity of the house. Entering the main building on the garden level, one finds on each side of the broad corridor ample dressing-rooms, which take the place formerly given over to laundry and store-rooms. From the corridor the guests proceed, by a broad flight of stone stairs, to the main floor of the house, which is entirely at the service of the guests. The hall, no longer an improvised dressing-room, becomes an integral portion of the house, and, instead of being finished as a thoroughfare, is treated with the large and simple dignity befitting the room which hereafter will command the access to the various state apartments. On entering the White House, the first impression one gets is that its size has been greatly increased: there is a satisfying air of spaciousness combined with dignity. One is struck with the simplicity of treatment; and yet, on examination, it is discovered that ornament well subordinated is a characteristic of the work.—[Charles Moore, in the Century.]

Heavy-weight Books Doomed.

THE heavy, arm-breaking, temper-destroying volume of the past is doomed. Book-buyers cannot have failed to notice a marked improvement in the make-up of the new books of certain publishers—their increased lightness of weight. Until recently the English book manufacturers have been far ahead of the American in this respect, and most light-weight paper used by publishers had to be imported from England. But about five years ago American publishers began the agitation in this country for home-made light-weight paper. The model to be imitated here was the English Esparto-paper, made from esparto grass, a rush-like grass growing only in Northern Africa and Southern Spain. This paper is made in limited quantities even in England, because of the scarcity of this grass.

At the repeated instigation of publishers, several American manufacturers commenced experiments in the light paper. At first little progress was made. The American product, though light, lacked the necessary cohesiveness—a fatal defect. The work was persisted in, however, until success was achieved, in the last year or so, and the American light-weight paper is now coming into general use. Made of it, a book weighs between thirty and forty per cent. less than one of equal size made of the old smooth, heavy paper. The light weight paper is not smooth, and to the uninitiated it appears to be rougher, and supposedly cheaper, than the old smooth paper to which readers are accustomed. But, as a matter of fact, the light, rough paper is decidedly more expensive to make. It is to be hoped that this long-sought improvement in book-making will be strenuously persisted in by the publishers.—[Harper's Literary Gossip.]

Negro Physicians.

As nearly as I can ascertain, there are now practicing in the Southern and Southwestern States about eight hundred colored physicians who have graduated at reputable medical colleges, or one to ten thousand of their own race. A great proportion of these doctors are located in large cities and towns, few being found in the country districts. Not only must the Negro physician be educated to practice among his own people in this country, but medical missionaries are greatly needed in their fatherland.

The relations which have existed between the white and colored physicians of the South have been most commendable. The colored physicians have been treated with courtesy and respect by the white medical profession, who have given them all needed assistance in serious cases and difficult surgical operations. There is less friction between the two races in the practice of medicine than in any other department of industrial or professional activity. It is to be hoped that this kindly feeling which now prevails will, in the years to come, prove to be a potent factor in establishing a better understanding between the two races.—[Dr. George W. Hubbard, in Southern Workman.]

My First Meeting with Emerson.

ENTERING the publisher's private room one day, I found Mr. Emerson there; and, having said "Good morning" to Mr. Phillips, I retired to the book-room. There Mr. Phillips came to me presently, and said Mr. Emerson would like to meet me. Thrilled with happy surprise, yet doubtful, I said, "I am afraid you suggested it!" "Not at all," he replied. "When you spoke to me in the office he kept his eye on you; and after you had gone out he asked, 'Isn't that somebody I ought to know?' I told him who you were, and he said, 'I wish to see him!'"

Just when this occurred I cannot now recall, except that it was in the spring of the year; for when, after one of his questions, I told him that I lived in Boston, he replied, "How can you spare the country this gay spring weather?" I said, "That is something we cannot spare altogether; and we must have our Woodnotes, and be free to follow our Forerunners." The moment I had spoken I feared he might regard the allusion to his poems as idle compliment; but it evidently did not displease him. With his "wise, sweet smile," he remarked, "I confess a tender interest in any mention of my poems; I am so rarely reminded that they are ever read by anybody. It is only my prose that gives them a sort of vicarious vitality"; a just statement of the comparative esteem in which his prose and verse were held in those early years of the second half of the century. After some deprecatory words from me, he went on in his peculiar, hesitating manner, pausing often as if seeking the right word, then uttering it with an emphasis that relieved it of any suspicion of uncertainty.

"I feel it a hardship that—with something of a lover's passion for what is to me the most precious thing in life, poetry,—I have no gift of fluency in it, only a rude and stammering utterance."—[J. T. Trowbridge, in the Atlantic Monthly.]

How much better to substitute in our high and other schools for the professor who cuts up cats, the professor who will take his classes into the woods and fields, to study with kodaks and opera glasses the habits of our so-called poor relations, and by kindness make them as tame as Thoreau did, when they came to him and fed from his hand.

—[Dumb Animals.]

At the request of ex-Senator Pritchard, the leader and originator of the "Lily White" movement in the Southern States, the President has commissioned Lieutenant David J. Gilmer, a negro, a second lieutenant in the Philippine Scouts.

CURRENT EVENTS.

THE Cuban Senate has unconditionally adopted the reciprocity treaty as amended by the Senate of the United States. The time limit was dispensed with through the receipt of a cable message from Secretary Hay, which positively declared that President Roosevelt would call a special session of Congress prior to Twelfth month 1. The formal exchange of ratifications between the United States and Cuba took place on the 31st ultimo at the State Department in Washington.

THE object of the Irish Land bill, introduced in the House of Commons by Secretary Wyndham, is to allow the Irish farmers to purchase the land from the landlords by installments. The terms of purchase are to be on the basis of about eighteen years' rental value, the purchase money to be advanced by the British Government at about 3 per cent. interest, with a gradual system of repayment extending over a long period, the money thus advanced to be added to the national debt. The land bought by the tenants will secure the sums advanced.

THE French Chamber of Deputies, by a vote of 304 to 246, has expelled the religious preaching Orders from the country. Premier Combes, in summing up the Government's case, said that the tendency of these Orders is to supplant the regular clergy, and that the monks had conducted a campaign against the conquests of the Republic and against all republican progress.

DR. JULIUS N. REUTER, of the University of Helsingfors, who was detailed by the Finnish National Relief Committee to make a tour of Finland, says there would have been untold suffering but for the assistance of the committee, which was so largely helped by American funds. The committee has branches in every village and parish and every case of suffering is attended to. The committee supplies bread, peas and salt fish and expects labor for its help, so as to avoid pauperizing the people.

WILLIAM V. MCKEAN, who retired nearly twelve years ago after a continuous service of twenty-five years as editor of the Public Ledger, died on the 29th ult. at his home in Philadelphia, at the venerable age of 82. During his editorship the Ledger gained an enviable reputation for fairness and accuracy. One of his maxims was, "Always deal frankly and fairly with the public. Take great care to be right. Better be right than quickest with 'the news,' which is often false. It is bad to be late, but worse to be wrong." Aside from his valuable newspaper work he did more than the share of one man in promoting the public good, taking a special interest in educational efforts and in science.

THE National Council of Women, in session at New Orleans, adopted resolutions urging that the date of convening of The Hague conference be universally observed as peace and arbitration day, and protesting against the order of the Federal postal authorities prohibiting married women from holding salaried positions in its service. It asked the Government to continue women emigrant inspectors in office long enough to give them a fair trial.

THE West Philadelphia Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad, at Thirty-second and Market streets, was opened for traffic on the 30th ult. The new arrangement of tracks provides a convenient means of transfer from one portion of the company's lines to another. All trains which formerly stopped at Powelton Avenue and South Street stations will stop at the new station, by which passengers from points on the Maryland and Central Divisions can make direct connection with trains for Pittsburg and New York.

NEWS NOTES.

At the earnest solicitation of the Venezuelan Congress President Castro has withdrawn his resignation.

The classified civil service list, which now includes 110,000 places, is to be extended to several thousand more.

SECRETARY SHAW has signed a Treasury warrant for $3,000,000 in favor of the Treasurer of the Philippine Islands, to cover aid fund appropriated by Congress.

The entire cost of the Coal Strike Commission was $38,000. But three of the seven Commissioners drew a salary, the other four having salaries as government officials.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has directed the War Department to give immediate attention to the request that Father Augustine's body be placed in consecrated ground.

A CANVASS of the Fifteenth Ward by the Philadelphia County Woman's Suffrage Society shows that a majority of the women in the ward want the right to vote.

THE London Times, on the 30th ultimo, published two Marconigraph messages of over 100 words each from its New York correspondent, giving items of American news.

THE City Council of London, Ontario, has passed a resolution urging the Dominion Parliament to enact a law forbidding the importation, manufacture, and sale of cigarettes.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

4TH Mo. 4.—GIRARD AVENUE (Philadelphia) Friends' Association, at 8 p. m. General Exercises.

4TH Mo. 5.—PHILADELPHIA EVENING Meeting, at Fifteenth and Race Sts.

4TH Mo. 5.—READING PA., FRIENDS' Meeting, visited by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee.

4TH Mo. 5.—AT PROVIDENCE, NEAR Media, Del. Co., Pa., a circular meeting under the care of a Committee of Concord Quarterly Meeting, at 3 p. m. Walnut St. cars via Angora reach Providence Ave. two blocks from meeting-house.

4TH Mo. 7.—CAMDEN, N. J., YOUNG Friends' Association.

4TH Mo. 10.—PLYMOUTH, PA., FRIENDS' Association.

4TH Mo. 11.—SALEM FIRST-DAY SCHOOL Union will be held at Woodstown, N. J. in Friends' meeting-house, at 10 a. m. Papers will be prepared on the following subjects: Do we show sufficient reverence (1) during Prayer? (2) for the Bible? (3) for our First-day? (4) for our Meeting? A cordial invitation is extended to all interested.

4TH Mo. 12.—WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., indulged meeting, under care of New York Monthly Meeting, at 78 Fisher Ave., White Plains, at 11 o'clock.

4TH Mo. 12.—A CIRCULAR MEETING under the care of a committee of West-ern Quarterly Meeting at West Grove, Pa., at 3 o'clock.

4TH Mo. 12.—FRIENDS' ASSOCIATION OF New York and Brooklyn, in Brooklyn. (Concluded on page 224).

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

THE Supreme Court of Ohio has unanimously declared the Beal Local Option law constitutional. Under this decision a Cambridge saloon-keeper has been sent to jail for selling liquor.

AN equal suffrage bill enacted by the Arizona legislature was vetoed by the governor of the Territory upon the ground that it violated the act of Congress organizing the Territory.

CHENG TUNG LIANG CHENG, the new Chinese Minister to the United States, arrived in San Francisco on the 26th ult. accompanied by his entire suite and party, which includes 20 students.

THE managers of seven large cotton mills in Lowell, Mass., in anticipation of a strike, have closed their mills indefinitely. This action throws 17,000 persons out of employment, several thousand of whom are not members of labor unions.

A DISPATCH from London states that another crushing defeat has been sustained by the Conservatives in Sussex, the Liberal candidate, C. F. Hutchinson, being returned by a majority of 534, having obtained 2,000 more votes than he did in 1,900.

A DISPATCH from Reading states that hard coal shipments over the Reading Company's main line have fallen from 10,000 to 7,000 cars a week; also that preparations are being made to ship more coal over the Schuylkill Canal this year than for twenty years.

SECRETARY CHAMBERLAIN, in a speech in the English Parliament, said that 100,000 Boers have been repatriated, and that the Government is giving the new colonies the remarkable aggregate of $75,000,000 toward the expenses of their re-settlement.

THE Senate having failed to confirm William M. Byrne to be United States District Attorney for Delaware, and Dr. W. D. Crum to be Collector of the Port of Charleston, the President has again appointed them to these positions since the adjournment of the Senate.

THE three British members of the Alaskan Boundary

Commission are Lord Alverstone, Lord Chief Justice of England; Sir Louis Jette, formerly Judge of the Supreme Court of Quebec; and Sir John Douglas Armour, Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada.

PRESIDENT BAER has announced that the price of anthracite coal is to be at once reduced 50 cents a ton. It will still be 50 cents higher than it was one year ago. Bituminous coal prices are to be advanced 75 cents a ton because of higher wages and freight charges.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has displaced Samuel H. Vick, the negro postmaster at Wilson, N. C., and given the office to a white man recommended by ex-Senator Pritchard, the leader of the "Lily White" Republicans. The reason assigned for the removal is that Vick did not support the Republican party at the last election.

THE Essex County Grand Jury on the 26th ult. indicted the officials and members of the Executive Committee of the North Jersey Street Railway Company, charging each with manslaughter in connection with the Clinton avenue grade crossing horror when nine pupils of the Newark High School were killed and a score or more injured.

THE official reports concerning the health of Philadelphia are not very creditable to the Health Board. There have been 3,000 cases of typhoid fever since the first of the year, 10 per cent. of which were fatal. Virulent smallpox, scarlet fever and diphtheria have also been prevalent. Doubtless one cause of this is the filth with which many of the streets are reeking.

It may not be generally known among the lovers of "Lipton's teas" that there are other beverages in which this firm deals. Their wine and spirit branch, Sir Thomas Lipton says, is one of the most lucrative departments. They are owners of 220 licenses in full operation, with power to add to their number. —[National Advocate.]

4TH Mo. 13.—CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY, Dunning's Creek, Monthly Meeting, Fishertown, Pa. Friends expecting to attend should arrive the Seventh-day preceding, and should write to E. Howard Blackburn, Bedford, Pa., so that arrangements may be made for meeting them.

4TH Mo. 13.—PHILADELPHIA YOUNG Friends' Association, in auditorium, Y. F. A. Building, at 8 p. m.

4TH Mo. 18.—CONCORD FIRST-DAY School Union will be held in Friends' Meeting-house, Chester, Pa., at 10 a. m. All interested are cordially invited to attend.

4TH Mo. 18.—ABINGTON FIRST-DAY School Union, at Abington Friends' Meeting-house at 10.30 a. m. and 2 p. m. Subject for discussion: "Should Friends encourage foot-ball and other athletic sports as they are now practised in our schools and colleges?" All Friends interested in First-day School work are cordially invited.

4TH Mo. 21.—ADDRESS BY JOHN J. CORNELL, Race Street Meeting-house, 8 p. m. Under care of Committee on Membership of Race Street Monthly Meeting.

THE PHILADELPHIA YOUNG FRIENDS' Association has a number of bound copies of FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER which it would be glad to give to anyone desiring them. For further particulars address ELIZA H. WORRELL, 140 N. 15th St., Phila.

A DEAR old Quaker lady who was asked what gave her such a lovely complexion and what cosmetic she used, replied sweetly: "I used for the lips, truth; for the voice, prayer; for the hands, charity; for the figure, uprightness; and for the heart, love." —[Gathered.]

A FOUR-YEAR-OLD was relating with dramatic feeling an assault from her brother, aged six. "And he bit me, and he pinched me, and he ——" "Oh, but what did you do to him?" "I wasn't talking about that." —[London Spectator.]

ARMSTRONG & MCKELVY
Pittsburgh.
BEYER-BAUMANN
Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS
Pittsburgh.
FAIRNSTOCK
Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR
Cincinnati.
ECKSTEIN
ATLANTIC
BRADLEY
BROOKLYN
JEWETT
ULSTER
UNION
SOUTHERN SHIPMAN
COLLIER
MISSOURI
RED SEAL
COUTHERN
New York.
Chicago.
St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & EROS CO
Philadelphia.
MORLEY
Cleveland.
SALEM
Salem, Mass.
CORNELL
Buffalo.
AENTUCKY
Louisville.

USE Pure White Lead and Pure Linseed Oil and you will know exactly what you are getting—absolutely the best and most economical paint in existence. Employ a responsible, practical painter to apply it and the result will be satisfactory.

If interested in paint or painting, address

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

The name of MACBETH is on good lamp chimneys from Constantinople to Valparaiso.

If you'll send your address, I'll send you the Index to Lamps and their Chimneys, to tell you what number to get for your lamp.
 MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
 Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
 For book or sample, write
Farwell & Rhines, WaterTown, N. Y., U.S.A.
 PERSONALLY CONDUCTED TOUR.

Savannah by Sea.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.
SEVEN DAY TOUR $29
 TO SAVANNAH

including all expenses. Leave Philadelphia Tuesday April 14th. Send for itinerary.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent,
 Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

ASPARAGUS ROOTS
 $2.50 per 1000.

Pear trees, Strawberry plants, California privet, —
 all at low rates. Catalogue free.

SAMUEL C. DeCOU, Moorestown, N. J.

Catalogue

1903
 Free

More varieties of squash have been introduced by us than by all the seed men of the United States combined — the Hubbard, Marblehead, Victor, Warren, Golden Breeze and Butman, being among the number. Send for our new catalogue of vegetable and flower seed. We sell the purest grass seed in the U. S.

J. J. H. Gregory & Son, Marblehead, Mass.

HOW TO PREPARE MANUSCRIPT.

WRITE upon pages of a single size ;
 Cross all your t's and neatly dot your i's ;
 On one side only let your lines be seen—
 Both sides filled up announce a verdant green.

Correct—yes, re-correct—all that you write,
 And let your ink be black, your paper white.

Punctuate carefully, for on this score
 Nothing proclaims a practised writer more.
 Then send it off. And, lest it merit lack,
 Inclose a stamp with which to send it back.
 But first pay all the postage on it, too,
 For editors look blank at "six cents due,"
 And murmur, as they run the effusion o'er.

Yet here it goes ; retain a copy clean—
 Writers should own a copying machine.
 Little they know the time that's spent,
 and care,

In hunting "copy" vanished who knows where?

Bear this in mind, observe it to the end,
 And you shall make the editor your friend.
 —[Notes and Queries.]

Home Kitchen Outfits
 and all
 House Furnishing Goods

J. FRANKLIN MILLER,
 1626 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
 Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
 1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

Special Values in Bedding

The price concessions we secure on large orders for a special grade of hair enables us to quote remarkably low prices on All-hair Mattresses. We also offer a line of Pillows and Bolsters of a good quality at only a little more than half price :

All-Hair Mattress

The "S. & C. Special," covered with fancy ticking of good quality, and made in one or two parts, as desired ; weighs 40 pounds—$12.50.

Japanese Hair Mattress

Covered with fancy ticking and weighs 50 pounds ; filled with a quality of hair usually found in much higher-priced mattresses—$7.50.

Pillow and Bolster Sets

Two Pillows (size 22 by 28 inches) and one Bolster (size 22 by 56 inches) filled with mixed feathers: weight, 12 pounds; regular $9 value—special at $5 a set.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
 PHILADELPHIA.

REDUCED RATES TO NEW ORLEANS.

VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD, ON ACCOUNT MEETING NATIONAL MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION.

On account of the meeting of the National Manufacturers' Association at New Orleans, April 15 to 17, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets to New Orleans and return, April 11, 12 and 13, good going on date of sale, and good returning to reach original starting point not later than April 19, from all points on its line, at reduced rates. By depositing ticket with Joint Agent at New Orleans between April 12 and 19, and payment of fee of fifty cents, an extension of return limit may be obtained to reach starting point not later than April 30.

GREATLY REDUCED RATES TO ATLANTA, GA., AND MACON, GA., AND RETURN, VIA THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

On May 4th and 5th, the Southern Railway will sell round trip tickets from Washington to Atlanta, Ga., account the National Conference of Charities and Corrections, May 6th to 12th, 1903, at one first-class fare plus twenty-five cents, final limit May 16th, 1903. Also to Macon, Ga. on May 4th and 5th, at rate of one first-class fare, plus twenty-five cents, final limit May 10th, 1903, account of the Sugar-Cane Growers' Convention, held at that point May 6th, 8th, 1903. Corresponding low rates from other points.

The Southern Railway operates three through trains daily to Atlanta, Macon and other points South. Dining-car service on all through trains.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa., will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
 DAIRIES.
 JOSEPH L. JONES

A Great ROSE Offer

"Our Grand Success Collection"
 18 splendid C. & J. Roses, including the wonderful Hardy Ever Blooming Climber, Climbing Climbing Souper, and our New Philadelphia Crimson Rambler, and 16 other choice selected varieties, making

18 Superb for $1.00
 Roses

Send postpaid on receipt of price. Also hundreds of other choice varieties in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Use our Floral Guide, 15c paper—FREE. Address
The Conard & Jones Co., Box 2, West Grove, Pa.
 "Growers of the Best Roses in America."

LANSDOWNE AND DARBY SAVING FUND AND TRUST COMPANY

LANSDOWNE, PA.

Full Paid Capital, $125,000.

2 per cent. paid on Check Deposits, 3 per cent. paid on Savings Deposits.

Under the management of Friends and Friendly people.

GEORGE FOSTER WHITE, President, Treasurer and Trust Officer; W. LAKE VERLENDEN First-President; JOSEPH T. BUNTING, Second Vice-President; MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary; LEWIS LAWRENCE SMITH, Solicitor.
 Acts as Executor, Administrator, Trustee, Guardian or Agent. Will prepared and kept free of charge where this Company is named as Executor.
 Aims at perfect service and perfect Security. Either the Franklin National Bank or the Girard National Bank will receive deposits for this company.

Embossed or Engraved Stationery.

We're doing some pretty nice work along these lines for some of our customers. Plenty of samples to show, from which you can select what suits you best.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE
BETTER KIND OF PRINTING

1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000

Chartered 1836

SURPLUS 7,500,000

ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE,

ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER.

FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION

ACCOUNTS.

Saves to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults.

ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES.

DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.

REGISTRAR AND TRANSFER AGENT.

ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.

E. B. MORRIS, President.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes
10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted.
Scientific Bread Mach. Co.
(CINCINNATI, O.)
520 1/2 Media St., Philadelphia

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;

$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.

'Phone 1-33-55.

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Meaning of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.
 "The reading of which is a spiritual feast."
 Friends' Intelligencer.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Doukhobors. By Joseph Elkinton. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated, $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
 N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

MEETING AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, NEW ORLEANS, LA., MAY 5th to 8th, 1903.

On account of the above occasion, the Southern Railway will sell tickets for the round trip, limited ten days, for one fare.

From the Trunk Line Territory the rates will be based on the regular fares to Washington or Trunk Line Western termini, added to one first-class fare therefrom, limited to continuous passage, and will be sold May 1st, 2d and 3d, with final limit ten days from date of sale. By deposit of ticket by original purchaser, and payment of 50 cents, to Joint Agent, New Orleans, not later than May 12th, extension of final limit may be obtained to enable the purchaser to reach the original starting point not later than May 30th, 1903.

The Southern Railway operates three trains daily from New York and Philadelphia, carrying Pullman Sleeping, Dining and Observation cars.

By the request of members of the American Medical Association, in the East, on Saturday, May 2d, special service has been arranged to leave New York at 4.25 p. m., Philadelphia at 6.55 p. m., via Washington, Atlanta and Montgomery. Trains composed exclusively of Pullman Dining, Drawing and Stateroom, Sleeping, Library and Observation Cars. Those desiring Pullman reservation should send in their names as soon as possible. Time New York to New Orleans 39 hours. For further information call on or write Chas. L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Insurance from Loss by Fire

Best of Companies

Lowest Rates

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

United Security Life Insurance

and Trust Company
OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Capital, $1,000,000
 Surplus and undivided profits, 500,000

Banking and General Trust Co. Business

OFFICERS:
 WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
 JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
 ESSMONDE H. AUSTIN.

Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
 CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS, Assistant Treasurer.
 HENRY LABARRE JAYNE, Counsel.
 FRANCIS H. HEMPERLY, Actuary.
 T. HEWSON BRADFORD, M.D., Medical Director.

DIRECTORS:
 William M. Coates, William H. Lucas,
 Caleb J. Milne, William R. Verzer,
 V. C. Sweetman, J. W. Hampton, Jr.,
 Charles Porter, Orlando Crease,
 Robert Dorman, J. Layton Register,
 John G. Carruth, Esmonde H. Austin,
 William Bault, Silas W. Pettit,
 Joel Cook.

THE UNION CENTRAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Assets, $34,000,000

Plain Life and Endowment Policies with Annual Dividends.

The Highest Grade of Life Insurance at the Lowest Cost.

The Company for Those who Think for Themselves.

Good Contracts to Good Agents.

Lawton Brothers, Managers,
 338 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

To-morrow is no time at all— it never comes.
 The time to insure is to-day. You will be supplied with the kind of insurance adapted to your means and needs; your convenience will be consulted, the way made easy if you apply to the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
 921-3-5 Chestnut St.

THE DOUKHOBORS

Their History in Russia and Their Migration to Canada. By JOSEPH ELKINTON.
 8vo, 344 pages, 3 maps, 50 illustrations. Postpaid, $2.00.

"Timely, interesting and valuable."—Public Opinion.
 "An extremely interesting book to all in sympathy with religious idealism."
 Only adequate account in English of this unique people, and the FERRIS & LEACH, Publishers, 29-31 North Seventh Street, PHILA.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, FOURTH MONTH 11, 1903.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers.

Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application.

No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
* * * TELEPHONE No. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XV.,	325
POETRY: PATIENCE,	225
WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson, (Continued),	225
FRIENDS AS CITIZENS,	227
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON: Book of Acts,	229
EDITORIAL: Race Prejudice,	230
The Essential Thing,	230
Notes,	230
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS,	231
SOCIETY NOTES,	232
A MEMORIAL OF APPRECIATION,	232
A LETTER FROM ISAAC CLOTHIER,	232
THE JUVENILE COURT IN DELAWARE COUNTY,	234
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.,	236
EDUCATIONAL,	237
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES,	237
LITERARY NOTES,	237
POETRY: The Lily of the Resurrection; Trailing Arbutus,	238
DAUGHTERS OF THE REPUBLIC,	238
MISCELLANY: An American Opening in Siberia; Father and Daughter,	239
CURRENT EVENTS,	239
NEWS NOTES,	240
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS,	240

Insurance from Loss by Fire

Best of Companies
Lowest Rates

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

WANTED.—BY MARRIED MAN CHARGE OF country place as care-taker or gardener. Experienced in care of lawns. Address No. 23, this Office.

WANTED.—AN INTELLIGENT YOUNG woman as mother's helper. Apply or write 6725 Cresheim Road, Germantown, Pa.

WANTED.—BY FRIEND, POSITION AS PRIVATE secretary. Remington operator, or traveling companion, nurse for semi-invalid, or housekeeper. Address A. D. FEATHERSTONE, 21 N. Carey Street, Baltimore, Md.

FRIENDS FROM A DISTANCE, WHO EXPECT to attend Yearly Meeting, can be accommodated with rooms and board at a moderate rate, in a Friends' family, by applying at an early date to H. E. GREEN, 1707 Mt. Vernon Street.

BOARDING.—THE CO-OPERATIVE HOUSE-keeping Association has now one vacancy. For particulars address E. H. S., 140 N. 15th Street, Phila.

BOARDERS DESIRED IN FRIENDS' FAMILY on farm near Coeshohocken. For further particulars address S. 4200 Spring Mill Ave., Coeshohocken, Pa.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS AND SISTERS, 1827 1st., N. W., Washington, D. C.

TO RENT FOR THE SUMMER.

FURNISHED house at Gwynedd, Pa. 18 miles from Philadelphia. House contains six bed rooms, bath room, hot and cold water library, large porch, dining room, and two kitchens. Five acres of ground, large lawn with shade, good truck patch and orchard, the produce of which tenant may enjoy; also, if desired, cow and chickens. Stabling for four horses and cow. The house is finely situated with extended views and good air. Will be rented on reasonable terms from Sixth month 1 to Ninth month 30, or a little later if desired. Photographs furnished. Address or apply to ARTHUR H. JENKINS, 1244 Race St., Phila.

FOR RENT.—AT SWARTHMORE, PA., a large stone mansion on the hill from June to September. Completely furnished, all conveniences, gas range, Springfield water, 140 feet of porch, commanding a fine view. Grounds cared for by owner. Tennis court. Stabling for two horses if desired. ALBERT N. GARRETT, 1015 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia; or Box 135, Swarthmore, Pa.

FOR RENT.—BY THE MONTH, A FURNISHED house in Swarthmore, Yale Avenue, on new trolley line. Grounds and shade for children. For particulars address HENRY KENT, Swarthmore, Pa.

LIZZIE J. LAMBERT,

PLAIN AND FANCY MILLINERY,

Successor to E. SHOEMAKER. 1020 Green St.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,
Telephones. Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.

ELIZABETH LLOYD'S
"SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY"
placed in every school, would teach the beauty of Peace.

Send twenty cents for one copy of the music and twenty-five copies of the words, to

ARABELLA CARTER,
Universal Peace Union, 1305 Arch St., Phila.

Printing for Associations.

We do so much of the work that we can offer valuable suggestions, and save your bothering with details, because we know just how the work ought to be done.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,
MAKERS OF THE
BETTER KIND OF PRINTING
1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

The mountain view! most spiritual thing of all
The wide earth knows; when, in the sultry time,
He stoops him from his vast cerulean hall,
He secms the breath of a celestial clime!
As if from heaven's wide-open gates did flow
Health and refreshment on the world below.

—Bryant.

A number of improvements have been made to the Inn at Duck Hill Falls.

The dining room has been enlarged to double the capacity of last summer, and another ample chimney space provided, a steam heating plant to heat the dining room, sitting room and halls is to be installed. A nurses' dining room has been set aside. The porch room has been increased; flag-stone walks in front of the Inn extended; a bright, cherry room has been set aside for children's play-room; dark rooms for photographers, with running water, will be provided; additional and improved toilet facilities have been added; a separate cottage has been built for the help; a number of the important walks have been widened and leveled.

Accommodations should be engaged ahead for Sixth month. The bird classes, mentioned last week, the First-day School Assembly and another interesting feature to be announced later, taken in connection with the fact that Sixth month is the most delightful of all the year in the mountains, lead us to anticipate the Inn will be more than filled.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHARLES F. JENKINS, President.
MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary and Treasurer.

Young Friends' Association

will hold its regular meeting on Second-day evening, Fourth month 13th, at 8 o'clock. A program of unusual interest has been arranged.

MISS M. E. RICHMOND
General Secretary of Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity will deliver an address on the subject:

HOW TO USE THE CHARITIES
OF PHILADELPHIA

BENJAMIN C. MARSH
will speak on the subject:

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES IN THE
WORLD OF GRAFT

CAROLINE F. COMLY, Secretary

J. T. JACKSON & CO. Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)
Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS., PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, graded education, and prepares for college.

EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }

Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal, George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal, Jenkintown, Pa. CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the bill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE, Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars address

A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal, Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars address ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal, Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Amblor, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLOR, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

ALFRED L. SELLERS, CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT, 619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW, 929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA Conveyancing and Investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, 3 Walnut Street, Philadelphia. OFFICES: { 623 Arch Street, Philadelphia. } Amblor, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER, 325 SWEDEN STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA. ATTORNEY-AT-LAW. Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Thompson Shourds, 2022 Wallace Street, Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.

Richards & Shourds, Jobbing attended to. CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS, 1225 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa Phone 3-54-78 D.

CHARLES BURTON,

Practical House and Sign Painter, Office, 907 N. Thirteenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Residence, 174 Woodstock Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

EDWARD T. BLACK (S. W. BLACK'S SON) REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER

The entire care of Real Estate a specialty 616 Sanson Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.,)

Ringe & Ellis, REAL ESTATE Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Grand Rents, Patents, Estates managed and settled. Rents collected. Keystone and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

AQUILA J. LINVILL, Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal, 1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR, 19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $3.35.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

CRANE'S

MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
5 PHONES.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTENHAM,

E. T. Kuendig, R. W. Richards, Atlantic City, N. J.

The Pennhurst, Second House from Beach MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU, 1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J. Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts. K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE., ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet. M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St. PLAIN MILLINERY, Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street From 736 Spring Garden Street.

PURE FOOD skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men. J. J. WILLIAMS.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK

UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

Established 1850 at 824 North Second Street. WATCHES. As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade — established three generations ago — and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call. GEO. C. CHILD, 27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores
1220-1222 MARKET STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.
Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, FOURTH MONTH 11, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 15.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XV.

By halting in our duty, and giving back in the time of trial, our hands grow weaker, our spirits get mingled with the people, our ears grow dull as to hearing the language of the true Shepherd.

JOHN WOOLMAN.

From his Journal.

PATIENCE.

"Is it raining, little flower?

Be glad of rain.

Too much sun would wither thee,

'Twill shine again.

The sky is very black, 'tis true,

But just behind it shines the blue.

"Art thou weary, tender heart?

Be glad of pain;

In sorrow sweetest things will grow

As flowers in rain.

God watches, and thou wilt have sun

When clouds their perfect work have done."

—Selected.

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

JOHN JACKSON.

(Continued from last week.)

THE peaceful, loving atmosphere of the Friendly home in which John Jackson grew up caused a natural development of his religious and spiritual nature. "He learned simultaneously with the forms of things, that there was a venerable power invisible, whose presence within himself was nearer, dearer, sweeter than any outward thing, being nothing less than the Spirit which made all outward things, and was at once cherishing and regulative of his inward being. . . . At an early age he was taken by his parents to the solemn assembly, where he would see all the friends he loved sitting wrapt in a silence that might be felt. He soon understood that this was the worship 'in spirit and in truth' of the Father of them all, who was speaking to the inward soul of each, and it gave to the voice of God within himself, that he could not fail in such circumstances to hear, an authority he might not else have allowed to it. . . . Above all, if reproved by his father or mother for any childish aberration from right, or stimulated to any good action, he was always referred to a guide in his own mind, beyond their authority—obedience to which would be conscious rectitude and peace, and which they, no less than he, acknowledged to be a Master's voice."

The memorial prepared by Darby Monthly Meeting after his death speaks thus of his childhood and youth: "Throughout life he recurred with gratitude to the religious care of his parents. By cheerful submission to their wise restraints his tender mind was prepared for those religious impressions which he testified were coincident with his earliest recollections and so memorable that they would be as lasting as life. He had learned when very young to repeat that beautiful prayer which Jesus taught his disciples, and to open his lips with the language, 'Our Father who art in heaven.' On one of the occasions of retirement which he had been taught were necessary to effectual prayer he put this question to himself, 'What good can it do me to repeat these words, and how shall I be benefited by the use of this prayer?' Though a child, 'I was,' said he, 'seeking after truth and in the silence that followed the inquiry my understanding was addressed by a language like this: "The value of thy prayer depends upon the spirit in which it is made." Oh, the impressions of that hour have followed me through life.'"

In the year 1830, when he was a boy of eleven, his mother died. She was a woman of remarkable piety and energy. As early as 1793 she was one of several women who formed an organization for the relief of the poor outside the Society of Friends; this, Elizabeth Peabody says, was the first benevolent society organized in America by women. Her death was somewhat sudden, taking place when a daughter was away from home; but she was aware of its approach, and, assembling her husband and children around her bed she sent messages to the absent, and gave a word of counsel to each one present till she came to John; her eyes rested on him lovingly for a moment, and then she exclaimed, "Dear John, the Lord is with thee."

The separation in the Society of Friends occurred in John's early manhood. The widely-divergent views expressed by those who claimed to be inspired by God caused doubts to arise in his mind, and for a time his faith in immediate revelation was sorely tried. To this season of conflict he thus alludes in a letter to a Friend: "In commemoration of the goodness and care of my heavenly Father do I speak of his tender dealings with me while in the wilderness, where I had wandered to seek an asylum from discouragements that had presented to my view; I have known what it is to be under the influence of those mental sufferings that are known only between the soul and its Maker. Oh, when I think of the goodness of Him whose continued visitations preserved me from falling into the gloomy labyrinth of infidelity, it fills my heart with gratitude and opens the streams of devotion there."

In the early part of 1832, as narrated by Elizabeth

Peabody, two women Friends came from the West, one of whom was a preacher, bringing certificates from their own monthly meeting to Darby. The preacher was Priscilla Cadwallader, and her ministry was instrumental in dispelling the mists by which he had been enveloped. He requested leave of his father to drive the carriage which had been provided to convey these Friends to the southern part of New Jersey, where they felt called to hold meetings. The following extracts from letters that he wrote home during this journey give a vivid picture of some of the theological differences of those troubled days:

"A circumstance a little singular happened at one of our meetings a few days since. We had a Friend from Port Elizabeth, who went before us to appoint the meetings, and when he came to the place of which I now speak he was asked if the women Friends were the old-fashioned Quakers and orthodox in doctrine. He told them they were. 'Well, did they believe in the doctrines of ancient Fox, Penn.' etc.? 'Yes, they held the doctrines of ancient Friends,'—and with this information a meeting was speedily procured. Priscilla (who did not know of any questions having been raised) was led to speak on the subject of salvation by Christ, and that the only hope of salvation was through him. But when they came to find out that we were 'Hicksites' they were surprised at this. We were asked by a respectable man at whose house we lodged, a Baptist, if those women preached what was called the Hicksite doctrine. We told him they preached the doctrines of Friends, and they had been called in derision 'Hicksites.' 'Well,' said he, 'if that is Hicksite doctrine it is good enough for me; but I had understood that Mr. Hicks had no belief in a Saviour.' . . . We told him what Elias's views were on several subjects, and he was well satisfied with the explanation."

"Last evening we held the first Friends' meeting that was ever held in this place (Cape Island, New Jersey), and many of the people never heard a woman or a Friend preach before. One of the ministers, a rigid Presbyterian, made all the opposition he could to our having a meeting here. He refused to let us have a church. . . . I cannot but believe that by making this public opposition he did more to collect a meeting than could have been done in any other way. . . . Our meeting was held in one of the large boarding houses; a more convenient place we did not want."

In a letter to his sister from Cedarville, after speaking of a Methodist presiding elder who had denounced Elias Hicks in very strong language, and declared that eternal torment was too good for him, he writes: "This kind of language was rather more than his congregation could bear, and from that time he was forbidden to say anything about Elias Hicks, and the zeal of his people has become so much tempered with charity that they offered their meeting house for Priscilla to hold a meeting in! There are many others whose sentiments are liberal, and whose houses are open to receive all such as declare themselves to be the friends of the gospel. It has been our lot to meet with many such in these parts, where no Friends reside."

"Priscilla tells the people she does not wish to proselyte them to any one society of people, but her mission is to call them away from all sectarian prejudices and traditions of men, to 'the Word that is nigh unto them, in their heart and in their mouth,' that they may be no longer scattered abroad, as sheep without a shepherd, on the barren mountains of an empty profession.

"At Bridgeton we made application to a Presbyterian for a house to hold a meeting in. He hesitated; was afraid we were Hicksites. I told him we were not ashamed to acknowledge that we held the doctrines advocated by Elias Hicks, though we did not call ourselves by that name. He told us if we held those views he could not give his consent. We told him we could have the court house, and invited him to lay down his prejudices and come and judge for himself. We accordingly put the court house in order and had a meeting that evening, and as many people attended as it would conveniently accommodate. . . .

"Priscilla's views are not confined within the limits of sectarianism, but to her all denominations of people are equally near and dear, being aware that a true follower of the Lamb must have that mark of discipleship by which alone they can ever be designated, namely, Love one to another."

During the period of his life, which followed this spiritual awakening, John Jackson wrote many letters to intimate Friends, mainly filled with his views and feelings concerning religious matters and his own spiritual experience. These letters were written in a fine hand on foolscap, and almost invariably covered the entire sheet, excepting the space required for the address, for envelopes had not then come into use. The language shows that he had absorbed the phraseology of the Friends' books which he had read so diligently. Later in life, when his mind had broadened and his theological opinions had taken definite shape, his manner of writing became clear, simple and forcible. An extract from a letter written by him to Catharine and George Truman, dated Darby, Twelfth month 3d, 1834, shows us that as long as seventy years ago some Friends were concerned because others cared too much for "the artificial refinements of the world."

"In the course of my experiences I have often to contend with the weaknesses of human nature that require the strengthening influence of faith and greater dedication to manifested duties to overcome. I, too, have had to mourn because the altars of the Lord are thrown down, and the image of Baal is still worshipped in the groves of Midian. For I have feared the customs, the policies, and the artificial refinements of the world are making unhappy innovations upon the simple testimonies of truth as held by the Society of Friends, and these things have appeared to my mind to call loudly upon all those who have ever known the powerful visitations of divine love to concentrate their feelings and affections in the spirit of prayer, by which they have at times been led into the current of devotion and holiest reverence, to stand in a state of entire obedience to all the requisitions of the divine will. Oh, how I have desired that I may be concerned to enquire for myself what is my duty, and what part I am required to act, in accelerating the universal triumphs of the Redeemer's kingdom, and in the exercise of that duty, be brought to the happy enjoyment and precious experience of the love of God, and know its heavenly influences to be such around my spirit as to bring me into the possession of an inheritance with the faithful and obedient children who are bound together in the unchangeable fellowship of love undefiled. . . .

"Why, oh, why, should we sacrifice the hopes and feelings that stand connected with an eternal world, for the petty indulgence of an hour, or the puerile amusements of a day? For if the soul is to flourish in endless existence how dear and how important is the doctrine of its immortality!" E. L.

FRIENDS AS CITIZENS.¹

THE Friend, in his dealings with himself in his business and his pleasures, is most scrupulous. No one, I suppose, more constantly applies to the problems of every day the strict test of conscience. The name "Quaker" is a synonym for good quality and fair measure. To tell the truth, when I see the advertisements on our bill boards, I am almost tempted to wish that Quaker honesty were not quite so notorious. If only for the pleasure of variety, I should like to see pictures of Episcopalian clergymen, with large spoons and huge bowls, eating Episcopalian Oats.

What I say to-day will, therefore, have no reference to the standard of personal morality in our Society. I wish rather to discuss the modern Quaker in some of his relations to the community. . . .

It is strange that the Society of Friends, with its glorious history, the unsurpassed nobility of its teachings, and the personal purity of its members, has so little influence on the politics of this Commonwealth. To expect Friends absolutely to control the situation is absurd. For many years we have ceased to overwhelm the State. But we do not have even a fair share in its councils—much less that predominant influence to which our principles entitle us. Think of the few men who are political forces for good in Pennsylvania. How few of those few belong to us! Is it because the forceful men of the Society do not see that they are needed? Can it be that we have no men of force—no men worthy of the great principles which we represent? Or are our critics right in asserting that true Quakerism is inconsistent with the best citizenship?

Was early Quakerism open to this charge? With the end of the seventeenth century—the end of the persecution—Quakerism became less aggressive. The intimate contact with outsiders, which had been a necessary part of its expansion, gave place to the idea of "a peculiar people." A natural increase of emphasis on peculiarities of dress and language served to widen this gap. The Society of Friends to-day lives much within itself. Is this true Quaker doctrine? Possibly active effort to gain proselytes is not now a distinguishing mark of the good Quaker. I'm not so sure of this, however. The early history of the Society, I should say, warrants a great deal of aggressive work in this direction, provided it be conducted without those aids of which we disapprove. But of this I am certain, that Quaker doctrine never gave the slightest shadow of an excuse for neglecting active Christian citizenship.

Parts of "Painful Sewel's Ancient Tome" were read to us at Westtown. There is a vast difference in having things read to you and reading them for yourselves—particularly in books like Sewel's. When I read it recently I confess that a good deal of it was news to me. I venture to say that a good deal of it would be news to you, if you read it with a view to finding out just how far good Quaker precedent would justify you in active effort to reform the world. I believe that there is little chance that any one here will go farther than George Fox did. Never before was I able to understand why Quakerism spread so rapidly. There is no claptrap about Quakerism. Its purity and peace are not the usual attendants on successful propaganda. Simplicity in dress, thought and speech draws no crowds. Non-swearing is not a word with which to conjure. Non-resistance wins no popular victories. These are conditions which, attended to most religions, would insure their defeat. How, then, did Quakerism conquer?

The indomitable will and energy of its leaders, under a gracious Providence, was half the battle. No effort was too great. Difficulties were courted. Dangers existed to be overcome. To tell George Fox, when duty drew him, that he must not visit Lancaster, insured his presence there that night. Judges, who were planning his arrest, were surprised to find him calling on them. He was in jail time and time again. Undaunted, he began the conversion of the magistrates who sent him there. In all England there was no more ardent enthusiast for legal reform. His most earnest efforts were directed towards securing a change in those statutes under which he was most frequently imprisoned. Whether in jail or out, he never hesitated to point out weaknesses in the laws of England. He carried his visits and his petitions direct to the Lord Protector himself. His faithful care over the magistrates who imprisoned him was so unrelaxing that in one instance, at least, they grew weary and tried to let him escape. They paroled him with permission to go one mile from his jail, with the fond hope that he would disappear. He had the mile measured, so that he should not pass it, and then set about converting all the people within that limit. They offered him a commission in the army. They tried to press him into military service. Finally he was legally and properly released.

The present President of the United States has some slight reputation for tenacity and strenuousness. But the hero of San Juan Hill seems slight and wavering beside the stalwart figure in leathern breeches, who, still scarred by the stones thrown by the mobs of Doncaster and Tickhill, marches from the dungeons of Derby into the prisons of Ulverstone and Whetstone, Launceston and Leicester. More than once he was beaten into insensibility; and more than once his first words, on recovery of consciousness, rebuked and converted his assailants. His case was no exception. On the accession of James II., fourteen hundred and sixty other Friends were in prison because they believed our doctrines too well to live a lie. What was the result? The Toleration Act of William and Mary. Room had to be made in the prisons for real criminals. And freedom of religion has still further expanded and extended until no country to-day is considered civilized which does not permit every sect to worship God in its own way. . . .

¹ The address of William B. Bell before the alumni of Westtown School, 1902.

We live in a different age. Life is more complex. We face some new problems, and, thanks in no small measure to George Fox and the early Friends, there is no necessity for you and me to go to prison in order that those problems may be solved. Perhaps that solution would be easier than those now open to us. But I cannot help thinking that men like George Fox would to-day be found facing the new problems and struggling with them as earnestly as ever he did of old. You can get no little amusement by imagining George Fox a member of your meeting to-day and calculating the probable results. His zeal, his power would make changes. No longer would that meeting be active without inspiration, or inspired without activity. And throughout his struggles with modern problems we should find as close an adherence to what is really meant by Quaker non-resistance as he showed when beaten by the sticks and stones of the rioters of England. . . .

What are the problems of to-day? They are so many and so vital that one hardly knows where to begin. I should say that no Friend could give a week to the study of the problem of housing the poor in our great cities, could walk through the slums and examine the tenements, without feeling an earnest desire to work in that field. Closely related and as profoundly interesting is the provision of amusement and recreation which shall supplant the saloon in the only possible way—the way by which its merits are preserved and its vices avoided. Some of this work, especially in the form of boys' clubs, has been begun by members of this Society. Allied with these problems is the cleansing and beautifying of cities with the resulting lessons and charms to city dwellers, and the wise granting of municipal franchises for rapid transit, which shall make cities of the country and country of cities. I cannot begin to name all the questions to which Friends of to-day should give their earnest attention. Once investigated, no spur will be needed for our enthusiasm. They are too vital to ourselves and to our fellows. . . .

The words that I have spoken have been worse than wasted, if I have not made clear to you that the solution of every problem I have mentioned is inextricably bound up with good citizenship. You cannot destroy the tenement and the saloon, and establish clean and beautiful and comfortable cities without clean politics. To-day the enforcement, and not the enactment, of laws should be our aim. We cannot have proper enforcement by improper men. While bad men run conferences and primaries, and good men stay at home and wonder why the country is going to the dogs, we shall continue to have scoundrels in office. "But George Fox never attended a primary," says some one. That's true. I don't believe he ever did. There weren't any. He never voted. Neither he nor his followers had a vote. But he never neglected an opportunity to improve the condition of the people. His constant letters and visits to magistrates, to Cromwell, to Charles II., and to anybody and everybody whom he thought could help, leave no possible doubts as to his ideals of good citizenship.

Last spring there died in the city of Philadelphia a man who was a worthy Quaker citizen. For many years he enjoyed the distinction of being almost the only honest man in the municipal councils of Philadelphia. Newspapers waited for him to say whether a measure was good or bad before they praised or condemned it. Honest men voted for him year after year—confident that in him they might trust. They were never disappointed. The good he did the city of Philadelphia can never be told. If demonstration were needed, in him was shown the admirable adaptability of true Quaker principles to present needs. Our modern effervescent reform needs the quiet, firm, earnest, never-ending, intelligent effort of the Friend who believes he owes that effort to his God. I speak for no party. Bad municipal government is our most crying shame. It is there that the great democratic experiment is being most severely tried. And in that field there can be but one party for Friends—the party of honesty and decency. In conferences where our principles were understood, half the corruption would sink from view at the sight of an honest Quaker face.

There is too much sneering and criticism in the world to-day. There are too many people who stand around and say: "Yes, that's a good work; it ought to succeed; but I can't join in it. I don't altogether like the way it's being done. Perhaps it will fail. Then will be the time for me to try my way of accomplishing it." Let us build, not destroy. Let us construct, not criticise. Ah, if we will but take this grand old Society of ours, with all its fine traditions, its splendid principles, its noble heroes of the past, and infuse it with the force and fire of its founders and tear from it the sham and prejudice of to-day, I tell you there will be no greater, no more glorious civilizing power under heaven than this same Society of Friends.

It may be laid down as a position which will seldom deceive, that when a man cannot bear his own company there is something wrong.—[Dr. S. Johnson.]

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 14.
THE BOOK OF ACTS.

GOLDEN TEXT.—If this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to naught; but if it be of God ye cannot overthrow it.—Acts, v., 38, 39.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, xvi., 10-17; iv., 1-12; xv., 5-12.

THERE is practical unanimity among scholars in the belief that the third gospel and the book of Acts are from the same hand. The similar dedications to Theophilus and the perfect likeness of style and ideas are felt to be conclusive in this matter. But the further question as to whether this author was or was not one of Paul's companions on his missionary journeys is not so easily disposed of. Tradition assigns the authorship of these two books to Luke; and the name Luke is repeatedly mentioned as one of Paul's fellow-workers. In the epistle to the Colossians (iv., 14), written from Rome about 60 A.D., Paul writes, "Luke, the beloved physician, and Demas, salute you." In the epistle to Philemon (i., 24), Luke is mentioned among his fellow-laborers. And in 2 Timothy (iv., 11), written like the others from Rome, the statement is, "Only Luke is with me." Even though these epistles, especially that to Timothy, are of doubtful authenticity, yet they show that Luke is one of the names early associated with Paul's ministry. The coincidence of the ancient tradition that the Acts was written by one having the rather uncommon name of Luke, with the seeming fact of the presence of a Luke among Paul's immediate disciples, creates at least a probability that these two Lukes were one. But the most important piece of evidence that the Acts was written by one of Paul's company is to be found in what are called the "we" passages. These are four passages, all giving accounts of journeys, in which the author abruptly changes from the third person to the first, speaking for a time as one who relates experiences in which he bore a part. These "we" passages (Acts xvi., 10-17; xx., 5-16; xxi., 1-18; xxvii., 1 to xxviii., 16) are variously explained. Some believe that the author makes use of the first person here merely for the sake of greater vividness, and that he actually had a part in other events as well. Others think that he substitutes "we" for "they" in describing those events in which he was actually present. Still others introduce a variation, claiming that the author kept a diary or journal of these travels, and in writing his history at a later time he has at these four points quoted from his journal. All these explanations agree in the assumption that the writer who says "we" is the author of the whole book. But the opposite view is also held. It is claimed that the author of the book, as we have it, is quite another person from the companion of Paul who uses the first person. The "we" passages according to this theory are extracts from the sources used by the author. Other parts of the book are also regarded as taken from earlier sources. The chapters dealing with the first journey of Paul are looked upon by some as an independent narrative which has been incorporated in the book.

The first twelve chapters differ from the rest of the book very widely in the special interest before the mind of the author. This first section is chiefly interested in the group of apostles which had followed Jesus, and in the church at Jerusalem which grew up about them. Peter is the central figure; Paul is introduced, indeed, and his conversion is related, but he is altogether secondary. From the thirteenth chapter on, all this is reversed. Paul is the hero of the tale. The other apostles sink into comparative insignificance, while the church at Jerusalem is regarded with little consideration, if not with active hostility. From these and other considerations some infer that there was a feud in the infant church between the followers of Paul and those of the church at Jerusalem. Certainly considerable differences in attitude toward "the Law" made themselves manifest. The book of Acts, according to those who magnify these differences into an actual division, was written with intent to harmonize the two factions, giving large credit to the mother church for its early faithfulness, large credit to Paul for his great work, and tending to gloss over matters of difference. Those of opposite view claim that Luke is "a historian of the first class," and that the differences indicated in the text are, due to actual differences in the relative importance of things. The interest of the historian of early Christianity must be with the apostles at Jerusalem in the first years after Jesus, and with Paul in the later years. These are the various views concerning the book of Acts. It is not our province to even try to reach final conclusions in this matter. In any case we have to do with a most valuable history. The relations of this history with the epistles must be reserved for succeeding lessons.

A CORRESPONDENT is troubled by our statement that over-eating kills people. She knows people who are suffering for lack of proper food, and enough of it. They are not poor, but have ideas about dieting which are pernicious. We know such people, and they are to be pitied. Something of everything and not too much of anything, the rule of an eminent Frenchman, is a good one.—[Christian Register.]

☪☪

BELIEVE that you are a child of God, placed here amid these natural and social relations that you may perfect yourself in mind and heart and character, both for your own and others' sake, and to fit yourself for your ultimate heritage of immortality. Do this, and your life will acquire dignity, character, and peace.—[Selected.]

☪☪

WE are farthest away from God when we cannot perceive him in our fellow-beings. The mirror of human nature is sadly blurred; but in the meaneast and wickedest there are tokens of the divine childhood, occasional flashes of the Father's image through innumerable distortions. It is for us to show a clear reflection of his life in our own lives before we judge others.—[Lucy Larcom.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.
 BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, FOURTH MONTH 11, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

RACE PREJUDICE.

NEARLY forty years ago an abstract sense of human justice, stirred into activity by the abuses of years of slavery, conferred upon a people concretely unfitted for such a charge, the rights and privileges of citizenship, and the responsibilities incident to being a free people. The experiment has not been a great success and thoughtful people have no trouble in seeing why it has not.

Those who have never been able to free themselves from the notion that the plan of creation provided that the white men should be lords of the soil, and a black skin was the mark of a subject people, feel that the characteristic incapacity of the black race for business and an intelligent participation in government proves the truth of their views concerning the inequality of races, and leads to criticism of the President's course in making personal fitness rather than color the basis of government appointments.

A very considerable element of our people feel that as we incautiously surrendered a share of political power to what should have been kept a subject race, we must hold fast to what now remains to us,—our social superiority. Men and women holding this view would prefer that the President should not dine with Booker T. Washington.

Whoever will look sanely at the matter must agree that the fifteenth amendment was not necessarily unwise. It was ill-timed. We were in such haste to make atonement for the sin which had so long been laid at our doors, that we did not wait for the preparing hand of time, and the condition of personal freedom, to make ready a race just emerged from primeval barbarism and ground under the iron heel of oppression, for the great responsibilities involved in the gift of franchise.

Our present race problem is a weighty one. A modern sociologist of marked ability decides that there is no right way out of the situation into which we have plunged ourselves with regard to the black man. Consistent Christians must dissent from this view. There is a right way out of every maze of our own making. The obvious means to apply to find it in this case seem to be a larger charity for a race to whom prior to the Civil War so little had been given, and whose environment since that time has been generally a bar to progress, and more patience—the work of four decades cannot overcome the racial tendencies of centuries—more effort to educate and enlighten the race and make the black man fit for his responsibilities. As an aid in pursuing this policy of patience and effort, a genuine belief in the principle that “race, color, and previous condition of servitude,” are neither political nor social barriers, is a good thing; and the habit of measuring men by truer standards of ethical, political, and social law will help us meet the race question without prejudice along the color line.

THE ESSENTIAL THING.

A WRITER in a religious periodical states that he pounded this question in a young ladies' boarding school: “Suppose all the Bible must be destroyed excepting ten chapters, and you had the selecting of the only ten chapters that could be preserved, what would your ten chapters be?” He received forty-three written answers and in commenting on these the writer was surprised and troubled to find that “twenty-eight made no mention of the birth of Christ; sixteen, none of his death; eighteen, none of his resurrection; and thirty, none of his ascension.”

What is the essential thing in the Bible record of Jesus of Nazareth? Is it his birth in Bethlehem, his death on Calvary, his reappearance in the presence of his disciples, or the Divinity of his life and the Truth of his message? Surrounded by ignorance and jealousy his death was the inevitable result of obedience to his Father's will. Blood is the emblem of life, and the “blood of Christ that cleanseth from all sin,” is not the human blood that was shed on Calvary, but the life or spirit of Christ doing its work in the hearts of men.

IN his inaugural address on the 6th instant, John Weaver, the new Mayor of Philadelphia, promised that he will hold his office as a public trust, doing his utmost to see that the city receives full value for every dollar expended, and that blackmail and extortion are rooted out and punished. He also purposes that the city shall hold on to the water works, that the schools shall be taken out of politics, and that grade crossings shall be abolished. If he is faithful in the performance of these promises Philadelphia will have a cleaner and stronger municipal government than it has enjoyed for many years. His last official work as District Attorney gives the friends of good government reason to be hopeful concerning his administration. He secured the conviction of four school directors on the charge of having conspired to extort money from persons seeking positions as teachers, and they are now in Moyamensing jail pending a motion for a new trial.

BIRTHS.

LIPPINCOTT.—At Atlantic City, N. J., Third month 10, 1903, to John Haines and Alice Needles Lippincott, a daughter, who is named Helen Needles Lippincott.

NOBLE.—At La Junta, Colorado, to Charles M. and Ellen H. T. Noble, on Fourth month 1st, 1903, a daughter who has been named Mary Noble.

ROWLAND.—Fourth month 5th, 1903, at Philadelphia, to William C. and Amy P. M. Rowland, a son who is named William Chapman Rowland, Jr.

MARRIAGES.

KOONS—SMITH.—At the home of the bride's parents, Gideon and Martha J. Smith, near Mt. Union, Carroll county, Md., by Friends' ceremony, Martin L. Koons and Mary Edith Smith, the latter a member of Pipe Creek Monthly Meeting.

DEATHS.

CHALFANT.—At his home in Kennett Square, Pa., on the 27th of Third month, 1903, William Chalfant, in his 89th year; a life-long member of Kennett Monthly Meeting.

Though not active in the business of the meeting it always had his deep interest, and he was missed when not in his usual seat. He was an invalid for several years, always patient and uncomplaining, and considerate of those who had the care of him.

A devoted wife, one daughter, and six sons survive him. He was very successful in business, and did much for the improvement of the town in which he resided. He was a director of the First National Bank of West Chester from its organization in 1854 till his death. His associates there say of him: "In all his relations with his fellow-members of the Board and officials of the Bank he was kind, courteous, and considerate. His wise counsel and kindly interest made him a personal friend of all. We appreciated his worth while with us. We have but the most pleasant recollections of him. His memory will always be cherished by us. His example is to be emulated in all walks of life." * * *

DAVIS.—At Germantown, Pa., on Third month 23d, 1903, Helen C., wife of R. K. Davis, and daughter of Henry A. and Drusilla M. Noble.

HANCOCK.—At his home in Merion, Pa., Third month 22d, 1903, George W. Hancock, aged 66 years; a member of Race Street Monthly Meeting of Friends, Philadelphia.

He was for many years a member of the Board of Managers of Swarthmore College. He was also a member of Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee having care of the Friends' Home, and one of the managers of the Home for Aged and Infirm Colored People in Philadelphia. Aside from his activities in the Society of Friends he was prominent in business circles, being at one time President of the Citizens' Trust Company and of the Real Estate Exchange, of Philadelphia.

JACKSON.—On the 28th of Third month, 1903, at her home near Jordan's, White Sulphur Springs, Va., Mary E. Jackson, wife of the late J. Fenton Jackson, a much esteemed member of Hopewell Particular and Monthly Meetings, aged 84 years, 6 months and 17 days.

She is survived by one son and two daughters who are now in the meridian of life, some of her children having passed on before her. She also leaves 17 living grandchildren and 18 great grandchildren a few of both having died in infancy.

She became a member with Friends by conviction some years after the death of her husband, and although unable to attend meeting much of the time she was much beloved by her relatives, friends and neighbors. It is thought the change was hastened in consequence of a fall she had in the latter part of winter, from the effects of which she did not seem to rally. D.

LACEY.—On Third month 2d, 1903, at Wrightstown, Pa., Edwin Lacey, aged 73 years; a member of Wrightstown Monthly Meeting.

LANG.—At Kennett Square, Pa., on the 20th of Second month, 1903, Susanna P. Lang, in her 73d year; a member of Kennett Monthly Meeting.

LEWIS.—At her home in Fendleton, Ind., Third month 26th, 1903, Elizabeth M., wife of Joseph B. Lewis, aged 76 years; a member of Fall Creek Monthly Meeting.

She was the daughter of the late Joseph B. and Elizabeth Moore Fussell. She was born in Maryland, but her parents moved to Pennsylvania when she was quite young; her girlhood was spent in and near Philadelphia, and all her life she looked back with a loving remembrance to her early home. In 1846 she removed with her parents, two sisters, and one brother, to Fall Creek township, Madison Co., Indiana, where she has since resided.

In 1853 she was married to Joseph B. Lewis, who survives to mourn her loss. Their mutual devotion through this long companionship of almost half a century, has been a beautiful and touching lesson to their many friends. Four children were born of this union—one died in infancy—three were spared to repay by their loving care and filial devotion all that she had bestowed on them in childhood.

Thus ends a beautiful life which for three score and ten years shed sunshine and brightness on all who came within the circle of her influence; then for a few short years clouds obscured the light, but now she has passed onward into that blessed day, where there is no more darkness, and where we trust she is with the many dear ones who have gone before her to the spirit land.

Hers was a particularly genial nature; being unusually gifted with conversational powers, it was a delight to be in her society; few persons have had so wide a circle of warm and true friends. She was hospitality itself and all who came received a loving welcome.

All her life the desire to be doing something for others was a leading characteristic, and when health failed and she could no longer do things herself, she still was thinking and planning how to give pleasure to her friends, and especially to the little ones, who always appealed to her loving heart, and she was never happier than when doing for and giving to children.

She was unusually gifted intellectually and earlier in life many poetical gems flowed from her ready pen, but her retiring nature shrank from publicity, and only a few of them ever appeared in print.

One of the greatest pleasures of her life came from her love of flowers, and so long as she was able to care for them, her success in raising them was remarkable. Almost her last conscious words, when on her birthday some flowers were given her, were "Beautiful! beautiful!"

"Farewell! A little time and we

Who knew thee well, and loved thee here,

One after one shall follow thee

As pilgrims through the gate of fear

Which opens on eternity.

All lovely things by thee beloved

Shall whisper to our hearts of thee,

And all thou lovest of earth and sky

Seem sacred to thy memory." S. R. L.

LUKENS.—In Philadelphia, Third month 22nd, 1903, Elizabeth Lukens, widow of Comly L. Lukens, in the 82d year of her age.

Her funeral was largely attended, and several brief testimonies were born to her worth. Truly she "ate not of the bread of idleness, but looked well after the affairs of her household."

PENNOCK.—At Toledo, Ohio, Third month 3d, 1903, Lydia, widow of Hadley Pennock, daughter of Mahlon and Rebecca (Wilson) Phillips, in the 90th year of her age.

STABLER.—At Aiken, South Carolina, Third month 30th, 1903, Charles M. Stabler, of George School, Pa., in his 30th year. Interment at Friends' Meeting-house, Sandy Spring, Maryland, on the 3d instant.

(Fuller notice will be published later.)

TUDOR.—Passed away, Fourth month 1st, 1903, Lewis Tudor, at his late residence, Avondale, Pa.

WEBSTER.—On Fourth month 2d, 1903, Charles E. Webster, son of Harris and Mary E. Webster, in his 23d year.

CHARLES THOMPSON.

Charles Thompson, of Morland, near Penrith, passed away Second month 21st, at the age of 83. He was an earnest temperance reformer, and one of the founders of the United Kingdom Alliance. He was a staunch upholder of conservative Quakerism, a man of tender religious spirit, and also one who sympathized with liberal thought in religious matters. His business life was spent in Manchester, where he was the first Friend to become a magistrate. Difficulties that were raised about his orthodoxy, thirty years ago, prevented him from finding the scope he would have desired for Christian activity in the meeting there. On giving up business he retired to Morland, and became a magistrate in the county of Westmorland, being much the poorest man on the Bench. He died, the only surviving member of Morland Meeting, in the ancestral home which had been occupied by five successive generations of his family. He had many trials, but the blessing promised to "him that overcometh" rises to the mind in thinking of his career.—[British Friend.]

SOCIETY NOTES.

JOEL BORTON, of Woodstown, N. J., has received a minute from his monthly meeting to visit the Nebraska Half-Yearly Meeting, to be held at Lincoln, Nebraska, on the 27th instant. His western trip also has the sanction of the Committee of Twenty-two for the Advancement of Friends' Principles, and he will hold conferences with Friends, or attend meetings, at Pittsburg, Chicago, and other intermediate points as way opens.

The time of holding West Branch Monthly Meeting at Grampian, Pa., has been from the fourth Fifth-day in each month at 11 a. m. to the first First-day at 3 p. m.

Benjamin F. Battin, of Swarthmore, Pa., attended the indulged meeting at Doylestown, Pa., on the 5th instant and spoke very acceptably. There were more men in attendance than women, which is unusual for this meeting.

Jesse H. Holmes, of Swarthmore, Pa., visited the Lansdowne meeting and First-day school on the 5th instant. To the pupils of the school he gave a practical talk on what they owe to the world. In the meeting he drew a clear distinction between facts that depend upon witnesses for their authenticity and the eternal truths of God which meet the witness within the individual heart. His words were inspiring and encouraging.

A MEMORIAL OF APPRECIATION.

The following memorial was approved by West Branch Monthly Meeting of Friends, held at Grampian, Pa., and copies of it were sent to United States Senators Beveridge and Hoar.

We feel that it is right and fitting that we should recognize the tribute to the steadfast principles of peace which our Society has always held, conveyed in the clause in the bill passed by the late Congress, called the Militia bill, exempting Friends and other members of peace-loving societies from military service.

Feeling, therefore, that this is one of the most far-reaching steps ever taken, recognizing as it does, not only that a large and reputable class of thinking people believe that war is wrong, but also the justice of this belief, in so far as their own actions are concerned, we wish to convey to those who were instrumental in its passage our feeling of satisfaction in its justice and rightness.

Signed on behalf of West Branch Monthly Meeting, Third month 26th, 1903.

GEORGE T. UNDERWOOD, } Clerks.
ANNIE E. WAY, }

A LETTER FROM ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.

*Steamer Kaiserin Maria Theresia, Off Beyrout, Coast of Syria.
Third month 4th, 1903.*

EDITORS FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

ON Second month 9th, three weeks ago day before yesterday, we left the pier at Hoboken, about 9 a. m. We were to have sailed on Seventh-day, the 7th, but delay in the receipt of the steamer's supply of coal detained us two days, somewhat to our inconvenience, as we left home on Sixth-day to spend the one night in New York, so as to be sure to be in time next morning.

Our party consists of seventeen and what may be called our immediate party of ten: President Swain and wife, James Boyd, wife and son, (Elizabeth Longstreth Boyd, a daughter of M. Fisher Longstreth), J. Dundas Lippincott, of Philadelphia, my wife, two daughters, and myself. The other seven are the family and friends of Hunter Brooke of Philadelphia, who started with us and are associated in all our wanderings.

When I left home I had not intended to write any letters, except such as are necessary, as the prospect of change from a somewhat large correspondence was inviting, and promised to be restful. But three weeks on the ocean and the Mediterranean have proven greatly restful, and I have concluded to send some rough notes of our travel to the INTELLIGENCER so that some friends who have not taken the trip may share our experiences in some slight measure, especially as the trip is somewhat out of the beaten line of travel and among scenes which are new to me and replete with historic and pre-historic interest.

We passed quarantine and neared the bar before 11 o'clock, but the tide was low and as a stiff north-west wind was blowing, we were delayed a couple of hours more, so it was early afternoon when we crossed, and perhaps four o'clock when we were fairly at sea. The high wind was directly behind us, so the sensation was almost that of no wind, although the sea was rough. The ship rode steadily—"as steady as a church"—an unknown elderly gentleman said to me, whom I at once put down as a clergyman, and who led the services on our first Sabbath out.

The weather was quite cold but with thick clothing not uncomfortable; and so passed our first day and night. The next morning, however, we arose to find the ship rolling greatly and large numbers of the passengers more or less seasick, with plenty of room at the tables. This roughness and rolling of the steamer continued for two or three days longer, but after two days the temperature gradually softened, and the seas grew smoother. Our immediate party almost entirely escaped seasickness, and for the one week which elapsed before arriving at Funchal, Madeira, we had but the usual sea experiences, old to those who have often crossed the ocean, but in another sense always new and more restful than almost any other change attainable.

The mountain of Madeira was plainly in sight when we rose on Second-day, the 16th inst., and most interesting it was as we drew near to see in our February the smiling vineyards, and the almost tropical verdure. We spent the day surrounded by oranges, lemons and bananas, on the trees, and a vast variety of flowers. Oxen dragged us in sledged over the smoothly paved streets, wheels being scarcely used because of the mountain side on which the town of Funchal is builded. The day was charming, the sky cloudless, the temperature warm yet bracing, and pleasant either in sun or shade, such a day as comes to us at rare intervals in our early June or October. Late that evening we left Funchal behind us, its hundreds of lights on the side of the mountain showing for many miles as we steamed in the direction of Gibraltar.

Third-day was a beautiful day with smooth seas, and we retired that night expecting to come in sight of Gibraltar early next morning, and land in the forenoon. But in the night we ran into a gale, and Fourth-day morning no land was in sight, but a very rough sea was on and the spray dashed all over the steamer even in great sheets over the Captain's bridge, where, with any of my party I have access during the voyage because we occupy his rooms. From his protected chart room, where I stood with some of my party, it was indeed a wild scene, fully compensating for the attendant delay and discomforts. The gale increased as at noon we drew near Gibraltar, and even in the protected harbor landing in the tenders was so inconvenient that only a portion of the passengers went ashore that afternoon. The great rock of Gibraltar the one impregnable fortress of the world, is so familiar by picture and description that any account of it in these hasty notes is quite unnecessary.

We were booked next day, the 19th, for a railroad ride to Granada, 230 miles, to view the Alhambra, known to Americans largely through Irving's graphic descriptions, and the most famous specimen of Moorish art extant. We took breakfast at 5.30, and started in the darkness in a steam tender, and over waters rough enough to be quite uncomfortable, even if not dangerous, to Algeciras, on the bay opposite Gibraltar, where in due time we landed safely and took the train. As day came on the weather cleared beautifully, and we had a fine railroad ride among scenery, new to perhaps all of us, in the Andalusian Mountains.

We arrived at Granada at three o'clock, a little late, and were driven (250 or more) to the Alhambra. Here, because of the great number, and the short time, we were subject to uncomfortable, almost dangerous crowding at the entrance, and when finally admitted, had but a short time to examine the wonderful beauties of the palace. We afterwards wandered through the strange Spanish town to the hotel, where we dined, and finally left at ten o'clock, instead of seven. We were scheduled to arrive at the ship at midnight, but we did not arrive till 5.30 next morning after a night of great discomfort, all of us sitting up all night, but glad to get back on any terms. Now that the visit is over, we remember with pleasure the grand scenery of the Spanish mountains and the strongly foreign aspect of Granada, with the crowds gathered in the streets to look at the large company of Americans.

Our next stopping place after Gibraltar finally disappeared in our stern was Algiers, in which picturesque city we spent a pleasant half-day, Seventh-day, Second month 21st. Perhaps in no city I have ever visited are such varied and picturesque costumes to be seen on the streets, and the Arab quarter of the town, which we visited, in its filth and squalor, remain with us yet, an unsavory memory.

We sailed at 10 o'clock that night, and First-day, Washington's birthday, we spent at sea on our way to Malta, where we arrived in the forenoon on the 23d instant. I was surprised to find such a population on the island of Malta, about 160,000. To me it was chiefly interesting as the supposed "Melita" where St. Paul was shipwrecked, as graphically described in the 27th and 28th chapters of Acts.

We spent the afternoon mostly wandering in the streets. The festival of the Mardi Gras was going on, and our progress was made both amusing and uncomfortable by the grotesque crowds which pelted us with sugar plums, and made us glad to return to the ship after visiting a few points of greatest interest. We sailed that night, this time for one of the chief points of interest in all our journey, even Athens, and passing through the Greek Archipelago, we cast anchor just off the sea port of Piræus on Fourth-day morning, Second month 25th, landed in small boats drawn by tenders, and took the train at once to the historic city. At this point we were greatly favored, by pre-arrangement, to be met by the sister of one of our immediate party, Harriet A. Boyd. This young woman is well known in Philadelphia and elsewhere as one of the best informed and most active among the young archaeologists of the day. She has been engaged at intervals, for some years, in the superintendence of excavations of ancient cities, more especially in the island of Crete, but she has a thorough acquaintance with Athens and all its points of interest. She met us on arrival and was with us constantly during our two days' stay, as leader and guide, enabling us, under her experienced and most skilled direction to accomplish far more of essential interest than would have been possible under less favored circumstances. Instead of returning to the ship that night with the company, we stayed at the hotel, and thereby saved much time and made the best use of it.

In a hastily penciled sketch like this, it is of course impossible to even enter upon a description of Athens, but all who read this must realize we appreciated every moment that we were on grandly historic and classic ground, and need I add that the Acropolis and Parthenon were eagerly watched by us, first in the distance from the ship, in the early morning of arrival, then in detail on two visits, and again towards evening of the 26th, as it receded from our view, on the deck of the departing steamer. I had looked forward to Athens for years, but the realities of the visit exceeded all anticipation, largely because of the knowledge, care and kindly attentions of Harriet A. Boyd.

I would not omit mention of two most interesting points in full view from the Parthenon: the hill of Pnyx, where is situated a natural rock rostrum, from which Demosthenes and other great Greek orators addressed the people, and the Arcopagus, better known as the Hill of Mars, where the great apostle to the Gentiles preached his great sermon to Athens and the ages.

Constantinople next! the capital and chief city of the Ottoman empire, where the flag of the crescent and the star holds sway, at least for the present. In the early morning of the 27th, we reached the narrow passage of the Dardanelles separating the two continents of Europe and Asia, and I gazed for the first time upon the latter.

We steamed all day on the Dardanelles and the Sea of Marmora, and in the late afternoon Constantinople came in sight, its towers and minarets presenting an imposing and picturesque sight in the light of the setting sun. Here for the first time we came directly to the pier, and as we drew slowly to its side, a remarkable sight presented. Several thousands of Turks were crowded along the wharves and streets to see our arrival, and the scene, while not to be described, was of surpassing interest to our ship's company, as our arrival was to them. We could not land that night till dark, when it was not safe to do so. Our Consul, General Dickerson, spent the evening on board, and gave us advice concerning the use of our time next day, the only whole day we would have in Constantinople. It was a full and busy day, but again not to be described in such a sketch as this. Our party of seventeen were under the care of one of the best of guides, and in five carriages under his direction, we drove rapidly from point to point, starting at Galata, the English quarter, where our ship lay, and across the bridge over the Golden Horn to Stamboul or the city proper, where we spent our time, partly among the wonderful bazaars, and partly in the world-renowned mosques, the Treasury, etc., etc.

The Mosque of Santa Sophia, the House of Divine Wisdom, is the most famous of Constantinople's mosques. When Justinian finished and first entered it, he ran from the porticoes to the pulpit with outstretched arms, crying, "Solomon, I have surpassed thee," and it was then the most magnificently decorated temple that had ever stood upon the earth. More than one volume has been entirely devoted to a description of this mosque, and less than a volume would not suffice. But its ancient grandeur has largely gone, and while St. Peter's at Rome, and St. Mark's at Venice have been accumulating stores of pious wealth for centuries, Santa Sophia has been ransacked by repeated pillages, and reduced to the puritan plainness of Moslem worship. We stood outside awaiting the call to prayer from the minarets, and after it sounded, as it does five times every day, we passed inside and saw the interior, and witnessed the forms of the Moslem worship which were going on.

But as with us as we saw in this busy day of the great buildings and palaces, the streets after all were the chief objects of interest. In an hour, crossing the bridge which spans the Golden Horn, one may see pass almost every nationality, adventurers apparently from every clime, priests, sailors, soldiers, merchants, few women, but all natives, more or less veiled, and some of the most picturesque costumes.

Next morning we had a few hours, and sailed in the early afternoon. As we left the pier a wonderful scene presented, even far surpassing that on our arrival. An immense crowd watched our departure, variously estimated at from ten to twenty thousand in numbers, closely packed, and nearly all wearing the red fezes which predominate here. It was a sight not to be forgotten by those who witnessed it. We steamed up the narrow Bosphorus, Europe on the left, Asia on the right, a dozen miles or more to the Black Sea, and after a short sail upon its waters, turned and retraced our course, pausing for a short time to land Consul Dickerson and his party on a tender, then we saw Constantinople with its minarets, domes, palaces, its indescribable squalor and misery fade slowly out of sight as we passed again into the Sea of Marmora. It seemed a coincidence that just as the city disappeared from our view, I saw for the first time the new moon in a cloudless sky, and beneath it the bright evening star, forming the emblem of Turkey—the crescent and the star.

We arrived about 11 a. m. at Smyrna, the most ancient of cities. Little of special interest, however, attaches to Smyrna other than its bazaars; but it is the entrance to Ephesus, fifty miles away, which has such surpassing interest, being the location of the famed Temple of Diana, one of the seven wonders of the world, but far more the home of the tentmaker Paul, and also where John spent the rest of his life after his release from Patmos, which island we caught a glimpse of early yesterday as we passed. I omitted to mention our fine view of the island of Rhodes yesterday, the captain steaming close to it to afford a look at the town, and the supposed site of the Colossus of Rhodes, also one of the seven wonders of the world. Cyprus we passed early this morning, too early for a view.

The above letter written at one sitting almost from memory, as I have kept no notes, is necessarily most incomplete. Many things are omitted which perhaps would be of more interest than some of those stated. If opportunity and inclination again present themselves together, I may write again, but such may not prove to be the case. To-morrow we land at Jaffa (Joppa), the gateway to Palestine, and in the early evening we hope to enter Jerusalem.

ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.

THE JUVENILE COURT IN DELAWARE COUNTY, PA.

From a paper read by Clara B. Miller, of Media, Pa., before the spring convention of the Delaware County Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

It has seemed very fitting that Delaware County should take the initiative in such an important work as that of the Juvenile Court, and that the call for organized effort should have come from the county town. The cities of Philadelphia and Harrisburg appointed probation officers before we did, but we can justly claim the first House of Detention in the State, and the first work done under care of a county committee.

History shows that here was the first session of court, the first petit and grand jury, the first marriage ceremony and one of the first, if not the first, house for Divine worship in the State. Why should we not be first in establishing Juvenile Court? Here Penn's holy experiment first found its embodiment, and here and now, after two hundred years, we begin another experiment which in its possibilities promises to be as holy as the one of two centuries ago.

When you hear how many children have found their way to the Juvenile Court of the country (and these represent possibly one-eighth of those who should be under probationary treatment) you will ask yourselves, What can we do to lessen this number? What can I individually do to save one child?

True, most of the cases come from Chester. But can we not extend a helping hand to the erring and neglected waifs there, remembering those in bonds as if bound with them? Then there are subjects for this court right here in our own town if you take the trouble to look them up.

Some of you were present at a meeting held in Media Woman's Club room on March 19th last, when a county organization was effected. The committee of seven appointed that day, has added four to its number, and has met regularly on the second Wednesday of each month, and oftener if unusual business demanded.

It took some time to formulate plans for county work, so that it was not till the 23d of June that the House of Detention, 307 Crosby Street, was opened, and the court's officer, Miss Brewer, whom we had recommended, took up her residence there. Part of the house we sub-let to a woman, who takes care of the children who may be in the house, during Miss Brewer's absence. Three rooms of this house are all we have so far needed.

Juvenile Court had been held some months before the appointment of our officer. I find from her reports, together with the Court Records, that there have been sixty-seven children in the Court since its organization. Of these 33 are dependents, 29 delinquents and 5 incorrigible. This does not adequately represent the whole number under Miss Brewer's care, for her advice and assistance have been sought by many who have no legal claim upon her services, but which she is glad to render.

Four children was the greatest number in our home at one time. For two months last summer we had two little girls whose mother was awaiting trial in the county jail. We found a permanent home for these with an aunt near Scranton. Others have been placed in families or returned to their own homes under care of our officer, who is kept busily occupied in looking after these children, and often their parents need attention too. Several were sent to institutions for destitute children, care being taken to respect their religious affiliations.

Nine were sent to the House of Refuge, six of these at their parents' own request. Under the new law, unworthy parents will find it more difficult to get their children in a reformatory for no graver offense than being troublesome. It has been found that many children have been committed to such institutions until they are old enough to earn money, and then the parents are anxious to receive them again. Of the delinquents most of them were arrested for larceny, three for assault and battery, five for malicious mischief. Some months ago, six boys were arrested for stealing old iron. Upon examination it was found that one was older in crime than the others, and was giving an object lesson upon fruitful soil. He was sent to the House of Refuge. The others were remanded to their homes, under Miss Brewer's care. She has reported them from time to time as attending school, where their teachers say they are doing well. We aim to keep watch of each case, and under the new laws, wherever Judges are required to appoint boards of visitation, this matter will be most strictly attended to.

Of the 67 children, none have been returned to the Court a second time. I find in one instance, disposition was deferred till the next court, but the names do not appear again on the records. Of the dependent only one has given us any anxiety as to her future. She has been placed in a family on two occasions and been returned twice to us. Unfortunately for her, the last time was after the old act had been decided unconstitutional, and as there was no Juvenile Court we could do nothing but send her to the county home. As she is lacking in mental grasp and deficient in moral sense it becomes one of those pitiable cases that appeal to our sympathies while we are unable to see just what disposition to make of the subject.

As you come to know the children which this law aims to reach, and consider the influences to which they are subjected, you see the binding thrall of heredity and the unerring law of the principle of sowing and reaping. Then, too, comes the realizing sense of the fact that misery, vice, degradation and crime are inseparably interwoven, and that the demon of strong drink is the most powerful factor in the production of the world's misery and crime. And so our hearts are touched with unmitigated pity for the helpless little ones, responsible in no way for their presence and environment, and often defrauded before their birth of all the elements that go to make upright character.

It is in behalf of just such children, and in the interest of better homes that I stand before you to-day. "It is not the will of our heavenly Father that one of these little ones should perish. May it be ours to help towards the fulfillment of his beneficent purpose."

Our expenses for the eight months ending February 23d, were $522.29. This includes officer's salary, rent of house, expenses incidental to furnishing our rooms, boarding of children, railroad and street car fares, the winter's coal and some other necessary expenditures. Three months ago we sought and obtained a pass for our officer and children over the car lines centering in Chester. This will be continued when we resume work. The superintendent of the traction company is in warm sympathy with our work, and says we should extend our care to the girls and young women who frequent the streets of Chester in the evenings.

Miss Brewer wrote me last month that many had expressed regret that the good work of the Juvenile Court should be obliged to halt "for one instant." She says the officials have appreciated her help and been very kind to her. She has never heard a word expressed against the work; only words of praise.

The Mayor of Chester says, "The House of Detention has been of great benefit to the executive department of Chester in a great many instances, as a place to put children of tender age rather than in the city lockup. I hope the institution may be a permanent one. Miss Brewer has been of great service on numerous occasions, standing ready at any and all times to aid us as best she could, and we feel indebted to her for the interest she has taken."

Organizations and benevolently inclined people have helped us, and to all we extend our grateful thanks. Had the 29 children arrested for delinquency been tried in the same old way, at a cost of, say $20 each to the county, and this does not include jail expenses, the whole would have amounted to $580, more than the whole expense of maintaining our home with all the attending expenses I have enumerated, all at no expense to the county. So you see while it is a part of wisdom and humanity to protect and rescue the children, it is far less expensive to take care of them by the Juvenile Court system than to try their cases in the old way and then punish them afterwards.

But the saving in dollars and cents is of but little value in comparison with the saving of 67 children from a possible life of crime and putting them in the way of reaching self-respecting manhood and womanhood. Phillips Brooks said: "He who helps a child helps humanity with an immediateness which no other help given to human creatures in any other stage of human life can possibly give again."

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

WEST PHILADELPHIA.—The regular meeting of the Junior Young Friends was held at the home of Thomas Scott, on Second-day evening, Third month 20th.

The exercises were opened by a recitation, "The Old School Days," given by Mary Dunham, and a talk by John Carver. Elizabeth Gaunt recited a story telling the evils of card playing. Ellis Bacon read a selection from "The Quaker" explaining the true belief as Elias Hicks saw it. The literary program completed, the rest of the evening was taken up by games.

We had a large attendance and hope to see a still larger number at our next meeting. W. W.

BYBERRY, PA.—The last session was held at Byberry Meeting-house on First-day afternoon, the 5th instant.

A communication from the "Committee for the Advancement of Association Work" was read and the Executive Committee requested to assist the secretary in answering the same. After a live discussion of subjects of local interest, the program of the afternoon was taken up. It being a Longfellow meeting, a paper on the life and writings of Longfellow was prepared and given by Wm. P. Bonner, which, while a condensation of knowledge gained by wide reading and research, yet was made still more interesting by the writer's familiarity with the scenes portrayed in the poet's works, he having lately made a tour embracing these points of interest. This excellent paper was followed by a recitation by Miriam Tomlinson, entitled "Flowers," one of Longfellow's beautiful but lesser known poems. Anna B. Hawkins read "An April Day," which was particularly appropriate at this time. Shepherd Cleaver recited "The Burial of Minnikink," an Indian legend far less famed than "Hiawatha." "Rain in Summer" was then read by Elizabeth P. Bonner, after which a number of beautiful sentiments taken from Longfellow's writings were given by the members. This literary session was an exceptional one and was felt to be very interesting and profitable, lending variety to the ordinary program. A. C.

NEWTOWN, PA.—The Friends' Association met at the home of William and Lettie W. Eyre, on the 2d instant.

Abbie B. Rice, in a paper, answered the question "What is the World's Outlook for Peace?" She spoke hopefully of the future and thought the outlook for peace through arbitration was growing more hopeful, and gave some extracts from a paper read by Howard M. Jenkins at the Chautauqua Conference. "What suggestions can be given that will make the meetings of our Association of more practical value?" was answered by Sarah F. Cary. Her requirements seemed to be that we should be more prompt and faithful to duty, and be careful to practice in our homes the beautiful precepts that we preach. A supplementary comment was made by one of the members, advising bearing in mind the report of the Executive Committee for the business of the next meeting and giving the substance to be treated some thought in the interval. William Smith, representing the Discipline Committee, chose from the queries, "Are Friends careful to discourage the attending of places of diversion?" Whether they were as careful as they should be he was unable to say, and read some selections from Talmage on the subject of diversions which answered to his view that they must be judged by the effects they produced—by their helpful results or harmful tendencies. Willis G. Worstall, for the Current Topic Committee, read a selection from the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER showing that some colored people even in the South are thrifty.

After roll-call and sentiments, the president made the announcement of the death of Charles M. Stabler, spoke of his beautiful life, his kindly words of counsel, his clearly presented thoughts, and of the gentle presence that will be so much missed. Isaac Brown, the oldest member of our Association, by request, repeated the recitation given at the preceding meeting, "Cato's Soliloquy on the Immortality of the Soul." That, and the announcement of the death of our dear friend, clothed our meeting with a deep feeling of solemnity at the close. S. J. R.

RISING SUN, MD.—The West Nottingham Young Friends' Association held a regular meeting on the afternoon of Fourth month 5th. The majority of those present responded with appropriate sentiments at roll-call, which was followed by reading minutes of last meeting.

Edwin R. Buffington gave a fifteen-minute talk on "The Church and its Possibilities," which opened the afternoon's program. He said that we are passing away from old theologies—evidences are too convincing. To-day we are nearer to understanding the facts of God, and are rising to higher levels upon our own dead selves. A church will make or cause a nation to work out its own salvation, but no church ever saved a soul. Salvation comes through Christ. Jesus never established a church, but he may have given us the underlying part, from which the church is to-day deducted. After all it was not so much what Jesus said or did, but what he really was. The possibilities of the church are such as should arouse admiration, creating deeper thinking. What is most needed is that every one shall become a pastor and a member, and by his daily living create a truer appreciation or admiration for spiritual realities. We become a dead people when we fail to advance. We grow like that which we most admire. If we have a fondness for the bar-room we grow in accordance with its possibilities, and become a child of the bar-room. Should we become so engrossed in business affairs as to feel we have not the time to devote to the development of self or toward attaining that which will strengthen and uplift, we become a child of commercialism, and dead to the higher attributes of the soul.

Maggie W. Scott read "Little Ways of Bettering the World," one of the productions given at the recent General Conference.

"Nature and its Inspirations," was the subject of a paper by Janette Reynolds. The thought was expressed that even the little violet tucked snugly away in some sheltered nook is found performing its duty in its unobtrusive way, inspiring the passers-by to a simplicity of thought and action. And with the development of each thought there is an opportunity for a truer appreciation of the Infinite, where the all-wise Father has in the world of nature implanted lessons for the uplift of humanity, helping us to realize that "the power which crowns effort with victory" is within us. Thus we look through nature up to nature's God. L. J. R., Sec.

EDUCATIONAL.

MEETING OF REPRESENTATIVES OF FRIENDS' SCHOOLS. The Association of Friends' Schools at its meeting on Third month 21st, appointed a committee to take up the subject of a curriculum or program of studies for Friends' schools. This committee consisted of representatives of all the schools of Friends within the limits of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting. Thirty-four institutions were invited to be represented, including Swarthmore College, George School, Boys' Central School, Girls' Central School, and thirty monthly meeting schools. The meeting of this committee assembled in the Central School Building at Race and Fifteenth streets, Philadelphia, on Fourth month 4th, at 1 o'clock. The schools were well represented and the interest in the subject very marked.

A general discussion concerning the advisability of some centralization of work was engaged in by the committee, it being advocated by Dr. B. F. Battin, of Swarthmore College; Dr. Joseph S. Walton, of George School; J. Eugene Baker, of Friends' Central School; Louis B. Ambler, Chairman of the Committee; Anna W. Speakman, Friends' Central School; Ellen D. Lewis, of Buckingham; Achsah Grier, of Woodstown, and some others. The question of existing differences in the courses in the larger schools was next taken up, and many points of difference were found, but none so serious as to make a single system seem impossible.

The meeting finally ordered the appointment of seven sub-committees, each to take up a certain phase of school work and report to the central body. The sub-committees will meet at 10 a. m. on Fourth month 18th; a committee on general program will meet at 12 m. on the same day, and the general committee will meet at 2 p. m., also on the same day. In this meeting of the general committee all teachers in Friends' schools are invited to be present as well as all members of committees having charge of any of our educational work.

The great possible importance of the work undertaken by the committee and its far-reaching effects make desirable as full a representation as possible of all who are engaged in educational work in the Society. It is the hope of the committee not only to be able to arrange a good system of work suitable for our schools but to devise means for making this system effective, and for its continuance and constant revision and improvement.

The sub-committees to take up the various divisions of school work are as follows: Mathematics, W. Elmer Barrett, Bertha T. Broomell, Margaret Eves; English, John L. Carver, James S. Hiatt, Carrie B. Way; Science, E. Clarkson Wilson, George M. Downing, Rachel P. Leys, Dr. Spencer Trotter, Belle Van Sant; Modern Languages, Dr. B. F. Battin, Anna R. Richter, G. W. Thompson; Ancient Languages, Ferris W. Price, Mary Kirk, Florence E. May; History and Geography, Dr. William I. Hull, Rachel S. Martin, Percy T. Rex; General Program, Joseph S. Walton, J. Eugene Baker, Louis B. Ambler, George H. Nutt, Herschel A. Norris, Anna W. Speakman, Abigail W. Jackson.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Junior Friends' Association of Newtown, Pa., gave a tea at the home of Evan T. Worthington on Fourth month 2d. Over fifty dollars was realized which is to be contributed to the Friends' Neighborhood Guild, Philadelphia, the work of which has very much interested the Association.

Although such work is an innovation among Friends it met with the hearty co-operation of every one and created an interest among the young people far outreaching that done by the usual literary meetings of the Associations, inasmuch as it gave them a stimulus toward the realization that there is actual work for them to do in aiding the poor and unfortunate in this world. M. C. W.

Jane Rushmore has resigned the principalship of Martin Academy, Kennett Square, Pa., which she has held for three years, and will take up other work. J. Hibberd Taylor, of West Chester, Pa., has been appointed her successor. He is a graduate of the George School, was a teacher in the Paoli Grammar School for three years, and is in this year's senior class at Swarthmore College.

T. L. Wall, of Grampian, Pa., writes: Our Philanthropic Labor Committee in connection with Centre Committee, would like very much to get a speaker to lecture at Grampian and Unionville on one or more of the Philanthropic Labor subjects in the near future. We would like to be put in communication with such a speaker. I very much appreciate the editorial in the last INTELLIGENCER on "The Inefficiency of Christians."

LITERARY NOTES.

THOSE engaged in the work of prison reform will welcome a thoughtful pamphlet on "Prison Industries," by Edward Grubb, M. A., published by the Howard Association, London, of which he is secretary.

The conclusions reached by the writer are that labor imposed merely to increase the severity of the punishment hardens the criminal and does not produce the deterrent effect desired; that the attempt to make prisons self-sustaining is short-sighted economy, and is often opposed by labor organizations; that the teaching of skilled trades is not practicable because of the cost of skilled teachers and the short sentences of many prisoners; and that the chief object of prison labor should be "reformation and discipline of character, and the development of mental and physical powers."

The author cites the State Reformatory at Elmira, N. Y., and similar American institutions as an improvement upon English methods, and commends efforts now being made in England to secure a special system of remedial treatment for offenders between 16 and 21 years of age.

Not many descriptive articles can throw so much light upon child-labor in the South as does a little story in McClure's Magazine for this month, called "Who Was Her Keeper?" The central figure of the story is a seven-year-old girl, whose family leave a Georgia farm to live in a cotton mill district, having been promised "a good house to live in, painted white, with three rooms in it," and, "cash money every Saddy night." The point of the story is the effect on the child of long hours and nightwork within the noisy shadows of the clanking mill machinery. In the same number Ida M. Tarbell describes the defeat of the Pennsylvania Railroad by the Standard Oil Company.

In this month's North American Review "an American business man" answers in the affirmative the question, "Is the Monroe Doctrine a Bar to Civilization?" He contends that the attitude of the United States toward the South American Republics causes the people of those countries to show little consideration for the rights of foreigners who do business there. The magazine contains as a frontispiece a fine portrait of Henry James, the author of the serial story now appearing in its pages.

THE LILY OF THE RESURRECTION

WHILE the lily dwells in earth,
Walled about with crumbling mould,
She the secret of her birth
Guesses not, nor has been told.

Hides the brown bulb in the ground,
Knowing not she is a flower ;
Knowing not she shall be crowned
As a queen, with white-robed power.

Though her whole life is one thrill
Upward, unto skies unseen,
In her husks she wraps her still,
Wondering what her visions mean.

Shivering, while the bursting scales
Leave her heart bare, with a sigh
She her unclad state bewails,
Whispering to herself, " I die."

Die? Then may she welcome death,
Leaving darkness underground,
Breathing out her sweet, free breath
Into the new heavens around.

Die? She bathes in ether warm :
Beautiful without, within,
See at last the imprisoned form
All its fair proportions win !

Life it means, this impulse high
Which through every rootlet stirs :
Lo ! the sunshine and the sky
She was made for, now are hers !

Soul, thou too art set in earth,
Heavenward through the dark to grow :
Dreamest thou of thy royal birth ?
Climb ! and thou shalt surely know.

Shuddering Doubt to Nature cries,—
Nature, though she smiles, is dumb,—
" How then can the dead arise ?
With what body do they come ?"

Lo, the unfolding mystery !
We shall bloom, some wondrous hour,
As the lily blooms, when she Dies a bulb, to live a flower !

—Lucy Larcom.

TRAILING ARBUTUS.

DARLINGS of the forest !
Blossoming alone
When Earth's grief is sorest
For her jewels gone—

Ere the last snow-drift melts, your tender buds have blown.

Tinged with color faintly,
Like the morning sky,
Or more pale and saintly,
Wrapped in leaves ye lie,
Even as children sleep in faith's simplicity.

There the wild wood-rob-in Hymns your solitude,
And the rain comes sobbing
Through the budding wood,
While the low south wind sighs, but dare not be more rude.

Were your pure lips fashioned
Out of air and dew ;
Starlight unimpassioned ;
Dawn's most tender hue ;
And scented by the woods that gathered sweets for you ?

Fairest and most lonely,
From the world apart,
Made for beauty only,

Veiled from Nature's heart,
With such unconscious grace as makes the dream of Art !

Were not mortal sorrow
An immortal shade,
Then would I to-morrow
Such a flower be made,

And live in the dear woods where my lost childhood played.
—A. W. H., in Tribune.

HOW WE FIGHT DISEASE.

Carl Snyder, in Harper's Magazine.

RATHER more than a century ago, a very young physician thought to test a very old folk remedy against the greatest scourge of that day—smallpox. His method, slightly elaborated, has served to banish that disease from cleanly lands. But it was merely a chance success won in the dark ; to use a large word, a purely empirical discovery. No one had the slightest idea how the vaccine worked, for no one, up to thirty or forty years ago, had so much as a suspicion as to the nature or cause of disease. Jenner's discovery was not the forerunner of a host of others ; it opened no new line of inquiry. The physicians of his time, and after, were far more interested in the fancies of Hahnemann than in a patient, scientific investigation of these new and amazingly fertile results.

It was left for a French chemist, Louis Pasteur, who, knowing nothing of medicine or the stock-in-trade absurdities taught in its name, could come fresh to the subject, to reveal that disease is essentially a fermentation—due, like the fermenting of yeast, to the presence of a minute fungus. Following the customary method of preparing the smallpox vaccine, Pasteur and his aids found that by deliberately cultivating his microbes through a succession of young animals, he was able so to attenuate the poison they secrete as to make it relatively harmless. Nevertheless, as in the case of vaccination, the fungus thus modified was able, by inducing a mild form of the disease, to confer immunity against a more virulent attack. His dramatic cures of the dreaded hydrophobia instantly gave his ideas a world-wide vogue, and in scarce any land of the earth were there lacking eager spirits to follow out and explore the paths thus so brilliantly opened up.

A little later came the discovery, at the hands of two of Pasteur's disciples, that the serum of inoculated animals—the colorless fluid of the blood after the red corpuscles which it contains have been strained out—contains an anti-poison, or, as it has come to be known, an antitoxin, which, injected into an animal, confers immunity in the same manner as inoculation itself. This was the beginning of "the new medicine," of the so-called "sero-therapy." If the new methods have not yet realized all that was hoped from them, it may still be noted that a single one of the new serums, the preparation of the diphtheria antitoxin, has already saved thousands of little lives, and that horrible fate of death from hydrophobia is now almost unknown. Anti-poisons for many of the serpent venoms are known so that the other day, when Dr. Chalmette of Lille, who has made this latter field so much his own, was bitten in the careless handling of a deadly adder, he had merely to step across the room and inject into his arm the serum of his own preparation. Without the latter, in a few moments he would have been dead; with it the crisis was soon past, and within an hour he was back at work. "Astonishing," murmured France; and so it was.

An American Opening in Siberia.

A HUNDRED American citizens are to be sent to Siberia to work in the mines. As every well-informed reader of Russophobia melodrama knows, this is one of the most appalling fates that can overtake the most miserable sons of men—in novels. Yet, not only are the hundred American citizens ready to go, but the sole difficulty at present is to choose from more than a thousand applicants only the very best men. The scheme is this: Russia has, in Siberia, a country of great and varied resources and some six million square miles in extent, the population being about one person to the square mile—by far the smallest in the world for a habitable tract of like area. Russia herself is busy with the southern frontier of the Siberian territory, and the relations of that frontier to Mongolia, China, and Manchuria, a large part of which, probably three million square miles in all, is destined to come under Russian rule. Hence she has no spare energies to devote to the development of remote parts of Siberia, however rich or promising these may be.

Siberia resembles the northern regions of our own continent, and the northeastern peninsula of Chukch, which runs up to Bering Strait, and at one point comes within forty miles of American territory, is in climate and character not unlike our own Alaska. This suggests the gold of the Klondike, and it is well known that Siberia is rich in gold deposits of much the same nature as those along the Yukon River and its tributaries; and this is especially true of the Chukch peninsula, which runs up to Bering Strait and the western point of Alaska. Not being able to develop her resources there, for the reasons we have given, Russia has turned to the United States, confident of finding here the help she needs, and recognizing our national gift as pioneers and settlers of new lands. She is willing to open an immense area of about two hundred thousand square miles—or twice the area of the Philippine Islands—to American miners, whose claims will become their absolute property in perpetuity, subject to a small land tax. In order to carry this scheme into operation, a company of transport and settlement has been formed, which will be paid by a royalty on all discoveries of gold, but the rights of which are only temporary, lapsing to the Russian government after twenty-five years. This precedent is likely to be greatly extended, to the benefit of all concerned.—[Harper's Weekly.]

Father and Daughter.

THERE are two things that can be done by a father for his daughter, and that, if they were always done, would, in the course of a single generation, make our womankind approach a level which they have never yet reached. The first is to gain the confidence of his daughter in her earlier years, and the second is to keep it unimpaired and to perpetuate it.

If he be his daughter's friend and chosen companion, sharing all her little confidences, and imparting to her much of what he knows, with the intuition of a woman and the breadth and sanity of a man, the girl will grow up with a mind unlike the minds of many women in whom femininity verges upon fatuity. From close association with a father, the young girl quite unconsciously acquires something of the largeness of the man's nature and loses something of the pettiness and narrowness of the woman's. His tolerant, genial spirit will moderate her tense emotionalism. His sense of humor will rid her of sentimentalism and imbue her with a sense of true proportion. His fun, his good comradeship, his affection, and his knowledge of life will help to send her forth into the world strengthened and developed as no purely feminine influence could strengthen and develop her.

The love of a father for his daughter is, I think, the very purest love that earth can know, the love that comes the nearest to what we all imagine the divine love to be. The love of a father for his son is intense and overmastering; yet there is a touch of personal pride, of almost conscious egotism, in it which renders it not wholly selfless and serene. But the love of a father for the girl child who has been born to him is more than any other love on earth in its purity, its unalterable constancy, its power of self-sacrifice, its profound delight and its infinite tenderness.—[Harry Thurston Peck, in Cosmopolitan.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT left Washington on the 1st of the month, for his Western trip of nine weeks and three days, in a special train of six cars furnished by the Pennsylvania Railroad. He has made speeches at Harrisburg, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Yankton and many minor points. In these speeches he has presented his well-known views concerning the Monroe Doctrine, trusts, the tariff and kindred subjects. He has been received everywhere with great enthusiasm. He spent the Sabbath at Sioux Falls, where he went to church morning and evening, and addressed 4,000 school children at 8.20 the next morning.

ON the 3d instant a battle was reported in Albania between the Bulgarians who are opposed to reform and the Turkish troops, in which 1,000 men were killed and wounded. Later the victorious Turkish troops were surrounded by men from twelve villages and the whole district of Okhrida was practically in a state of insurrection. According to a dispatch from Constantinople, dated the 6th instant, the British, Russian and Austrian ambassadors have had audiences of the Sultan, on whom they impressed the necessity of suppressing the Albanian agitation; the Sultan replied that in the event of the failure of the pacificatory mission which he had dispatched to Albania he would take measures for the military occupation of the disturbed region.

THE Juvenile Court bills that have been enacted by the Legislature of Pennsylvania and signed by the Governor provide that a Judge of the Courts of Quarter Sessions shall be assigned to hold a separate court to dispose of charges against children under 16 years of age, and that probation officers shall be appointed by the Court. After hearing a case, the Judge of a Juvenile Court may commit a child to the care of its parents, subject to the supervision of a probation officer, or to some suitable institution, or to the care of some reputable citizen, or to a training or industrial school, or to some association willing to receive it. The court in making orders for the commitment of children, shall place them, as far as possible, in the care and custody of persons or associations having the same religious belief as the parents of the child.

THERE is a good deal of dissatisfaction in the anthracite mining region because miners and operators place different interpretations upon certain features of the Commission's award. The men object to working nine hours on Severth-days, insisting upon their accustomed half-holiday, and refuse to work ten hours on other days for extra pay, being suspicious that the operators desire to get a large stock on hand in anticipation of future trouble. John Mitchell has been summoned to Wilkes-Barre and will go as soon as he can get away from Indianapolis.

THE water of the Mississippi river has been very high for some time and there have been breaks in the levees at various places, causing the inundation of large tracts of land. As soon as breaks are reported car loads of materials for repairs are run to the place and cribs are built and filled in with sacks of earth. In this way serious floods have thus far been prevented.

HENRI WHITE, Secretary of the United States Embassy to England, has been elected a member of the Athenaeum Club, because of his successful efforts during twenty years of diplomatic work in London to draw closer the bonds uniting the two great English-speaking nations. The honor comes more particularly in reference to the recent Venezuelan negotiation, throughout which, owing to Ambassador Choate's absence on a holiday trip in Egypt and the Levant, he controlled the Embassy, and, by his tact, ability and good feeling, materially contributed toward the conclusion of a satisfactory arrangement.

NEWS NOTES.

A SEVERE storm of wind and snow raged in the West and Northwest on the 3d instant.

The cold weather the first of the week did great damage to fruit blossoms and early strawberries in many localities.

PRESIDENT DIAZ, in his annual message to the Mexican Congress, gracefully accepted The Hague award concerning the "Pious Fund."

THE Senate of Pennsylvania has passed the bill making $35 a month the minimum salary for teachers, and it now awaits the Governor's signature.

ON motion of Representative Cooper, of Delaware County, the clause legalizing gambling was stricken from the Phillips' Racing bill, by the Pennsylvania Assembly.

THE Soldiers' Home Board, of which General Miles is the head, has decided to erect several new buildings, at a cost of $1,000,000, at the Soldiers' Home in Washington.

THE Mine Workers' Union has repudiated the strike of the drivers of the Monongahela River Coal Company and ordered them to return to work, or have their places filled by others.

THE Navy Department has issued orders for an immediate and material increase in the United States naval representation in the Orient, and some of the most powerful war vessels will proceed to Chinese waters.

THE War Department has given out word that the report of General Miles, commander of the army in the United States, concerning his tour of inspection in the Philippines, is not to be made public.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has selected Wayne MacVeagh, of Pennsylvania, to represent the United States in the question of preferential treatment as between allied and non-allied Powers having claims against Venezuela.

ACCORDING to recent dispatches British consols bearing 2½ per cent. interest were selling at about 90; French rentes, paying 3 per cent., for a fraction below 100; while United States 2 per cent. bonds were bringing 107 and 108.

THE Interstate Medical Association for the manufacture and sale of drugs was formed at Battle Creek, Michigan, on the 4th, with a capital of $10,000,000. The company is composed entirely of physicians and druggists from almost every State.

THE Thaddeus Stevens Memorial Association was organized at Lancaster, on the 4th, for the purpose of founding an industrial school in or near Lancaster as a memorial to Stevens. John H. Landis, Superintendent of the Philadelphia Mint, was elected President.

CONTRIBUTIONS to the amount of $6,649 have been received by E. W. Clark, of the Bullitt Building, toward the $35,000 needed for the building of the Berean Manual Training and Industrial School, of which Rev. Matthew Anderson is principal.

A VERMONT jury has rendered a verdict against a labor union for $2,500 in favor of a manufacturing company, which claimed damages for the intimidation of non-union men and for preventing them from filling the positions vacated by strikers. The case will be appealed to a higher court.

A DISPATCH from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., says that the Anthracite Strike Commission award with reference to the mining engineers went into effect on the 5th. The new order gives the engineers a holiday on the Sabbath, which was observed throughout the region for the first time in the history of mining coal.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

4TH Mo. 12.—PHILADELPHIA EVENING Meeting, at Fifteenth and Race Sts.

4TH Mo. 12.—WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., indulged meeting, under care of New York Monthly Meeting, at 78 Fisher Ave., White Plains, at 11 o'clock.

4TH Mo. 12.—A CIRCULAR MEETING under the care of a committee of Western Quarterly Meeting at West Grove, Pa., at 3 o'clock.

4TH Mo. 12.—FRIENDS' ASSOCIATION OF New York and Brooklyn, in Brooklyn.

4TH Mo. 12.—SOLEBURY FRIENDS' ASSOCIATION at Solebury Meeting-house, 10.45 a. m. The meeting will be addressed by Henry W. Wilbur, of New York.

4TH Mo. 13.—CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY, Dunning's Creek Monthly Meeting, Fishtown, Pa. Friends expecting to attend should arrive the Seventh-day preceding, and should write to E. Howard Blackburn, Bedford, Pa., so that arrangements may be made for meeting them.

4TH Mo. 13.—PHILADELPHIA YOUNG Friends' Association, in auditorium, Y. F. A. Building, at 8 p. m.

4TH Mo. 17.—JUNIOR YOUNG FRIENDS of West Philadelphia at Dr. Thatcher's, 3500 Hamilton Street.

4TH Mo. 18.—CONCORD FIRST-DAY School Union will be held in Friends' Meeting-house, Chester, Pa., at 10 a. m. All interested are cordially invited to attend.

4TH Mo. 18.—ABINGTON FIRST-DAY School Union, at Abington Friends' Meeting-house at 10.30 a. m. and 2 p. m. Subject for discussion: "Should Friends encourage foot-ball and other athletic sports as they are now practised in our schools and colleges?" All Friends interested in First-day School work are cordially invited.

4TH Mo. 18.—THE WESTERN FIRST-DAY School Union in Kennett Square Meeting-house, at 10 a. m. All interested are cordially invited.

4TH Mo. 18.—QUAKERTOWN, PA., YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Frank Ball.

4TH Mo. 18.—GIRARD AVENUE FRIENDS' Association, 8 p. m. Address by J. Russell-Smith.

4TH Mo. 19.—HAVERFORD, PA., FRIENDS' Meeting, attended by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee.

4TH Mo. 15.—PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY Meeting of Friends, at 15th and Race Sts., at 7.30 p. m.

4TH Mo. 16.—GREEN STREET MONTHLY Meeting of Friends, at 4th and Green Sts., Philadelphia, at 3 p. m.

4TH Mo. 19.—A Conference under the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor will be held in the Meeting-house at Willis-town, Pa., at 2.30 p. m.

(Concluded on page iii.)

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

4TH Mo. 19.—FISHERTOWN, PA., YOUNG Friends' Association at the home of Robert McCoy.

4TH Mo. 17.—WASHINGTON, D.C., YOUNG Friends' Association at the home of E. Clifton Thomas.

4TH Mo. 24.—THE FIRST-DAY SCHOOL Organization of Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting will hold its Spring Meeting at Girard Avenue Meeting-house at 8 p.m.

4TH Mo. 19.—A MEETING OF THE PHILANTHROPIC CONFERENCE OF THE WESTERN QUARTER, at New Garden, Pa., at 2.30 p. m. Benjamin F. Battin will address the meeting on "Arbitration in Business Life." Meeting of the Committee at 1.30.

4TH Mo. 19.—A CONFERENCE AT ABINGTON Meeting-house at 3 p. m., under care of Abington Quarter's Philanthropic Committee. Matthew Anderson, President of Berean Manual Training School, Phila., will speak on "The Negro Problem in the North." A good attendance is desired.

4TH Mo. 19.—OXFORD, PA., HENRY W. Wilbur will address a meeting under the care of Philanthropic Committee in meeting-house at 2 p. m., on the subject "Is the World growing Worse?"

4TH Mo. 19.—RISING SUN, MD., HENRY W. Wilbur will address a meeting under the care of Philanthropic Committee in the Town Hall at 7.30 p. m.

4TH Mo. 21.—ADDRESS BY JOHN J. CORNELL, Race Street Meeting-house, Philadelphia, on the subject "What are the advantages of becoming and being a Friend?" The meeting is held under the care of committee on Membership of Race Street Monthly Meeting.

It is desirable that friends extend the invitation to all persons interested in our meetings.

4TH Mo. 25-6-7.—NEBRASKA HALF-Year's Meeting will be held in G. A. R. hall. Meeting of Ministers and Elders Seventh-day, 2 p. m.

Meeting for worship First-day, 11 a. m. Young People's Meeting, 3 p. m. Second-day meeting 10 a. m.

Friends desiring any further information please communicate with Catharine A. Burgess, Normal, Nebraska.

4TH Mo. 28.—A REUNION OF THE OFFICERS, Teachers, and Pupils who are, or have been connected with Fairhill First-day School, will be held at 8 o'clock, in the Fairhill Meeting-house, German-town Avenue and Cambria Street, Philadelphia.

DATE NOT GIVEN.—The next Conference under care of Philanthropic Committee of Concord Quarterly Meeting will be held at Willistown, to be addressed by Joseph S. Walton.

Persons desiring to attend will be met at Edgemont on the Chester and West Chester trolley, if notice is given to Mordecai T. Bartram, White Horse, Pa.

THE PHILADELPHIA YOUNG FRIENDS' Association has a number of bound copies of FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER which it would be glad to give to anyone desiring them. For further particulars address ELIZA H. WORRELL, 140 N. 15th St., Phila.

MILTON PHILLIPS
Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
Unlike all other brands. Ask Grocers.
For book of sample write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

Seasonable Black Silks

Close investigation has convinced us that the best values in Black Silks offered in Philadelphia are to be found right here; not only the finest assortment in the wanted weaves and widths, but a distinct money-saving in nearly all worthy grades.

Black Taffetas

Always in demand for they can be applied to so many different uses. We have three thousand yards of a very good quality for making skirts and linings; a regular 68c value—special at 55c a yard. Other extra values include the following:

- 20-inch, 75c grade—now 68c
- 21-inch, 85c grade—now 75c
- 23-inch, $1.00 grade—now 85c
- 27-inch, $1.00 grade—now 85c
- 36-inch, $1.25 grade—now $1.00
- 36-inch, $1.35 grade—now $1.05
- 36-inch, $1.50 grade—now $1.35
- 44-inch, $2.00 grade—now $1.50

Black Peau de Soie

Our showing includes the most desirable of the imported and domestic weaves—qualities that we guarantee, no matter how low the price:

- 20 inches wide—75c and 85c
- 21 inches wide—$1.00 to $1.50
- 24 inches wide—$1.25 a yard
- 27 inches wide—$1.50 a yard
- 36 inches wide—$1.35 a yard
- 36 inches wide—$1.50 a yard

Black India Mouseline

A soft and beautiful weave for spring and summer gowns. To its other good qualities must be added the fact that water will not spot it. There need be no fear of summer showers with a dress of this silk—

- 24 inches wide, 85c a yard
- 27 inches wide, $1, $1.25, and $1.50 a yd.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

Home Kitchen Outfits
and all
House Furnishing Goods

J. FRANKLIN MILLER,
1626 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

Conservative Investment

WELL SECURED

Approximate Dividends 10 per cent. or over

One of the oldest manufacturing concerns in Philadelphia (managed and controlled by Friends), with a firmly established and profitable business, will, in order to meet the largely increased demand for their product (consisting of staple goods, protected by valuable patents), accept subscriptions for a limited amount of their Treasury Stock at par, in blocks of $500 or duplicates thereof.

Certificates of deposit of a Philadelphia trust company, payable in 20 years with a surrender value of 70 per cent. in 10 years, will be issued to an equal amount as security for the payment of specified dividends. For particulars address

Post Office Box 3404, Station O, Philadelphia, Pa.

LANSDOWNE AND DARBY SAVING FUND AND TRUST COMPANY

LANSDOWNE, PA.

Full Paid Capital, $125,000.

2 per cent. paid on Check Deposits, 3 per cent. paid on Savings Deposits.

GEORGE FOSTER WHITE, President, Treasurer and Trust Officer; W. LANE VERLEHNIEN Vice-President; JOSEPH T. BUNTING, Second Vice-President; MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary; LEWIS LAWRENCE SMITH, Solicitor.
 Acts as Executor, Administrator, Trustee, Guardian or Agent. Wills prepared and kept free of charge where this Company is named as Executor.
 Aims at perfect service and perfect Security. Either the Franklin National Bank or the Girard National Bank will receive deposits for this company.

United Security

Life Insurance

and Trust Company

OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Capital, $1,000,000
 Surplus and undivided profits, 500,000

Banking and General Trust Co. Business

OFFICERS:
 WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
 JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
 ESMONDE H. AUSTIN, Second Vice-President and Treasurer.

CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS, Assistant Treasurer.
 HENRY LABARRE JAYNE, Counsel.
 FRANCIS H. HEMPELKY, Actuary.
 T. HEWSON BRADFORD, M.D., Medical Director.

DIRECTORS:
 William M. Coates, William H. Lucas,
 Caleb J. Miller, William K. Verner,
 V. C. Sweetnam, J. W. Hampton, Jr.,
 Charles Porter, Orlando Cease,
 Robert Dorman, J. Layton Register,
 John G. Garruth, Esmonde H. Austin,
 William Bault, Silas W. Pettit,
 Joel Cook.

WALL PAPER of

Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
 Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,
 1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and

Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.
 902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Meaning of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail $0.15.
 "The reading of which is a spiritual feast."
 FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.15.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.15.

The Dookhobors. By Joseph Elkinton. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated, $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
 N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
 Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in a minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CITY OF SEABER, Pa.)
 520 S. 11th St., Philadelphia

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
 ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES,
 ASSIGNOR, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
 FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. REGISTRY AND TRANSFER AGENT.
 INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
 Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders . . . $ 4,547,613.08
 Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,177,764.17
 Assets of the Company, 61,615,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

Samuel R. Shipley, President
 T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
 Asa S. Wing, Vice-President
 Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept.
 Roberts Foulke, Trust Officer
 David G. Alsop, Actuary
 J. Barton Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
 Samuel H. Troth, Treasurer
 C. Walter Barton, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

James V. Watson,
 William Longstrech,
 Edward H. Ogden,
 Thomas Scattergood,
 J. Preston Thomas,
 Asa S. Wing,
 Philip C. Garrett,
 Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

Merchants' Trust Company,

611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $500,000.00
 CAPITAL (paid in), 250,000.00
 SURPLUS, 50,000.00
 UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 49,249.99

Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveying done. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $2 and upwards, per annum.

JOSEPH R. RHOADS, President.
 JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President.
 HORACE E. PEARSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas.
 CHARLES P. EARLY, Secretary.
 WM. B. LANE, Title and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS.

NICHOLAS BRICE, J. BOLTON WINFENNY,
 S. DAVIS PAGE, WARREN G. GRIFFITH,
 JOSEPH R. RHOADS, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
 JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED J. PHILLIPS,
 THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
 CHAS. S. HINCHMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
 EDWARD S. SAYERS, HERGAC DUDLEY FAIRIE,
 JOHN H. CRAVEN, HORACE E. PEARSON.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED TOUR.

Savannah by Sea.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.
 SEVEN DAY TOUR $29
 TO SAVANNAH

including all expenses. Leave Philadelphia Tuesday April 17th. Send for itinerary.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent,
 Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE UNION CENTRAL LIFE

INSURANCE CO.

Of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Assets, $34,000,000

Plain Life and Endowment Policies with Annual Dividends.

The Highest Grade of Life Insurance at the Lowest Cost.

The Company for Those who Think for Themselves.

Good Contracts to Good Agents.

Lawton Brothers, Managers,
 338 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.
 CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
 JOSEPH L. JONES

Death takes a hand in every partnership.

How much of the success of your firm depends upon your life or that of your partners?

Whatever it is you should provide an equivalent for it by securing insurance in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
 921-3-5 Chestnut St.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, FOURTH MONTH 18, 1903.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $5.00 PER ANNUM.
 To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $3.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers.
 Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.
 WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 3 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application.
 No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
 N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
  TELEPHONE NO. 133-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XVII.,	241
POETRY: TRUST YOURSELF,	241
WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson, (Continued),	241
THE INTEGRITY OF THE MEETING,	243
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
The Epistles,	244
MISSION WORK,	244
ENGLISH FRIENDS OBJECT TO MILITARY DRILL,	245
EDITORIAL:
Spiritual House-Cleaning,	246
Notes,	246, 247
BIRTHS, DEATHS,	247
SUSAN PLUMMER OWEN,	248
DOUKHOBOR ETHICS,	249
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.,	250
EDUCATIONAL,	251
SOCIETY NOTES,	252
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES,	252
LITERARY NOTES,	252
POETRY: Prayer; Light, More Light; Grandpa,	252, 253
METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR THIRD MONTH,	253
DAUGHTERS OF THE REPUBLIC,	253
MISCELLANY: A Woman Surgeon's Idea; Sport That Kills; A True Dog Story; The Evils of Parties; The Gospel in a Barrel,	254
CURRENT EVENTS,	255
NEWS NOTES,	256
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS,	255

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
 ARCHITECTS
 Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—POSITION AS HOUSEKEEPER, or to care for invalid. Would travel. Address Box 97, Devon, Pa.

WANTED.—A WORKING HOUSEKEEPER for large Friends' boarding house. Address F. A. R., 50 Beckman Street, New York.

WANTED.—BOARDERS FOR THE SUMMER in country. Friends' Family. Modern conveniences. Apply early, Box 125, Woodstown, N. J.

WANTED.—BY MARRIED MAN CHARGE OF country place as care-taker or gardener. Experienced in care of lawns. Address No. 83, this Office.

WANTED.—BY FRIEND, POSITION AS PRIVATE secretary. Remington operator, or traveling companion, nurse for semi-invalid, or housekeeper. Address A. D. FEATHERS 1 ONE, 21 N. Carey Street, Baltimore, Md.

A DULT BOARDERS DESIRED ON A FARM from June to September: a new house, good table, city conveniences, fine shade, convenient to meeting and station—main line P. R. R. For further particulars address M., Box 26, Parkersburg, Chester county, Pa.

BOARDING.—DESIRABLE ROOMS WITH board. Friends. 628 N. 32nd Street, Phila.

BOARDING.—GOOD BOARD, LARGE PLEASANT room, moderate rate. With Friends. Apply in this Office.

FRIENDS FROM A DISTANCE, WHO EXPECT to attend Yearly Meeting, can be accommodated with rooms and board at a moderate rate, in a Friends' family, by applying at an early date to H. E. GREEN, 1297 Mt. Vernon Street.

BOARDING.—THE CO-OPERATIVE HOUSE-keeping Association has now one vacancy. For particulars address E. H. S., 140 N. 15th Street, Phila.

BOARDERS DESIRED IN FRIENDS' FAMILY on farm near Coshohocken. For further particulars address S., 1800 Spring Mill Ave., Coshohocken, Pa.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1867 15th, N. W., Washington, D. C.

FOR RENT.—SITTING ROOM WITH BOARD for two, at $4 each. Address No. 85, this Office.

FOR RENT.—AT SWARTHMORE, PA., a large stone mansion on the hill from June to September. Completely furnished, all conveniences, gas range, Springfield water, 140 feet of porch, commanding a fine view. Grounds cared for by owner. Tennis court. Stabling for two horses in close. ALBERT N. GARRETT, 1015 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia; or Box 135, Swarthmore, Pa.

FOR RENT.—BY THE MONTH, A FURNISHED house in Swarthmore, Yale Avenue, on new trolley line. Grounds and shade for children. For particulars address HENRY KENT, Swarthmore, Pa.

It Pays Educators to Educate.

The Peoples University of Olympia, Washington, makes it pay to be in the educational business. The capital stock of that institution already pays a four per cent. dividend, and will eventually pay from six to ten per cent. The security is first-class—absolutely safe—and the enterprise highly commendable. The fact is we offer you a better investment than government bonds. Write for particulars, Eastern Office, Cochocton, Ohio.

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY, Olympia, Washington.
 Endowment file No. 2. Be sure to mention the file number.

ELIZABETH LLOYD'S "SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY"

placed in every school, would teach the beauty of Peace.
 Send twenty cents for one copy of the music and twenty-five copies of the words, to
 ARABELLA CARTER,
 Universal Peace Union, 1305 Arch St., Phila.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

"Cottages of mountain stone
 Clustered like stars some few, but single most,
 And lurking dimly in their shy retreats,
 Or gazing at each other cheerful looks."
 Like separated stars with clouds between."
 —Wordsworth.

Is there any more pleasant way of spending the summer than to be lodged in a comfortable cottage with meals at a near-by, well-kept Inn? The cares of housekeeping disappear and the privacy and convenience of a private home are present. Meals are furnished cottagers at a low rate with considerable reductions for children. All cottages are within a short distance of the Inn. Friends who are planning to visit Buck Hill Falls and can make up a party large enough to take a cottage will find that the expense is considerably reduced in this way.

The following cottages are for rent at Buck Hill Falls:

"Waldried," three double and two single bed-rooms. Fine view. Rent from Seventh month 1st to Ninth month 10th, ten weeks, $50.

"Bergenheim," four bed-rooms. Stone cottage. $60 per month for Sixth and Ninth months.

"Keewaydin" contains five double rooms, two of them extra large. Level walk to Inn. Rent $75 for Sixth month.

"Qui-tude," a Buogalow, four bed-rooms. Rent for Sixth and Ninth months $50 per month.

"Iglou Nuaa." Fine outlook. Contains five bed-rooms, two on first floor. For rent for Sixth month only, $60.

"Sunset House," near Inn, four bed-rooms, hot water heater. To rent for the summer, $250.

"Thorscroft," a cosy little cottage, 3 bed-rooms. To rent Seventh, Eighth and Ninth months, $200.

All cottages have sitting-rooms, bath rooms with water closets, and are fully furnished. Write for further information.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
 1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
 CHARLES F. JENKINS, President.
 MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary and Treasurer.

J. T. JACKSON & CO. Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
 (Southeast Corner)
 Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

Have you a Printing Problem to solve? Let's help. Perhaps our eight years of experience in the making of good printing will be of some assistance. An exchange of ideas is always profitable.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,
 MAKERS OF THE
 BETTER KIND OF PRINTING
 1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES. Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Jenkintown, Pa.
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR
BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate, by reason of endowment. For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class instruction.

For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
NO. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and Investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OFFICES: { 623 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
{ Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
355 SWEDER STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Thompson Shourds, 2112 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa.
Phone 3-547-8 D.

CHARLES BURTON,
Practical House and Sign Painter,
Office, 907 N. Thirteenth Street, } Philadelphia, Pa.
Residence, 1714 Woodstock Street, }

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis,
Ring & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.),
REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents, Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
Keystone and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE
GRADE OF ICE
CREAM AND
CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT
MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP
CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE
AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS
SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.

5 PHONES.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTENHAM,

E. T. Kuendig, Atlantic City, N. J.
R. W. Richards.

The Pennhurst, Second House
from Beach
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. K. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,
1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water bath. Home comforts
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD

THE AQUARILE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR
OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

PURE FOOD skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of
Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1377 Filbert St.
These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.
J. J. WILLIAMS.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK

UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

Established 1860 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade —established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By
William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet, 40 pages.
Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins, Paper
for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope), 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50
copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND
ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman.
Pamphlet, 27 pages. *$ Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY.
By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet, 1 page. *$ A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies
30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELI-
GIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard
M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet, 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50
copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

*$ All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, FOURTH MONTH 18, 1903.

Volume LX.
Number 16.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903. XVI.

NOT by strength of argument, or by a particular disquisition of each doctrine, and convincement of my understanding thereby, I came to receive and bear witness of the truth; but by being secretly reached by this life.

ROBERT BARCLAY.

TRUST YOURSELF.

Trust yourself! There is no greater
Than yourself in all mankind.
The dependent soul is traitor,
And the begging soul is blind.
True divinity of being
God has given to his child.
See the gift, and by the seeing
With all fate be reconciled.

Trust yourself! God gave you forces
All sufficient for your task.
Draw upon your own resources.
Shall a God-child weakly ask
As poor mercies from another
What by right to him belong?
Know that God has made you, brother,
And that God has made you strong!
—C. W. C., in Christian Register.

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

JOHN JACKSON.

(Continued from last week.)

DURING the three or four years following his visit to Jersey in the company of Priscilla Cadwallader, John Jackson lived in his father's family at Darby, working on the land and carrying the products of the farm to market in Philadelphia. He asked his father to allow him to learn surveying and conveyancing, and when the latter objected because he thought it would not be a good business venture, John borrowed the money of him to purchase the instruments. He studied with such diligence and became so proficient in his new employment that he was able to repay the borrowed money within a year. He subsequently prevented much litigation in the neighborhood, adding to his skill in the use of his implements his wonderful personal influence.

In 1834 the Delaware County Institute for Science, which is still in existence, was organized. This institute held a meeting every month to discuss scientific subjects and the application of science to the arts, and it has had a marked effect upon the intelligence of the county. John Jackson became a member soon after its organization, and the esteem in which he was held is thus stated in the memoir prepared for the institute by James Andrews: "Although his multifarious duties and delicate health for many years prevented his regular attendance at our meetings, yet his presence had always a cheering effect towards inspiring us in the cause in which we are engaged." At one of the last meetings which he attended his wife read a discourse upon the value of human physiology in early education, which was published by request of the audience in the "Delaware County Republican." It appears that there were some Friends at that time who were afraid a knowledge of science was inimical to the practice of religion. To one of these John wrote:

"By some remarks thou madest last evening at M. C.'s, I understood thee to hold out the idea that scientific acquirements had not a tendency to increase our knowledge of the Divine Being, and that a mind highly cultivated by a judicious application of time and talents in the acquisition of knowledge was not susceptible of greater religious enjoyments than one ignorant of the truths of philosophy as illustrated by science, and also that the ambition which prompts men to the pursuit of knowledge was of the same kind as that which leads them to the acquisition of the sordid treasures of the world! I do not desire to be found in opposition with thee, but . . . I believe we are constituted with minds destined for endless progression in knowledge; and infinite wisdom has seen meet to spread before our view a wide field for contemplation and reflection, and these seem to me as essential to our happiness as the exercise of the body to our health. . . .

"When I contemplate the majesty and wisdom that have been exerted in producing all this harmony and order of the whole universe, I cannot believe myself brought hither to look with thoughtless eyes upon such grandeur and magnificence; but am led to believe that scientific knowledge not only enlarges our understanding, but magnifies our conception of the Creator's wisdom, and inspires gratitude and devotion. . . . Then science has been one of the most powerful engines before which superstition—that grand enemy to benignant religion—has vanished like the darkness of night before the splendor of the morning sun.

"I do not wish by any means to inculcate the idea that we can, by scientific perception, penetrate into the spiritual recesses of Divine revelation, or even that we can comprehend the nature of the Great Supreme, by entering into the intricate labyrinth of metaphysical reasoning. No, verily. . . . I do not wish thee to understand me as looking to these things as a primary source of happiness. My desire is to build upon a spiritual foundation that cannot be shaken, and to be found in fellowship with those who feel the communion of the Holy Spirit and the love of God continually to abound in their hearts."

The following extracts from two letters written to an intimate friend, in 1834, show that John Jackson had learned in his early manhood to prefer inward riches to outer prosperity:

"I have for a long time believed that it is the duty of every man, previously to his entering upon the stage of active life, seriously to reflect upon the course he designs to pursue; by so doing he might avoid many of the dangers that lie concealed in the turbulent sea of an unstable world. I have seen the ambitious youth, eager to accumulate much of this world's riches, start upon a career of life apparently without reflection; his desire to indulge in the gratification of sensual delights kept him intoxicated with the delirium of absurd pursuits, till he lost an honorable standing in society, and passed away, leaving in the train of his existence the fruits of his folly, and proving the declaration of Scripture to be true, that 'pride goeth before destruction'; and as he was actuated by a haughty spirit, 'it terminated in a fall.' Prudence dictates that I should shun the path that he trod. How many endowed with talents, blessed with health, fortune and friends, have, for want of due reflection, wrecked their all upon the rocks of imprudence and folly, and left themselves a prey to corroding griefs, often sharpened by the remembrance of better days! By observations upon the conduct of others, I have often been taught instructive lessons, and have thereby arrived at the conclusion that true happiness and enjoyment are not to be experienced by following the world with views solely founded on the acquisition of its treasures; but that other duties command our attention than those necessary to be discharged in the temporal concerns of life. To fulfill the one, habits of industry, frugality and economy are indispensably requisite; and if these are properly attended to, it would leave time for the performance of those higher duties which we owe to ourselves, to one another, and, above all, to the Author of our being—these consist in acts of benevolence and charity, the improvement of the mental faculties, the promotion of piety and the constant practice of virtue." (Let the reader bear in mind that this and the following are extracts from a letter of friendship written by a fun-loving young man in his twenty-fifth year.)

"When I speak of myself I have only to say that I possess but little of what the world calls wealth—neither do I desire a great deal. I have learned to be content with the portion that has fallen to my lot, and, having been educated to habits of industry through affectionate parental care, I prize them much higher than all the riches that could be conferred upon me. . . . In my view happiness is acquired just in proportion as we attain to the standard of moral excellence, and does not consist in the accumulation of riches which perish with the using. Indeed, I think that if our ambition was chiefly to promote virtue and piety, instead of acquiring worldly honor or distinction, the condition of man would be elevated far above everything connected with the lower enjoyments of time. I have sometimes feared that many in their eagerness to add 'house to house, or field to field,' have sacrificed many of the real enjoyments of this life, and perhaps, too, the hopes and feelings that stand connected with an eternal world."

In Second month, 1835, the death of his father brought a great grief into John Jackson's life. In a letter written to Dr. Geo. Truman and wife during his father's last illness we get a glimpse of his unselfish devotion to those he loved, and of his firm faith in the wisdom of God.

"My beloved father has been more unwell to-day than usual. My time is chiefly occupied in the discharge of filial duties at the couch of sickness, and, although it is attended with a multiplicity of cares, yet, when these are bestowed upon those whom we hold most dear in the outward relation, it gives us a feeling of satisfaction to know that we have it in our power to tender them the evidences of affection. . . . I often think, such is our proneness to indulgence in those things which lead from serious thoughts, that, were it not for the interposition of affliction and sorrow, our hearts would become too callous to admit of those more serious impressions that teach us our duty to God, our Creator; but the temperament of our mind is softened, and all its selfish hardness subdued, when we are brought to contemplate the infirmities of our nature, and feel destitute under the pressure of affliction."

Before this letter was mailed his father passed away, and this note was appended: "My beloved father is now no more. In the prospect of this separation there have been many deep baptisms of my soul. I have known the heavens and the earth to be shaken, and every false dependence to be moved."

At the time of his father's death his older brothers and sisters appear to have been married and to have left the paternal roof, as by his father's will the farm was left to John. To him also was given the care of the younger children, and nobly did he discharge his trust. He had won their affection in their infancy by his kindness and attention, and they were now prepared to receive his counsel and advice; "for," said his sister, "he seemed unto the end as a father over the flock, and faithfully did he discharge his duty toward those who were in the springtime of life bereft of parental care." At the bedside of his dying father his voice was uplifted in prayer, and again, on the day of the funeral, he engaged in solemn supplication on behalf of himself and others. From this time forward he frequently delivered messages in the meetings of the Society, and in 1837 his gift was acknowledged by Darby Monthly Meeting of Friends. The following extracts are from letters bearing upon his father's death and his spiritual development.

"I have felt like the two disciples who were journeying from Jerusalem to Emmaus, who, as they walked by the way, were discouraged, were cast down; they were sad—for they had been looking to the loss they had sustained by 'the things that had been done in Jerusalem.' But I have been permitted to experience a degree of the joy felt when the divine Master manifested himself among them by the breaking of bread. I can say from a degree of experience that will warrant the expression, the oil of joy has been given for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness."

"In the midst of these close provings it has been a consolation, as well as a cause of abundant thankfulness to the Father of mercies, that He has been pleased to lead my mind to the sanctuary of devotion, where I have been enabled to see that the path of self-denial and the cross would lead to that pure and spiritual obedience by which alone the fruits of godliness are to be brought forth, and by which alone we can be entitled to the robes of righteousness bearing the inscription of holiness to the Lord."

"I find it required of me sometimes to open my mouth in the assemblies of the people. Truly I feel as a child in the obedience of the cross of Christ, but I have known my heavenly Father to be near unto me, aiding me by His blessed spirit to perform every required duty. . . . May we ever keep in that blessed humility which will show unto the world that we desire to walk in the path of self-denial, and to bear the cross with all the patience and dignity which becomes the follower of Christ—then, whatever may be the baptisms of soul, whatever may be the conflicts of spirit, we shall, most certainly, know our peace to flow as a river, and our righteousness as the waves of the sea."

ELIZABETH LLOYD.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE INTEGRITY OF THE MEETING.

A FEW weeks ago there appeared in the editorial columns of the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER an article which presented the two very different ways of viewing the lukewarmness and indifference of some of the members of the Society of Friends to the principles we profess and the moral conduct which it is the purpose of the Discipline to recommend to all our members. A contrast was drawn between the outspoken protest of a concerned Friend against this spirit of indifference and the easy-going, ready-to-overlook method which another Friend advocated; and the conclusion was drawn that the latter represented the "finer and more liberal" spirit and tendency of modern administration of our Discipline. Against such a deduction from the two cases cited I wish to enter a friendly, but earnest protest. I am led to do this by the belief that nothing will so greatly injure the Society of Friends as an easy-going, careless or indifferent administering of our Discipline, because this will, more than any other cause, attack and undermine the integrity of the meeting and of the Society as a whole.

For there is an integrity of the Society just as there is an integrity of the individual. It consists in loyalty to the principles we profess as shown by character and conduct. It is found in honesty of purpose and earnestness in action in thus putting into practice what we present to the world as the Friendly ideal. And in this fidelity to principle, this attempt to make our living square with our profession, is found that integrity both of the individual and of our Society, which it should be our highest duty to strive for. As a religious body nothing will aid us more fully to accomplish this than the honest, earnest effort to strictly apply and enforce our Discipline. In it we find presented the Christian code of morals, offered in a most loving spirit for the welfare of all our members. Repeated efforts for the help, and if possible the reform of those who have violated this Christian code are recommended, and the step of disownment is only to be taken when these have failed. But when such efforts have been made without effect, it is as much a Christian duty to proceed to disownment as it is to deal with the wrongdoer. Not to do so is to attack and undermine our religious society, to accept for ourselves a share of the wrong committed, and to greatly diminish our influence for good upon our own membership and upon those outside our fold.

Every failure in fidelity to principle weakens and undermines character and influence. Every decision to be easy-going with wrong both adds strength to the forces of evil and takes away from the power of good to overcome the evil. And every decision to share in wrongdoing by winking at it, or overlooking it before any repentance is shown, puts a stumbling block in the way of possible repentance, and totally destroys the influence for good which it is one of the highest purposes of a religious society to exert. We of to-day are responsible for the good name of the Society of Friends; it has come to us as an inheritance of inestimable value from those who have gone before; it should be our effort to see that that good name is handed down to the coming generation as bright and untarnished as it came to us.

Some years ago a young man of fine character, inclined to look at the serious side of life, spoke to me of his wish to join a certain church. "I would have been a member of it for a long time, but for one thing," he said. I inquired what the obstacle was, and he replied that the superintendent of the Sunday School of the church was a lawyer, and at the license court, then lately held, had been the counsel for a large number of liquor sellers who applied for licenses. "I don't care to belong to a church," was his conclusion of our talk, "where it is all right for the leading members to do such things as that."

This will illustrate what is meant by the unknown and unconscious influence of character and conduct. The attractive power of a religious society must consist very largely in the integrity of its membership,—in their fidelity to principles as shown by conduct. Our Discipline is unique in this, that it requires regular stated answers to queries concerning the moral and religious status of our members. But these answers must be honest; they must tell the truth, or else they will only be a low form of self-deception—possibly the very worst form, as they will then deceive us as to those matters which are of the highest importance. A lax administration of the Discipline may indeed be the more "liberal," and the more harmful as well. But that it shows a spirit in any degree "finer" may well be questioned—and denied.

Fourth month 6th, 1903.

R.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 15.

THE EPISTLES.

GOLDEN TEXT.—God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty.—1. Corinthians, i., 27.

Before study of Lesson read 1. Corinthians, i., 1-31.

ASIDE from the Gospels and the Acts we have in the New Testament twenty-two books attributed to six different authors. With the exception of the book of Revelations, these "books" are all epistles, or, in other words, letters. Some of them are written to churches, some to individuals, and some to especial religious groups. Thirteen are usually attributed to the Apostle Paul, three letters and Revelations to John, the son of Zebedee, two to Peter, one each to James and Jude, and of one the authorship is unknown. These writings, although in our Bibles they follow the gospels and the Acts, include the earliest of the New Testament books. The oldest of all is probably the Epistle to the Galatians, which some authorities date as early as 45 A.D. Others, however, place this letter in 57 A.D., and believe I. Thessalonians to be the oldest, this having been written in 52 A. D. All of Paul's epistles must be dated before 68 A.D., the latest date assigned by any authoritative writer for his execution at Rome. The belief is much more general, however, that Paul's death occurred in 62 A.D., and one of the latest and most careful students of the Apostolic Age places it as early as 58 A.D. In any case, all of the more important of his letters were written before the earliest of the gospels took its present form. The martyrdom of Peter is variously placed at from 64 A.D. to 68 A.D. But the authorship of the epistles called by the name of Peter is seriously questioned, and their date is placed by some as late as the last decade of the first century. The authorship of James and Jude is wholly uncertain. There is, indeed, a tradition that the James of the epistle was the brother of Jesus whom we meet in the book of Acts; but the tradition is late and untrustworthy (McGifford). "Jude" speaks of himself as a "brother of James," but the name James was common among the early Christians, and the salutation of epistles is particularly liable to change, so that little can be inferred from the phrase. From internal evidence both James and Jude are assigned to the end of the first or beginning of the second century. The epistles of John probably belong to the closing years of the life of the "apostle whom Jesus loved," that is, to the first or second decade of the second century. The epistle to the Hebrews is ascribed in its title to "Paul the Apostle." But "the title was added at a late date; the Greek Testaments contain only the brief title, 'To the Hebrews,' leaving the question of authorship unsettled" (Gladden). The book has been variously ascribed to Apollos, Barnabas and others, and to dates from the sixth to the ninth decade of the first century. The book of Revelations which appears at the end of the New Testament evidently belongs to one of the periods of persecution of the Christians. Unhappily these times were many. The book probably belongs either to the terrible time at the end of Nero's reign—about 68 A.D., to the time of Vespasian (before 79), or to the reign of Domitian just before the close of the first century.

It is perhaps hardly necessary to say that these letters were not written with any idea that they would become parts of a Christian Bible. They were written each with reference to some particular condition, to meet some special need. For a long time they were circulated from hand to hand, and from church to church, copies being frequently made before the originals were passed on. They were not all addressed to posterity; they made no pretence to supply a guide to life and conduct for future generations. But this very characteristic adds to their value. They represent in frank, unstudied fashion the spirit of the immediate successors of Jesus himself in the early Christian body. They represent the spirit of the early Christian Church as a collection of letters from Garrison, Phillips, Whittier and Sumner brings us into the spirit of the abolition movement, and their value is proportionate to the value of the Christian idea. The New Testament does not contain all the letters which were so written and circulated. There are also extant two letters, supposed to be by Clement, a disciple of Peter, to the Corinthians, a general epistle of Barnabas, the companion of Paul, and several others. Some of these have sometimes been included in the New Testament. Several are quoted as authoritative by the early church fathers. The accidents of time, as well as the principle that the fittest tend to survive, have helped to determine what books shall make up the New Testament; but on the whole there is no question that those which survive are among the fittest.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

MISSION WORK.

It is not bigotry to assume that there is only one household of the true faith. The bigotry comes in when the members of any separate church organization assume that the one household of faith does not extend beyond that particular organization. Some trace of sectarianism and of consequent superstitious formality would appear to be inevitable in all organizations, until the general realization, by devout seekers, of that "all truth" of Divine purpose and promise, in whose prevalence consistency will be something more than a rare "jewel," in which we may presume that all compromise will be superseded by comprehensions, and that all "things lawful" will become also "expedient." Then, indeed, will "the mountain of the Lord's house be established in the top of the mountains," and the old sectarian lamentation be forever discarded, "The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge." Meantime, "close as sin and suffering joined," let all true churchmen aspire and strive to "march abreast" to that happy consummation. The world is still our allotted field of service, in which "he that watereth shall be watered," and in which there is always a call for that "good word," fitly and freshly spoken, which shall avoid the opposite perils of cant and rant.

In our zeal, however, for the development and spread of gospel truth, let us heed the lesson that "he that believeth maketh not haste." The demand for a thorough equipment for the service does not grow any less urgent as the great conflict between the powers of light and darkness broadens and thickens with the progress of the ages, and with the growing diffusion of the intellectual knowledge or culture, which is a mere instrument of delusion and means of mischief, when held out of subordination to the wisdom of a purchased experience. An effective zeal must indeed be "according to knowledge," or in harmony with the most advanced knowledge; but that harmony and knowledge are only to be insured by the individual spiritual travail which is indicated in the injunction to "tarry at Jerusalem"—under the shelter of organization—"until ye be endued with power from on high." The essential requirement for gospel service is as unchangeable as is that inherited infirmity of human nature with which it has to do; and we may rest assured that the command to "preach the gospel to every creature" is, now as of old, addressed only to those who can "bear witness" to the things of Christ, as having virtually "been with him from the beginning." There is a too much neglected force in the metaphor of the "Seed" which is used by the beloved disciple, and which was accepted by our early Friends as indicating the individual realization and development of the Christ-life. "First the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear," is the Saviour's own statement of the heavenly growth.

With a due recognition of this ideal standard of proselyting labor, it may be inferred that the thorough-going church-worker will find surer equipment and louder call for missionary service among the heathens at home than is now largely the case; and that the missionary service abroad, when fairly opening before him, will gain in efficiency by its clearer enlightenment and more obvious disinterestedness. That fellow-working (John, xv., 26, 27) of the holy "Comforter" from within with the divinely anointed herald from without, will carry the gospel home to the sincerely seeking soul as the confessed "power of God unto salvation," seeing that such a herald still succeeds to that apostolic "power of the keys" which the well reputed John Hales¹ of Eton defined to be "simply the privilege of declaring or opening the message of Divine love to mankind," by "all who themselves have received the Divine message, or to whom the kingdom of heaven has been opened."

It would seem to be a necessary result of the profound and substantial unity of all truth, that all superficial divergences of view on matters of cardinal importance should be resolvable by the single key of that Divine simplicity and rightful order, from which they are alike mere circumstantial deviations. The much discussed "more sure word of prophecy" of the apostle Peter's enunciation, may be thus presumably, if not positively, identified with that freshly authorized outward presentation of Divine truth, as "light shining into a dark place," which carries with it the aforesaid "power of the keys." Well, indeed, may it become the evangelist of every degree to magnify his office, to the hastening of the day in which shall be practically realized the ancient testimony, that "surely in vain the net is spread in the sight of any bird."

RICHARD RANDOLPH.

ENGLISH FRIENDS OBJECT TO MILITARY DRILL.

THE MEMORIAL OF THE REPRESENTATIVE MEETING OF THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS, HELD IN LONDON, THE 6TH DAY OF THIRD MONTH (MARCH), 1903. (AS SENT TO THE PRIME MINISTER AND THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.)

"As the Representative Body of the Religious Society of Friends in Great Britain, we wish to lay before the Government our strong objections to the introduction of Military Drill in the Elementary Schools in this country, and to the steps that have been taken to place the teaching of this drill under the direction of military Instructors.

"We refer especially to the Model Course of Physical Training issued by the Board of Education in 1902, after consultation with the War Office, which is to a great extent that of the Infantry Drill Book, and to the pressure which is being exercised by Government Inspectors to induce men and women teachers to receive instruction in this drill from Army or Volunteer Drill Sergeants.

"We are in favor of physical training of the right kind for all children in elementary schools, based upon physiological study of their needs. We believe, however, that judged from this stand-point the Model Course is ill adapted for them, while the free movements of the Swedish and similar systems are acknowledged by the most competent authorities to be far more effective. We desire to protest against sacrificing efficiency of training to any ulterior purpose.

"We would also respectfully urge that the pressure exercised on school authorities and teachers to adopt the Model Course is unjustifiable, and that instead thereof the Board of Education should encourage the adoption of the best modern methods of providing the training required.

"Our main objection is, however, to the military character of the Model Course. It is based on the Infantry Drill Book; schools are urged to secure the services of an instructor trained in the Army Gymnastic Course, and where it is desired to proceed to full military drill, they are referred to a manual on Infantry Training, 1902, published by the War Office.

"We believe that to foster a military spirit in our schools is not in accordance with true national welfare. Our schools should be nurseries of worthy character, places where the boys and girls of England learn that men of different races and nations are yet brothers, and that the spirit of justice and righteousness is the best national defence; they should not be places where character is trained in the military spirit with its false ideals of national greatness.

"Signed by direction and on behalf of the said Meeting.

HENRY LLOYD WILSON, Clerk.

"Devonshire House, 12, Bishopsgate Without, E.C."

¹ Often dignified, writes Principal Tulloch, "as" the ever memorable Mr. John Hales of Eton."

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS : LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.
 BUSINESS MANAGER : CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, FOURTH MONTH 18, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

SPIRITUAL HOUSE-CLEANING.

WHEN the buds begin to swell on the trees and leaves to soften the outlines of the bare branches ; when the crocus and the daffodil lift up their bright faces in the spring sunshine and the grass spreads its covering of soft green over spots that were bare and unsightly ; when the birds hold morning concerts and look around for suitable places to build their nests ;—then it is that the careful housekeeper begins to talk about the inevitable spring cleaning. To the superficial observer her rooms already appear to be in beautiful order, but she knows from past experience that there are cobwebs in unsuspected corners, that the backs of the pictures which adorn the walls are lodging places for dirt, and that clouds of dust will arise when the clean-looking carpet is beaten. The ordeal is not pleasant while it lasts, but when broom and duster and scrubbing brush have done their part there is solid satisfaction in the feeling that the house is clean from garret to cellar.

It is not good for any one to indulge in the constant habit of introspection, and yet a season of spiritual house-cleaning may be as beneficial as the annual removal of dust and rubbish from our dwellings. We have perhaps fallen into the habit of thinking that we are reasonably virtuous and that the chief concern of our lives is to inspire others to become as good as we are. While we may not actually be guilty of thanking God that we are not as the publicans around us, there is a comfortable consciousness that people consider us industrious, upright, philanthropic.

Perhaps if we begin to ransack the dark closets we shall discover the moths of envy and jealousy beginning to eat holes in our robes of righteousness. We notice that others who, in our estimation are no better than ourselves, or not nearly so good, are often preferred before us ; and instead of searching for and striving to imitate that in their characters which endears them to their fellow-men we allow ourselves to indulge the feeling that we are not appreciated, and thus the light shining out from our lives is feeble and flickering when it should be bright and clear.

Then it may be that there are ugly prejudices lurking in unsuspected corners,—opinions that we hold because our fathers held them before us, or that we have formed without hearing both sides of the question. There is no doubt in our minds that certain virtues are much more important than certain other virtues. If any of our fellows are lacking in what we consider essential it does not matter how many other good traits they may have ; without these essentials they are unworthy of our esteem or regard. In thus condemning persons who may be better than we are in God's sight we forget that "love suffereth long and is kind ; love envieth not ; love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up."

It may be, too, that cobwebs of suspicion have formed before our eyes which need brushing away. There are people around us who wish us well and are trying to help us along ; but because their estimate of us is less than our own we foolishly imagine that they have turned against us, or do not care what becomes of us. The sooner we get rid of such cobwebs as these the better, for nothing interferes more with true spiritual development than unkind thoughts of others.

If we will open all our doors and windows, let the light of love shine into our souls and the fresh air of hope and trust find its way into every nook and corner, there will be a cleansing of the entire spiritual nature ; and the virtues which adorn our characters will brighten other lives because they are no longer hidden or obscured by mean and unworthy faults.

THERE have been many editorial utterances in the Outlook that we could not endorse, but we are glad to quote from its columns such ringing words as these :

"We understand perfectly well that politics makes strange bedfellows ; that in politics one must often work with men whom one would not choose as his associates ; that in politics, when one cannot do what he would, he must fain do what he can ; that in politics one must often sacrifice a subordinate issue to win a paramount one. We understand perfectly well that, in order to get a Cuban treaty and the Panama treaty and the anti-trust legislation through the Senate, it was important to have two Republican Senators from Delaware. But these are not the paramount issues ; honesty is the paramount issue—that is second to none other ; all other issues are second to that. We mean exactly this. It would be better to sail away from the Philippines and leave them to themselves, whatever ruin might befall them ; better to refuse reciprocity with Cuba and leave her to fight her own commercial battles ; better to postpone the building of an inter-oceanic canal another fifty years or leave it unbuilt forever, or let France, England, or Germany build it ; better to leave the trusts to be dealt with by industrial forces and State governments, than to compromise with the corruption which buys a State in the open market, confesses the deed, and justifies the bribery by the cynical declaration that nothing succeeds like success."

THE Legislature of Arizona, by an almost unanimous vote, passed a bill extending the right of franchise to women. This was vetoed by Governor Brodie on the ground that it was unconstitutional. Concerning the bill the Tucson, Arizona, Star says:

The saloon and gambling element were the strongest class that urged the disapproval of the bill. It is a matter of fact that, in several of the towns, the petitions which went to the governor were carried around by saloon keepers and gamblers, and that the gamblers in Prescott, Phoenix, and Tucson were betting that the governor would veto the bill. To-night the saloons of Phoenix are the center of rejoicing on account of the stand Governor Brodie has taken on the suffrage bill, claiming that they are on top, and that the governor is with them. As a prominent citizen said to-night: "The gamblers and saloons win, the women lose."

THE reading of the twenty-sixth annual report of the Pennsylvania Society to Protect Children from Cruelty arouses mingled feelings of pity, indignation and thankfulness; pity for the abused and helpless little ones, indignation because of the cruelty of their caretakers, and thankfulness that there are some who find time, in the midst of our strenuous life, to care for those whose only claim upon them is that of suffering humanity.

The report shows a decrease in the number of cases of actual cruelty; this indicates that there is less degradation and vice, or a wholesome dread of the consequences which the Society invariably imposes for inhuman treatment. During the year the Society investigated 992 cases, involving 2,705 children; it is a matter of course that nearly half of these were the result of drunkenness. The children who were taken from their parents were placed in institutions, hospitals, or private families, four being sent to the Friends' Home for Children, in West Philadelphia.

WE have received the welcome information that the Proceedings of the Asbury Park Conference will be distributed this week. Concerning their distribution and the delay in their publication, John W. Hutchinson writes as follows:

"The 1,250 copies in paper covers will be distributed to the Yearly Meeting according to their respective quotas, also all that are left of the 250 cloth-bound copies, after one has been sent to each member of the Central Committee and to those who were assigned appointments on the program. The delay in publishing has been a cause of much annoyance and disappointment to the committee, but it was beyond their control. It was considered best for economical reasons to have them printed from the type used in printing the daily paper during the Conference, and from this much of the trouble arose; much of it was so bad that it had to be reset, and as it is there are many imperfections."

THE Committee on Membership of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting deserves commendation for its practical efforts to spread the principles of our Society. Two large meetings have already been held under its auspices,—one at Girard Avenue, addressed by Isaac H. Hillborn, and one in West Philadelphia, addressed by Joel Borton. A third meeting will be held in Race Street Meeting-house on the evening of the 21st, which will be addressed by John J. Cornell. The Friends who attend this meeting should make an effort to bring others with them who have little knowledge of the principles and testimonies of the Society.

BIRTHS.

COCKS.—At Cornwall-on-Hudson, N. Y., Third month 28th, 1903, to Isaac Mailler and Elizabeth C. Cocks, a daughter, who is named Dorothy Cocks.

COCKS.—At Cornwall-on-Hudson, N. Y., Fourth month 1st, 1903, to Charles Campbell and Emma L. Cocks, a son, who is named Charles Edward Cocks.

HAINES.—On Third month 14th, 1903, at Clarksboro, N. J., to S. Walter and Emily W. Haines, a daughter, named Isabel Beulah.

HAVILAND.—At Purchase, N. Y., Third month 19th, 1903, to C. Herbert and Esther C. P. Haviland, a son, who is named Carlton Carpenter.

HULL.—At Baltimore, Md., Fourth month 8th, 1903, to James Dixon and Mary Broome Hull, a daughter, who is named Ruth Passmore Hull.

PARRY.—At Cinnaminson, New Jersey, Third month 13th, 1903, to William S. and Sarah R. Parry, a daughter, who is named Margaret Parry.

RUSSELL.—At Cleveland, Ohio, Fourth month 10th, 1903, to A. Curtin and Carrie B. Russell, a son, named John.

TOMLINSON.—At Swarthmore, Pa., Second month 4th, 1903, to Arthur H. and Emma Pyle Tomlinson, a daughter, who has been named Dorothy.

DEATHS.

BABB.—At her home, Pleasant Grove, Belmont County, Ohio, Tenth month 7th, 1902, Martha, wife of Aaron Babb, aged 71 years; a member of Short Creek Monthly Meeting.

She was the daughter of Evan and Rebecca (Vickers) Lewis, formerly of Pennsylvania.

BOONE.—Third month 26th, 1903, Samson, son of Driver and Anna Kersey Boone, aged 76 years.

His early life was spent in Spiceland, removing in 1852 to Richmond, Indiana, where he has since made his home. In Second month, 1854, he was married to Elizabeth Hoover Sanders, daughter of Jacob and Sarah Sanders; she with three children, Ella S. Morgan, Edna Elizabeth and Walter Sanders Boone, survive him.

He was a birthright member of the Society of Friends. During the later years of his life he was devoted to his meeting and Sabbath School, in the latter being a teacher of marked ability. His inability more recently to attend meeting was a great trial, but this, with prolonged physical suffering, was borne with remarkable patience, trusting in Him who hath said: "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled."

COCK.—At the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Sherman Everts, in Plainfield, New Jersey, Fourth month 4th, 1903, Harriet H. Cock, widow of the late Effingham Cock, in the 76th year of her age; a member of Chappaqua Monthly Meeting. Funeral services were held at Chappaqua, New York, Fourth month 7th, 1903.

EMBREE.—On First-day night, Ninth month 14th, 1902, at his home in Flushing, L. I., Robert Cornell Embree, son of the late Effingham and Sarah Franklin Embree, in the 79th year of his age; a steady attender of Flushing Meeting.

FOULKE.—At her home, St. Clairsville, Ohio, Third month 18th, 1903, Phoebe Sidwell Foulke, widow of Aaron Foulke, in her 84th year, a member of Plainfield Monthly Meeting.

HAMPTON.—In West Chester, Pa., on Fourth month 8th, 1903, Caroline Sharpless Hampton, in the 71st year of her age; a member of Birmingham Monthly Meeting of Friends.

MORRIS.—On Third month 29th, 1903, of paralysis, Susan H. Morris, wife of Thomas B. Morris, aged 71 years. A member of Whitewater Monthly Meeting of Friends, at Richmond, Ind.

OWEN.—In Richmond, Ind., Fourth month 1st, 1903, of dropsy, Susan Plummer Owen, aged 71 years.

PEARSON.—At Darby, Penna., Fourth month 9th, 1903, Alice A. Pearson, in the 87th year of her age.

PICKERING.—At the residence of her nephew, Thomas Stapler, near Newtown, Bucks county, Pa., on the 5th of Fourth month, 1903, Emily Pickering, aged 80 years, the last surviving daughter of the late Stacy Pickering; a member of Makefield Monthly Meeting. Interment at Makefield.

WOOD.—In Philadelphia, Pa., on Fourth month 8th, 1903, at the home of his son-in-law, Frank Wilson, Daniel Wood, in his 76th year.

Interment at Horsham Friends' burying ground.

WALTON.—At Hatboro, Pa., on Fourth month 3d, 1903, Comly Walton, aged 67 years.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

SUSAN PLUMMER OWEN.

SUSAN PLUMMER OWEN, who died in Richmond, Ind., Fourth month 1st, 1903, at the age of 71, was the eldest daughter of William and Mary Owen, and granddaughter of Joseph Pemberton and Susanna Husband Plummer.

She died in the house in which she was born. Her mother died when Susan was young, leaving seven children, brothers and sisters, one an infant boy of seven months. To these children she was a faithful, unselfish caretaker till the close of her life. Her father, being an invalid much of his life, also received her devoted care and attention.

She began teaching at the age of 16 years in Green Mount Boarding School, founded by John Haines in 1852. She afterward taught for many years in the public schools of Richmond. For a few years she taught the public school for colored children, as they were not then admitted in the schools for white children. This was not deemed a desirable position, but she filled it willingly and gladly, because her sympathy went out to them, as it always did to those she deemed unfortunate or neglected. She gave up teaching later to give more time to her invalid father and sister. After their death, when she was past 50 years old, she took up a new study, that of stenography and typewriting. Becoming proficient in this, she taught classes in her own home for many years. Her pupils are numbered by hundreds, and their certificates win them positions where others fail. She was most earnest and faithful in her work, and required the same fidelity in her pupils. In her they always felt they had a true and sympathetic friend. She was one of the oldest educators in the State.

In addition to her labors, she studied and became quite proficient in two or three languages beside English—French and German especially. She was an ardent lover of flowers, and cared for them until the last, asking if her potted plants were attended to.

She had an unflinching sense of humor, which remained with her to the end, sustaining her, no doubt, as it did Lincoln, under trials grievous to be borne.

Though her health was evidently failing for several weeks, she kept up, and taught her classes until her voice failed, when she was persuaded to give up and go to bed.

Here she lay peacefully for nearly two weeks, taking her first rest, when her life suddenly went out—so suddenly that her bereaved youngest brother, who had been consigned to her care by her dying mother, grieves sorely because he could not give her a loving farewell. How true it is “Then out of sight and out of reach they go—

Those close, familiar friends who loved us so;
And sitting in the shadow they have left,
Alone with loneliness, and sore bereft,
We think with vain regret of some fond word
That once we might have said and they have heard.”

Her interest and care extended also to all her nephews and nieces, and they gathered around her with her bereaved brothers, and mourned their great loss, as of a mother beloved. Her funeral was largely attended by the friends of her youth, who had known her heroic, self-sacrificing life, and who bore most sincere testimony to her wise and strong character and her great worth.

Many of her pupils, young men and women, looked upon her noble face with evident emotion. Now she has joined

“The choir invisible
Of those immortal dead who live again
In minds made better by their presence.”

She literally fulfilled the injunction, “Occupy till I come,” and was ready for the welcome, “Well done, good and faithful servant.” Her two beloved sisters preceded her, and now they lie side by side, a loving trio, on a green hill in “Earlham.” The following poem by Henry van Dyke, descriptive of her beautiful life, was read at her funeral.

O who will walk a mile with me
Along life's merry way?
A comrade blithe and full of glee,
Who dares to laugh out loud and free,
And let his frolic fancy play,
Like a happy child, through the flowers gay
That fill the field and fringe the way
Where he walks a mile with me.

And who will walk a mile with me
Along life's weary way?
A friend whose heart has eyes to see
The stars shine out o'er the darkening lea,
And the quiet rest at the end o' the day—
A friend who knows, and dares to say,
The brave, sweet words that cheer the way.
Where he walks a mile with me.

With such a comrade, such a friend,
I fain would walk till journeys end,
Through summer sunshine, winter rain,
And then?—Farewell, we shall meet again!

H. A. P.

A DISPATCH from Tabor, Iowa, says that the small cottage in which John Brown, the Abolitionist, lived for several years in the 50's, and which was used as the headquarters of his underground railroad for the helping of runaway slaves, has been destroyed by fire.

WILLIAM BLAKE'S “Illustrations of the Book of Job” was sold at auction in London recently for $28,000. The volume was published in 1825, and contains forty-three original proof impressions of engravings and original designs in colors.

THE recent Congress, in its Indian appropriation bill, dropped ten agencies from the appropriation list in 1904. Three of these are already in charge of school superintendents, and the remaining seven will be so placed before June 30th. Eighteen other agencies had previously been abolished. —[The Southern Workman.]

DOUKHOBOR ETHICS.

Compiled from Joseph Elkinton's book, "The Doukhobors."

SINCE the arrival of the Doukhobors in Canada they have proved themselves to be a moral, industrious people, who through their ignorance may easily be led into religious fanaticism, as was demonstrated by last winter's pilgrimage undertaken by a large number in search of Jesus. There are three requirements of the Canadian Government against which many of them make conscientious protest: these are individual property holding, civil marriage, and civil registration. Their views upon these subjects are set forth in a petition to the Canadian Government from the delegates of the Society of Universal Brotherhood, near Yorkton, Assiniboia, Sixth month 22, 1900. This was prepared by A. Bodyansky, "one of the friends of the Doukhobors who lived with them in the Caucasus, full of sympathy for their exalted Christian ideals; he left Russia and became literary interpreter of the Doukhobor protestations against the Government of Canada." To the question as to what they thought of the contents of this petition, one of the signers answered: "As to that which Bodyansky has written, you know that we have not enough mind to understand each work, and there are certain words which do not suit us at all, but Bodyansky is a tenacious old man, and interprets always according to his own way."

After receiving this petition and investigating the matter the Dominion officials reached the conclusion that Bodyansky was little better than a professional agitator, and he was finally forced to leave the country. The Philadelphia Yearly Meeting (Orthodox) sent a letter to the Doukhobors explaining the reasons for the requirements of the government and endeavoring to convince them that they might comply with these requirements without sacrificing their liberty of conscience, but there are still many of the colonists that remain unconvinced. Those who have visited the Doukhobors testify that where they hold the land in common the latest and best reaping and other agricultural implements are in use in those villages where the common purse was available for their purchase; and that loose family relations are almost utterly unknown amongst them.

PETITION TO THE CANADIAN GOVERNMENT.

Before everything else, we must extend to you, from the communities which delegated us, their sincere and heartfelt thanks for opening the country which is governed by you to us, for your endeavors to help us to settle and for your interest in our welfare. We feel and express to you our great gratitude. But now, after becoming acquainted with the laws of your country, we are obliged to make another request, that you take into consideration our beliefs, which we consider to be the laws of God, and grant us the possibility to settle and live in your country without breaking those laws, as we believe them to embody the truth of God, but we have found out that you have in force laws the fulfillment of which will be a direct breaking of such truth.

(1) The laws of your country require that every male emigrant 18 years of age, who wants to settle on vacant government land, has to record it in his name, and, after a certain term, such land becomes his property. But we cannot accept such a law, cannot record homesteads in our individual names, cannot make them our private property, for we believe that in so doing we would break directly God's Truth. Who knows this truth knows also that it opposes the acquisition of property. But if, through human weakness, a man may be forgiven for considering as his own anything which he has acquired by his labor, and which is necessary for his daily use, like clothing, food, or household goods and utensils, there is no excuse for a man who, knowing the law of God, still appropriates as his own something that is not the fruit of his labor, but was created by God for the use of everybody. Is not the division, the ownership and the recording of land the main cause of wars and strife among men, and is it not the cause of there being masters and serfs? The law of God commands men to live like brothers, without divisions, but in union for mutual help; but if a man cuts out and appropriates land for himself,—land which he did not work to create,—how is he going to divide with others the results of his own labor? And as every breaking of Divine Truth brings evil, so did evil creep among us when we thoughtlessly accepted land under your homestead laws. Already the division of land between our various settlements has caused quarrels about that land among us, quarrels unknown to us heretofore. And what will be the result if each one of us becomes the owner of a separate piece, and the land under our settlements becomes private property? It will prove a great temptation to the strong, and fatal to the weak. Taking all the above into consideration, we petition you to let us have the land for settlement and agricultural purposes, not upon your general conditions for emigrants, but upon the conditions given to your Indians—that is, the land to be held by the community, and not by individual members. It matters not to us whether that land be considered our community property, or the property of your country; but we would like it to be considered as given to us for an indefinite period of time, and if you wish us to pay rent we are willing to do so, provided we shall be able.

(2) You have also a law in your country that everybody who wants to contract a marriage, in order to make it legal, shall obtain a license, and pay two dollars for the same; and that a divorce can be obtained only in the courts; and if a person should re-marry without a divorce so obtained he is liable to imprisonment for many years.

We cannot accept such a law, for we believe that it also violates the law of God. We cannot believe that a marriage can become legal because it is recorded in a police register and a fee of two dollars paid for it; on the contrary, we believe that such recording and payment annuls marriage and breaks up its real legality. We believe that the real legalization of a marriage union is when it is brought about freely as a result of pure feeling, of a mutual moral affection between man and woman. Only such a pure feeling of love, born of the mutual recognition of moral traits of character, creates a real legality of marriage according to the law of God,—not a record of the same in a police register and a money fee. Every marriage which has its source in this pure feeling of mutual love will be legal before God, although it were not registered, and other people would not recognize its legality; and every marriage not the result of free will and pure love, but contracted unwillingly, or for lust, or money, or any other consideration, will be always illegal before God, although it should be registered in all the police records and considered legal by everybody. Therefore we believe that the legalization of the marriage bond belongs solely to God. . . . As to divorce, we believe that every man who has divorced his wife is an adulterer, and forces her to become an adulteress; and that every re-marriage, or marrying a divorced man or woman, is also adultery.

In consideration of the above, we cannot recognize as correct, and cannot accept any human laws as to the marriage union, being sure that all pertaining to it is in the province of God's will and human conscience.

(3) There is another law in your country, which requires that every inhabitant shall give notice to the police of every birth and death in his family. We cannot accept that law, for we see no need of it in the order of things prescribed by God. Our Heavenly Father knows, without a police register, whom He sends into the world and whom He calls back. Only the will of God is important to humanity, for upon it depends our life and death, and not upon a police register. A man will live until he is called by his Creator, although he should not be recorded in a police register, and can die immediately after having been registered as living. We do not refuse to answer, if called upon, about the number of births and deaths in our communities. If anybody wants to know it, let him ask; but we will not, of ourselves, report it to any one.

Having explained what in the laws of your country is irreconcilable with what we consider the Divine Truth, and which we cannot break, we once more petition the Government of Canada to grant us exceptions concerning the use of lands, legality of marriage unions, and registration, in order that we may live in Canada without breaking the Divine Truth as we understand it.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

WOODSTOWN, N. J.—Salem First-day School Union was held here Fourth month 11th, 1903. The morning session began shortly after 10 o'clock with a Bible reading from the 15th chapter of I. Corinthians—the "Resurrection chapter"—and prayer. All the twenty-eight delegates from our six schools were present except five, and three of these were excused. Only one school was unrepresented. From the statistical reports we find there are five hundred pupils in our schools, being a slight increase over last year; also we have had an increased average attendance. The reports of work done were generally encouraging and denoted a conscientious performance of duty on the part of many, although in some schools there is an imperative need for more assistance in the good cause. An "Appeal from the Yearly Meeting's Committee on the subject of First-day Schools" was read, and the clerks were directed to sign it and forward copies to our schools.

After enjoying the bountiful lunch provided by the good Friends of Woodstown, a large audience gathered at 2 o'clock for the exercises of the afternoon. Many beautiful recitations by the children of our schools were followed by a series of papers upon the general topic of "Reverence": 1st, Do we show sufficient reverence during prayer? 2nd, for the Bible; 3d, for our First-day; 4th, for our meeting. The papers were prepared by Miriam L. Moore, Sarah Acton Hilliard, Mary A. John, and Deborah A. Ballinger, in the order named. They were all excellent and seemed to be deeply appreciated by those who heard them. Mention was made of the School of Methods for First-day school workers to be held at Buck Hill Falls in Sixth month; and those who may go as representatives from our schools were directed to bring full reports of what they learn there to our next Union, which meets in Salem in Ninth month. When the meeting closed a little after 4 o'clock there seemed to be a general feeling that an especially favored and profitable day had been spent in the Master's service. L. P.

PLYMOUTH, PA.—At the regular meeting of the Friends' Association held Fourth month 10th, Arthur Dewees read an article on the "Art of Skipping," followed by a recitation by Eliza Ambler. Emma Sheppard read a review of John William Graham's essay on Isaac Pennington. Benjamin Smith then read a paper on the teaching in our colleges along the lines of modern scientific methods of a spiritual nature, which was followed by a brief discussion. Meeting then adjourned to meet Fifth month 8th. WILLIAM W. ANBLER, Sec.

WRIGHTSTOWN, PA.—The Young Friends' Association held the last meeting of the season on First-day, Fourth month 5th. In the absence of the president and vice-president Walter S. Wright presided.

Grace E. Hellyer gave a very interesting account of the early foreign missions. She said that mission work began with the beginning of Christianity. More was done by the Roman Catholic Church than by any other one church, and they have established schools where their religion is taught, have papers and funds, and support their missions liberally. The Moravians think no one should become a missionary unless having a direct call from God. In 1810 the first American Society was organized at Andover, Mass., and the first missionary was sent to Japan. Jennie S. Briggs contrasted the value of home and foreign missionary work. In home missionary work the Friends are very active, their Philanthropic Committee having eleven departments. The Laing and the Schofield Schools of South Carolina represent the interest taken by Friends in the colored people of the South. Another suggestive feature has been the sending of Friends' lesson leaves to isolated Friends, thus giving them cheer by showing them that they are not forgotten. Harriet T. Gore then gave a reading entitled "The Law and the Gospel," followed by a synopsis of the First-day school lessons by Eleanor McD. Warner. She said: "We believe in a free Gospel ministry, we disbelieve in a professional ministry. We do not mean to condemn paid ministry, certainly we recognize the great value of the pastors of Christian churches, but may we not question if they would not be even more valuable to society if they were equally faithful in the midst of the active business of life? Though we differ from them as to the method of greatest effectiveness, that need not prevent us from laboring with them in heartiest union when occasion offers. L. T. W., Cor. Sec.

CHESTER, PA.—The Fourth Month Meeting of Chester Friends' Association was held in the Meeting-house on Sixth-day evening, Fourth month 10th. After the business of the evening had been transacted the members listened to an excellent paper, entitled "Isaac T. Hopper," by Anna Wood. The writer dwelt upon the humorous side, as well as the intellectual, of this noted Friend. Laura James gave a paper on "Current Events," and Irvanna Wood completed the program for the evening by reciting Longfellow's beautiful poem "Resignation." IDA HOUSTON, (Cor. Sec.)

HORSHAM, PA.—The Young Friends' Association met Third month 29th, 1903, and was opened by Howard Comly reading the third chapter of 1st Corinthians. Harriet Roberts recited a beautiful poem entitled "Among the Rushes." Agnes Walton not being present, Laura Stackhouse read some incidents in the life of William Penn from Janney's History of Friends. Elizabeth Hallowell and Rachel Jarrett reported on Current Topics after which Joel Borton gave an excellent address on "The Essentials of Christian Faith,—Light, Life, and Love."

CINCINNATI, OHIO.—The Friends' Association met at the home of Pierce Cadwalader, Third month 29th. After the opening silence, a selection entitled "Compensation," was read by Dora Gallagher. The first paper, "If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again?" was prepared and read by Dora Gallagher, who opened the subject with quotations from a sermon by Elwood Trueblood. The paper was full of the spirit of spring, with its budding trees and flowers, and the general resurrection of all life. Many strong points were emphasized by passages from the New Testament.

Charles Johnson's paper, "Has the Friend been Selfish with His Religion?" was short but comprehensive, and proved beyond a doubt, that the true Friend is unselfish in all things. A poem, entitled "Each in His Own Tongue," was read by Elsie Murray. This completed the afternoon's program, and the meeting closed with the usual silence.

GRACE D. HALL, Ass't Clerk.

PENDLETON, IND.—Our regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held Fourth month 5th, at Fall Creek Meeting-house. After the opening of the meeting by the president, quotations from St. Paul were given by the members.

Ida M. Cooper read an interesting paper on "Influence of Popularity in Church Work," which brought out discussion on how much we must cater to public opinion. "A Plea for Spirituality" by Finley Tomlinson, was a most excellent paper, pleading for that which tends toward spiritual growth and the uplifting of mankind. An interesting discussion on this subject followed. Appropriate declamations were given by Edith Kinnard and Georgia Ball. An able article on "Scriptures," sent to us by the Richmond Young Friends' Association was then read. E. S. D.

CHRISTIANA, PA.—On the evening of Fourth month 5th, the Young Friends' Association met at the home of M. Jennie Rakestraw, and was opened by the president reading from the book of John.

The meeting of Third month was devoted to the interpretation of verses from St. Matthew. Two of the appointments being continued until this evening, Allison Baker, Francis Brinton, and others gave instructive views on the text, "But go ye and learn what this meaneth, I desire mercy and not sacrifice, for I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance" (Matthew, ix., 12.) Lydia Rakestraw outlined VanDyke's "The Story of the Other Wise Man," to make us more fully appreciate the meaning of the verse, "And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me" (Matthew, xxv., 40.)

The subject for this evening's program being the book of John, Laura Walter gave very fully and clearly the chief characteristics of the book. The appointees for the following being absent, brief remarks were made on the texts: "And the light shineth in the darkness and the darkness apprehended it not" (John, i., 5); "Let not your heart be troubled" (John, xiv., 1); "And if any man hear my words and believe not, I judge him not, for I came not to judge the world but to save the world" (John, xii., 47). This last was thought to be a great source of comfort, showing the mercy of God and also teaching us to be slow to judge others. Marion Bushong read the historical explanation of the passage, "Now the passover of the Jews was at hand and many went up to Jerusalem out of the country before the passover to purify themselves" (John, xi., 55). Francis Brinton explained the text, "Nevertheless among the chief rulers also many believed on Him, but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue" (John, xii., 42). Many expressed their gratification in the interest shown in the new form of program. After singing "Nearer my God to Thee," and texts from John, the meeting adjourned.

S. EDNA FOWNALL, Secretary.

EDUCATIONAL.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

On the 8th instant Dr. Magill lectured to the advanced students in French on Voltaire.

Dr. Appleton, during the recent holidays, attended the sessions of the American Philosophical Society, of which he is a member.

On the evening of the 10th Dr. Battin gave an illustrated lecture on the Passion Play, as given at Ober-Ammergau in 1900. The lecture was especially interesting because of the fact that Dr. Battin had witnessed the play in 1900 and was able to make the descriptions vivid.

The event of the week was the annual reunion of the Somerville Literary Society, which took place in Somerville Hall on Fourth month 11th. Including the active members, there were about two hundred members of the society present, and all agreed that it was one of the most successful Somerville Days in the history of the society.

The morning exercises opened about 11 o'clock with an address of welcome from the President, Elizabeth Sutton. Catherine Hansell Earle was elected an associate life member. It was decided that membership in the "Somerville" for the greater part of the college course should henceforth be one of the qualifications necessary for eligibility to the Lucretia Mott Fellowship. The committee on the awarding of this Fellowship reported that the subscriptions for this year had been sufficient to make up the deficit for last year, pay the full amount for this year's Fellow, and leave a slight surplus. It was then announced that Annie Ross, of Flushing, L. I., was the winner of the Fellowship for the year 1903-04. Susan J. Cunningham, Professor of Mathematics, also announced that she had received the money for an extra Fellowship to be awarded to Clara Price Newport, of Swarthmore. Isabel Bronk, Professor of French, announced that she had obtained a Fellowship from the University of Chicago for Marian V. Pierce, of West Chester, Pa., these three seniors all being eligible. The Treasurer of the Swimming Tank Fund, Mary Gray Leiper, announced that the fund now amounted to about $200.

The afternoon exercises commenced at 2.15. The program opened with a piano solo, followed by a song by the Somerville chorus. Next came the reading of most interesting letters from the three Fellowship girls of last year. This was followed by "Sweet and Low," sung by the chorus, and then by a short dialogue, a translation of an idyl of Theocritus.

The meeting then adjourned to Parrish Hall, where Alice M. Atkinson, Ph.D., a Swarthmore graduate of the class of '88, gave a most interesting talk on Greece, telling some of the experiences of her recent year of study in the American school established in Athens. She followed this by an instructive exhibition of views from that famous land, and thus concluded a most enjoyable day.

In the Swarthmore meeting on First-day, John J. Cornell, of Baltimore, who, in company with his wife, is now visiting Friends' families in this vicinity, preached most acceptably to his hearers. P. M. W.

A JAPANESE lady gives this hint on good digestion for the benefit of House and Home. "The Japanese housewife looks well after the health of her family. A remedy she is never without is pepsin. It may not cure deep seated dyspepsia, but it will prevent the disease from consuming the digestive organs. We save the gizzards of our poultry always. The lining is peeled out, cleaned, dried, pounded in a mortar and the powder bottled. When a child is ill, cross or peevish, and the symptoms of indigestion are apparent, we give it half a teaspoonful half an hour before meals. This is the best of medicine for weak or abused digestion."

SOCIETY NOTES.

JOHN J. CORNELL and his wife have a minute from their monthly meeting to attend Philadelphia Yearly Meeting. They are at present visiting meetings and Friends within the limits of Concord Quarterly Meeting.

A member of Short Creek Quarterly Meeting, Ohio, writes that that meeting has given R. Barclay Spicer a minute to Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, expressing their unity with him as a member. Another Friend sends the information that Alice C. Robinson of Baltimore, has a prospect of attending Philadelphia Yearly Meeting.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

ELIZABETH H. COALE says, in a letter to the editors, "I was much pleased with the editorial in last week's paper on 'The Inefficiency of Christians.' I have long held the opinion that Christians have it in their power to do much toward ridding the world of many evils, if only they would put their Christianity to work,—be living, practical Christians."

In the sketch of his life which appeared in the INTELLIGENCER the writer said, "It is believed that Robert Biddle was the oldest of the nine founders of Riverton, N. J." Concerning this Isaac H. Clothier writes as follows: "I think that at least three of his associates were his seniors, perhaps more. Caleb Clothier was born in 1806 and was therefore about eight years older. Of the others I have not exact information, but Dillwyn Parrish was, I think, at least five years older, and Charles D. Cleveland also a few years his senior, while William D. Parrish, Daniel L. Miller, Jr., and Rodman J. Wharton were probably about the same age as he."

Wilbur W. Marshall, wife and daughter, of Philadelphia, who are members of one of Bartlett's select tours, have been spending the present week in Jerusalem, and from there will go to Cairo and Alexandria, Egypt. After finishing their Oriental tour they will visit Southern and Central Europe and Great Britain, sailing for home in the Seventh month.

Isaac Eyre, of Newtown, Pa., writes that Makefield Monthly Meeting has already lost about as many members by death in 1903 as in all the year of 1902. Charles M. Stabler was a member of this meeting.

At a recent meeting of the trustees of the University of Pennsylvania Provost Harrison announced that Joseph Wharton had authorized the erection of that part of the proposed building for the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce which will front on Woodland avenue. The estimated cost of this is $200,000 and it is expected that it will be ready for occupancy the coming fall.

LITERARY NOTES.

THE series of articles on adult schools, by J. Wilhelm Rowntree and Henry Bryan Binns, which appeared in Present Day Papers during the latter half of 1902, have been gathered in a volume of 88 pages, bound in gray boards, published by Headly Brothers, London. The book contains an introductory chronological record of the adult school movement and its relation to the Society of Friends, including such items as the following:

- 1810. Friends' Sunday School (boys), at Bristol.
- 1813. Elizabeth Fry first visits Newgate Prison.
- 1816. Peace Society founded.
- 1828. Hickeys separation (U. S. A.)
- 1833. Admission of Friends to Parliament.
- 1846. World's Temperance Convention in London.
- 1868. Friends' Foreign Mission Association founded.
- 1883. Music taught at Ackworth School.
- 1897. Scarborough Summer School for Religious Study.

The several chapters discuss the need for adult schools, their history before and after 1870, their growth in some places and decline in others, and the best methods of class organization.

In showing the need for the schools these statements are made: "Above two-thirds of the adult population of England and Wales are either non-attenders at public worship or outside the pale of organized Christianity. Two out of every three adults in England and Wales have not heard the five million sermons preached in 1902."

Among the illustrations are portraits of Samuel Fox, Joseph Sturge and William White.

A new book by Alice Brown, "The Mannerings" (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.), portrays a series of tragic and romantic incidents in the lives of a little group of New England people of gentle blood. There is power and dramatic treatment in the telling; the characters are not forgotten with the laying aside of the book, but dwell in the memory and rise vividly in hours of meditation. In the hero, Gilbert Horne, we have just such a brooding, introspective, yet strong-souled man as Hawthorne liked to picture. One is reminded of George Meredith in the way the chapters are named, and in the author's absorption in her characters to the exclusion largely of all else. And in only one of the actors, Cassie, do we have a reminiscence of the simple, homely folk of the author's earlier stories.

Those earlier stories have about them a distinct atmosphere and fragrance that we somehow miss in this more ambitious work. Readers who prefer intense human interest will find it in this book, and vividly presented. Those who know the writer's charm of style when she is lingering over the old villages, the old gardens, and the simple griefs of old-fashioned people, will hope that these things are not to be laid aside in Alice Brown's future books. One of the too-frequent returns to the earlier style in the present volume, is this, of an orchard,— "She loved it like a sentient thing, and thrift counselled her to get its loveliness by heart to carry with her, like a picture, into her old-maid home. All the tendrils of her life had twined about these trees and drawn some strength from them. . . . This was not New England, this little tract of trees inclosed by tumbling walls. It was enchantment mingled out of age and beauty."

For Friends' Intelligencer.

PRAYER.

DEAR Father, humbly do we come to Thee ;
We bow in meekness on our bended knee.

In silence, in our closet, meekly pray
That Thou wilt guide our footsteps every day.

O may our eyes be opened—plainly see,

By faith and hope and love drawn near to Thee ;
We feel Thou art supreme on sea and land—
All move in glorious harmony at thy command.

We feel our utter helplessness ; to Thee we plead
That Thou our steps in holier paths may lead
Our wandering souls to Christ, whom Thou hast given,
Whose love and counsel guide us in the way to heaven

O holy Father, do Thou, in this awful hour
Of war and desolation ruled by Satan's power,
Keep us from false ambitions, hate and greed,
That cause all nations on the earth to bleed.

We love to call Thee Father, drawn so near to Thee ;
'Tis joy to feel thy presence as it sets us free
From every sin and sorrow, helping us to say
"Satan, get thee behind, we follow not thy way."

— We thank thee for thy wisdom, teaching us the cause
Of sorrow, sin and suffering—the breaking of thy laws ;
For this there is a penalty humanity must bear,
Then give us faith, we pray, to guard our steps with care.

Dear Father, give us faith ; thy light upon us shine,
And ever lead all nations by thy hand divine ;
And when our time shall come, the call to us be given,
Then may we enter in to the peaceful joys of heaven.

Philadelphia.

CHALKLEY HATTON.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

"LIGHT, MORE LIGHT." 1

I LOVE to ponder on the good I see
 In every normal human life—each soul a light,
 Which though obscured by earth, yet beameeth bright,
 Dimmed by shades and shadows—yet may be
 In some new environment evolved, a radiant star—
 As orbs within that in the azure night.
 Such stars, we note, are dim and then are bright again ;
 Such hearts, we know, give joy and then, alas, give pain !
 And thus we hope and pray for light, more light.

DAVID NEWFORT.

GRANDPA.

My grandpa says that he was once
 A little boy like me,
 I s'pose he was, and yet it does Seem queer to think that he Could ever get my jacket on,
 Or shoes, or like to play
 With games and toys and race with Duke,
 As I do every day.

He's come to visit us, you see.
 Nurse says I must be good
 And mind my manners, as a child
 With such a grandpa should,
 For grandpapa is straight and tall
 And very dignified ;
 He knows most all there is to know
 And other things beside.

So, though my grandpa knows so much,
 I thought that maybe boys
 Were things he hadn't studied ;
 They make such awful noise ;
 But when I asked at dinner for Another piece of pie
 I thought I saw a twinkle in
 The corner of his eye.

So yesterday when they went out
 And left us two alone
 I was not quite so much surprised
 To find how nice he'd grown.
 You should have seen us romp and run !
 My ! Now I almost see
 That p'r'aps he was, long, long ago,
 A little boy like me.

—Gertrude Morton Cannon in Youth's Companion.

The British Antarctic ship Discovery, commanded by Captain Scott, penetrated 100 miles further south than any previous explorer, and discovered an extensive mountainous region, hitherto absolutely unknown, extending to 83 degrees 20 minutes south. He thinks this indicates that the land stretches to the Pole in a series of very lofty mountains, which is considered to be far the most important geographical result ever achieved in Antarctic exploration. The Discovery wintered 400 miles further south than any vessel had previously wintered.

ORDERS have been issued by the New York Division of the Reading Railroad positively forbidding the use of cigarettes by those employed in the passenger service either when on or off duty. The reason given is that men who smoke cigarettes are apt to have lapse of memory.

WHEN the Irish Land bill was introduced in the House of Commons by George Wyndham, the Chief Secretary for Ireland, Michael Davitt, the founder of the Irish Land League, made this comment : "When I remember that in 1879 I served my first term of imprisonment for proposing almost exactly what a Conservative Irish Secretary proposed to-day, I realize how times change."

¹ Said to be the last utterance of Goethe.

METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR
 THIRD MONTH, 1903.

Mean barometer,	30.236
Highest barometer during the month, 3d,	30.608
Lowest barometer during the month, 31st,	29.582
Mean temperature,	50.2
Highest temperature during the month, 26th,	72.
Lowest temperature during the month, 2d,	29.
Mean of maximum temperatures,	58.
Mean of minimum temperatures,	42.4
Greatest daily range of temperature, 28th,	26.
Least daily range of temperature, 10th, 16th, 30th,	6.
Mean daily range of temperature,	15.6
Mean temperature of the Dew Point,	39.4
Mean relative humidity, per cent.,	75.3
Total precipitation, rain, inches,	4.93
Greatest precipitation in any 24 consecutive hours, 1.20 inches of rain, on the 30th and 31st.
Number of days on which .01 inch or more precipitation, 12.
Number of clear days 11, fair days 6, cloudy days 14.
Prevailing direction of the wind from the southwest.
Sleet on the 30th.
No snow fell during the month, a light fall of sleet with the rain on evening of 30th.

SENSIBLE TEMPERATURE DATA.

Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 61° on 21st.
Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 30° on 2d.
Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 42.7°.
Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 62.5° on 21st.
Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 29° on 1st.
Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 42.5°.
Mean of wet bulb thermometer for this month, 44°.

NOTE.—The means of the daily maximum and minimum temperatures, 58° and 42.4° respectively, give a monthly mean of 50.2°, which is 8.8° above the normal, and 3.7° above the corresponding month in 1902.

The total amount of precipitation for the month, 4.93 inches, is one inch more than the normal, and .43 of an inch more than fell during Third month, 1902.

JOHN COMLY, Observer.

Centennial Avenue, Philadelphia, Third month 31st.

DAUGHTERS OF THE REPUBLIC.

Two Daughters of the Republic, as they may well be called, have just passed away, who, in their different spheres, each represented, in a peculiar sense, the highest types of American womanhood.

One of these was Alice Freeman Palmer, once president of Wellesley, long associated with the management of the Woman's Department of the University of Chicago, holding other important official positions in education, and identified with the cause of education in general, as an adviser and as a wise and eloquent advocate. Such conspicuity as was acquired by this most womanly woman was forced upon her by the circumstances of a career distinguished by keen intelligence, energy, good will, devotion, and by modesty no less. Conspicuity as a means of self-gratification was a thing unthought of in her busy and eager life. Her powers of persuasion by speech were great, but were solely a means for the accomplishment of good. After hearing Mrs. Palmer address an educational audience, one critic said that, for the time, it seemed that oratory must be exclusively a feminine accomplishment, there was in her delivery such grace, dignity, fire, and persuasiveness. It is in accordance with her own activities that the friends of such a woman should attempt to memorialize her personality and influence by many endowments rather than by a single one.

At nearly the same time has passed away a woman of America who never was called by duty to public prominence, and yet whose whole life was dedicated to patriotism and to the refining and uplifting of her fellow-men and women. Long before the Civil War, her heart was enlisted in the cause of the downtrodden; and throughout her many years not merely individuals in need, but whole classes of the needy and the oppressed, received her inspiring and substantial sympathy and help. Even her esthetic tastes—especially in music—were not selfishly indulged; she performed an unusual part in giving to the community that in which she herself took such keen pleasure. There was something so gentle, so tender, so generously affectionate, and, too, so heroic in her personality that it is no wonder that she was the center of a group of prominent men and women—some of them closely related to herself—who have helped to share the destiny of the republic; names like those of the Lowells, of Curtis, of Barlow, and of the family of her high-minded and patriotic husband. Her interest in public affairs remained unabated to the last. That recent hostilities in Venezuela should have been put a stop to by the successful suggestion of arbitration was a keen satisfaction to her. Her greatest regret in recent years was that the attitude of the American Government toward the Filipinos seemed inconsistent with the principles of freedom in which our nation was founded.

It may be that her statue will adorn no public place; yet she would be well contented if, when future generations gaze upon St. Gaudens's monument, on Boston Common, to the memory of the intrepid, the devoted Robert Gould Shaw, it should not be forgotten that he was the son of a woman who truly loved her fellow-men, and was capable of sacrifice in behalf of the cause of human liberty.—[The Century.]

A Woman Surgeon's Idea.

DR. FRANCES DICKINSON, President of the Harvey Medical College, Chicago, is utilizing in a novel way the long familiar woman's embroidery hoop. It is to be used to demonstrate the elementary steps of surgery. Over the hoops with which members of the Freshmen class will be provided hereafter will be stretched pieces of white tanned kid. In these incisions will be made with scalpels, and in closing these with ligatures of catgut the students will acquire the five different modes of surgical stitching. The tying of surgical knots and the removal of stitches will also be taught by the same method. It is interesting to learn that some of the stitches used in surgery closely resemble those familiar to embroideries, namely the glove and blanket stitches.

Dr. Dickinson caught the idea thus being worked out while she was a student at Hesse-Darmstadt, the suggestion being there made that if pupils in surgery could acquire a knowledge of stitching before beginning work on cadavers a great point would be gained. Her new method of teaching is viewed with favor.—[Philadelphia Ledger.]

Sport That Kills.

WHEN Tourgenieff was a boy of ten his father took him out one day, bird shooting. As they tramped across the brown stubble a golden pheasant rose with a low whirr from the ground at his feet, and, with the joy of a sportsman, he raised his gun and fired, wild with excitement, when the creature fell fluttering at his side. Life was ebbing fast, but the instinct of the mother was stronger than death itself, and with a feeble flutter of her wings the mother bird reached the nest where her young brood were huddled, unconscious of danger. Then with such a look of pleading and reproach that his heart stood still at the ruin he had wrought (and never to his dying day did he forget the feeling of guilt that came over him in that moment) the little brown head toppled over, and only the dead body of the mother shielded her nestlings.

"Father, father!" he cried, "What have I done?" as he turned his horror-stricken face to his father. But not to his father's eye had this little tragedy been enacted, and he said: "Well done, my son, that was well done for your first shot. You will soon be a fine sportsman."

"Never, father; never again shall I destroy any living creature. If that is sport I will have none of it. Life is more beautiful to me than death, and since I cannot give life, I will not take it."—[Peace and Goodwill.]

A True Dog Story.

JACK and Carlo are fast friends, though Jack is fifteen years old, and Carlo but three. Jack is a poor old sorrel horse, so lean he shows all his ribs, and Carlo is a homely little yellow dog; but when I tell you what he really did, you will think he has as noble a heart as the most costly, fancy-bred dog could possibly have.

Jack's master drove him to town one day, and Carlo followed him along behind the wagon as usual. When his master hitched Jack in front of the store and went in to do his trading, Carlo climbed up on the wagon-seat, lay down with his nose on his paws, and appeared to be asleep. Old Jack hung down his head and went to sleep, too.

A grocer's team dashed by with a basket of big red apples, and one of them bounced off and rolled across the street. Quick as a flash Carlo bounded out of the wagon and caught the apple almost before it stopped. And what do you think he did with it?

He carried it in his mouth, and standing on his hind legs, gave it to Jack, who "woke up bright," and took the apple as readily as it was offered. Carlo stood and watched Jack chew it down, seeming to enjoy it equally with him, then went back and climbed up on the wagon-seat again, with a happy sigh of satisfaction.—[The Myrtle.]

The Evils of Parties.

It is a bad sign for our future that parties are now solidly organized into permanent clubs, and thus hold people to the line by threats of consequences. All parties are evils—political, scientific, religious or literary. They derive their vitality from championing a part of the truth and their intolerance from denying the other part. To hold together at all they must proscrib all who kick over the traces, crush those who resist, and terrorize those whom they can get to submit.

And this intolerance lives and grows fat in our social cowardice. The American with a gun facing an enemy is as brave as any man. But the American in a dress suit is not even surpassed in social timidity by the English.—[Robert Ellis Thompson.]

The Gospel in a Barrel.

I STOOD in a large barrel factory the other day and watched the man who inspects the barrels just before they are started down the inclined plane to the shipping rooms. He would whirl the barrel around a few times to inspect the outside, and then, rolling it over, thrust a small incandescent light into the hole in the side, and with his eyes at the opening, stand quietly gazing for a moment, as if looking for something.

"What do you do that for?" I asked.

"To see if the inside's O. K., charred all right, 'nough glue, etc.," he answered.

I put my eye to the hole in one of the barrels. All was black as pitch within.

"Here," he said, pushing me aside, and putting the little electric lamp through the hole. "Now look."

I did, and the inside of the barrel was as light as day. Every joint and irregularity was as plain as could be.

How like our lives. We never know our hearts until Jesus holds the light. How we need his inspection, even after we are his. — [Gathered.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

EARLY in the year a 48-hour dockers' strike in Amsterdam spread to the railways and cut that city off from the rest of the world. A month later three bills were introduced in the States General,—one for the organization of a railway brigade to run trains in case of need, one appointing a royal commission to settle railway grievances, and one forbidding public servants to strike. As more than half the railways in Holland belong to the government, the men employed thereon are public servants. As a counter movement the representatives of 50 labor organizations held a convention and appointed a "defense committee" composed of two representatives of the railroad employees, two of the boatmen's union, one of the national labor office, and one from each of the two Socialist parties.

THE anti-strike bills already mentioned were passed rapidly with very little discussion, and on the 6th instant a general strike on all land and water transportation systems in Holland was proclaimed by the "defense committee," which was promptly obeyed, and a universal strike of all trades was proclaimed to go into effect on the 9th. The centres of population were threatened with famine, and international complications were feared; but a dispatch from Amsterdam states that at an all-night meeting of the labor organization on the 12th, it was decided not to continue the strike.

THREE noteworthy municipal elections have recently been held. In Cleveland, Ohio, Tom L. Johnson has been re-elected mayor by a plurality of 5,985, and the council will be composed of 23 Democrats and 9 Republicans. The people have thus endorsed 3-cent fares on street cars, municipal ownership of street-car lines, and just taxation. In Toledo, Ohio, Samuel M. Jones, often called "Golden Rule" Jones, although he was the candidate of no party and was opposed by every newspaper in the city, received a plurality vote of 2,850, with Republican, Democratic, and Socialist candidates running against him. In Chicago Carter H. Harrison, Democrat, was re-elected for a fourth term, because of his advocacy of municipal ownership of street railways.

THE United States Circuit Court held at St. Paul, Minn., has handed down a unanimous decision that the Northern Securities Company, made up of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railway companies, was an unlawful combination in restraint of trade and commerce. James M. Beck was the attorney for the Government. The case will be appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States. If the decision stands it will mean that the consolidated roads will revert to the old owners and become two companies instead of one.

THE Grady-Salus Libel bill, which was introduced in the Pennsylvania Legislature on the 6th and passed by both houses in less than five days, provides in one of its clauses, that "civil actions may be brought against the proprietor, owner, publisher or managing editor of any newspaper published in this Commonwealth" to recover damages resulting from negligence "in the ascertainment of facts and in making publications affecting the character, reputation or business of citizens." There has been such a general protest against the bill by the newspapers of the State that the Governor has consented to give a hearing to newspaper proprietors and editors, on the 21st, in the House of Representatives at Harrisburg.

FOUR bills have been passed by the Legislature of Pennsylvania which may be regarded as the fruit of the Strike Commission. The first provides for the safety of miners;

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

4TH Mo. 18.—CONCORD FIRST-DAY School Union will be held in Friends' Meeting-house, Chester, Pa., at 10 a. m. All interested are cordially invited to attend.

4TH Mo. 18.—ABINGTON FIRST-DAY School Union, at Abington Friends' Meeting-house at 10.30 a. m. and 2 p. m. Subject for discussion: "Should Friends encourage foot-ball and other athletic sports as they are now practised in our schools and colleges?" All Friends interested in First-day School work are cordially invited.

4TH Mo. 18.—THE WESTERN FIRST-DAY School Union in Kennett Square Meeting-house, at 10 a. m. All interested are cordially invited.

4TH Mo. 18.—QUAKERTOWN, PA., YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Frank Ball.

4TH Mo. 18.—GIRARD AVENUE FRIENDS' Association, 8 p. m. Address by J. Russell Smith, on "Glimpses of Europe," followed by general exercises on Tennyson.

4TH Mo. 19.—HAVERFORD, PA., FRIENDS' Meeting, attended by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee.

4TH Mo. 19.—RISING SUN, MD., HENRY W. Wilbur will address a meeting under the care of Philanthropic Committee in the Town Hall at 7.30 p. m.

4TH Mo. 19.—A MEETING OF THE PHILANTHROPIC Conference of the Western Quarter, at New Garden, Pa., at 2.30 p. m. Benjamin F. Battin will address the meeting on "Arbitration in Business Life." Meeting of the Committee at 1.30.

4TH Mo. 19.—A CONFERENCE AT ABINGTON Meeting-house at 3 p. m., under care of Abington Quarter's Philanthropic Committee. Matthew Anderson, President of Berean Manual Training School, Phila., will speak on "The Negro Problem in the North." A good attendance is desired.

4TH Mo. 19.—OXFORD, PA., HENRY W. Wilbur will address a meeting under the care of Philanthropic Committee in meeting-house at 2 p. m., on the subject "Is the World growing Worse?"

4TH Mo. 19.—A Conference under the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor will be held in the Meeting-house at Willis-ton, Pa., at 2.30 p. m. Address by Joseph S. Walton.

Persons desiring to attend will be met at Edgemont on Philadelphia and West Chester trolley, if notice is given to Mordecai T. Bartram, White Horse, Pa.

4TH Mo. 21.—ADDRESS BY JOHN J. CORNELL, Race Street Meeting-house, Philadelphia, at 8 p. m., on the subject "What are the advantages of becoming and being a Friend?" The meeting is held under the care of Committee on Membership of Race Street Monthly Meeting. It is desirable.

(Concluded on page 256.)

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

the second fixes the weight of a ton of coal at 2,240 pounds; the third provides a home for old and crippled employees of the coal mines, and the admission of their wives when they have reached the age of 55 years; and the fourth prohibits the employment of any one under 21 years of age, in and around the mines, for more than eight hours a day.

NEWS NOTES.

A NEGRO student at Yale University won the prize for oratory from four white competitors.

IN 1906 The American Philosophical Society of Philadelphia will celebrate the two-hundredth anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin.

A NEW oil field has been discovered in Texas, 90 miles south of Austin, and in one week the price of land advanced from $10 to $400 an acre.

A LAW has just been enacted in Pennsylvania making it a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of from $100 to $300, to sell cigarettes or cigarette paper to minors.

Governor MURPHY, of New Jersey, on the 10th instant, revoked the charters of 927 corporations, because no tax was paid by them to the State last year.

JAMES M. BECK has resigned his position as Assistant Attorney General of the United States to become a member of a New York law firm.

YUNG LU, the controller of Chinese finances, first grand secretary, and head of the anti-foreign party, died on the 10th. The Dowager Empress has issued an edict of eulogy.

A BILL empowering municipalities to adopt the single tax method of raising local revenues was recently defeated in the English House of Commons by a majority of only 13 votes.

BRIGHAM YOUNG, the head of the Twelve Apostles of the Mormon Church, and son of the once celebrated Brigham Young, died on the 11th, in Salt Lake City.

THE Kansas Supreme Court has declared the Kansas Utopian Association with 65,000 members, illegal, in that it was simply a whisky saloon."

PASTORS of many Philadelphia churches in the Thirty-fourth Ward, on the 12th instant, denounced the License Court for granting new licenses to saloons in that section of the city.

THE Czar and Czarina of Russia arrived in Moscow on the 12th to spend Easter. Not a soldier was to be seen along the two miles of the route from the railway station to the Kremlin.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT entered Yellowstone Park on the 8th, and will spend sixteen days in seclusion, studying the habits of wild animals in company with the naturalist, John Burroughs.

HEREAFTER those appointed to civil service positions in the Philippines must agree to serve two years before receiving free transportation to the archipelago, and three years to entitle them to transportation home again.

THE Grand Jury of Columbia, S. C., on the 7th instant, returned a true bill against James H. Tillman, charging him with the murder of N. G. Gonzales, former editor of the State. The trial has been postponed until Sixth month.

DISTURBANCES in Albania have continued, resulting in the killing of the Russian Consul Stcherbina. A recent dispatch from London states that if the Porte fails to subdue the Albanians Russia will send troops to the scene of insurrection.

A later dispatch reports the destruction of a Mussulman village by Bulgarians and the massacre of its 160 inhabitants.

GOVERNOR PENNYPACKER, of Pennsylvania, has signed the bill appropriating $3,000 for the erection of a school-house on the Cornplanter Indian Reservation in Warren county.

ble that friends extend the invitation to all persons interested in our meetings.

4TH Mo. 23.—CALN QUARTERLY MEETING, at Christiana, Pa., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, at 10 a. m.

4TH Mo. 24.—THE FIRST-DAY SCHOOL Organization of Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting will hold its Spring Meeting at Girard Avenue Meeting-house at 8 p. m. Jesse H. Holmes will address the meeting on "The Prophets and Their Message." Friends generally are cordially invited.

4TH Mo. 25.—THE COMMITTEE ON Philanthropic Labor of New York Yearly Meeting will meet in Brooklyn at 2 p. m. The Sub-Committees will meet in the School Building at 1.30 p. m. A public meeting at 2.45 will be addressed by Dr. J. L. Elliott; subject, "Facts and Fictions about the Slums."

4TH Mo. 25.—THE COMMITTEE ON Philanthropic Labor of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends', in the Meeting-house, 15th and Race Streets, at 1.30 p. m. The Sub-Committees will meet as follows: The Indian, in Room No. 5, at 10.30 a. m. Peace and Arbitration, in Room No. 3, at 10 a. m. Colored People, in Race Street Meeting-house, at 9.30 a. m. Improper Publications, in Room No. 4, at 10 a. m. Purity, in Room No. 2, at 9 a. m. Women and Children, in Room No. 5, at 12.15 p. m. Equal Rights for Women, in Room No. 6, at 10.45 a. m. Temperance and Tobacco, in Room No. 1, at 11 a. m. Educational and Publication Committee, in Room No. 1, at 9.30 a. m. Legislation Committee, in Race Street Parlor, at 10.30 a. m.

4TH Mo. 25.—MANSFIELD, N. J., YOUNG

ARMSTRONG & McELVEY } Pittsburgh.
 BEYMER-DAUMAN } Pittsburgh.
 DAVIS-CHAMBERS } Pittsburgh.
 FAHNESTOCK } Pittsburgh.
 ANCHOR } Pittsburg.
 ECKSTEIN } Cincinatti.
 ATLANTIO }
 BRADLEY } New York.
 BROOKLYN }
 JEWETT }
 ULSTER }
 UNION }
 SOUTHERN } Chicago.
 SHIPMAN }
 COLLIER }
 MISSOURI } St. Louis.
 RED SEAL }
 SOUTHERN }
 JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO } Philadelphia.
 MORLEY } Cleveland.
 SALEM } Salem, Mass.
 CORNELL } Buffalo.
 KENTUCKY } Louisville.

Friends' Association, at the home of William L. Biddle.

4TH Mo. 25.—WESTBURY QUARTERLY Meeting, in Brooklyn Meeting-house, Schermerhorn Street, between Smith Street and Boerum Place, at 10.30 a. m. Ministers and Elders the day before, at 3 p. m.

(Continued on page iii.)

CONSUMERS should bear in mind that there are many brands of White Lead (so called) which are claimed to be "just as good" or better than Pure White Lead, which contain little, if any, White Lead, but are simply mixtures of Zinc, Whiting and Barytes, or other cheap, inferior materials.

Make sure that the brand is right. Those named in list are genuine.

If interested in paint or painting, address

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

Not a good lamp chimney is made without my name on it.

MACBETH.

If you'll send your address, I'll send you the Index to Lamps and their Chimneys, to tell you what number to get for your lamp.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
 Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
 For book on topic, write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

BREAD MACHINE
 For Household Use.
 Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Send subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted.
Scientific Bread Mach. Co.
 (OTRUS GRAMBERS, Jr.)
 524 1/2 Media St., Philadelphia

Awnings, Slip Covers

AWNINGS will soon be needed. There will be mutual advantage if we can do the work now; for it will do away with the delays which are almost unavoidable in the busy season—delays that are quite as vexing to us as to our patrons.

We presume that two-thirds of the errors and annoyances connected with the making and adjusting of Awnings are the result of having to do the work in a rush.

The time for putting Slip Covers on furniture is also close at hand, so every day counts in placing the order.

We have a large stock of high-grade Awning materials to select from; and for Slip Covers there are imported Belgian Linens, Cretonnes, Dimities, etc.—everything worthy that is used for those purposes.

Our usual fair prices for doing high-class work prevail. Better let us send a man to take measurements at once.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
 PHILADELPHIA.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

(Continued from Page 25b.)

4TH MO. 25.—HADDONFIELD FIRST-DAY School Union, Friends' Meeting-house, Moorestown, N. J., at 10 a.m. Question for discussion, "Can a successful business man be strictly truthful?" Trains leave Market Street Ferry, Philadelphia, at 8.20 a.m., or trolleys leave Camden every half hour stopping at meeting-house.

4TH MO. 25.—SCIPIO QUARTERLY MEETING, at Scipio, N. Y. Ministers and Elders day before, at 2 p. m.

4TH MO. 25-6-7.—NEBRASKA HALF-Year's Meeting will be held in G. A. R. hall, 12th and N streets. Meeting of Ministers and Elders Seventh-day, 2 p. m.

Meeting for worship First-day, 11 a.m. Young People's Meeting, 2.30 p. m. Second-day meeting 10 a. m. Joel Borton, of Woodstown, N. J., expects to be in attendance. Friends desiring any further information please communicate with Catharine A. Burgess, Normal, Nebraska.

4TH MO. 28.—A REUNION OF THE OFFICERS, Teachers, and Pupils who are, or have been connected with Fairhill First-day School, will be held at 8 o'clock, in the Fairhill Meeting-house, Germantown Avenue and Cambria Street, Philadelphia.

4TH MO. 29.—PURCHASE QUARTERLY Meeting, at Amawalk, N. Y., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders the day before at 2.30 p. m. Subject for Friends' Association, Fourth-day afternoon, "Friends as Citizens." Friends coming Third-day will be entertained overnight. Teams will meet at Yorktown on Third-day the trains which leave 155th St., N. Y. city at 8.03 a. m. and 4.33 p. m. (Trains leave Grand Central via Hudson Division at 7.34 a. m. and 4.12 p. m., transferring passengers to Putnam Division at Norris Heights.) On Fourth-day the train which leaves 155th St. at 8.03 a. m., and Grand Central at 7.34 a. m. will be met at Amawalk; trains leave Elmsford at 8.48 a. m. and 5.13 p. m.

5TH MO. 9-15.—PHILADELPHIA YEARLY Meeting. Friends desiring board during the week of the approaching Yearly Meeting, in Philadelphia, can apply to either of the following persons, Isaac H. Hillborn, 15th and Race Streets; Martha D. Hough, 1340 Spruce Street; Rebecca B. Comly, 1529 Centennial Avenue; Matilda K. Lobb, 1702 N. 18th Street; Sarah L. Haines, 1513 N. Marshall Street. Friends in the city having accommodations should notify the Committee.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

REDUCED RATES TO ST. LOUIS.

VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD, ACCOUNT DEDICATION LOUISIANA PURCHASE EXPOSITION.

For the benefit of those desiring to attend the Dedication ceremonies of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, at St. Louis, Mo., April 30 to May 2, and the National and International Good Roads Convention, April 27 to May 2, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets to St. Louis and return from all stations on its lines, April 26, 27, 28 and 29, good going only on date of sale and good returning to leave St. Louis not later than May 4. Tickets must be executed by Joint Agent for return passage, for which service no fee will be charged.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,
 FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, H-melike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
 Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
 Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
 $2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORELL, Clerk.
 *Phone 1-33-55.

LIZZIE J. LAMBERT,

PLAIN AND FANCY MILLINERY,
 Successor to
 E. SHOEMAKER, 1020 Green St.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St.
PLAIN MILLINERY,
 Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street
 From 736 Spring Garden Street.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

JOSEPH L. JONES

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,

Telephones. Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.

"Our Grand Success Collection"

18 splendid C. & J. Roses, including the wonderful Hardy Ever Blooming Climber, Climbing Climber, Repeat, and our New Philadelphia Crimson Rambler, and 16 other choice selected varieties, making

18 Superb for $1.00
 Roses

Best postpaid on receipt of price. Also hundreds of other choice varieties in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Our new Floral Guide, 158 pages—1.00. Address The Conard & Jones Co., Box 2, West Grove, Pa. "Growers of the Best Roses in America."

LANSDOWNE AND DARBY SAVING FUND AND TRUST COMPANY

LANSDOWNE, PA.

Full Paid Capital, $125,000.00.

2 per cent. paid on Check Deposits, 3 per cent. paid on Savings Deposits.

GEORGE FOSTER WHITE, President, Treasurer and Trust Officer; W. LANE VERBENDEN Vice-President; JOSEPH T. BUNTING, Second Vice-President; MICHAEL BUNTING, Secretary; LEWIS LAWRENCE SMITH, Solicitor.
 Acts as Executor, Administrator, Trustee, Guardian or Agent. Will is prepared and kept free of charge where this Company is named as Executor. Aims at perfect service and perfect Security. Either the Franklin National Bank or the Girard National Bank will receive deposits for this company.

United Security Life Insurance and Trust Company OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Capital, $1,000,000
 Surplus and undivided profits, 500,000

Banking and General Trust Co. Business

OFFICERS:
 WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
 JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
 ESMONDE H. AUSTIN, Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
 CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS, Assistant Treasurer.
 HENRY LABARRE JAYNE, Counsel.
 FRANCIS H. HEMPELY, Actuary.
 T. HEWSON BRADFORD, M.D., Medical Director.
 DIRECTORS:
 William M. Coates, William H. Lucas,
 Caleb J. Milne, William R. Verner,
 V. C. Sweatmao, J. W. Hampton, Jr.,
 Charles Porter, Orlando Crease,
 Robert Deonan, I. Layton Register,
 John G. Carruth, Esmonde H. Austin,
 William Bault, Silas W. Pettit,
 Joel Cook.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices Samples Free to any Address
A. L. Diamant & Co.,
 1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,
 Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.
 902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Cleansing of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.
 "The reading of which is a spiritual feast."
 FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Doukhobors. By Joseph Elkinton. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated, $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
 N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000

ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER.
 FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS.
 INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS.
 Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co. STEAMSHIP LINES

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.
 O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue, Uptown office, 408 and 1205 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
 J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P.
 TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

GREATLY REDUCED RATES TO ATLANTA, GA., AND MACON, GA., AND RETURN, VIA THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

On May 4th and 5th, the Southern Railway will sell round trip tickets from Washington to Atlanta, Ga., account the National Conference of Charities and Corrections, May 6th to 12th, 1903, at one first-class fare plus twenty-five cents, final limit May 16th, 1903. Also to Macon, Ga. on May 4th and 5th, at rate of one first-class fare, plus twenty-five cents, final limit May 10th, 1903, account of the Sugar-Cane Growers' Convention, held at that point May 6th, 8th, 1903. Corresponding low rates from other points.

The Southern Railway operates three through trains daily to Atlanta, Macon and other points South. Dining-car service on all through trains.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa., will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

THE UNION CENTRAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Assets, $34,000,000

Plain Life and Endowment Policies with Annual Dividends.
 The Highest Grade of Life Insurance at the Lowest Cost.
 The Company for Those who Think for Themselves.

Good Contracts to Good Agents.

Lawton Brothers, Managers,
 338 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

Home Kitchen Outfits

and all

House Furnishing Goods

J. FRANKLIN MILLER,
 1626 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Insurance from Loss by Fire

Best of Companies
 Lowest Rates

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

Dead men's estates are often absorbed by their debts, leaving the family penniless.

The household loaf is never buried with the household head, when that head has a policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
 921-3-5 Chestnut St.

THE DOUKHOBORS

Their History in Russia and Their Migration to Canada. By JOSEPH ELKINTON
 8vo, 344 pages, 3 maps, 50 illustrations. Postpaid, $2.00

"Timely, interesting and valuable."—Public Opinion.
 "An extremely interesting book to all in sympathy with the Doukhobors."—The Outlook.
 Only adequate account in English of this unique people and their great migration.
FERRIS & LEACH, Publishers, 29-31 North Seventh Street, PHILADELPHIA

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, FOURTH MONTH 25, 1903.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertions reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
* TELEPHONE NO. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XVII.,	257
POETRY : SERVICE,	257
WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson, (Continued,) (illustration),	257
HELPFUL CRITICISM,	259
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON : The First Days,	260
EZEKIEL ROBERTS,	261
EDITORIAL : Tolerance,	262
Notes,	262, 263
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS,	263
SOCIETY NOTES,	263
LETTERS FROM ISAAC H. CLOTHIER, II.,	264
THE SOUTH REVISITED,	265
LETTER FROM AN ISOLATED FRIEND,	266
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.,	267
EDUCATIONAL,	269
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES,	270
POETRY : Cherry-Blossoms; April Rain in the Wood; April Fools,	270
MISCELLANV : The Anti-Alcohol Congress,	270
CURRENT EVENTS,	271
NEWS NOTES,	272
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS,	271

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—COMPETENT WOMAN AS MAN-aging and working housekeeper. Address A. B., this Office.

WANTED.—A WOMAN OR GIRL TO ASSIST in doing housework. Two in family. Address 71 Front Street, Red Bank, N. J.

WANTED.—POSITION AS HOUSEKEEPER, or to care for invalid. Would travel. Address Box 97, Devon, Pa.

WANTED.—A WORKING HOUSEKEEPER for large Friends' boarding house. Address P. A. R., 50 Beekman Street, New York.

WANTED.—BOARDS FOR THE SUMMER in country. Friends' Family. Modern conveniences. Apply early, Box 125, Woodstown, N. J.

ACCOMMODATIONS FOR YEARLY MEETING Friends at F. J. and M. W. Penneck, 235, 237, 239 North Eighteenth Street

BOARDING.—DESIRABLE ROOMS WITH board. Friends. 628 N. 32nd Street, Phila.

FRIENDS FROM A DISTANCE, WHO EXPECT to attend Yearly Meeting, can be accommodated with rooms and board at a moderate rate, in a Friends' family, by applying at an early date to H. E. GREEN, 1707 Mt. Vernon Street.

BOARDS DESIRED IN FRIENDS' FAMILY on farm near Conshohocken. For further particulars address S., 1800 Spring Mill Ave., Conshohocken, Pa.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATHEWS and SISTERS, 1847 1st., N. W., Washington, D. C.

SWARTHMORE, PA. TWENTY BEAUTIFUL summer homes for rent furnished. $30 to $200 per month. Write or call on E. C. Walton, successor to Henry S. Kent.

FOR RENT.—SITTING ROOM WITH BOARD for two, at $4 each Address No. 85, this Office.

FOR RENT.—BY THE MONTH, A FURNISHED house in Swarthmore, Yale Avenue, on new trolley line. Grounds and shade for children. For particulars address HENRY KENT, Swarthmore, Pa.

It Pays Educators to Educate.
The Peoples University of Olympia, Washington, makes it pay to be in the educational business. The capital stock of that institution already pays a four per cent. dividend, and will eventually pay from six to ten per cent. The security is first-class—absolutely safe—and the enterprise highly commendable. The fact is we offer you a better investment than government bonds. Write for particulars, Eastern Office, Room 80, The Ruggery, Columbus, Ohio.
THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,
Olympia, Washington.

Endowment file No. 2. Be sure to mention the file number.

ELIZABETH LLOYD'S
"SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY"
placed in every school, would teach the beauty of Peace.

Send twenty cents for one copy of the music and twenty-five copies of the words, to
ARABELLA CARTER,
Universal Peace Union, 1305 Arch St., Phila.

SOUVENIRS.
Invitations, menus, programs—we engrave, emboss, print, and do it well. Will you call or shall we send samples?
The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,
MAKERS OF THE
BETTER KIND OF PRINTING
1019-21 Market St., Phila., Pa.
Keystone' Phone, Race 53-37 A. Bell' Phone 3-41-67 A.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

And all around
The forest sea seeds up its ceaseless roar,
Like to the ocean's everlasting chime.
—Bayard Taylor.

BUCK HILL FALLS has been made a post office with Robert Benson postmaster and Florence Jenkins assistant. The post office will be opened with the lun on Fifth month 28th, and after that date letters should be addressed simply, Buck Hill Falls, Pa. Cresco will continue to be the railroad, telegraph and express station. Thus the settlement grows.

George Wirt, Chief Forester of Pennsylvania and assistant to Prof. Rothrock, spent several days recently with Robert Benson at Buck Hill Falls, counselling what was best to do along forestry lines. A start will be made in forestry work this spring.

Early visitors to Buck Hill within the last week, looking over lots and cottages to rent, have returned laden with arbutus, and other early wild flowers. The Arbutus is particularly abundant, growing over many of the paths and lots.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.
1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
CHARLES F. JENKINS, President.
MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary and Treasurer.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETTI.

WALL PAPER of

Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,
1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER,
ANA W. SFEAKMAN, } Principals.
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOYDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Or, Jenkintown, Pa.
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR
BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City. For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Amher, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 9 p.m. to 10 p.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONS, POPLAR 29-38 D.

THE OVERSIGHT OF EXPERTS

In the printing business there are many vexatious details, the mastery of which need experienced effort to produce satisfactory results. The training of a quarter century has taught us many things which we employ for our patrons' advantage. Perhaps you have a catalogue, an announcement, or circular which needs just such care as we can give it to realize your idea. Bring it to us. The equipment of a large plant is employed for your benefit.

FERRIS & LEACH, PRINTERS, 29-31 NORTH SEVENTH STREET

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OFFICES: {62 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
{ Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
325 SWEDER STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Thompson Shours, 212 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shours, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa
Phone 3-54-78 D.

CHARLES BURTON,
Practical House and Sign Painter,
Office, 905 N. Thirteenth Street, } Philadelphia, Pa.
Residence, 1714 Woodstock Street, }

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sansom Street. Philadelphia, Pa.
J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis.
Law (Pa. and N. J.)
REAL ESTATE.

Ringe & Ellis, REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
Keystone and Bell Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
109 West Fourth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $3.85.
SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Established 180 at 84 North Second Street.
WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,
27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTENHAM,

E. T. Kuendig, Atlantic City, N. J.
R. W. Richards.

The Pennhurst,

Second House from Beach,
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator in street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,

1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts.
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN CITY, PENNSYLVANIA,
Atlantic City, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunck and Dining Room, 1377 Elbert St.
These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.
J. J. WILLIAMS.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK

UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet, 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (10 in ordinary envelope), 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet, 27 pages. * Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet, 1 page. * A beautiful lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet, 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

* * * All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, FOURTH MONTH 25, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 17.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XVII.

FORCE may subdue, but love gains.

WILLIAM PENN.

SERVICE.

FRET not that the day is gone,
And thy task is still undone.
'Twas not thine, it seems, at all:
Near to thee it chanced to fall,
Close enough to stir thy brain,
And to vex thy heart in vain.
Somewhere, in a nook forlorn,
Yesterday a babe was born:
He shall do thy waiting task;
All thy questions he shall ask,
And the answers will be given,
Whispered clearly out of heaven.
His shall be no stumbling feet,
Failing where they should be fleet;
He shall hold no broken clue;
Friends shall unto him be true;
Men shall love him; falsehood's aim
Shall not shatter his good name.
Day shall nerve his arm with light,
Slumber soothe him all the night;
Summer's peace and winter's storm
Help him all his will perform.
'Tis enough of joy for thee
His high service to foresee.

—Sydney Henry Morse.

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

BY JOHN JACKSON.

(Continued from last week.)

Soon after his father's death John Jackson married Rachel T. Tyson, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth T. Tyson, of Baltimore. Just when and where he first made her acquaintance the records do not tell us, but it seems that some time elapsed before the young woman with whom he fell in love at first sight was sure of his feelings toward him. It is evident from letters still in existence that mutual friends had doubts of the suitability of the marriage, thinking that the city girl would find it hard to content herself as the wife of a plain country farmer. Several of her letters of friendship have been preserved, written both before and after her marriage, and each of them fills a sheet or more of foolscap. There are probably very few young people at the present time who sit down and pour out to a friend four large closely-written pages of their reflections and emotions. The following beginning of a letter from Rachel Tyson to a cousin, First month 12th, 1834, gives an idea of the style of writing in vogue among young ladies in those days:

"The watch has gone his chilling round, and 'past eleven' beneath my window has already cried; yet the desire to commune with thee seems to be stronger than the inclination for slumberous repose. Oh, it is indeed refreshing to turn from the unquiet of life, from the busied scene of those civilities and activities which surround some of us, and are rather endured than enjoyed, proofs of our patience which must have its perfect work in the soul ere the spirit of resignation can be felt tranquilizing our minds through every scene."

Elizabeth Peabody, who was privileged to read the love letters of John Jackson (which have since been destroyed) says of them: "Marriage is revealed in these letters to be no mere matter of convenience, but a profound, life-comprehending sacrament, in which legitimate passion, springing into full consciousness at the first sight of its object, was purified and deepened by the interfusion of his entirely religious character. There were circumstances, inward and outward, which for a time delayed in the mind of his future wife the development of a full reciprocation of his wishes; and he was obliged to wait, with such patience as he could draw from his filial confidence that God would open a way at last to content the affections which he inspired. It was his consciousness of his submission of his will to the Divine will, that gave him faith in the purity and ultimate contentment of his love. He said to his elder sister, in a letter which he wrote to her on the subject, that he had never had a clearer evidence of inward direction than in this matter."

During the period of uncertainty on Rachel's part an active correspondence was carried on by the two young people, in which they exchanged thoughts upon general subjects, and especially upon their relations to their fellow beings and to God. That the lover's patience was finally rewarded is shown by extracts from letters written by each to a mutual friend. Rachel T. Tyson, writing from Baltimore, Sixth month 27th, 1835, to Henry and Mary Pike, says:

"Well, Henry, thou sayst it is time you had 'a hint of future prospects.' Now I do not hint matters, but I speak the plain language, for I am not ashamed of the truth; but really other people have had so much to say about this interesting concern that I have tried to be still until they had exhausted their wonder and surprise, but I was only waiting for your hint to allude to the subject myself. The estimation in which you seem to hold my friend is peculiarly grateful to my feelings, as your approval of what seems to me to be in the orderings of that wisdom which is alone profitable to direct in such important concerns is strength to my spirit. From a want of a correct knowledge of our characters some of the wise Philadelphians have volunteered their right to judge us entirely unsuited for companionship, urging the dissimi-larity of habits and life. I leave their objections to stand or fall as time shall manifest, but know for myself that truth leads none amiss, and calls its disciples from the luxurious scenes of artificial life to the simplicity which the gospel enjoins; and whether I conform or not to the realities of country life, I feel well assured I shall not use any influence to lead my friend from the footsteps of his fathers."

In another letter to the same friends, written Eighth month 27th, she further expresses her mind concerning light talk in reference to love and marriage: "There was a sentiment of my precious Mary's in your last . . . that I should love to hear echoed from the ends of the earth in reference to the 'light way' in which marriage connections are often spoken of. I would express my concern that these things should be much less the subject of conversation either grave or light, believing that our query concerning tale-bearing, to say nothing of detraction, is laid waste by the license to meddle which most persons usurp to themselves."

JOHN AND RACHEL T. JACKSON.

From a photograph in the possession of Mary A. Panceast, evidently reproduced from a daguerreotype.

John Jackson, in a letter to Henry Pike, dated Seventh mo. 29th, 1835, after devoting three closely-written pages to religious matters, becomes confidential concerning his private affairs. His allusion to his mother refers to Ann Paschall, who became his father's second wife.

"Our family is quite small at present, two of my sisters being away at school, and oftentimes one of the other two with sister Martha Schofield in Bucks County. Mother has gone to reside with her own children, and hence after being left almost without female society, I feel quite lonely. Perhaps the time is not far distant when some more interested friend may supply the place of sister or of mother and become the companion of my every-day cares. The contemplated connection between the interesting R. T. J. and myself has for some time past furnished the theme of conversation with her friends, some of whom have expressed their astonishment at the prospect of such a union and attempted to discourage as well as to darken the coming scene presented in affection's hallowed light, by asserting it a thing impossible that we could assimilate in feeling, or enjoy life happily together, while others equally interested in her welfare as well as my own have advanced sentiments of a contrary character. It has been, however, a mutual desire with us to be regulated and guided in a concern of such magnitude more by the convictions of truth in our own minds than by the opinions of others either pro or con. And I humbly trust that we have thus had the approbation of that 'wisdom which is from above' and will ever direct aright; and we are satisfied that as we walk by its teachings it will sanctify the union of our spirits to the honor of him who leadeth his children in paths that they have not known.

"I have adverted to this subject rather unexpectedly to myself, but I doubt not, however, that thou dost feel sufficient interest in Rachel to know how we are progressing in this important affair. We have not decided yet on any period for the consummation, though we have some prospect that it will be accomplished this coming fall."

When the rest of the love letters were destroyed, one written in blank verse was preserved, and the feelings therein expressed are so pure and holy that no one could object to a reproduction of a portion of it here. The date when it was written is not given.

Now, while silence spreads its mantle o'er me,
And the midnight hour moves on with calm and tranquil pace,
Let me commune with thee, dear kindred spirit.

And need I tell thee that affection's chain grows brighter
At every fresh remembrance of thee? Dost thou not know
Love kindles in the heart and burns with ceaseless ardor
At the thoughts of those we hold most dear?

Oh, I remember how our converse ran when last we met,
When our spirits mingled in sweet communion,
Which to me was like a paradise when hoarded fondness
Folds its depths of feeling in looks more eloquent than language

Ever spoke; and did not mental prayer inspire our souls
With ardent wish to know the path of duty, and our Common Father's will? Think'st thou, dear Rachel, that he would not

Bless the union of our spirits and cause affection's chain to strengthen,

As our hearts are turned to Him, the source from whence Our every blessing comes? Say, canst thou not count his blessings?

Hast thou not been happy at the fount of sacred contemplation?

When thou hast run, in wandering thought, o'er the fair face
Of nature's scenery, and lifted up thy head in holy hope
To Him who rules the universe, with fervent prayer,
Thou hast sought to tread the hallowed courts of heaven,
And yield thyself a subject to the King thereof,
Have not thine eyes beheld his power divine and traced
His goodness in rich gifts bestowed on every hand?
Be it then our theme to adore his power, and in holy faith
Enjoy that sweet communion with Him which his saints

Have ever known. And let me now, while on the wings of hope
My spirit wafts its way to realms of light and love,
Where faith assists the feeble tongue to speak his praise,
Offer a prayer for myself and thee—"Happy, thrice happy,
If it find acceptance in his sight."

Hath made the lofty firmament. Father, thy hand
The living fires of heaven that shine like glittering gems,
In realms remote where Thou hast placed them, as
The emblems of thy power, thy wisdom and thy love,
Far, far beyond the verge of this Terrestrial citadel of ours. To contemplate
The field of thy existence is too great for feeble minds
Like those of mortals! But to approach thy throne
With holiest reverence, and pour forth
In living aspirations the desires of the soul to Thee,
Thou hast ordained should be the pathway
Of thy pilgrims here below. Oh, grant me access
To the throne of light and life. Increase my faith in Thee;
Strengthen my weakness and assure my feeble efforts
To obey thy will. Oh, let the guardian angels
Of thy presence be around me,—and not round me alone,
But round the dwelling of a kindred spirit whom
I have loved, because Thou taught me that affection's
Sacred trust might be reposed in vessels
That are heavenward bound, and that to love on earth
Was in the ordering of thy wisdom, and is fraught
With happiness that knows no equal
Save the centering of the soul in Thee.
Among thy gifts "thy last, best gift to man" demands
His gratitude, because Thou saw it was not good
That he should journey through life's wilderness alone.
We look to Thee for counsel; Thou canst unite
And none can part asunder. Oh, unite our spirits, then,
And be thyself our guide; and as we journey hand in hand
Through all the scenes of life, may it be our duty
Thence, with mutual love, to celebrate the praise of Thee.

This prolonged and interesting correspondence came to a happy termination. The hope expressed in John's letter that the wedding would take place "this coming fall" was fulfilled, and the marriage was solemnized in Lombard Street Meeting-house, Baltimore, Tenth month 14, 1835. The city girl found a happy home with the plain country farmer, and in a few years this home, with her hearty co-operation, was transformed into the Sharon Female Seminary, a school held in loving remembrance by its many pupils who are still living.

ELIZABETH LLOYD.

(To be continued.)

For Friends' Intelligencer.

HELPFUL CRITICISM.

It was with much satisfaction that I perused the communication of my esteemed friend T. H. Trueblood, in the INTELLIGENCER of Second month 28th, in reply to my article in the issue of Second month 7th, and his criticisms are accepted in the spirit in which I believe they were given, that of love and a desire for the good of our beloved society. While not wishing to enter into a discussion for the mere sake of controversy, I feel the subject under consideration is worthy of careful examination, even should that examination provoke debate on the merits and demerits of the original statement that there are defects in the Society of Friends as an organization, defects to which we cannot close our eyes, unless we be wilfully blind, (and if I have read my Bible correctly, there is a woe pronounced on those who will not see), defects which all lovers of the Society wish remedied, though they may not see alike as to the methods for that end.

If we do not exchange views on topics that mutually interest us, how shall we gain that attrition of thought upon thought which brightens up our ideas and brings out all that is best in us? So let us, in a friendly spirit, investigate matters, that our search may reveal to us truths, heretofore hidden, or partially obscured by the mists and fogs of ignorance or indifference by which we are shrouded.

None of us can close our mental or spiritual vision to the fact that our principles are being widely disseminated in the world; we can scarcely hear or read a sermon from a minister of another denomination, without perceiving something parallel to our line of thought: the heads of other nations than ours are proclaiming the right of the people to their own liberty of conscience, and noticing this trend with others, I have sometimes asked myself if there is any cogent reason for the further existence of our outward organization.

Every true Friend feels a thrill of genuine pleasure when he realizes the spread of our fundamental principles, (not our peculiarities), not because they are upheld and taught by the Society of his choice, but because he is convinced they are truth, and as such, their teaching must result in ultimate good, not only to the individual, but to the community.

Yet I love the manner of worship by Friends, believing it to be in accordance with the spiritual worship taught by Jesus, and I should regret to see any other mode substituted in our meetings. There is much said now-a-days, of simplicity in our lives, even garish Paris sending forth from its "heart of sophistication," a strong plea for the beauty of "A Simple Life" as opposed to a complex one, a life of simplicity of thought, speech, action, pleasure, that it would seem strange if any one claiming affiliation with original Friends of the seventeenth century should think of, or wish for, any more elaborate form in his own meeting.

My friend and myself will well agree that "the way to build up, or even to hold what we have, is to stand firm on first principles, and show by our walk among men, the beauty of holiness." Nothing can so well convince the world of the excellence of our religious thought, as a practical exemplification of it, and I am glad to believe that, as a rule, Friends have the reputation of being honest, law-abiding citizens. Instead of thinking that our "fathers have fallen short . . . of the high calling we profess," I think it is due to their faithfulness in maintaining our high testimonies, that our present status before the world has been reached, for the name "Quaker" or "Friend" has long been a synonym for uprightness and sobriety.

Too much fault-finding is, of course, injurious, for it is discouraging to be always faulted, but I would ask my friend in all sincerity, would he pass by all delinquencies in silence, because, forsooth, the wrong-doer should not be censured, else he be discouraged? How could we expect our children, either at home, or in school, to improve in their studies or their manners, if no criticisms were passed on their work or their actions; if we allowed them to think, from our silence when they make mistakes, that their tasks were correct. A child's first writing is very crude; its first attempt at reading is oft but a blunder; should we not teach it to shape its letters properly, to speak its words correctly, or let it go on, in its own untutored way, lest it be discouraged by our attempt to help it in the right direction. Would he allow his hired man, after making a mistake in his work, to repeat that mistake again and again, because he might be discouraged if told of his fault? Would his wife submit to constant avoidance of her known wishes on the part of her "help" without an attempt to rectify, with kindness, her mistakes? No, we cannot get along without judicious fault-finding or criticism. We do not need to scold because we criticise. The word signifies, not only finding fault, but judging honestly, fairly and with candor. Comly's speller, in use when I was a little child, had in it this sentence, "Our best friends are those who tell us of our faults and teach us how to correct them." I do hope my position will not be misunderstood, and I am open to conviction, and willing to receive any criticism offered in a kindly way on the views taken by myself.

When I speak of the failings of our beloved Society, it is with the same feeling that I would mention, with a view to correction, the incorrect habits and speech of my children in the home or the school. True, in the latter case, I would not call attention to their errors by reprimanding them in public; in the former case, there is no other way to meet them than by public utterance or the pen, it being impossible to speak privately to every individual.

I am glad that in my Friend's meeting, it is the intention to have a "childrens' day," and I predict good from it, and hope other meetings will be induced to follow this example. I know there are many localities, in the East especially, where Friends are more numerous, and more thickly settled than in our part of the country, where "Young Friends' Associations" are regularly held in which both old and young take part alike. The reports of these meetings, in our INTELLIGENCER, are very interesting and often show a wide range of subjects. These associations are doubtless doing much good, and will certainly furnish recruits for the future ranks of our Society, and while their existence was ignored, though inadvertently, in my former article, I am in hearty sympathy with them and their purposes, and would like to encourage them to persevere in their good work.

ELIZABETH H. COALE.

Fourth month 10th, 1903.

ONCE in an age God sends to some of us a friend, who loves in us, not a false imagery, an unusual character, but looking through all the rubbish of our imperfections, loves in us the divine ideal of our nature,—loves not the person we are, but the angel that we may be.—[Harriet Beecher Stowe.]

☯

As those who touch pitch are defiled, so those who touch greatness are blessed.—[David Swing, in address on Lincoln.]

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 16.

THE FIRST DAYS,

GOLDEN TEXT.—John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit.—Acts, i., 5.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, i., 1-20.

As we have seen (Lesson 33, 1902) the disciples, after the crucifixion, fled to Galilee—perhaps in despair. But the experiences of a few days or weeks following revived their faith, and with it came a sense of responsibility for the carrying on of the work which their master had left unfinished. It seems strange that after all the warnings—the plain statements—of Jesus that his death was approaching, and could not be averted, his friends should have been so totally unprepared for it. It is plain that after all the months of teaching, and in spite of direct instructions to the contrary, the disciples still held to the old Messianic idea, and believed that in some way Jesus was about to establish a world-kingdom with its capital at Jerusalem. With renewal of courage and faith after their temporary eclipse their faces naturally turned again toward Jerusalem. If Jesus was soon to establish his throne there, where else was the place of his loyal followers? If preparations were to be made for his return, theirs was the duty. All associations of the Messianic hope clustered about the sacred city and its more sacred temple, hallowed, as it was, by the presence of Jehovah himself. The establishment of the kingdom was not for the disciples of Jesus a far-away hope. It was expected immediately. In the first chapter of the Acts (i., 6), while the resurrected Lord was still with them, "when they were come together they asked him, saying, Lord, dost thou at this time redeem Israel?" And their master did not wholly rebuke the implied hope. He answered only that it was not given them "to know times or seasons" (i., 7). The belief in a speedy coming of the king in the clouds of heaven persisted for a long time. It was not until death began to lay a heavy hand on the group of apostles that the idea was given up that the generation of Jesus should not pass away before all things were accomplished. Several passages from the sayings of Jesus seemed to justify this belief (Mark ix., 1; Matt x., 23). Paul seems to have held to this faith in his early career, and only modified it when events proved its mistake (1 Thess. iv., 13 to v., 6; 2 Thess. ii., 1-3).

The period of Jesus' repeated appearances to the apostles varies widely in different accounts. The appended section of Mark and the gospel of Luke call for but one day, Matthew's account calls for several days, as does also the recently-discovered gospel of Peter, while John's statement involves a week. In the first chapter of Acts we are directly told that the appearances lasted for forty days (i., 3). The story of the Ascension is told only in Acts so far as any full account is concerned. Luke says "he was carried up into heaven," and the appendix of Mark says he was "received up into heaven." But it must be remembered that this section of Mark (xvi., 9-20) is a late addition to the book, probably by Ariston, the presbyter.

One of the interesting features of the group of Christian believers after the return to Jerusalem is the immediate ascendancy of Peter. He had been the spokesman, and perhaps, in some sense, the leader, of the apostles while Jesus was alive. But his shameful denial of Jesus must have very much lowered the esteem in which he was held; so that the general acceptance of his leadership seems to some to imply some special and signal act of faith. What this act may have been is suggested by Paul's account of the resurrection period (1 Cor. xv.). He says of Jesus, "He hath been raised on the third day . . . ; that he appeared unto Cephas." Also after the two disciples had seen Jesus on the way to Emmaus (Luke xxiv., 13-35) they went to the eleven to tell of their experiences, and were met by the news that "The Lord is risen, indeed, and hath appeared unto Simon." The details of this appearance are nowhere given. It is surmised by some students that Peter was the first to renew his faith—the first to announce the victory of that faith over death, and thus re-established himself in a rightful leadership.

The position of the apostles in the early church has sometimes been a matter for dispute. It seems evident, however, that they had no official position whatever. They were not rulers of the primitive church, not ministers, priests nor officers. Indeed, at first there were no officers, for there was no organization. It was only as more and more were attracted to the group of friends held together by a common love and a common faith that the Christians began to be a separate body. At first they were Jews, who believed that the Messiah had come. Until such time as he should come in power and glory it was theirs to faithfully obey the old law and await his orders. Wherefore among all the Jews none were more faithful, none less conscious of founding a new sect than were the first Christians.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

EZEKIEL ROBERTS.

THE close of a life lived in so marked a degree apart from worldliness, and so imbued with the things of the spirit, as that of Ezekiel Roberts, seems more nearly a translation than death. The epithets frequently appropriate are inadequate when applied to one so singularly gifted, so free from conformity to this world, so transformed to the perfect will of God.

He was the son of Richard and Mary (Scott) Roberts, of Gwynedd, Pa., which place was his home until he reached maturity; then he came to eastern Ohio. Though of a genial, joyous temperament, he never lost a keen spiritual susceptibility, and he testified frequently to the lasting impressions received in youth from those in the ministry. He was gifted with a charm of personality that won the affection of all classes; with a keen sense of humor and a taste for fine thought, particularly when poetically expressed, that made him a delightful companion; with a love for the young, especially children, that made them universally his friends; and with that simplicity of life and manner which comes from genuineness and a freedom from aught calling for dissimulation. These all culminated in an exalted spiritual life which found slight place for the little foxes that spoil the tender grapes.

His ministry was uniformly invigorating, often reaching flights of oratory of great power. The things of the spirit were the atmosphere of his life. His mind was a practical exposition of the mind of Jesus as conveyed in the gospel. The kernel wrapped in figure and parable was handed to his hearers—food convenient for them. He found solace and illumination not alone in Bible store, but also in the thoughts of the gifted good wherever found. These were readily retained in his memory, and frequently flowed in poetic form from his lips.

He was twice happily married—to Eliza Ann Griffith in 1841, and to Elizabeth P. Harrison in 1876. The desolation in his home following the death of each of these was met with brave cheer, the waves of bereavement seemingly deepening his trust in the Divine 'Arm.

Until within a few days of his death he was a most diligent attender of meeting, often referring to the great pleasure he found in thus mingling with his friends. He looked forward to attending meeting, not as a duty, but as a joy. To the last his ministry was tender and touching. Throughout the membership of Ohio Yearly Meeting he was as minister and friend held in close affection.

One who has loved him for over sixty years says: "I talked to him of feelings and thoughts never given to any other, and his spiritual insight and uplift helped me as did that of no one else. I have had dear and gifted and scholarly friends among those who abode in the spirit, but no one of them led so perfectly the life hid with Christ in God as he did, not in the theologic sense, but the real. His Christ was of the heart, of the Spirit."

During the occasional intervals of consciousness in his brief illness, beautiful texts and quotations passed his lips. The face of his only child, Richard E. Roberts, was the last that he recognized, and his last expressed wish was for the reading of the Sermon on the Mount.

His face in its final rest was a fit type of his beautiful life, noble and dignified, with a peaceful, exalted expression, molded by his many years of pure, high thought. M. G. H.

THE pulpit and the press have many common-places denouncing the thirst for wealth; but if men should take these moralists at their word and leave off aiming to be rich, the moralists would rush to rekindle at all hazards this love of power in the people, lest civilization should be undone.—[R. W. Emerson.]

WE are incomplete statues which God has handed on to us to chisel at.—[Arthur M. Tschudy.]

KEEP yourselves from opportunities, and God will keep you from sin.—[Italian Proverb.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, FOURTH MONTH 25, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

TOLERANCE.

THE age of religious persecution has ceased. Men may hold what views they will of "life, death and the great hereafter," without exciting protest to any great extent from other men. Now and then a clergyman is tried for heresy because his views are not bounded by the creed of his denomination, but the ordinary man of affairs is neither questioned nor criticised by his neighbors on account of his theological opinions.

The greater breadth of view, the general recognition of the vastness of truth, and the impossibility of apprehending it, except in fragments, the broader charity towards others not of our own fold, which this changed attitude of men implies, is a cause for devout thanksgiving. But in order to insure that widespread tolerance which will promote helpful Christianity among men, we need to be sure that our charity has its foundations firmly fixed in depth as well as breadth of faith, and not in indifference as to what other men think, because we have no fixed convictions of our own. More hopeful for the Church of Christ was the blight of bigotry, and the persecution of one branch by another, than the spirit of indifference which tolerates all things because it cares for none.

The highest spirit of Christian tolerance, which helps to bring into unity of purpose widely differing individual and denominational views, must have its foundation in an abiding faith and belief in certain fundamentals which it will not sacrifice, and its controlling principle in a recognition of the soundness of Christian teaching that "there are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit, differences of administration, but the same Lord." The Friend who, maintaining faithfully his testimony in favor of a free gospel ministry, yet recognizes the beneficent service of men who under other convictions accept salaries for conducting religious services, is truly tolerant. The one who is willing to participate in the services led by salaried pastors because he really does not care which plan is followed, is not tolerant, he is indifferent. Strength of opposite conviction is fundamental to the real meaning of tolerance.

It is easy to tolerate Mohammedanism. Its votaries we consider mistaken but sincere. We do not expect to work in harmony with them. It is not difficult to feel charitably toward other Christian sects whose work and profession in no way come in contact with our own. The true test of tolerance comes when we are called upon to recognize the diverse views of our own especial profession of faith held and applied by others according to some measure of light other than ours. In this ability to view charitably the convictions of our household of faith, we as a Society seem to be progressing in the right direction. May our progress not be impeded by any tendency to base our charity for differences of views upon indifference to the testimonies which are concerned therein.

ALTHOUGH "the ills of Pennsylvania" and of Philadelphia have not entirely disappeared it is a source of encouragement to all lovers of good government that they are being greatly mitigated. The recent State Legislature passed some good bills, among which are the Sproul Good Roads bill, the bill making $35 a month the minimum salary for public school teachers, and the bill making it a misdemeanor to sell cigarettes or cigarette paper to minors. Some bad bills were vetoed by Governor Pennypacker, and largely because of this the Phillips Racing bill and several other objectionable measures were sent back on the last day of the session, to committees that were about to expire, and were thus buried.

In Philadelphia Mayor Weaver has announced that there will be no favorite contractors recognized in letting the city's work and that bids for such work will be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. Director Smyth, the new Director of Public Safety, has gone to work quietly, but effectively to suppress houses of ill-fame, "speak-easies" and policy shops, and to close the saloons on the Sabbath. Three men have already been convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for participation in the "white slave traffic;" and police lieutenants have been informed that those who tolerate "speak-easies" or gambling houses in their districts will be in danger of dismissal.

IN connection with the Yearly Meeting of the other branch of Friends, which has been in session this week, there have been meetings of various Friends' philanthropic organizations in the afternoon and evening at Twelfth Street Meeting-house.

The Peace Association of Friends of Philadelphia met on Second-day afternoon. The report of the year's work showed that a good deal of literature had been distributed including 1,500 copies of the address delivered by Dr. Jesse H. Holmes at the Friends' Peace Conference. The treasurer reported a balance on hand of over $200, but apologized for this, saying that most of it had just been received and that it would be spent as soon as possible.

Dr. Jesse H. Holmes delivered an able address full of practical suggestions for the solving of the war problem. He was followed by William B. Bell, of New York, who gave an interesting report of the work of The Hague Tribunal. The house was well filled and both speakers were listened to with close attention.

The influence of letters and telegrams upon legislation is just beginning to be realized by the American people. A bill lengthening the time from twenty-four to forty hours during which cattle can be kept on trains without food, water or rest, passed the House of Representatives without debate. In the Senate it was sent to a sub-committee of which Senator Kean, of New Jersey, was chairman. This Senator reported the volume of protests, coming by wire, mail, express and freight, to be so great that he was almost obliged to move out of his committee-room to give them storage space. The bill was not reported back by the committee.

A CEREMONY of interest to all friends of the colored race will take place in the Auditorium of the Young Friends' Association Building on Sixth-day evening, Fifth month 1st. This will be the unveiling of a bust of William Still, which is to be presented to the Home for Aged and Infirm Colored People. An admission fee of twenty-five cents will be charged. Addresses will be made by Judges Edward M. Paxson and William N. Ashman, A. K. McClure, and others.

We commend the attention of our readers who are interested in charitable work to the report of the Philadelphia Young Friends' Association, which will be found in another column. All Philadelphians who desire to aid the poor, but do not know how to go about it, should acquaint themselves with the methods of the Society for Organizing Charity.

BIRTHS.

PALMER.—At Chadds Ford, Pa., First month 9th, 1903, to Joseph P. and Margaret R. Palmer, a daughter, who is named Eleanor Lewis.

PATTISON.—At Denver, Colorado, to Myron A. and Harriette Jackson Pattison, on Third month 22d, 1903, a daughter, who is named Dorothy Pattison.

MARRIAGES.

BASSETT—SIMPSON.—At the residence of Joseph J. Broadhurst, Langhorne, Pa., on Fourth-day evening, Fourth month 15th, 1903, Dr. Henry Linn Bassett, of Yardley, Pa., and Mary T. Simpson, of Langhorne.

DEATHS.

DENN.—On the 13th of Third month, 1903, at the residence of her son-in-law, Franklin W. Kennedy, Frankford, Pa., Anna S. Denn, aged 76 years; a valued elder of Green Street Monthly Meeting, Philadelphia.

FURBAY.—Suddenly, at her home in Emerson, Ohio, Second month 7th, 1903, Sarah A. Furbay, aged 65 years; a life-long member of Short Creek Monthly Meeting.

She was the last surviving child of Mahlon and Rachel Richards McMillan, who emigrated to Ohio from Pennsylvania. Early widowed, the devoted care she gave her children doubtless became a discipline which, combined with her naturally strong, generous nature, qualified her for a life of ministration. Sorrow and suffering appealed to her sympathy and her impulse to assuage went forth regardless of rank or condition. Of a genial, social disposition she was held in warm affection in the community where she had in large measure exemplified justice, mercy and humility. Her funeral was the last attended by the venerable Ezekiel Roberts. The memory of his beautiful ministry on that occasion is now hallowed with the memory of the last on earth for our friend.

ROBERTS.—At his home near Mt. Pleasant, Ohio, Third month 10th, 1903, Ezekiel Roberts, in his 90th year; for nearly fifty years a beloved minister of Short Creek Monthly Meeting.

SMEDLEY.—At her home in Chattanooga, Tennessee, Fourth month 11th, 1903, Ruth C., wife of J. Franklin Smedley, formerly of Thorndale, Chester county, Pa.

She was the daughter of Levi and Ellen Cook, of Waynesville, Ohio; a member of Cain Quarterly Meeting. She is survived by one son and two daughters.

TAYLOR.—At Wilmington, Delaware, on Third month 28th, 1903, Elizabeth M. Taylor, daughter of Elizabeth S. and the late T. Clarkson Taylor, aged 33 years; a member of Wilmington Monthly Meeting.

SOCIETY NOTES.

JOHN J. CORNELL and his wife, Eliza H. Cornell, left Baltimore Fourth month 8th, for Swarthmore, Pa. They made visits or calls at the homes of Arthur Beardsley, Susan J. Cunningham, Lydia H. Hall, Jesse H. Holmes, Ferris Price, Edward Durnell, William W. and Anna Speakman, Henry S. Kent, David Lukens, Richard Ogden, William H. Appleton, Rachel W. Hillborn, Richard C. Sellers, Samuel S. Ash, Ella Garwood, Alice Hadley and others.

They held parlor meetings, which were attended by a number of the neighbors, at the homes of Mary Kent, Sylvester Garrett and Arthur Tomlinson. On the 13th, after lunching at Swarthmore College, they went to Dean Bond's parlor, where several members of the household and some of the students with whom they were acquainted called upon them.

In company with Edward Durnell they went to see the old Springfield Meeting-house, now used by the other branch of Friends, where it is said the momentous discussion was held to determine whether Benjamin West was to be allowed to continue his painting. They also attended an evening meeting at Sylvester Garrett's where the subject of "Equal Rights for Women" was discussed.

The meeting at Swarthmore, which they attended on the 12th, was smaller than usual because many of the students had gone elsewhere to spend Easter. On the evening of the 15th they attended Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, which was long because of the large amount of business transacted (there being four proposals of marriage to consider and all the queries to answer), "but was harmonious and interesting throughout."

The social visits of these Friends were greatly enjoyed and the ministry of John J. Cornell in the meetings was acceptable and helpful.

At Lansdowne Monthly Meeting held Fourth month 20th, the Property Committee reported that the plans and specifications for the new meeting-house were about ready. All interested in the erection of this house are invited to meet in Barker Hall, Lansdowne, Pa., on Seventh-day evening, the 25th, at 7:30 o'clock, to examine the plans and make suggestions for their improvement. An adjourned session of the Monthly Meeting will be held at 9 p. m. to give definite instructions to the committee for furthering the work.

On the 19th instant John J. Cornell preached an impressive sermon at the Philadelphia Evening Meeting at Fifteenth and Race streets. The body of the meeting-house was about filled, many young men being present. He is spending this week visiting "shut in" Friends and others in that part of Philadelphia south of Green street and between the two rivers. On Third-day evening he addressed a large meeting in Race Street Meeting-house on "The Advantages of Becoming and Being a Friend."

There is a small indulged meeting at Lambertville, N. J., some of whose members are very faithful. A conference class, using the New Testament Lesson Leaves, precedes the meeting, both together lasting an hour and a half. This meeting was visited on the 5th by Matilda E. Janney and on the 12th by Elizabeth Lloyd, there being an increased attendance on these days. The meeting is held in a room formerly used for a private school. This has been put in good order, neatly carpeted and furnished with very comfortable chairs.

Joel Borton, of Woodstown, N. J., on his way to Nebraska Half Yearly Meeting attended Chicago Central Meeting on Fourth month 18th.

He brought to us a precious message of love and service in the words: "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your reasonable service."

E. G. H.

LETTER FROM ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.—II.

SHEPHERD'S HOTEL, CAIRO,

Third month 14, 1903.

EDITORS FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

My last letter was written the afternoon the steamer lay at Beyrout, and was carried all the way to Jerusalem next day to mail. We arrived at Jaffa, the seaport of the latter city, about one o'clock on the afternoon of Third month 5th, and walking and driving across the ancient town, took the special train provided, and at 2.30 were on our way to the chief point of interest in all our travel.

The disembarking at Jaffa had been somewhat dreaded in advance by all our party, for Jaffa is the only point in the trip which has no harbor, and where the landing has to be made from the open sea in small boats. The latter, however, are manned by Arabs, who are skillful in their management, although when the sea is at all rough the trip is, to say the least, most uncomfortable to landsmen; that is, when the landing can be made at all, as sometimes the Mediterranean steamers are compelled to pass without being able to land either passengers or freight. We were gratified, therefore, to have the sea as calm as could be desired the day of our arrival, and we landed as comfortably as could be reasonably expected. Our party of seventeen were soon seated on the train in communicating compartments, and we were under the care of a dragoman provided for us, who proved most intelligent and satisfactory, and aided in making our journey through Palestine, as well as our stay there, interesting and profitable.

The four hours' ride was certainly most interesting through a country first populous, level and somewhat fertile, then gradually becoming hilly and less populous, then mountainous and most scantily peopled, as we came from the sea level at Jaffa to Jerusalem, 2,500 feet above the sea. I omitted to mention the orange groves of Jaffa, which were a great sight, the fruit being the largest I have ever seen, and although thick skinned, most juicy and of delicious flavor. The peddlers at the station had hundreds of baskets for sale at sixpence each, containing a dozen or more of the fine fruit, so the temptation was yielded to, to purchase more than we could well carry or make use of. At 6.30 we saw the city before us, and soon were driving towards our hotel among perhaps fifty carriages, which filled the air with dust. Even amid the hubbub of arrival, we could not but realize with a certain feeling of awe that this was not like even the most important of our previous experiences, an incident of our trip, but was a place always to be remembered, and our visit there an event in our lives.

We had not expected comfortable quarters, so were quite well satisfied with the little hotel, "Olivet," to which we were assigned. From its windows we looked out, on our arrival, at Mount Olivet, and the Garden of Gethsemane, with Mount Calvary and the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in full view. Jerusalem has been so often and so fully described by able writers and biblical scholars, that it is quite unnecessary for me to attempt any detailed description of our brief stay—five days only in Palestine from landing to embarking—and only personal experiences and impressions can therefore be worth while. The five days were most busy and full of interest.

The morning after our arrival we drove to Bethlehem, seven miles distant, and went, of course, promptly to the birthplace of Jesus, over which stands the Church of the Nativity. In the year 327 the mother of Constantine built a church here, a portion of which still stands, which is one of the oldest specimens of Christian architecture in existence. This part of the church belongs to several sects in common, between which peace is maintained only by the Turkish soldiery. I hardly knew which seemed sadder, that Christian sects should be contending immediately over the spot where it is claimed Christ was born, or that the government which alone had control was that of the Turk. It seemed hard to believe that the stable was a small subterranean cave cut in the solid rock, but we were shown the exact spot where it is claimed the Saviour came into the world, marked by a large silver star set in a marble slab in the pavement. We were also shown the spot where the manger stood. The manger itself, it is claimed, is in the church of Santa Maria Maggiore, in Rome.

We were shown the grounds in which somewhere the wealthy Boaz had his fields, and where sweet Ruth gleaned after the reapers. Somewhere there among the great number of ravines, the boy David, the great grandson of Ruth, tended his father's sheep before he went forth to battle with the giant Goliath. And the grotto was shown in the distance which the shepherds occupied when they watched their flocks at night, and the angel of the Lord appeared and announced the birth of Jesus, the Son of David, the long-looked-for Messiah. As we stood here, one of our number read aloud, from Luke ii., 8th to 17th verses.

Bethlehem made on me, although our stay was so short, a more pleasant impression than any other portion of Palestine, partly, perhaps, because its association with the birth of Jesus always made its name one of the sweetest of words. But a certain tender interest also attaches to it as the burial place of Rachel, as the scene of Ruth's primitive story, and of David's boyhood and consecration as king. It was the one place in Judea which by its previous associations seemed fitted to be the gateway for the Divine Child to enter the world. And I had less shock to my feelings of reverence here than anywhere else we visited in Palestine.

We returned to Jerusalem to luncheon, and starting promptly afterward had perhaps the fullest afternoon of our stay in Palestine. We then went to the tomb of David, to hear the wailing of the Jews for the downfall of Jerusalem. This has been their practice every Friday for many centuries. It takes place outside the temple enclosure in a long narrow court. With their Bibles in hand, the men in one place, the women in another, they mournfully read extracts from the Lamentations and Psalms, and kiss the walls made smooth by centuries of kissing. But more than all else in Jerusalem our interest went out to that which has so often been styled "the center of the earth," the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. (How much less impressive that high-sounding name is than simply the Sepulchre.) A considerable portion of the present church is less than a hundred years old, though there are the remains of old towers and walls which may be nearer a thousand. There has been some sort of a church here since the time of Constantine, the Fourth Century, A.D., but it is difficult to believe, even without undue skepticism, that the exact spots which are shown in connection with every part of the crucifixion, and that which preceded and followed it, can be authenticated. It is impossible for me to attempt to tell of all the points shown us, nor if it were possible would it be worth while? It was something of a shock to find this immense and showy church, which it is claimed covers not only the sepulchre, but every point of interest in connection with the crucifixion. Four or five of us at a time were admitted to the sepulchre, and afterward we were shown where the body of Jesus was nailed to the cross, where the cross was erected, where the body was laid when taken down, etc. Whatever may be thought as to the exact location of Calvary, certainly no one can approach the spot with such associations without profound emotions.

When we went into the church the sun was shining brightly and the streets were filled with dust, but when we came outside we found there had been a heavy fall of rain and the dust had been changed to mud. We walked to the hotel almost ankle deep in this slippery compound of filthy mud. While the air was cleansed of the unpleasant dust, we scarcely knew which was the more unpleasant of the two, the dry or liquidated filth.

The next morning we spent some time at the Mosque of Omar, on Mount Maria, a wonderful structure, which anywhere else would have been of great interest, but in Jerusalem it would seem only that can be of real interest which relates to the Founder of our religion.

The afternoon we spent most congenially on the Mount of Olives and in the Garden of Gethsemane. The view of Jerusalem from the former is excellent, but besides this and its general sweet associations with the Saviour, there is nothing of special interest. On the way down the Mount we stopped at a nunnery built over the spot where, it is claimed, Jesus gave the Lord's Prayer to the disciples, and in a gallery surrounding an open court the prayer was conspicuously printed on tablets in thirty-two languages.

We spent a longer time in one of the enclosures of Gethsemane. We were first denied admission by the monk in charge, then, after a look at the party, he announced that he would admit us on our promise not to touch a flower or a twig. Shortly after our entrance he gave permission to all the girls to pick each some flowers, then allowed us all to help ourselves freely to cuttings of the olive trees, and ended by taking us to his room, where he gave each of the party a lemon grown in the garden, and produced a bottle of wine, of which, however, only our dragoman drank. Several old olive trees in the garden are interesting because said to date from the time of Christ, and they certainly bear evidence of great age.

(Conclusion to follow.)

THE SOUTH REVISITED.

EDITORS FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

It has been suggested to the writer that some reflections occasioned by a recent visit to the far South might interest the readers of the INTELLIGENCER. When passing over a part of the same route in the winter of 1895 we thought that never had we seen so impoverished and unprepossessing a country. The towns were generally shabby and dirty, the villages scattering and poor-looking, while the country between showed few signs of cultivation and thrift. The houses were dilapidated and sadly in need of paint, while the windowless cabin, or the cabin with an opening closed by a shutter only, was everywhere in evidence. This was the condition of things during the whole of one day's journey, and particularly so in the sections of North and South Carolina through which our route lay. To-day this is greatly changed, and in the latter State, especially, signs of improvement are everywhere manifest. Nearly every place of any size has its cotton mill, a large, substantial brick building, and in its immediate neighborhood are rows of new, neat cottages for the operatives, each with its porch and strip of ground for cultivation. Nor are these mills confined to the towns immediately along the line of railroad; tall chimney stacks could be seen rising at considerable distances on either side.

That the presence of these mills is rapidly changing the conditions of the people of this part of the State is evident from the improved appearance, not only in the immediate neighborhood of these centers of activity, but in the country between. The towns looked more alive and were evidently growing in size and business. These clusters, or rows, of neat, bright cottages seem to have been an incentive to property owners generally to fix up and improve their houses. Many of the older dwellings had been repaired and painted, and not a few of them enlarged. In many instances there was a manifest desire to better their surroundings; gardens had been added; fences were beginning to make their appearance, and generally throughout the section there were unmistakable signs of progress and thrift. Even the cabin on the farm was being replaced by a neat frame cottage or substantial and well-built log house.

A new era of prosperity and advancement seems opening to the South if only the negro can be induced to work steadily; but already complaints come from the mill owners that he cannot be depended on; that he will not continue at work; that as soon as he has earned a few dollars he lies off until they are spent, when he is ready to return to work again and repeat the performance. The remedy for this is education. He must be induced to come up out of this condition, and the more common and manual training schools that are established the sooner will this be done. The South is doing all that its resources will allow in this direction. Tuskegee, Hampton, Aiken, and many other institutions supported by private contributions, are working to the same end, but all these are inadequate, and it seems to me that here is an opportunity for the use of some of the millions which are being lavished by our rich men in various directions, mainly, if not exclusively, for the benefit of the white race. If large schools could be established and sufficiently endowed throughout the South, and especially in those States in which the Negro predominates—South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana—schools for children and youth, and institutions where the men and women could be profitably entertained and at the same time almost unconsciously trained to ways of application and thrift, I believe a long step would be taken in the settlement of the great problem that so affects the welfare of the Southern people, and which is, to a lesser degree only, our problem also.

What the negro wants, in my estimation, is to be taught the necessity of work. It is far more important to him to know how to plant his cotton and corn, to make a ladder or a table, and to fit his cabin with some articles of usefulness, to build a wall or mend a roof, than to read Latin or Greek. He needs much more to be taught to protect himself against the wiles of his white brethren who, too often, take advantage of his ignorance to work him for their own benefit, than to meddle with the higher mathematics. He sadly needs to be taught honesty to his employers and those with whom he comes in contact, and he also needs to be drilled in the necessity for economy, a virtue in which, in the South, as well as in the North, he is lamentably deficient. These three things are essential to him—industry, honesty and thrift; for anything more than this he can wait; and the more common schools, manual training schools and institutions after the manner of Hull House there are the sooner will he be enabled to take his place in the world to which his right as a human being and a citizen of this Republic entitles him. But, as I have said, the means are entirely inadequate to the work to be done. If there could be a score of elementary schools where now there is but one, I believe that the benefit to the present generation would be very great, while to the next it would be incalculable. Not that I would deny to him the college, or even the university. Many colored men are prepared for them, and they should have the opportunity of obtaining the higher education which may fit them, in their turn, to become the future leaders of their race, but the crying need of the hour is more, many more, elementary and training schools.

Make the Negro industrious, honest and thrifty and you will go far towards solving the most difficult problem with which the people of the Southern section of our country have to deal. A reasonable and reasoning man is more easily controlled than a lazy, ignorant fellow, from whose nature the brutish instincts have scarcely been eliminated. The Negro, transformed into a fairly well educated man, sober, industrious, capable, honest and thrifty, will without doubt want his rights and his privileges; he will claim his right to vote, and will insist that his vote be counted; but he will also be amenable to reason. He will recognize the difficulties that lie in the way; he will have a common interest in public affairs, and he will have judgment enough to understand just what that interest is; he will perceive the necessity which exists that the races shall work together instead of in opposition; he will understand that the allaying of race prejudices and the bringing of his people up to the position they will eventually occupy, must necessarily be the work of time; that the white race must inevitably be and remain the ruling power, but that the time will come when the worthy among his people will be admitted to a share in the conduct of public affairs. He will see all this, and he will vote as he sees; and his vote, instead of being a source of dread to the white race—something that must be nullified at all hazards—will be sought by them, because it will be cast judiciously in the effort to settle those vexed questions which every community must settle for itself.

ROBERT TILNEY.

A LETTER FROM AN ISOLATED FRIEND.

As I may not come north to attend the Yearly Meeting of Friends gathered in Philadelphia, in the Fifth month, I felt like sending a few lines to the correspondent, even if it be like the cart before the horse to write my letter before the meeting meets and issues its epistle to "isolated members." I am always much interested in reading all the reports of the yearly sessions and trust you may have a large and interesting meeting in which strength may be gleaned to the Society collectively and to the individual members as well.

We that are isolated wonder sometimes if you realize the many blessed privileges you possess as you gather in crowds together, for in numbers there is strength, and hence more opportunities for good. In our thirst for friendly customs we started our little Bible class three years ago (in Seventh month next). It still lives, and the people express great interest in it. The attendance remains about the same; the other Sabbath we numbered seventeen. We use this year the "Adult Lesson Leaves" from New Testament and last week had the topic of "The Christian." An extract from John G. Cornell's sermons is always read each Sabbath morning. This part of the exercises has so interested one family that they asked me to loan them some that they might read a portion each First-day evening before retiring. We think this shows that the Friends' ideas are gaining a little ground. We are the only family of Friends in this neighborhood, but we are trying in our feeble way to sow some seed. We are sowing in weakness, and God alone knows what the harvest may be; but He knows what we try to do as what we do.

This is a wonderful experience, especially for lung troubles, as I can see above sea level, and a charming place for an all-year-round home. I often wonder why some conscientious Friend with money does not start a "Home for Friends" in the South. Their homes and schools in the North are a beautiful part of the meeting's work. Why not go forward in this good work and start a Friends' Home for Consumptives in the South, a sort of free, or partly free, sanatorium, where the broken-down, diseased members of but little means might go and thus prolong life if not be cured.

Any one starting this would certainly be doing God's service to His afflicted ones. It would be a blessed work of love. The project would not be an expensive undertaking, as here both land and lumber are very cheap. I suppose I feel more strongly on this subject because I know what this climate has done for me, and as my health returns I feel such a heartfelt desire to gather others to the same benefits.

ELIZABETH B. SATTERTHIN LAIT.

Palmer, Alachua Co., Florida.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

CONCORD FIRST-DAY SCHOOL UNION.—The semi-annual meeting of Concord First-day School Union was held at Chester, Pa., on the 18th. The day was bright and pleasant, the quaint old meeting-house was well-filled, and 56 of the 62 delegates were in attendance. In the morning reports of several of the schools were read, there being interesting descriptions of the kind of work done as well as statistics, which were generally encouraging. Benjamin K. Smedley, of Wilmington, read a paper in which he drew lessons of mutual dependence and individual faithfulness from the sleet storm of a year ago.

The question, "If a pupil asked what is the belief of Friends 'what would the answer be?" was ably answered by Henry S. Kent, Mordecai Bartram, Clara B. Miller, and others. The points upon which all agreed were these: Friends believe in a God who is an all-wise Creator and loving Father; in the immediate revelation made by this Father to the individual soul; in Jesus, the Christ, as being the highest manifestation of Divine life in human form; and in the saving power of the spirit of Christ in the heart.

During the noon intermission a bountiful lunch was served in the meeting-house, and the time was spent in pleasant social reunion. In the afternoon Rachel P. Leys gave an interesting object lesson. She drew upon the blackboard a circle in which she inscribed a series of polygons which, as the number of sides increased, approached nearer and nearer to the circumference of the circle. Thus it is possible for human lives to approach nearer and nearer to the Christ life. A class of pupils from the Chester school recited some beautiful sentiments which were much appreciated.

The delegates reported the names of Herbert P. Worth as clerk, Abbie M. Hall for assistant clerk, and Benjamin K. Smedley for treasurer, and they were re-appointed to these offices. Goshen was named as the place for the next meeting.

The reports of the six remaining schools were then read, among which Newtown was commended for its practice of studying the discipline. Providence brought up the question, "How far should we go to obtain those not members?" An interesting discussion followed in which the consensus of opinion appeared to be in favor of increasing the membership by all moderate means. The report from West Chester showed that school to be in a very healthful state. It must be highly gratifying to those in charge to see how well they progress and how varied they make their lessons. The Friends were then treated to a second object lesson. Elizabeth Lloyd gave an object lesson on glasses, showing how some, looking through a blue glass, see the gloomy side of life, while others looking through a rose-colored glass see a pleasanter, brighter view. After this Anna B. Smedley read an excellent paper, "Suggestions to Young Teachers." She emphasized the necessity of love for the work, interest, preparation, and careful selection of subjects, and outlined a course from a children's class of three years, on up to adults. The chief idea of the essay seemed to be, have the material give way to the interest. She said in part, "Children will detect far quicker than we would suspect our lack of interest in the work. Let me say, you fail to recognize a pedagogical principal if you are not thoroughly prepared for your work." She deprecated the idea, now advocated in some quarters, of paying First-day school teachers, saying that when First-day school teaching becomes paid labor the religious value of the work is gone.

F. N. P.

WESTERN FIRST-DAY SCHOOL UNION.—The Union was held in Kennett Square Meeting-house, Seventh-day Fourth month 18th, 1903. The morning session was opened by the reading of a suitable selection from the Scriptures.

After reports from the several Standing Committees of the Union, the statistical reports from the schools were read and, not considered discouraging—one school having increased in numbers recently, with sufficient interest in the work to continue for the year, instead of having a vacation during the winter months as formerly.

During the afternoon session several selections were beautifully recited by children of Kennett Square School, also two excellent readings given from West Grove School, and a "Prepared Exercise for First-day Schools," conducted by a member of the same school; also the topics "Our Attitude towards Proposed Reforms," "What is the work of the First-day School Superintendent?" and "Taking Responsibility in Public Affairs," were presented by those appointed to do so and interesting and profitable discussions followed.

The paper upon the last subject was so full of excellent points that it was decided that it, in connection with thoughts afterward expressed on the same subject, be condensed and printed on slips for distribution in First-day Schools, and a copy sent also to the INTELLIGENCER that others may be benefited. The attendance was not so large as had been hoped for, but the exercises were profitable, and a lively interest manifested.

E. P. W., Recording Clerk.

CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY, FISHERTOWN, PA.—The Centennial Anniversary of Dunning's Creek Monthly Meeting at Fishertown, Pa., which was announced in the late issues of the INTELLIGENCER, was celebrated on Second-day, the 13th inst., in the "Hicksite" Friends' meeting-house at that place.

Only about three weeks previously had the idea of such occasion first suggested itself to any one, and the preparation was therefore of short duration, though active and enthusiastic.

At a meeting of the Young Friends' Association three weeks before the event, an executive committee was appointed which met promptly and appointed sub-committees on program, correspondence and lunch preparation, and it was largely to the prompt and vigilant work of these efficient sub-committees that the success of the celebration is due.

At the monthly meeting held on First-day, the 12th inst., a committee was appointed to have the matter in charge and to make a detailed report to next monthly meeting.

Pursuant to said notice and arrangements, the celebration exercises were held at 10 o'clock a. m., Second-day.

The extreme inclemency of the weather and exceedingly bad state of the roads, greatly interfered with the attendance, yet about one hundred and twenty-five persons, including both branches of Friends and Friendly people, assembled and took active interest in the exercises. The meeting was opened by the chairman of the monthly meeting's committee reading the 12th chapter of Romans, which was followed by a most appropriate literary program, consisting of recitations by Amy Blackburn, Olive Way, Lydia Greist, and Abigail Blackburn; select readings by Lizzie Blackburn, Mary Reeve, Ardelle Blackburn, Florence Way, Anne F. Blackburn; letters from distant Friends, read by Elias Blackburn; an essay by Hiram Blackburn; a historical sketch of Tunning's Creek Meeting by E. Howard Blackburn, and general remarks by Elizabeth F. Blackburn, Professor J. Anson Wright, County Superintendent of Public Schools, and others.

An acquaintance with these names will show that they include almost the oldest and youngest members of our meeting, and the fact that those of all ages seemed to take a like interest in the work, was one of the most pleasing and gratifying features of the occasion. After these literary exercises, the company repaired to the school-room on second floor and enjoyed a delicious luncheon already prepared by the skilled hands of our wives, sisters, and daughters, and then followed the social mingling for which our Society has long been noted; and with the most cordial good will and with feelings of much gratification at the success of our efforts, the meeting adjourned. E. H. B.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held on Second-day evening, Fourth month 13th. The meeting was well attended and of a peculiarly interesting nature. An insight into the methods and workings of the Society for Organizing Charity in Philadelphia was given by Miss M. E. Richmond, the General Secretary, and Benjamin C. Marsh, the holder of a special fellowship in the University of Pennsylvania for the study of homeless men. For ten months Mr. Marsh played the part of beggar, tramp, or laborer, as his investigations might require. The results of his study, as told by him, were startling in revealing the tremendous amount of fraudulent begging, and the aversion to work, among the poorest classes in Philadelphia.

Miss Richmond explained the system of the Society, its division into sixteen districts, each with an officer, and readily accessible to both the charitable and the poor in the vicinity. The great object of the Society is to get at the facts of a case, to encourage more discriminate giving and to adjust the needful aid in the wisest direction. Both Miss Richmond and Mr. Marsh emphasized the fact that the public is responsible to such begging. Case after case was cited in which men and women had given up honest work for begging because it was so much easier and more remunerative. Mr. Marsh's experiences all went to prove that a man can get work if he really wants it, and will take what he finds. The deplorable thoughtlessness of kindly people has evolved a charitable chaos which can be lessened only by investigation into every case at hand, followed by judicious assistance. Miss Richmond urged that any applicants for aid be sent to the office at 11th and Walnut street or to the Society Lodges, where board and comfortable lodging may be obtained in return for a few hours' work. Her plea was, not to discourage individual charity by any means, but to use the Society's aid first, as a means of directing the charitable assistance into channels of the wisest and most far-reaching benefit.

The two speakers held the unabated attention of the meeting throughout and the volley of questions which followed their informal addresses proved that they had awakened a keen interest in their work.

CAROLINE FARREN COMLY, Sec.

GIRARD AVENUE, PHILADELPHIA.—At the meeting of the Friends' Association on Fourth month 18th, J. Russell Smith gave some of the "Clumps of Europe," not showing the great buildings and works of art nor the phases of literary and historical interest, but the simple life of the common people, their work and their amusements, drawing clear-cut word-pictures of the thrift and cleanliness of Holland, the dreariness of a German winter and the humor of a German market, contrasting all with the sparkling air and the shiftlessness of Italy.

After the social recess, a paper on "The Idylls of the King," by Nellie P. Perry, was followed by the recitation of "The Passing of Arthur" by Maurice T. Hansell.

At the meeting of the people on 2d, which will be the last before the summer, there will be a debate by the members on the question easily resolved, That deception is never justifiable, for a social hour. A cordial invitation is extended to whose  ABINGTON, PA.—On First-day afternoon, Fourth month 19th, a conference was held at Abington meeting-house, under the auspices of the Philanthropic Committee. James Q. Atkinson, who presided, introduced the subject of the afternoon, "The Negro Problem" by a few remarks, after which Matthew Anderson of Philadelphia, presented a paper on "The Institution of Church." He felt the duty of the church and church-workers was not to look out alone for the spiritual side, but for the intellectual and physical as well, and thus follow Jesus—the Great Example of such work, for He healed the sick, worked at the carpenter's bench, and in every way made the outer and inner life one. In dealing with the Negro, we must remember he is only forty years removed from slavery, and in his education to-day must learn many new things, as well as unlearn many things learned during slavery times. Philanthropic people need to be on the alert to avoid being made the victims of scheming workers. In helping the Negro, we need not only to aid true living, but help them to get trades, and further than that to enable them to secure a chance to ply these trades; one great need is business enterprises, entered into by colored people for their own benefit. If we were done, before twenty years the doors of the best colleges would be opened to them as well. In Washington there are 200,000 colored people; in Philadelphia about 70,000, and the problem is a Northern one to-day.

He also spoke of the origin of the building association in 1883, when it was found wise to encourage the people thus to save money; then, too the beginning and growth of the Bercan Manual Training School was dwelt upon briefly, thus showing the solution of the Negro Problem in the education of the race. "This," he said, "is my idea of the Institutional Church—de-elooping the man wholly—mentally, physically and morally, to better do the work of the Master."

James C. Atkinson compared the prejudice against the colored people to the prejudice against Jews. Sarah C. James and Arad Carter followed in discussion of the subject. The general feeling was that while not large, the meeting had been full of interest and instruction. A. C.

ABINGTON, PA.—The spring meeting of the Abington First-day School Union was held at the old Abington Friends' Meeting House at Jenkintown. Athletics in schools and colleges was the most important subject discussed. Benjamin Smith, principal of the Friends' School at Plymouth Meeting, Pa., while favoring physical training, took a stand against athletics as now practised. Many of the younger members defended the game of foot ball as now played. One point made against athletic games is that they develop the strong but neglect the weak.

A class of girls from the Abington School took part in an exercise entitled "The Beatitudes Personified." Elizabeth Webster and Elizabeth Pierce, of Plymouth Meeting, gave recitations.

CAMDEN, N. J.—The Young Friends' Association met Third-day evening, Fourth month 7th, 1903. The program was opened by Howard M. Cooper, who read some extracts from "The Religious Views of Friends," by Howard M. Jenkins. Mary C. Brown read some extracts from Baltimore Yearly Meeting on the same subject.

Olive Irons read a paper on "Should municipalities, universities, etc., receive gifts and endowments from millionaires?" He said that the question is one that demands the best thoughts and mature deliberation of mankind. The issue cannot be shirked. We are fast drifting toward an industrial monarchy or a socialistic republic. Give labor its own products and it will build libraries better than Carnegie. Under conditions to-day we are as much slaves as the negro was to the slave master. The issue is clear and distinct; economic liberty must be lived up to. This paper brought forth remarks from some of the members.

FANNIE B. SCHEINER, Secretary.

MULLICA HILL, N. J.—The regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held in the meeting-house on Fourth-day evening Fourth month 15th.

Henry Lippincott read from Discipline on "Books, Meeting Funds, and Titles to Property." Some questions were asked concerning the assessment of the funds.

Anna Kirby, in a brief but interesting sketch of the life of Whittier, referred to his "Snow Bound" as being among his earlier writings; she spoke also of the severe headaches he endured always after writing. Then followed a reading from Whittier by Marion Ridgway "The Common Question," and one by Lillie Colson, "By Their Works." Rachel M. Lippincott read "Revelation," a poem suggested to Whittier by the temptation which beset George Fox, when it was said to him, "All things come by nature," and as he sat and waited a voice said "There is a living God that made all things."

Ella Lippincott gave a recitation entitled "John Maynard;" Debbie Ballinger recited "Deacon Campbell's Thanksgiving Dinner;" and Elizabeth Kirby gave a poem, "City or Country?"

EDWARD IREDELL, Secretary, pro. tem.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—A regular meeting of Friends' Association of New York and Brooklyn was held in Brooklyn, Fourth month 12th, 1903. The treasurer reported having forwarded $25 to the General Committee for Advancement of Friends' Principles and had received acknowledgment thereof.

Under the head of "Current Topics" attention was called to a newspaper item stating that at a meeting of representatives of every Protestant religious body in the United States, specifically mentioning Quakers among them, all had joined in issuing a common prayer service and topics for a week of prayer during the Lenten season just ended.

A paper was read entitled "Hungering and Thirsting," in which was used an incident of a famine season in India as portrayed by Kipling, who describes the natives as unable to see any value as human food in the wheat and rye offered them by the government, because they had been accustomed to rice which did not require grinding, but could be used after a simple boiling of the whole grains. This by the reader was construed as an example of evolution and the mental attitude as typical of the whole human family: the paper was an attempt at showing how different the outlook would seem to us could we but realize how we are surrounded by blessings now hidden by our lack of knowledge, but which are there, nevertheless.

WALTER HAVILAND, Sec'y.

EASTON, MD.—A meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held at the home of Wilson M. Tylor, Fourth month 9th. George L. Bartlett read part of chapter III., "The Practices of Quakerism," from the "Principles of the Religious Society of Friends." Sallie P. Kemp read the official report of the General Conference of Friends' Associations held last Twelfth month. The same was much appreciated and discussed at some length. Elizabeth N. Tylor was editor of the Association Paper, which proved to be a very newsy and instructive edition. A brief sketch of the life of Thomas Ellwood was prepared and read by Rachel B. Satterthwaite. Dwight Rowell recited "Willie in the Apple-tree." This, with the sentiments, closed the meeting.

At the meeting held previous to this, at the home of Robert L. Kemp, over thirty were in attendance, fully one-third of whom were our junior members. It is always gratifying to have the little folks meet with us. Robert Kemp read from John J. Cornell's little book, "What Quakerism is Not." Henry Shreve gave some excellent "Anecdotes of Eminent Persons," among which were characteristic sketches of John G. Whittier, Henry Clay, Daniel Webster, and many others. Lelia L. White read an account of the "Work-a-day Life of Count Leo Tolstoy," the great Russian. "In full justice to Capital and Labor, how many hours should a laborer be required to work?" was the subject for discussion opened by John C. Bartlett and earnestly continued by many others, who spoke from the standpoints of the various occupations. Last but not least was a little dialogue given by two of our juniors, Bessie and Marian Tylor. The exercise was an original article written by a member of the Association and answered the question, "Why do Friends lay such stress upon the plainness of speech, behavior, and apparel?" After many sentiments were given the meeting closed with a silence.

LAURA B. SHINN, Secretary.

EDUCATIONAL.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Swain returned on the 14th. It was a day of gladness at Swarthmore, and they were extended a hearty welcome from every side.

The regular meeting of the Joseph Leidy Scientific Society was held on the 14th. Professor Hoadley gave an interesting talk on the "Formation of Snow Crystals." Edmund Cocks read a paper on "Stoma Mechanics."

On the evening of the 16th five members of the junior class contested for the Sprout prize in oratory. First prize was won by Anna L. Curtis; second, Harold W. Mowery, and honorable mention, Maurice T. Hansell.

The class of 1905 have elected the following members to serve on their Halcyon staff: James R. Baldridge, Louis N. Robinson, Philip Hicks, Archer Turner, Robert Sensesderfer, Marie Montalvo, Esther Garwood, Elizabeth Hall, Lydia Foulke, Phebe Sheibley.

The Young Friends' Association met on the evening of the 19th. The subject for the evening was that of education among Friends. Dr. Magill gave an interesting paper on "Early Education among Friends." The following sketches of Friends' schools were then given: "Friends' Central School," Fred Price; "Westtown Friends' School," written by Anna Elfreth and read by Helen Emlay; "George School," Louis E. Thomson; "Eli Lamb's School at Baltimore," written by Elma Lewis and read by Hazel B. Dillistin.

The work in Dr. Holmes's Bible class seems to increase in interest as the term progresses. "Conversion" and "The Future Life" were subjects lately discussed.

Dr. Hull delivered an illustrated lecture at the Friends' School, Moorestown, on the 14th inst., this being the last of a series of twenty-three which he has been giving during the winter to Friends' Schools and Associations. Lewis Fussell, B. S., 1902, was the efficient operator of the lantern on many of these occasions.

President and Mrs. Swain and Dean Bond attended the meeting of the Swarthmore Club of New York, on the 18th. President Swain and Dean Bond gave toasts.

P. M. W.

GEORGE SCHOOL NOTES.

On Fourth-day afternoon, the 15th instant, Prof. Robert W. Rogers completed his course of three lectures on the Phœnicians, a very interesting as well as a very instructive course. As Friends, it was particularly interesting to us to know that the Phœnicians were a peaceful people, the only great people of the ancient world who never seem to have fought a war of conquest. The subjects of the three lectures were: "The Beginnings of the Phœnicians," "The Phœnicians and the Seas," and "The Phœnicians and Civilization."

George Eves, with Bertha Pancoast as alternate, has been chosen to represent George School at the Interscholastic Oratorical Contest to be held at Swarthmore, Fifth month 2d.

The Penn Literary Society held a public meeting on Seventh-day, Fourth month 18th. The program was as follows: Declamation, "Wendell Phillips," Ray Robinson; "Gleanings of the Penn," Edwin Maule; "A Junior's Version of the Merchant of Venice," Arthur Henrie; recitation, "The Young Musician and Madame Malibran," Elizabeth Large; dramatic sketch, "A Picked-up Dinner," characters, Alice Miller, Anna Parry, Granville Hibberd.

Fourth month 11th the Penn Literary Society entertained the Faculty and the Whittier Literary Society in the gymnasium.
R. A. L.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

JOHN WILLIAM ROWNTREE, formerly one of the editors of the British Friend, expected to sail for America on the 11th. The main purpose of his visit to this country is to have his eyes treated by a Chicago oculist. Joshua Rowntree and wife, who have been for some time in Australia, will return to England by way of the United States.

Andrew D. White, who has been resting quietly in Italy since his release from the cares of the German Embassy at Berlin, has sent to The Century Magazine the first part of a manuscript upon which he has long been engaged, consisting of reminiscences of his diplomatic life. This paper covers his recollections of Beaconsfield, the Emperors William I. and Frederick, Bismarck, Browning, and other famous European statesmen and writers. Further papers will include recollections of his recent embassy to Berlin.

Senator William C. Sproul, the author of the Good Roads bill passed by the Legislature of Pennsylvania, is a member of the Society of Friends, a graduate of Swarthmore College and also one of its Board of Managers.

The Schofield School Bulletin for Third month reminds its readers that the Old Clothes Store is kept open all summer and that barrels are always welcome. More money is needed for repairs, and sheets and pillow-cases for the teachers' beds, also towels, would be very acceptable.

The Laing School Visitor says that few barrels arrived during Third month and that the stock of shoes for the cobblers has given out. It has this editorial paragraph:

"Since the issue of our last number we have received from our good friend, Samuel Marshall, of Wisconsin, the twenty-five dollars necessary to complete the work on our new room or rooms, for in the alteration made we have secured a nice little room for our millinery department. It is very satisfactory to see this new room filled with pupils, comfortably seated or standing at the blackboards, wrestling with the very first principles of arithmetic. Thanks to our friends who responded so kindly to our appeal."

CHERRY-BOUGHS.

O, who shall run and greet me in the alleys of the spring?
O, who shall seek and find me, and go remembering?
And what is this that waits me in the orchard long and white?
What can it be my heart of hearts, except our Lost Delight?
And O, the haunting cherry-boughs that are so good to know!
And O, the heavenly cherry-boughs, straight up to heaven they grow!
And O, that lonely foot I hear a-following through the trees,
And in the stopping of the wind the little wrangling bees!
Ye clerks, fare from the counting-house; ye shepherds, from the hill;
Make fast the latch, ye careful wives, of April take your fill!
Yet what is this that waits you in the orchard long and white?
What can it be, ye sons of men, except your Lost Delight!
To you the word, to you the dreams, to you the quest shall fall;
For every vexing thing shall pass, but not the best of All!
Under the cherry-boughs it stands, so lonely and so kind,
And you will hear it following in the stopping of the wind!
—Lizette Woodward Reese, in Lippincott's Magazine.

APRIL RAIN IN THE WOOD.

WHEN it comes, a passing guest,
Young leaves, like young birds in the nest,
Open wide their mouths to gain
As much as they can of April rain;
And weanling squirrels that learn to creep
In branches where they soon will leap,
Pause to taste the drop that cleaves
To the delicate faces of opening leaves;
Fable buds that shrink in hot sunshine
Unfold to drink this April wine.

As softly as it came, it goes,—
So softly that a leaf scarce knows
Who has blessed it, whom to thank
For the cool, fresh cup it drank.

—Francis Sterne Palmer, in the Atlantic Monthly.

APRIL FOOLS.

THE April fools! the April fools!
What happy folkjare they!
The white flowers deck the cherry boughs
And daffodils are gay.
The bluebird calls, the redbreast sings,
The blackbird pipes all day,
And they believe—the silly things!—
That birds and flowers will stay.
'Tis wind and frost and scorching skies
That makes the April fools grow wise!

The April fools! the April fools!
What happy folk are they!
They're light of head and light of heart,
And dance the hours away.
Young Love, with fluttering purple wings,
Blithe Hope for them is new;
And they believe—the trustful things!—
That all they say is true.
Sweet simpletons! but who would frown
And shake their air-built castles down?
For dark were life, and full of sighs,
Should all its April fools grow wise!

—Marian Douglas.

The Anti-Alcohol Congress.

A DISPATCH from Berlin states that the International Anti-Alcohol Congress which meets biennially on the continent of Europe closed its session at Bremen on the 19th. In matters of attendance and well known persons present it has been the most remarkable of any session of the Congress. This body of 1400 delegates, notable in science and in the service of humanity as university professors or for their hereditary rank, have come here from fifteen different nations.

The Congress discussed the teachings of science concerning a moderate use of alcohol and the effect of its use on every phase of human progress. Two schools of thought were represented, the moderates, who called themselves "the temperate school," and the total abstinents, who are called the "abstinence school." By common consent the Congress passed no resolutions, but the applause for the testimony of science and experience on behalf of total abstinence proved that the moderates were in a minority.

The statement of Dr. August Forel, one of the foremost authorities in the world on brain and nerve diseases, that neither science nor experience furnishes evidence to justify calling alcohol a food called out prolonged acclamations. The papers read by notable members of the Congress during these six days will be printed for wide distribution. In a paper on "Alcohol and Art," Professor Berens, Director of the German School of Art, at Dusseldorf, said that alcohol, by dulling the spiritual aspirations essential to the greatest work, is an enemy of the highest attainment in art.

A paper on "Scientific Temperance Education in the Public Schools in the United States," by Mary H. Hunt, of America, led to a discussion in which twenty speakers took part, and nearly every one of them commended the extension of the American method for the prevention of intemperance.

CURRENT EVENTS.

THE National Association of Manufacturers, which met at New Orleans last week, adopted resolutions approving fair dealing between employers and employees, and the right of an employee to leave and of the employer to discharge at pleasure (subject to contracts), and condemning boycotts and blacklists, discrimination on account of membership and non-membership in labor organizations, dictation in the management of their business by individuals or organizations, the limitation of opportunities to learn any trade, and all strikes and lockouts. A resolution favoring tariff revision was laid on the table. Carroll D. Wright, Commissioner of Labor, representing President Roosevelt, addressed the Association on the subject of combinations.

BECAUSE of discoveries of frauds in the post-office department made by Assistant Postmaster General Bristow, a searching inquiry has been instituted by Postmaster General Payne. Superintendent Machen, of the Free Delivery Division, has been virtually suspended during the investigation. One of the charges is that a fund was raised by postal clerks to secure the defeat of Congressman Loud, Chairman of the House Post-office Committee, who was a barrier in the way of extravagant schemes. Another complaint is that many employees have been on the rolls as doing work entirely different from that which they actually performed. There are also charges of crookedness in the awarding of contracts.

JOHN MITCHELL, who arrived in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., on the 20th instant, says that all that is necessary to bring about a permanent peace is a thorough understanding of the award made by the Strike Commission. The most serious difficulty at this writing is the lockout of 30,000 men by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, the Lehigh Valley and the Susquehanna Companies. The men refused to work more than eight hours on Seventh-day, when they had been directed to work nine hours; the companies, therefore, closed a number of collieries.

THE bill to repeal the Voters' Assistant law, passed by the Legislature of Delaware, has failed to become a law because Governor Hunn's signature was not appended within the required thirty days. The reason given by the Governor for withholding his name is that a large number of the voters of the State are not sufficiently intelligent to mark the Australian ballot without assistance. The opposition of the politicians to the repeal bill was frankly expressed in the Legislature by Senator Conner in these words: "The voters' assistant system commends itself for fairness. It insures delivery of the goods. When I buy a horse, I want my horse."

A SEVERE rain storm accompanied by falling temperature and high winds raged along the Atlantic coast for forty-eight hours on the 14th and 15th. Along the New Jersey and Long Island coasts and in New York Bay great destruction was wrought, and the losses will probably reach into the millions. Nearly all the seaside resorts in New Jersey suffered severely. Several small ships were wrecked in New York Bay and the storm at Coney Island is said to have been the most severe witnessed there in thirty years.

THE use of alcoholic beverages in the United States has increased from 10.09 gallons per capita in 1880 to 19.48 gallons in 1902. There has been a decrease in the consumption of distilled liquors as compared with 1901, but an increase in the use of wine and beer.

PRESIDENT LOUBET, of France, has gone to Algeria to visit important points in this French colony.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

4TH Mo. 25.—HADDONFIELD FIRST-DAY School Union, Friends' Meeting-house, Moorestown, N. J., at 10 a.m. Question for discussion, "Can a successful business man be strictly truthful?" Trains leave Market Street Ferry, Philadelphia, at 8.20 a.m., or trolleys leave Camden every half hour stopping at Meeting-house.

4TH Mo. 25.—THE COMMITTEE ON Philanthropic Labor of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends, in the Meeting-house, 15th and Race Streets, at 1.30 p.m.

The Sub-Committees will meet as follows: The Indian, in Room No. 5, at 10.30 a.m. Peace and Arbitration, in Room No. 3, at 10 a.m. Colored People, in Race Street Meeting-house, at 9.30 a.m. Improper Publications, in Room No. 4, at 10 a.m. Purity, in Room No. 2, at 9 a.m. Women and Children, in Room No. 5, at 12.15 p.m. Equal Rights for Women, in Room No. 6, at 10.45 a.m. Temperance and Tobacco, in Room No. 1, at 11 a.m. Educational and Publication Committee, in Room No. 1, at 9.30 a.m. Legislation Committee, in Race Street Parlor, at 10.30 a.m.

4TH Mo. 25.—BUCKS FIRST-DAY School Union, in Makefield Meeting-house, Dolington, Pa.

4TH Mo. 26.—PHILADELPHIA EVENING Meeting at 35th Street and Lancaster Ave., 7.30 p. m.

4TH Mo. 26.—HORSHAM, PA. Young Friends' Association.

4TH Mo. 26.—CORNWALL, N. Y., FRIENDS' Association, at the home of Theodore Ketcham, at 3 p. m.

4TH Mo. 26.—THE VISITING COMMITTEE of Salem Quarterly Meeting will attend the meeting at Woodbury, N. J., at 10 a. m.

4TH Mo. 26.—JOHN J. CORNELL WILL attend Germantown Friends' Meeting, on School-house Lane, at 10.30 a. m., and Fair Hill Meeting at 3.30 p. m.

4TH Mo. 26.—A CONFERENCE UNDER the care of the Philanthropic Committees of the Yearly and Quarterly Meetings, in the Makefield Meeting-house, Dolington, at 2.30 p. m. subject, "Temperance." The meeting will be addressed by Dr. Joseph S. Walton.

4TH Mo. 28.—A REUNION OF THE OFFIcers, Teachers, and Pupils who are, or have been connected with Fairhill First-day School, will be held at 8 o'clock, in the Fairhill Meeting-house, Germantown Avenue and Cambria Street, Philadelphia.

(Concluded on page 256.)

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

NEWS NOTES.

EMPEROR WILLIAM wired to the Anti-alcohol Congress, in session at Bremen, an expression of his lively interest in its work.

RETURNS from elections recently held in all the towns in Kansas show a great increase of sentiment in favor of enforcing prohibition.

It is alleged that discrepancies amounting to $30,000,000 have been discovered in the accounts of the New York Metropolitan Street Railway Company.

AFTER spending eight days studying the wild animals in Yellowstone Park "without a gun," President Roosevelt visited the famous geysers of that region.

THE Italian, German, Russian, and Austrian Ambassadors to Turkey have impressed upon the Sultan the imperative necessity of checking the Albanian disorders.

THE steamship Minnesota, the largest vessel ever built in the United States, and the greatest cargo carrier in the world, was launched on the 16th, at Groton, Connecticut.

ANDREW CARNEGIE has offered to provide a filtration plant for Cornell University, and also to pay the nursing and medical expenses of all the stricken students.

WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR has bought for $185,000 Castle Hever, said to be the birthplace of Anne Boleyn, one of the wives of Henry VIII of England.

A MOVEMENT is said to have been started in China, abetted by the Empress Dowager and the reformer, Kan Yan-Wei, to put an end to the custom of bandaging the feet of girls.

A NEGRO accused of the murder of a police officer was taken from the jail at Joplin, Missouri, and hanged by a mob. Afterward a mob invaded the colored section of the town, burning houses and assaulting the terrified inhabitants.

A DISPATCH from San Salvador states that General Bonilla, the President-elect of Honduras, on the 14th instant took possession of Tegucigalpa, the capital of that Republic.

DR. ADOLPH LORENZ on the 16th instant removed the plaster cast from the hip of J. Ogden Armour's little daughter, and found the limb in perfect condition. The child was able to walk without difficulty.

THE decree of the United States Court of Appeals concerning the Northern Securities Company has been modified to the extent of permitting the payment to the Company of Great Northern and Northern Pacific dividends.

A CARELESS workman at one of the Caldwell oil wells Beaumont, Texas, knocked over a lantern and started a fire resulting in the loss of property valued at $1,000,000 and the bankruptcy of twenty or more of the smaller companies.

GOVERNOR TAFT, who has been suffering from ill health, cabled to Secretary Root that he has gone to Benguet, 150 miles from Manila, where there are pines and grass lands, with the air as bracing as the Adirondacks or Murray Bay.

A REPORT sent by Minister Conger, from Peking, to the State Department, Third month 12th, announces the prompt suppression of an attempt to reorganize the Boxer movement by the Viceroy, Yuan Shi Hi, and the punishment of the leaders by death.

SNOW fell for thirty-six hours in Central Europe, on the 19th and 20th, and communications were interrupted. Great damage was done by wind. On the grounds of the Emperor's palace at Potsdam fine trees were uprooted dating from the time of Frederick the Great.

BEFORE President Roosevelt left Washington for his Western trip he took the first step in a kindly act of international courtesy which was completed at Kincardine, Ontario, on the 14th instant. Eight gold medals, given in recognition of bravery in saving the lives of the crew of an American schooner, were presented in the name of the President by United States Consul Shirley to citizens of Kincardine.

4TH Mo. 28.—CONCORD QUARTERLY Meeting, at Wilmington, Delaware, at 10 a. m. Minister and Elders, the day before, at 2 p. m.

4TH Mo. 29.—NEWTOWN, PA. JUNIOR Friends' Association, at the home of Lavinia Eyre.

4TH Mo. 29.—PURCHASE QUARTERLY Meeting, at Amawalk, N. Y., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders the day before at 2.30 p. m. Subject for Friends' Association, Fourth-day afternoon, "Friends as Citizens." Friends coming Third-day will be entertained over night. Teams will meet at Yorktown on Third-day the trains which leave 155th St., N. Y. city at 8.03 a. m. and 4.33 p. m. (Trains leave Grand Central via Hudson Division at 7.34 a. m. and 4.12 p. m., transferring passengers to Putnam Division at Norris Heights.) On Fourth-day the train which leaves 155th St. at 8.03 a. m., and Grand Central at 7.34 a. m. will be met at Amawalk; trains leave Elmsford at 8.48 a. m. and 5.13 p. m.

4TH Mo. 29.—JOHN J. CORNELL WILL hold a parlor meeting at Friends' Boarding Home, 5800 Green St., Germantown, in the evening.

5TH Mo. 2.—NINE PARTNERS HALF-Yearly Meeting, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, preceding Seventh-day, at 3 p. m.

5TH Mo. 3.—PENDLETON, IND., YOUNG Friends' Association.

5TH Mo. 3.—AT CHICHESTER, DEL. Co., Pa., a Circular meeting under the care of a committee of Concord Quarterly Meeting, at 3 p. m.

5TH Mo. 3.—JOHN J. CORNELL WILL attend Girard Avenue Meeting at 11 a. m.; Frankford Meeting at 3.30 p. m.; and Green Street Meeting at 7.30 p. m.

5TH Mo. 3.—FAIR HILL MEETING attended by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit the smaller branches.

5TH Mo. 9-15.—PHILADELPHIA YEARLY Meeting. Friends desiring board during the week of the approaching Yearly Meeting, in Philadelphia, can apply to either of the following persons, Isaac H. Hillborn, 15th and Race Streets; Martha D. Hough, 1340 Spruce Street; Rebecca B. Comly, 1520 Centennial Avenue; Matilda K. Lobb, 1702 N. 18th Street; Sarah L. Haines, 1513 N. Marshall Street. Friends in the city having accommodations should notify the Committee.

Of a pretentious but not well read dame of the Victorian period Lady Bulwer used to relate this incident:

The conversation turned on literature one day, and this lady who aimed at forming a salon, got rather out of her depth.

"Who is this Dean Swift they are talking about?" she whispered at last to Lady Bulwer. "I should like to invite him to one of my receptions."

"Alas, madam," answered Lady Bulwer, "the dean did something that has shut him out of society."

"Dear me! What was that?"

"Well, about a hundred years ago he died."—[Gathered.]

"WHAT are the holes for?" asked little Emma, looking at the porous plaster that her mother was preparing to adjust on Willie's back.

"It's funny you don't know that, sister," interposed Willie, "they are to let the pain out, of course."—[Ram's Horn.]

"May I go to the country?" asked a small boy of Miss Ely (at the Carlisle Indian School).

"What can you do in the country?" was her inquiry, in reply.

"I can milk," replied the boy proudly.

"Can you? Let me see! On which side of the cow would you milk?"

"The outside."

He went.—[Red Man and Helper.]

THE BRITISH FRIEND.

PUBLISHED ON THE 15th OF EACH MONTH

Being the only religious and literary review written chiefly for the general public, but from the standpoint of the Society of Friends, The British Friend offers a unique opportunity for spreading "The Truth" among thoughtful enquirers.

The Contents of the April Issue include

- "Insincerity," by May Kendall.
- "James Martineau," by Mary A. Willis.
- "Members One of Another," by Mary L. Coe.
- "An Unsettled God," by Emily Fellows.
- "Stopped Brook's "Browning" by Wm. Grosvenor.
- "The Society of Friends and the Adult School," by J. William Rountree.
- "The Negro Problem in America: Action by Friends of Philadelphia," by J. H. B.
- "The Meaning of Quakerism," by John W. Graham.

A distinctive feature is made of Reviews and Notices of Books, especially such as are likely to be helpful to those engaged in religious and social work.

Subscription, 6s. 6d. ($1.25) per annum postfree. Specimen copy on application.

EDITOR AND PUBLISHER:
EDWARD GRUBB, M. A.

Devonshire Chambers,
Bishopsgate Without, London, E. C.

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Meaning of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail $0.12.
"The reading of which is a spiritual feast."
—FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.10. By mail $0.12.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail $0.12.

The Donkeyboobers. By Joseph Eickman. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated. $0.10.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION.

N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

These trade-mark cruciform flours on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
Unlike all other flours. Ask Grocers.
For bulk or samples, write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

BREAD MACHINE

For HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (INCORPORATED)
107 N. 3rd St., Philadelphia

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.

5 PHONES.

MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.

5 PHONES.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is a deep student of religious literature, and Bunyan is one of his favorite authors. It is reported that a reply he made to a distinguished literary woman, who was not so well grounded in the faith of the fathers as might have been expected, hurried her in some chagrin the next day to her book shelves.

"Tell me, Mr. President," she is said to have asked, "what character in fiction comes nearest to your ideal of what a man should be?"

"Great-heart," replied the President. "In my estimation he is the loftiest figure living and moving in letters."

"I am afraid I am not so well up in modern fiction as I thought I was," ventured the lady.

Mr. Roosevelt's good-natured laughter told her she was on sinking sand. How stupid of me! she hurried to say. "One of the old pagan heroes, of course, whom I have forgotten. Where shall I find him?"

"In the Delectable Mountains," laughed the President, turning to other guests pressing for recognition.—"Baptist Commonwealth."

REDUCED RATES TO NEW ORLEANS.

VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD ACCOUNT MEETING AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION.

For the benefit of those desiring to attend the meeting of the American Medical Association at New Orleans, La., May 5 to 8, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets from all stations on its lines to New Orleans, on May 1, 2 and 3, good going on those dates and good to return reaching original starting point not later than ten days from date of sale, at reduced rates. By depositing ticket with Joint Agent at New Orleans between May 1 and 12, and payment of fifty cents, an extension of final return limit to May 30 may be obtained.

GREATLY REDUCED RATES TO ATLANTA, GA., AND MACON, GA., AND RETURN, VIA THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

On May 4th and 5th, the Southern Railway will sell round trip tickets from Washington to Atlanta, Ga., account the National Conference of Charities and Corrections, May 6th to 12th, 1903, at one first-class fare plus twenty-five cents, final limit May 10th, 1903. Also to Macon, Ga. on May 4th and 5th, at rate of one first-class fare, plus twenty-five cents, final limit May 10th, 1903, account of the Sugar-Cane Growers' Convention, held at that point May 6th, 8th, 1903. Corresponding low rates from other points.

The Southern Railway operates three through trains daily to Atlanta, Macon and other points South. Dining-car service on all through trains.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa., will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

Y. F. A. Building,
140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a.

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS

Cheapest. Best. Home-like.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner 25c to 30c
Breakfast 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. Supper 10:00 to 11:00 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS

One occupant, 50 cents per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 75 cents each per night.

50 cents each per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.

Phone 1-33-53.

LIZZIE J. LAMBERT,

PLAIN AND FANCY MILLINERY

Successor to E. SHOEMAKER.

1020 Green St.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, 3600 1/2 St.

PLAIN MILLINERY,

Removed to 343 Spring Garden Street

From 702 Spring Garden Street.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CUNSHOCKEN Special attention given to serving

DAIRIES. Office 307 North

Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

JOSEPH L. JONES

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK.

Telephone.

Grand Building and 216 W. Coulter St.

Home Kitchen Outfits

and all

House Furnishing Goods

J. FRANKLIN MILLER,

1626 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Insurance from Loss by Fire

Best of Companies

Lowest Rates

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets

and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers

we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality the latest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET.

PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

LANSDOWNE AND DARBY SAVING FUND AND TRUST COMPANY

LANSDOWNE, PA.

Full Paid Capital, $125,000.00.

2 per cent. paid on Check Deposits, 3 per cent. paid on Savings Deposits.

GEORGE FOSTER WHITE, President, Treasurer and Trust Officer; W. LANE VERLENDEN Vice-President; JOSEPH T. BUNTING, Second Vice-President; MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary; LEWIS LAWRENCE SMITH, Solicitor.
 Acts as Executor, Administrator, Trustee, Guardian or Agent. Will prepare and keep free of charge where this Company is named as Executor or Trustee.
 Aims at perfect service and perfect Security. Either the Franklin National Bank or the Girard National Bank will receive deposits for this company.

Merchants' Trust Company,

611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $50,000.00
 CAPITAL (paid in), 250,000.00
 SURPLUS, 50,000.00
 UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 42,349.79

Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured and conveyancing done. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from 25 and upwards, per annum.

JOSEPH R. RHOADS, President.
 JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President.
 HORACE B. PEARSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas
 CHARLES P. EARLY, Secretary.
 WM. B. LANE, Title and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS

NICHOLAS BRICE, J. BOLTON WINFENNY,
 S. DAVIS FACE, W. WARREN G. GRIFFITH,
 JOSEPH R. RHOADS, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
 JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED I. PHILLIPS,
 THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
 CHAS. S. HINCHMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
 EDWARD S. CRAVEN, EDGAR DUDLEY FARIS,
 JOHN H. SAYRE, HORACE B. PEARSON.

United Security Life Insurance and Trust Company OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Capital, $1,000,000
 Surplus and undivided profits, 500,000

Banking and General Trust Co. Business

OFFICERS:

WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
 JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
 ESMONDE H. AUSTIN, Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
 CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS, Assistant Treasurer.
 HENRY LABAREE JAYNE, Counsel.
 FRANCIS H. HEMPERLY, Actuary.
 T. HEWSON BRADFORD, M.D., Medical Director.

DIRECTORS:

William M. Coates, William H. Lucas,
 Caleb J. Milne, William R. Verzer,
 V. C. Sweetman, J. W. Hampton, Jr.,
 Charles Porter, Orlando Crease,
 Robert Dorman, I. Layton Register,
 John G. Carruth, Esmonde H. Austin,
 William Bault, Silas W. Pettit,
 Joel Cook.

THE UNION CENTRAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Assets, $34,000,000

Plain Life and Endowment Policies with Annual Dividends.
 The Highest Grade of Life Insurance at the Lowest Cost.
 The Company for Those who Think for Themselves.

Good Contracts to Good Agents. Martha J. Warren

Lawton Brothers, Managers,
 338 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,800,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,800,000

ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER. ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES. FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION. INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. REGISTER AND TRANSFER AGENT. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE. Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders, . . . $ 4,487,613.08
 Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,417,764.17
 Assets of the Company, 61,618,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

Samuel R. Shipley, President
 T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
 Asa S. Wing, Vice-President
 Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept'
 J. Roberts Foulke, Trust Officer
 David G. Alsop, Actuary
 J. Barton Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
 Samuel H. Troth, Treasurer
 C. Walter Borton, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

Samuel R. Shipley, James V. Watson,
 T. Wistar Brown, William Longstreth,
 Henry Haines, Edward H. Ogden,
 Richard Wood, Thomas Scattergood,
 Charles Harshorne, J. Preston Thomas,
 Asa S. Wing, Robert M. Janney,
 Philip C. Garrett, Marriot C. Morris,
 Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

New and Dressy Ginghams

We show many hundreds of patterns, comprising everything new and good from all the famous makers of both continents; a variety probably unequaled in America. Our prices are most favorable—but that our customers know in advance:

AMERICAN GINGHAMS—A large variety in plaids and stripes; two hundred styles, suitable for shirt waist suits and children's dresses; 17-inch—from 8c to 15c a yard.

GOOD SCOTCH GINGHAMS—A large variety of styles and all the newest color combinations; make stylish shirt waist suits; 28-inch—at 18c a yard.

MERCERIZED GINGHAMS—The mercerized ginghams are even more thoroughly well-made than ever; and the finish gives them a rich, silk-like effect. A hundred pretty styles, all 27-inch—at 20c and 25c a yard.

NATTY LINENGINGHAMS—The Linen Ginghams (half linen, half cotton) are cool and comfortable for the hot weather, and especially desirable for children's dresses; 24-inch—at 35c a yard.

D. & J. ANDERSON'S GINGHAMS—D. & J. Anderson is so well-known that no particular mention of these goods is necessary. Mostly white grounds with neat and medium stripes; a few in Scotch plaids; all 32-inch—at 40c a yard.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
 PHILADELPHIA.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.
STEAMSHIP LINES
 FROM
PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.
 O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue.
 Upriver offices, 828 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
 J. C. WHITNEY, ad V. P. and T. M. W. P.
 TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

If everybody could have adequate life insurance at no cost at all, what a step in the march of civilization!
 The next best is the safest at the lowest cost, furnished to and by the members of the
PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
 921-3-5 Chestnut St.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, FIFTH MONTH 2, 1903.

Friends' Intelligencer Association, (LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME. WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertions reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING, N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia. *A TELEPHONE No. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XVIII.	273
POETRY: THE SHORT HOUR.	273
WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson, (Continued).	273
CHARLES M. STABLER, FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:	275
The Twelve—Pentecost.	276
REVERENCE DURING PRAYER.	277
A TUNED RECEIVER.	277
EDITORIAL:
The Habit of Right Thinking.	278
Notes.	278, 279
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS.	279
SOCIETY NOTES.	280
LETTERS FROM ISAAC H. CLOTHIER, II., (Continued).	280
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	282
EDUCATIONAL.	283
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	283
LITERARY NOTES.	283
POETRY: The Twenty-Third Psalm; Let the Child be a Child.	284
HOW TO PREVENT NERVOUSNESS.	284
A WOMAN'S SCARS.	285
MISCELLANY: Whittier's "In School Days"; A Prohibition Railway; The Dog Laughed; The Filipino a Man; The King's Physician on Alcohol; The Founder of the Smithsonian Institution.	286
CURRENT EVENTS.	287
NEWS NOTES.	288
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	287

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—BY LADY, A POSITION AS private secretary and bookkeeper, with educational instruction preferred; or as teacher of mathematics and bookkeeping. Address No. 86, this Office.

WANTED.—COMPETENT WOMAN AS MAN-aging and working housekeeper. Address A.B., this Office.

WANTED.—POSITION AS HOUSEKEEPER, or to care for invalid. Would travel. Address Box 97, Devon, Pa.

WANTED.—BOARDERS FOR THE SUMMER in country. Friends' Family. Modern conveniences. Apply early, Box 125, Woodstown, N. J.

FRIENDS DESIRING LODGING ACCOM-modations during the approaching Yearly Meeting in New York are requested to make application to Jeanie C. Kitchin, 55 Park Street, Jersey City, N. J.

ACCOMMODATIONS FOR YEARLY MEETING Friends at F. J. and M. W. Pennock, 235, 237, 239 North Eighteenth Street

BOARDING.—DESIRABLE BOARD IN COUN-try for 8 or to adults in private family. New home, all modern conveniences, good water, electric lights, bath, porches, lawn, excellent table, within 12 minutes from steam and trolley station. For further particulars address L. S. GILL, Haddonfield, N. J.

BOARDING.—DESIRABLE ROOMS WITH board. Friends. 628 N. 23rd Street, Phila.

FRIENDS FROM A DISTANCE, WHO EXPECT to attend Yearly Meeting, can be accommodated with rooms and board at a moderate rate, in a Friends' family, by applying at an early date to H. E. GREEN, 1707 Mt. Vernon Street.

BOARDERS DESIRING IN FRIENDS' FAMILY on farm near Conshohocken. For further particulars address S. 1800 Spring Mill Ave., Conshohocken, Pa.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1829 1/2 St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

THERE ARE TWO VACANCIES FOR EDU-cated refined young women who wish to study nursing. Address chief nurse, Hospital of Womens Homoeopathic Association, 20th St. and Susquehanna Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

SWARTHMORE, PA., TWENTY BEAUTIFUL summer homes for rent furnished. $30 to $500 per month. Write or call on E. C. Walton, successor to Henry S. Keot.

TO RENT.—BY SEPTEMBER 1st TO A RE-fined family for board of owner (a lady) in room house in West Philadelphia. Address T. B. Hendrickson, 617 Market Street, Philadelphia.

FOR RENT.—"SUNSET." COTTAGE AT BUCK Hill Falls, near lun. Four bed-rooms, hot-water heater. For rent for the summer, $250. Apply 1024 Race St.

FOR RENT.—BY THE MONTH, A FURNISHED house in Swarthmore, Yale Avenue, on new trolley line, grounds and shade for children. For particulars address HENRY KENT, Swarthmore, Pa.

FOR SALE.—SWARTHMORE, NINE ROOMS and bath, very modern convenience; trolley passes door; near station and college. Large lot, exceptional opportunity. Part cash. Address Box 658, Swarthmore, Pa.

HELEN G. BORTON WHO IS A STUDENT IN Emerson College, Boston, is prepared to give "The Lost Word," by Henry van Dye as an evening's program for Young Friends' Associations and other meetings. After Fifth month 8th for particulars address Helen G. Borton, Woodstown, N. J.

J. H. Ringe, Jr. Thos. Biddle Ellis.
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.), REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents, Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected. Keystone and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

What want we? Have we not perpetual streams, Warm woods and sunny hills, and fresh green fields, And mountains not less green, and flocks and herds And thickets full of songsters. . . . —Wordsworth.

In order to serve the Inn and settlement with fresh milk and in abundance, our friend, Franklin Packer of George School, Pa., has undertaken the formation of a herd of cows and will have immediate charge of them. Cottagers will be supplied with fresh, pure milk in bottles, as is the custom with the best dairies.

The Inn will supply ice, oil, and bread, if desired, to cottagers. The stores at Cresco send their salesmen twice a week soliciting orders, delivering goods the following day. Hucksters and butchers call at regular intervals. It is only a question of time when we will have our own store in the settlement.

Two incubators and four brooders are all in use in the new poultry houses on the chicken farm. We hope to raise chickens enough to supply the Inn.

A truck farm on a considerable scale is planned, and while the season in these high mountain valleys is very late, still we expect to supply many of the vegetables for the Inn table. There is considerable fruit on the several little mountain farms which are a part of the Estate.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Young Friends' Association.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Philadelphia Young Friends' Association will be held in the Y. F. A. Building, on Second-day evening, Fifth month 4th, at 8 p. m.

DR. BENJAMIN F. BATTIN of Swarthmore College will deliver a lecture on "THE PHILOSOPHY OF QUAKERISM."

A cordial invitation is extended to all.
CAROLINE F. COMLY, Secretary.

Friends' Book Association.

The annual meeting of stockholders of Friends' Book Association of Philadelphia will be held in Room No. 4, second-story, Central Building, Fifteenth and Race Streets, on Second-day, Fifth month 11th, 1903, at 7.30 o'clock p. m. Election of Directors.

SAMUEL B. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

"Never So Well Satisfied" with his printing as when we did it," the President of a prominent College told us. And he has tried many printers, large and small. He expressed the general sentiment of our customers.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,
MAKERS OF THE
BETTER KIND OF PRINTING
1019-21 Market St., Phila., Pa.
Keystone' Phone, Race 53-37 A. Bell' Phone 34-61 A.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH and RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER,
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, } Principals.
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.

Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business.

The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted wherever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to

GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Jenkitown, Pa.

CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR
BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars address

A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars address

ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B.

Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register.

The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOLKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and insuring.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OFFICE: { 693 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
{ Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
395 SWEDA STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Thompson Shours, 2212 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Toga.
Richards & Shours, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS.
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa.
Phone 3-54-78 D.

CHARLES BURTON,
Practical House and Sign Painter,
Office, 907 N. Thirteenth Street, } Philadelphia, Pa.
Residence, 1714 Woodstock Street, }

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sanson Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered
Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

THE PENNINGTON,
Permanent and Transient Boarding
for Friends.
215 E. 15th Street, New York City.

The Pennhurst, Second House
from Beach.
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. K. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,
1236 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts.
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR
OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,
Atlantic City, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like
and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

PURE FOOD skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St.
These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.
J. J. WILLIAMS.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By
William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages.
Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper
for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50
copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND
ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman.
Pamphlet. 27 pages. *Dr. Boardman, a
Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY.
By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. *A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies
30 cents. 1000 copies $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELI-
GIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard
M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50
copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

*All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

THE DOUK HOBORS

Their History in Russia and Their Migration to Canada. By JOSEPH ELKINTON
8vo, 344 pages, 3 maps, 50 illustrations. Postpaid, $2.00.

"Timely, interesting and valuable."—Public Opinion.

"An extremely interesting book to all in sympathy with religious idealism."—The Outlook.

Only adequate account in English of this unique people, and their great migration.

FERRIS & LEACH, Publishers, 29-31 North Seventh Street, PHILADELPHIA

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTH MONTH 2, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 18.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

VIII.

THE truth is simple, and the path is plain—all can understand it. If we obey the call of the Master, we shall not only know a communion with him, but a sweet union and gospel fellowship with his children.

SARAH J. LEEDOM (SHARPLESS.)

From a letter to a friend, 1839.

THE SHORT HOUR.

LORD, what a change within us one short hour
Spent in Thy presence will prevail to make,
What heavy burdens from our bosoms take,
What parched grounds refresh us with a shower!
We kneel, and all around us seems to lower;
We rise, and all, the distant and the near,
Stands forth in sunny outline, brave and clear.
We kneel, how weak! We rise, how full of power!
Why, therefore, should we do ourselves this wrong,
Or others—that we are not always strong,
That we are ever overborne with care,
That we should ever weak or heartless be,
Anxious or troubled—when with us is prayer,
And joy and strength and courage are with Thee?
—Archbishop Trench.

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

JOHN JACKSON.

(Continued from last week.)

AN interesting glimpse of the early married life of John and Rachel Jackson is given us in the memoirs of Elizabeth Peabody, who says: "It was a fearful experiment to bring his city bride to a country home, where were his unmarried sisters and brothers, to be made secondary, in what had been hitherto their father's house, to a new mistress of the family. Yet the experiment did not fail, and all were successively married off, without one family quarrel, and with most friendly feelings and actions on all sides. The husband and wife felt and acted to their family connections on both sides with cordial sympathy, and also in the initiation of habits of great general hospitality. Nor in all this was the wife regarded as a mere instrumentality to promote his ends. She was honored in herself. Her comfort was never sacrificed to others by him, and every little thing she thoughtfully did, to make his life useful and beautiful, was received with fresh gratitude, and recognized as a free gift by her husband."

Another glimpse is furnished by two extracts from a letter written Seventh month 20, 1836, nine months after their marriage. The first paragraph quoted was written by John, the second is from a postscript by Rachel.

"We mutually love you and desire that you may know that other circumstances than a want of inclination prevent us from writing oftener than we do. The necessary cares of life devolve upon us, and limit in some degree our social intercourse with those we love. This to me would be quite a privation were I not blessed with a companion whose society alone can render every moment of my life happy, whether I enjoy the blessings of prosperity or whether it be my lot to pass through the adverse probations incident to our present existence. Yes, I consider my life blessed in the situation in which I am placed, and humbly desire that I may not be found wanting in gratitude and obedience to the giver of every good and perfect gift."

"Time was, beloved friends, when I did not feel myself such a mere cipher in addressing you, but I think my dear husband handles the pen so much more to your edification that I reluctantly occupy any of his sheet. Yet I must now and then say a few words of kindness to testify of that precious feeling which claims sweet fellowship with you; of that love which animates my heart with the most affectionate interest for you, desiring that your lines may be cast into pleasant places ever, though some of the rest of us may have to sit in deep baptism whilst the waters pass over our souls, I trust to the purification of our spirits, that old things may pass away and all things become new of God."

When they had been married but little more than a year a son was born to them, but the little life whose advent was a source of pure joy, lasted but five brief months. In a letter written to Henry Pike when the babe was a month old we find a reference to him, and also a loving message to the children of his friend.

"My love, united to my beloved Rachel's (who is in the enjoyment of good health) salutes you, and to your dear children also does our salutation extend. Assure them of my solicitude for their advancement in the knowledge of the truth; may they learn to guard the avenues of their hearts against the admission of evil, suppress every thought that would not ripen into the language of praise, and thus learn in the morning of life to become the obedient children concerning whom the blessed Jesus said, 'Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven.'

"My dear R. would like to add something to this, but I have lengthened my epistle too much to permit it. I think you will hear from her soon. Our little boy is doing right well; as you may suppose he is his mother's joy, and occupies almost her whole attention."

In a letter written early in 1837 John speaks with pleasure of the prospect that their beloved friends Phebe T. Merritt and her son John and wife expect to be at yearly meeting, and alludes to a pleasant visit of three weeks in Baltimore. Then he adds: "I attended our monthly meeting a short time since, and was deeply exercised on account of the indifference manifested by many of our members in the attendance of our religious meetings, and of those simple and plain habits which have so long characterized the Society."

A pathetic interest attaches to a letter written to his father-in-law just after his child's death. "Our little boy was but a short sufferer; but one week elapsed from the commencement of his sickness to his close. He continued to grow weaker from the first, leaving us but a faint hope of his recovery. On Sixth-day we called in the aid of our experienced friend, Dr. N. Shoemaker, who soon told us with much candor and feeling what we might anticipate as the result, there being then evident symptoms of approaching dissolution. The dear little creature throughout the whole appeared to suffer but very little, and remained sensible as far as we could judge from his infant manifestations, till within a few minutes of his close. He lay almost perfectly still the whole of Sixth-day night, and quietly left us for the world of spirits about half-past seven o'clock on the morning of the 22d.

"The interment of our dear child took place last evening. We had the company of a number of our sympathizing friends, although the weather was very inclement, snowing very fast, which continued till some time in the night, when it was several inches deep. This morning everything has a wintry appearance, and not only in the outward, but ah, it is a wintry season of mind! Still in the midst of this we have the evidences of our Heavenly Father's love, furnishing that consolation which can sustain the soul in the day of its afflictions."

We again quote from Elizabeth Peabody in regard to the effect produced upon the parents by the loss of their first-born: "The impression came to the silent mind of each, in their individual communings with God, that it was their duty to devote themselves to the care of other people's children. Outward circumstances did not favor the plan at all; it was by no means a lucrative pursuit in their case, but in several ways a sacrifice. A sense of duty, however, compelled each to make known to the other the conviction they experienced, and the unity of spirit which they thus discovered 'gave the assurance that it was the dictation of truth,' and they did not feel at liberty to set this aside."

In accordance with this conviction in the autumn of 1837 a boarding school for girls was opened, with eight pupils; one of these was Mary S. Pancoast who next year became a teacher in the school, in which capacity she continued as long as the school existed. The following extract from a letter written in the Eleventh month of that year expresses some of John Jackson's views concerning education.

"The religious education of children has often been to my mind a subject of deep interest and concern. . . . But a religious education does not consist in teaching children those abstract opinions and speculations of men which have given rise to unprofitable disputations; nor in directing them to creeds and confessions of faith which man has set up for a standard of religion. . . . The minds of children should be directed to principles, not opinions; to the heavenly operations of truth, and not to words and theories about them. The truths of religion are all plain and simple, easy to be understood, as the soul by obedience advances in righteousness and is prepared to receive and obey new disclosures of the Divine will.

"The more I look upon the important concern in which we contemplate engaging, the more I am satisfied it is our calling, one in which we shall be able to succeed with satisfaction to ourselves, and at the same time be useful to others, by filling up our duty to them, the consequence of which must be the reward of peace."

A letter written by John Jackson, Twelfth month 25th, 1837, shows that his new cares did not lessen his interest in and concern for the Society of Friends, and also that neither he nor his wife were disappointed in their pleasant anticipations regarding the school. Two paragraphs of the letter are appended, and also a post-script written by Rachel.

"I fear sometimes the prosperous day as to outward blessings and privileges which has overtaken us, and has, as it were, placed our Society upon the very pinnacle of the temple, has found too many ready to make these things their bread, their life, their all, to the neglect of the pursuit of the durable riches of righteousness, which does ever constitute the food and clothing of the saints.

"We are now fairly engaged in our new employment, with ten interesting children. The task is altogether a very delightful one, and so far we have been able to progress much to our satisfaction. Our children appear to be very happy, which adds much to the pleasure of the task."

"Our new cares are truly delightful and every day confirms us in the assurance that the service is the one cast up for us. . . . Yesterday my dear J. obtained a minute to visit some of the meetings in Philadelphia quarter. Much kindness was evidenced and sympathy and encouragement expressed, and truly he needed it for his dwelling place has been in a lowly spot. I think that I have been made willing to resign him to do his work in the daytime, and believe that a way will be made for me to move on with my accumulated cares. . . . I believe that all our duties may prove pleasures to us, and my individual concern is to realize that 'true happiness has no localities, but where duty went, she went.'"

CORRECTION.—In last week's paper the sister referred to in John Jackson's letter as living in Bucks county was not Martha Schofield, as it was printed, but Mary Schofield, who was the mother of our Martha Schofield, founder of the school at Aiken, S. C.

ELIZABETH LLOYD.

(To be continued.)

WISDOM is knowing what to do next, virtue is doing it.—[David Starr Jordan.]

SMILE in public. It may cheer a heart that is in sorrow.—[Anonymus.]

For Friends' Intelligencer.

CHARLES M. STABLER.

"MARK the perfect man and, behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace," are the words that came to my mind upon hearing that death had claimed our beloved young Friend, Charles M. Stabler. They have remained with me, and I think I may safely say I have not thought of them since, that his spirit has not come before me; nor of him, that they have not rested on my mind.

This dear Friend began life Sixth month 16th, 1853, and after a career full of work for his fellow-men and God, he entered into the rest that awaits such as are led and guided by the Divine Spirit, Third month 30th, 1903.

He began his school career in Sandy Spring, Md., but soon after his beginning his parents, Francis and Cornelia Stabler, moved to Lake Roland, in Baltimore county, whence Charles and his brother Walter were sent to Westtown Boarding School. Afterward he spent four years, until the fall of 1869, at Friends' Elementary and High School, Baltimore, and then entered Phillips Academy at Andover, where he and a classmate, John Emerson Lamb, Jr., designed preparing for Harvard. After a year there he changed his intention to go to Harvard and resolved to prepare for Yale by work at Haverford. His fathers' business was entirely destroyed by the Civil War and Charles was obliged to make his own way through college. It is believed by some of his friends that his health was undermined by his self-denial and hard work during this period of his career.

He entered Yale in the autumn of 1871 and was graduated therefrom in 1876 or 1877. After obtaining his degree he returned to his Baltimore school where he entered upon his career as a teacher, having for his work Latin and Early English. In that field of labor he remained until the middle of 1879. He then went to Stevens Institute, Hoboken, where he worked while studying law in the University of New York. His health was now seriously impaired and after his admission to the Bar he spent the winter of 1884-85 in South Carolina teaching, with the hope that the milder climate would benefit him. He was called thence by his father's illness and death in Sixth month, 1885.

In the fall of 1885 he resumed the practice of law in New York city and was quite successful, making a reputation in that, as in all of his other undertakings, for upright dealing and clearness of judgment, for thoroughness in examination of titles, etc., and for logical statements of facts and inferences.

While still a youth Charles Stabler gave evidence to those with whom he was in close touch, of a fondness for thought on moral and religious subjects and a repugnance for evil of any kind. While he was practising law the death of a dearly loved younger brother, who had been like a son to him, gave an even more serious tinge to his feelings. Soon after this event he made his first appearance in the ministry, at Sandy Spring.

The law now became in many ways distasteful to him and he resolved to resume teaching. He accepted the position of principal of Sherwood School in Sandy Spring, in 1891. This position he held for two years, when he resigned to enter upon the last teaching engagement of his short but useful life, in the George School at the time of its opening in 1893.

He was the first secretary of the faculty of the George School and held this position until pressure of other work compelled him to resign. In the work of organizing the new school he was invaluable, as in his plans he was exceptionally far-sighted in providing for possible contingencies. It was he who made the first schedule of classes and all subsequent schedules, until the last year of his residence at the school. Notwithstanding his enfeebled condition he did a prodigious amount of work, and until the final collapse there was perhaps no other teacher who lost less time from class on account of sickness than he. He seemed to have an almost perfect knowledge of himself physically. When he did not feel well he always knew, just what was the matter and what was best to do, thus making every ounce of his strength count. He seems not to have known the meaning of waste in the sense of ever permitting it so far as concerned himself.

Possessing true Southern hospitality he was prominent in the social as well as in the religious life of the school. He was a leader in organizing the Young Friends' Associations in the fall of 1893. He was faithful in his attendance at all religious meetings, where he was frequently impressed to speak, and his addresses were always clear-cut, to the point, and logical. He was in constant demand at outside meetings, and it was his habit to help wherever and whenever possible. He was always in the front of reform movements, positive in his convictions, but temperate in his actions and expressions.

In his youth he had been active in athletic sports, and after his strength was not sufficient for him to participate in such sports himself he encouraged them among the pupils, and inspired many a game of baseball, which seemed to be his favorite amusement.

During his connection with the school he was chairman of the Committee on Instruction and Discipline, and his helpful influence was everywhere felt. He went to live in the cottage when it was completed in the fall of 1894, keeping house there with his mother, and taking charge of the cottage boys, who were much attached to him.

On Eighth month 7, 1895, he was married at Doe Run, Chester county, Pa., to Mary Ida Palmer, a former pupil of the George School, daughter of Edward L. and Ellen R. Palmer. During the years that they lived together four beautiful children were born to them. The only shadow upon the happiness of the home life was the failing health of the husband and father.

In Third month, 1902, he was attacked by an illness so serious that the Committee of the George School very kindly advised him to take a year's rest. After spending the summer in the Pocono Mountains he went in Tenth month to Aiken, S. C., where he improved for awhile, but succumbed on Third month 30th to an attack of Bright's disease.

In Aiken, as elsewhere, he made many warm friends, who were impressed by his bright mind, his true culture, and his pure and elevated spirit.

"A whiter soul, a fairer mind,
A life with purer course and aim,
A gentler eye, a voice more kind,
We may not look on earth to find;
The love that lingers o'er his name
Is more than fame."

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 17.
THE TWELVE—PENTECOST.

GOLDEN TEXT.—To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth.—John, xviii., 37.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, i., 21–26; ii., 1–13.

ONE of the first acts of the disciples after Jesus had gone from them, and after they had settled in Jerusalem to await his second coming was to fill the vacancy in their number caused by the apostasy and death of Judas Iscariot. The number, twelve, was one of special significance among the Hebrews, being intimately associated with their national life because of the origin of the nation in the twelve tribes. No doubt the feeling that there should be twelve disciples rather than eleven originated in some vague idea that a mission to the Hebrews should have a representative for each of the tribes. The writer of the book of Acts seems to have an idea that the apostles were a kind of authoritative school or board of management for the new Christian sect; but as indicated in the last lesson there was not at this time any sense among the disciples of being a new church, nor was there any organization. The Christians were Jews who believed that the Messiah had already made himself known to them, and that he would soon appear, to establish his kingdom. Beyond this they did not differ in any sectarian way from their fellows, who also expected the Messiah and his kingdom, but did not identify the expected king with Jesus. The further differences were of another kind. Those who had been closely associated with Jesus for many months could not thereafter be like others in their personal relations with men, nor in their ideals of life. The personality of their master had been too overpowering to leave them unchanged, even after its influence had been withdrawn. They must love their fellows not because of a law given, but because of a new birth. They must "obey God rather than man." Their standard of values had been made over; life had taken a new aspect. As citizens of "the kingdom" which was within them their chief function thereafter was the extension of that kingdom.

The choosing of a new apostle to complete "the twelve" was then rather a matter of sentiment than anything more important. The choice was limited by an agreement that the new apostle must be one who had been present at the baptism of Jesus, had continued among those who followed him, even to the death, and had witnessed also the resurrection. Only two were found who met these conditions, and selection between them was made by casting lots. Matthias was chosen, and "he was numbered with the eleven apostles."

The next event of importance came on the day of Pentecost. This is the "feast of weeks" (Deut. xvi., 9–12), which occurred seven weeks after the Passover, marking the completion of the harvest. The idea is rather common, and seems to have been in the mind of the writer of Acts that the experience of Pentecost marked the first coming of the "Holy Spirit." Such view is a part of that way of looking at things which divides the Creator into sections, and attempts to parcel them out according to some system. Such attempts to dissect God and label the parts have never been helpful. Usually they have resulted in division among men also, with all the varying labels of sects and the bitterness and uncharitableness which has gone with them. The holy spirit had been with men before Pentecost; it had revealed to Peter that Jesus was the Christ; it had made known to the disciples that the death of Jesus was not the end of his career, not a crushing of their hopes, but a fresh beginning of their duty in proclaiming his "kingdom" present in men's hearts. But Pentecost did in truth mark an era in the infant church. It was "a day of power, a day on which the Spirit of God manifested himself through the disciples as a power for the conversion of others. It was the inauguration of the evangelistic activity of the Christian Church, when the disciples began the work to which they believed themselves called by the risen Lord, the work of witness-bearing. . . . It was not the coming of the Spirit, but the testimony of the disciples, that constituted the great central fact of the day, the fact that makes it historic" (McGifford).

As is so often the case the historian of the book of Acts makes more of reported details than of the really central and essential fact. The wonderful, the exceptional, the so-called miraculous, so appeals to interest that it often hides the fact that the everyday, the orderly, the natural experience is usually vastly more important. Wherefore in the text of Acts we have emphasis laid on the sound of "a rushing, mighty wind," on the appearance of "tongues of fire," on a supposed speaking "with other tongues," rather than on a beginning of a great evangelism. Undoubtedly here was a case of a few "gathered together" in the name of the Master; unquestionably he was in the midst of them with power; and thus we have presented a great moment, when a great work was initiated—great because a great work was initiated, not because that initiation was attended by some unusual features. Of the "speaking with tongues" we will consider further in the next lesson.

A TRUE gift is suited to the one who receives it.
—[Emerson.]

YOU will gain a great deal if you will resolve that in all work you perform, whether sweeping a floor, laying off a furrow, building a house, drawing a plan, or studying a lesson, you are going to be perfectly conscientious. If you choose three lines on which to rest your lives,—truthfulness, honesty and conscientious performance of duty,—your future success is assured.—[Booker T. Washington.]

REVERENCE DURING PRAYER.¹

Let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and Godly fear.—Hebrews, xii., 28.

It must be understood that the reverence desired is not wholly to the person offering the prayer, but, as Friends, we believe that the ones who offer prayer are inspired, or should be, to do so, and for that reason claim our respect. In other words, they hand forth to us the thoughts given to them by the Father. Then should we not in some way show our willingness to receive their message and our appreciation of it? In former times it was customary to stand, the men with their backs and the women with their faces toward the suppliant. This form did not prove entirely satisfactory, as some of the young and thoughtless in the back of the house, took advantage of the position to converse with those near them or across the partition occasionally; and the commotion made by rising and turning around and afterwards seating themselves, had a tendency to destroy the solemnity. The same objections might be given to the act of kneeling, and perhaps stronger ones, too, and yet many believe that the humble position in kneeling is the most appropriate during prayer. But can we not bow the head on the seat in front of us, or on our hands, to show that we feel in touch and sympathy with the one offering the petition, and to show our Father that we feel His presence? This need not be a form if we are in the proper condition to receive the supplication, but let us at all times show reverence, and feel it, too, during prayer.

It behoves us all in this age not to esteem prayer too lightly, when we so well know it will bring peace of mind when all else fails. Many instances could be quoted where persons, by earnest prayer, have been enabled to accomplish what had seemed mountains of difficulty, or to overcome feelings of jealousy and revenge and possibly hatred. Humility is best on all occasions, and strength and power are gained by keeping in that state; and when we combine it with reverence for the good around us, we will be most likely to keep in the footsteps of the Master.

Let us have faith in prayer and show it in a reverential spirit. Let us be grateful to those who are willing to pray openly for us, and for humanity at large. No doubt it has cost a strong effort to be made willing to appear in public prayer; then why should we hesitate about showing reverence? It behoves us as a Society, whose founders' stronghold was prayer, to look to it, that we hold fast to this duty, and make it one of consecration and reverence. "Reverence, therefore, for every thing good because it is of God, leads to a fuller understanding of Him and a deeper reverence for Him as the All-Father." Let us bow our heads, or in some way acknowledge Him, who has given us a mouth-piece, and be not afraid to say to the same, "Thy prayer did me good."

"Prayer should be the habitual linking of our lives to God; and in this aspect it may continually be realized as that uplifted aspiration of spirit to Him, in whom we live and move and have our being." The safe thing is to inculcate the habit of a thoughtful approach to every subject and a "reverence for goodness everywhere." Let us also have more reverence towards one another, "making it Divine with the ineffable tenderness of the Master," for we believe the Master to be Love personified.

A TUNED RECEIVER.

From the Wellspring.

MARCONI'S new discovery has astonished two continents. At his little station on the coast of Newfoundland he has received wireless telegraphic messages from Great Britain, across three thousand miles of ocean which lies between. His discovery may yet supersede all cables, telephones, and ordinary telegraph by wire. It is the greatest wonder of the new century—and, like other wonders, simple enough. His instrument sets in motion certain waves in that ether which pervades and surrounds all things. These waves, like the ripples in a pond, spread in every direction, and when they reach any receiver, far or near, tuned to take them, they give their message to it. A receiver not tuned to the proper pitch, however, is useless; the subtle ether waves pass it by to give their message elsewhere. Thus a hundred messages may reach a tuned receiver with absolute certainty, while one wrongly tuned misses them all.

Like all great physical facts in this world of God's making, this new discovery finds an analogy in the realm of spiritual and moral fact. How many souls assert that to them the voice of God is obscured, and his direct message an unknown experience. The Bible is to them an unreal record. For how could Moses and Abraham, David and Paul receive a direct inspiration? Answers to prayer they do not believe in. They have never had any, nor does such a thing seem possible to their minds? Indeed, they proclaim the impossibility of any direct personal communications with the Divine Spirit so loudly and emphatically that many weak Christians are led to wonder whether there can be any efficacy in prayers, or any absolute knowledge of God by a human soul.

Does it not all depend upon the receiver? The message is there, whispering through all the universe. The soul in tune with the Divine hears it, obeys it, records it. The untuned soul misses it inevitably—but does that make it any the less real and true? The fault is not in the message, but in the receiver. Once in tune, the messages will come, straight and clear, and keep on coming. "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth," prayed the lad Samuel in that dark time when no prophet had risen in Israel for many years; and the word of the Lord came to Samuel, direct and powerful, at once. It had only been waiting for a soul tuned to hear it. Are our souls in tune to-day for divine messages? If not, can we expect to receive them?

"All one's life is music if one but touches the notes rightly and in time."

THE highest peaks are above all clouds.—[Chautauquan.]

¹A paper read at Salem First-day School Union, held at Woodstown, N. J., Fourth month 11th, 1903, by Miriam L. Moore.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.

BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTH MONTH 2, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to: N. W. Corner Fifth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE HABIT OF RIGHT THINKING.

We have been startled and shocked by the revelations of corruption in State and municipal government that have been made public during the last year or two. Again and again men have voted for measures that were unjust to the people at large in order that they might enrich themselves. These lapses from virtue would have been impossible if the habit of right thinking had been formed in childhood and adhered to in mature life.

The habit of thought, or attitude of the mind, concerning lines of conduct is determined by the atmosphere of the home, the moral tone of the school-room, the opinions of friends, and the consciousness of God's presence, together with the countless minor influences that make up the environment of the individual. Every word and act of one person is a part of the environment of every other person who is cognizant of it, and thus we of the present generation are individually responsible for the habits of thought of the next generation who are growing up in our midst.

As all other social organizations are the outgrowth of the home life the atmosphere of the home is of vital importance. If the father and mother are courteous to each other and to their helpers, and if they treat the poor and ignorant with as much consideration as the rich and cultured, the children will form habits of courtesy and will grow up without imbibing the spirit of caste or race prejudice.

If the plain, straight-forward truth is used to children, if all the promises made them are carefully fulfilled, and if it is taken as a matter of course that the children will be truthful and honest, they will generally live up to what is expected of them. There is no stronger incentive to virtue than the knowledge that those around us expect us to be virtuous.

If the leading thought in the home is that each should do something for the happiness of the others, and that the problem set before each human being is to find out what he can do that will be of most service to humanity, the children will not acquire the habit of measuring success in life by the standard of dollars and cents. A bribe is no temptation to one who believes that "truth is the highest thing a man may keep."

If there is constant reference in the home to what others will think of this or that proposed course, the moral fibre will be weakened; if, on the other hand, the appeal is made to the sense of right and wrong—to the voice of God speaking in the heart—and if the parents do the things that are right, no matter how great the sacrifice, the children will become every-day heroes, meeting their duties face to face, let the cost be what it may.

One of arguments advanced by the advocates of war is that it cultivates certain very desirable virtues. The willingness to leave home, friends, and a lucrative business in order to serve one's country: the spirit of comradeship that causes men to take pride in their company or their regiment, fighting together to achieve a victory: the courage that leads a man right up to the enemy's guns, facing death to save his country from dishonor: these, they claim, are traits of character essential to good citizenship. But these virtues, slightly transformed, are needed and must be developed in times of peace in order that we may possess the righteousness which exalteth a nation.

Men should be willing, like Senator Hoar of Massachusetts, to make business sacrifices in order to do valiant service in the legislative halls of the country: they should have the spirit of comradeship that would cause them to maintain the honor of the committee, or association, or corporation, or party of which they are members: and they should possess the courage that would enable them to choose starvation, if need be, rather than shame, for themselves and for their families. How often do we hear it said, in excuse for yielding to temptation, "A man must live, you know." What would be the world's opinion of a soldier who should make that plea for running away on the approach of the enemy? The one thing that a man must do, if he would walk in the path of righteousness that leads to peace, is to bear witness to the truth.

It is, perhaps, easier for a man with a genius for business to make large sums of money than to dispose of the money wisely after it has been accumulated. Andrew Carnegie, through whose liberality public libraries are being established and enlarged all over the United States, has recently made some noteworthy gifts of a somewhat different character.

Since the calling of the International Peace Conference by the Czar of Russia he has been a staunch advocate of the settlement of differences between nations by arbitration, and was outspoken in his disapproval of the wars waged in the Philippines and in South Africa by the United States and Great Britain. He has now given tangible evidence of his interest in the cause of peace by presenting $1,500,000 to the Government of the Netherlands for the building of a temple of peace, a court-house and library for the International Court of Arbitration at The Hague. This gift has been officially acknowledged by Queen Wilhelmina, who expresses the appreciation felt by the people of Holland for the high humanitarian sentiments of the giver.

Another recent benefaction of the Scotch-American philanthropist is the sum of $600,000 given toward the endowment fund of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, with the condition that suitable provision be made for the wants of Booker T. Washington and his family during his own or his wife's life. Concerning the famous negro educator Andrew Carnegie says:

"To me he seems one of the greatest of living men, because his work is unique, the modern Moses, who leads his race and lifts it through education to even better and higher things than a land overflowing with milk and honey. History is to tell of two Washingtons, one white, the other black, both fathers of their people."

In response to repeated demands for its publication from many sources the War Department has at last allowed a portion of General Miles's report on the conduct of the army in the Philippines to be made public. As the details of the atrocities that he unearthed have been given in most of the daily papers it is unnecessary to repeat them here. General Miles says that he found the impression prevailed among certain officers that such acts were justifiable, although they had been condemned by commanders like Lawton, Wade, Sumner and others. "In order to correct such erroneous and dangerous impressions, and to prevent the possibility of such acts being committed in the future, which might impair the good name of American arms and bring discredit to our service for all time," he issued a letter of instructions directing the annulment of any orders that would "encourage or inspire any acts of cruelty." As suggested by one of our exchanges, General Miles is not so much concerned for "the honor of the army" as he is that the army shall be honorable.

These new disclosures of torture, cruelty, and injustice show more clearly the real nature of war, and especially the debasing effects of a war waged by a strong people upon a weak one. The best way to put an end to all this and cause the Filipinos to feel more friendly to the American people would be for the Government to make a definite promise of Philippine independence in the near future, and then to turn its attention, not to the exploiting of the islands for industrial and commercial purposes, but to the careful preparation for a stable independence, such as now exists in Cuba.

THOSE in attendance at the Yearly Meeting of Friends held last week in the meeting-house at Fourth and Arch streets characterize it as "one of the most interesting, encouraging and helpful" sessions of recent years. The committee appointed last year to revise that part of the discipline concerning marriage made no radical changes; it is still a disownable offense to marry one who is not a member of the Society.

The charge for tuition and board at Westtown Boarding School is to be raised from $180 to $200 a year. Following the reports from the Educational Committee and the Committee for the Civilization of the Indians, which conducts a school at Tunesassa, N. Y., $2,000 and $2,500 respectively were appropriated for their use during the coming year.

BIRTHS.

JACKSON.—At Broad Creek, Harford county, Maryland, Fourth month 26th, 1903, to Charles E. and Sarah R. G. Jackson, a son, who is named Charles E. Jackson, Jr.

WOODMAN.—At Morrisville, Pa., Third month 4th, 1903, to Dr. Isaac N. and Matilda Blaker Woodman, a daughter, who is named Agnes Gregg.

MARRIAGES.

CONARD—WALKER.—At the home of the bride's mother, in Tredyffrin, Chester county, Pa., Fourth month 8th, 1903, Winfield W. Conard, son of Edward B. and Ella V. Conard, of Port Kennedy, Pa., and Mary K., daughter of Hannah S. and the late Jacob B. Walker.

PENROSE—BALL.—On Third month 15th, 1903, at the home of Elizabeth Hicks, Quakertown, Pa., by Friends' ceremony, Penrose Roberts and Annie S. Ball.

DEATHS.

COCKS.—At his home, Walkkill, Ulster county, N. Y., Fourth month 23d, 1903, Townsend Cocks, in his 68th year, son of Nicolas and Elizabeth Cocks, both deceased; a member of Cornwall Monthly Meeting.

DECOU.—On Fourth month 17th, 1903, near Ellesburg, N. J., Mary E., wife of Clayton L. DeCou, and daughter of Elizabeth and the late David Burroughs, aged 29 years.

The funeral took place from the Friends' Meeting-house at Moorestown, and she was interred in Colestown Cemetery.

DUDLEY.—At Moorestown, N. J., Fourth month 24th, 1903, Martha Ann, daughter of David and Lydia Dudley, in her 76th year.

The funeral services were held in the Friends' Meeting-house at Moorestown, on Second-day afternoon, Fourth month 27th, at 2 o'clock.

MARSH.—In Albion, Marshall county, Iowa, Fourth month 15th, 1903, Rebecca T. Marsh, in the 90th year of her age.

She was the last of the nine children born to Isaac and Mary Dewese Tomlinson. She, with her husband, Amos Marsh (deceased), were among the organizers of Marietta Monthly Meeting of Friends (in Marshall county, Iowa), of which she was a faithful member.

In her young womanhood—being of a progressive nature—the subjects which claimed her earnest thought were the evils of slavery and intemperance, both of which she firmly opposed during her long life.

MATLACK.—On First-day evening, Fourth month 16th, 1903, at his late residence near Moorestown, N. J., Asa Matlack, aged 83 years.

Asa Matlack was born Third month 31st, 1820, was the youngest son of Asa and Tamar (Roberts) Matlack, and lived his entire life in the home which was his birth-place. At the age of 21 years, Tenth month, 1841, he was married to Beulah, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Haines) Thorn, a woman of most excellent worth and his companion for forty-two years. They had six children, five of whom are living in 1903. Beulah died in the spring of 1883, and during the twenty intervening years between her death and his own, Asa has lived with his oldest daughter, Mary Thorn Smith, whose husband carried on the work of his farm. The funeral took place on Fourth-day, Samuel Sharp, of Camden, Franklin T. Haines, of Moorestown, and Charles Bond, of Norristown, each speaking upon the occasion. He was buried at Colestown Cemetery.

SEARING.—At his home in Escondida, California, Fourth month 9th, 1903, John L., son of John and Anna Searing, in his 67th year.

He was born in Cayuga county, N. Y., and, until he came to California in 1895, lived on the old homestead where he was born, on which his father settled in 1827, caring for his father in his declining years. His father and mother were earnest Friends, and the children were brought up to attend all of the meetings. His life was such a cheerful one that he was beloved not only by his family, but by his many friends.

Two surviving sisters who came with him to California deeply feel his loss. A local paper says of him: "In dying he left a whole community to mourn the loss of a valuable citizen, a kind neighbor, and companionable gentleman." M. P.

WALKER.—At Friends' Boarding Home, Norristown, Pa., Fourth month 21st, 1903, in her 61st year, Esther Hutchinson Walker, daughter of Robert and Rebecca C. Walker (deceased), of Warminster, Bucks county, Pa.

Her death was sudden, after a lingering illness of twenty-eight years, during which time she was confined to her bed.

WHITE.—In Philadelphia, on Fourth month 21st, 1903, Howard White, Jr., son of Howard and the late Anna Ellis White, in the 28th year of his age; a member of Lansdowne Monthly Meeting.

WOOD.—At her home in Colton, California, on the 30th of Third month, 1903, Mary C. Wood, widow of William S. Wood; formerly members of Fairfax Monthly Meeting, Virginia, afterwards of Pipe Creek, Maryland.

They removed to Lawrence, Kansas, near the close of the Civil War, where her husband died. For the past few years she has resided in California with a number of her children. She was the daughter of John and Elizabeth Schooly, who lived near Waterford, and the youngest of a family of ten brothers and sisters, all of whom she outlived, having reached the advanced age of nearly 86 years. She was beloved by all who knew her, and will be sadly missed by the loving children, ten of whom were present to administer the last sweet and sacred offices for the "Little Mother," as they loved to call her. M. F. S.

ANNA S. DENN.

Early in life this dear friend picked from the street a small leaflet containing Friends' views. The subject matter arrested her attention, and in the course of time she became by conviction a member of the Religious Society of Friends, where her faithfulness to her convictions won her many friends and associates.

Her devotion to her little meeting and her untiring labors in the First-day School, of which she was superintendent for many years, gave evidence of her love for the truth, and of her concern to disseminate it.

In the home circle, her life was one of loving ministry, the influence of which is tenderly cherished by her children, and her Christian example is an inspiration unto us all to "Come up higher." S.

SOCIETY NOTES.

THE Friends' meeting at Germantown, Philadelphia, on the 26th ultimo was unusually large, and the message delivered by John J. Cornell met with a response in many hearts. His ministry was also very helpful at Fair Hill in the afternoon, the meeting-house being filled. The fore part of this week was spent by John J. Cornell and his wife in making social visits in the Tioga district of Philadelphia, and the latter part of the week in visiting Germantown Friends, an especial effort being made to reach all who are "shut in."

The special meeting at Lansdowne, Pa., held on the 25th ultimo to inspect the plans of the new meeting-house was well attended, and the committee was authorized to build a house, the total cost of which, when completed, is not to exceed $6,700. As $2,000 of this sum yet remains to be raised, and the members have given liberally of their moderate means, contributions from outside sources will be very acceptable.

Pipe Creek Monthly Meeting in the Eighth month will be held hereafter at Pipe Creek, Md., instead of at Bush Creek. Temporarily all monthly meetings will be held at Pipe Creek.

Stillwater Half-Yearly Meeting will be held the fourth Seventh-day of Fifth month, instead of the last Seventh-day, as previously announced.

Chicago Central Meeting was visited on the 26th ultimo by Anna P. Sharpless, of West Chester, Pa.

LETTER FROM ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.—II.

(Continued from last week)

Editors FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

SHORTLY after our return to the hotel rain fell heavily, which continued all night, and in the morning we found we were in the midst of a westerly storm, which corresponds to ours from the East. Our party of seventeen had arranged to leave early to drive to Jericho, including a visit to the Dead Sea and the Jordan, but the cold, heavy rain made the prospect anything but encouraging for a two days' carriage drive of sixty miles. We waited until noon, then our immediate party of ten concluded to risk the journey.

Now behold us, ten pilgrims on the way from Jerusalem to Jericho: Dr. and Mrs. Swain, James Boyd, wife and son; my friend, J. Dundas Lippincott, and my own family of four. We traveled three in a carriage, with three horses to each carriage. It was raining heavily when we started, but we were encouraged with the hope that when we descended from the mountains the weather might be different, and we felt, with some of us, it was now or never for Jericho. The rain continued for an hour or more, then gradually ceased, and the latter half of the drive was made in bright sunshine. The views of the mountains and surrounding country were magnificent. We passed around the Mount of Olives past Bethany; closed curtains at this stage of our journey preventing any view of the latter until our return. Our way lay directly through "the wilderness of Judea," and though I have in our western country passed through desolate regions, I have seen nothing to compare with this wilderness. Surely in this region only by the winged ravens could Elijah have been fed. A jumble of jagged limestone rocks, relieved nowhere by a tree or the slightest vegetation, and yet the mountain views in their extent and wonderful variety, even though of extremest desolation, were most interesting. The air too was clear and pure in contrast with that we left behind in filthy Jerusalem, and we ten rejoiced that we came, and pitied the seven left behind us. We stopped for a half-hour at the Samaritan Inn, said to be on the site of the inn referred to by Jesus in the parable referred to in Luke x., where the good Samaritan ministered to the man who fell among thieves on the way to Jericho. Even yet mounted Bedouins, completely armed, accompany detachments of travelers for protection from Bedouin thieves.

About five o'clock we saw Jericho, and descending sharply for a half-mile, were soon afterward in its streets and at the quaint little hotel. We had almost ten miles further to go to the Dead Sea and the Jordan, but it was too late to go that night. In the morning we breakfasted at six o'clock, and were soon on our way. The valley in which we traveled is 1,300 feet below the sea level, and we had, therefore, descended 3,800 feet from Jerusalem. After a two hours' ride we arrived at the Dead Sea, and spent a half hour in rambling on its shores. The high winds had made it quite rough, and there was something of a surf on the shores of this inland sea. Its waters are remarkably bitter, and nothing can live within it. We saw a large fish cast up by the surf, having come down the Jordan. But we had a long day before us, about thirty miles, so we proceeded to our last point, the Jordan, said to be where Jesus was baptized by John. We could not bathe in either waters, the time being too short and the weather too cool; so we drove back to the little inn, lunched and rested the horses for a couple of hours, then started at two o'clock for the long drive to Jerusalem, more than twenty miles distant, with an ascent of 3,800 feet. The weather by this time was fine, and though we did not reach our destination till 7.45, the long drive was not tiresome, but most pleasant and memorable. After the sun set in an almost cloudless sky, the moon lighted everything with rare brilliancy, and the air was crisp and bracing. We paused at Bethany to inspect it in the moonlight, and were shown the sites of the house of Martha and Mary, of Simon the leper, and of the tomb of Lazarus. The squalid little hamlet is all modern and presents little of attraction in appearance except the fine view it offers, but the fact that it was the home of Jesus and his favorite resting place in the midst of his labors gives it something of sacred interest. Although the Mount of Olives is pointed to as the place of the ascension, Luke, in chapter 24, verse 50, speaks of Bethany as the spot.

Next day, Third month 10th, we rose at 5.30, and at 7 o'clock left Jerusalem in the train, on our return to Jaffa and the steamer. We paused in Jaffa to inspect the site of the house of Simon the tanner, and were appropriately taken to the roof of the present structure, which I hope stands as represented on the exact site of the house where Peter tarried many days, and where he went up on the house top to pray about the sixth hour, when he fell into a trance, and the vision came to him as the men from Cornelius stood before the gate.

And now for the steamer! We had heard at Jerusalem that the storm was very heavy at Jaffa, and that all communication with the ship had been suspended for two days, and we were naturally apprehensive as to embarking. But the high winds which began, as we were told, the morning after our departure, and then developed into a severe two days' gale, had subsided almost into a calm, and again we were exceptionally favored with smooth waters at this place of tempestuous seas. When we arrived on the ship we learned that our departure and return had really marked the period just preceding and the ending of most tempestuous and dangerous seas. A party of several hundred under the care of Thomas Cook & Sons, whom we had met at various points, embarked from Jaffa the day before us on their steamer, the Moltke, and had a most uncomfortable time both from fright and sea sickness, the boats in advance being hidden from the view of those close behind as they went down into the trough of the great waves. We felt, therefore, we were doubly favored on landing and embarking, and it is difficult to express our feelings of gratification on reaching the great steamer which has grown to seem almost like home to us, and to breathe the pure air from the Mediterranean after the foul smells of Jerusalem. I went at once to the bridge deck and took deep inhalations of the pure air from the sea.

We had looked forward with interest to Palestine, and were amply repaid for our discomforts there by inspection of localities which from their sacred associations must remain always securely graven in our memories, but the gratification of having had the visit there so successfully accomplished, and in retrospect, instead of anticipation, can scarcely be described.

I have heard that some who have visited Jerusalem wished they had not, because ever after their previous sweet associations with the place were sadly marred. My own feelings on the subject are somewhat mixed, but on the whole I am glad to have been there, although it is sad to think that Jerusalem, which should be the purest, sweetest city in the world, is in reality, so far as my experience goes, the foulest, the loudest smelling, the most impure. And though not unexpected, it was still something of a shock to find such squalor and misery among the people in the city of the most sacred associations in all the world. It seems most incongruous, too, that the capital city of our religion should be under the dominion of a government so far removed from Christian influences as that of the Turk; and not less so, that so-called Christian sects should be engaged in warring and contention in the very localities which the Christian scholarship of the world has accepted as the places of the sacred birth and of the sepulchre.

I see no hope for Palestine under present conditions, any possible future for its miserable people, or for the rescue of its sweet associations from their present foul surroundings. I wished while at Jerusalem that it were possible for Christian nations to unite and make, if not a shrine of the holy city, at least a sweet meeting place on common ground—the one place in the world where all differences could be put aside and a union be made in simple prayer, praise and thanksgiving. But if this cannot be, might we not, at any rate, attempt to rescue it from its filthy surroundings, and make it sweet and fair? I was impressed while there with a short paragraph from Charles Dudley Warner's "In the Levant," which I quote:

"Whatever interest Jerusalem has for the anti-quarian, or for the devout mind, it is undeniable that one must seek in other lands and among other peoples for the robust virtue, the hatred of shams and useless forms, the sweet charity, the invigorating principles, the high thinking and the simple worship inculcated by the Founder of Christianity."

This letter, begun at Cairo ten days ago, has been written in snatches since in the intervals of sight-seeing in Egypt and on the Nile. These closing lines are written on the steamer en route from Alexandria to Naples. I may write one more letter, giving something of our Egyptian experiences, but I think the INTELLIGENCER and its readers have had quite enough for the present.

ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

PHILADELPHIA FIRST-DAY SCHOOL ORGANIZATION.—The spring meeting of the First-day School Organization of Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting was held Sixth-day evening, Fourth month 24th, at the meeting-house, Seventeenth street and Girard avenue.

The first part of the meeting was taken up with the reading of the reports from the several standing and special committees. The one from the Educational Committee being unusually good, it was decided to send it to the General Conference, hoping it might be of some use in preparing future lesson leaves. An excellent talk was then given by Jesse H. Holmes, of Swarthmore, on "The Prophets and Their Message." The attendance was good, and the meeting was full of interest and enthusiasm.

HANNAH E. SCOTT, Secretary.

HORSHAM, PA.—The Young Friends' Association met Fourth month 26th, at 2.30 p.m. The meeting was opened by Margaret Morris reading from the 25th chapter of Isaiah.

Florence Williams recited a poem entitled, "Waiting," which was followed by a selected reading, "What is Worth While," by Anna Jarrett. Rebecca Jarrett recited "Grandpapa's Spectacles." Anna D. Hallowell, not being able to be present, sent some interesting articles under the head of current events, which were read by the Secretary. The subject of "Harmless Social Amusements" was then ably discussed by James O. Atkinson, Margaret Morris, Ely Smith, and others. The general opinion was that no rigid line could be drawn and it was best for each to decide for himself what was right or wrong for him, but in so doing to consider also the welfare of his fellows. It was then announced that an address on "What Friends have done to Advance the Cause of Women," would be given by Lucretia Blankenberg at the next meeting.

QUAKERTOWN, PA.—There was a good attendance and an interesting meeting of the Young Friends' Association held at the home of Frank Ball on the 16th of Fourth month. A continued reading of the Life of Benjamin Hallowell was given by Miles Jordan. Whittier readings were given by Eleanor Foulke and Anna E. Jordan. The former read "Memories" and "The Playmates," the latter, "The Quaker of the Olden Time" and "The Eternal Goodness." A select reading was given by Mollie P. Johnson entitled, "Is It Worth While?" Anna W. Ball recited, "Small Beginnings." "The Four Pictures" was read by Hannah M. Penrose. "From the Outlook" Frank Ball read "The Two Lord's Prayers," the first "Childhood's Prayer," the second "Christ's Own Prayer." Sentiments were then given by nearly all present and the meeting adjourned. A. B. R.

WEST PHILADELPHIA.—The Junior Young Friends held their monthly social at the home of Dr. J. Thatcher on the 17th of Fourth month.

Mary Wickersham read a selection entitled, "Home Mission," which stated the great need there was for such work at home even in our own Society. A recitation was given by Linda Bicknell. "The Story of a Great Artist," read by Hannah Scott, related how a drunkard was checked on his downward career and led to live a better life by a picture painted by one of his close friends. A quotation contest was given by four of the members. Mary Dunham warned the meeting not to forget the great need of temperance work to be done. Frances McAfee recited "Grandma's Beau." Sanford Campbell spoke words of encouragement to those gathered, stating the pleasure he had received for having been present. The remainder of the evening was spent socially. W. W.

MOORESTOWN, N.J.—A regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held in the Meeting-house, Fourth month 10th, 1903.

Helen M. Fogg, of the Philadelphia Association, gave us an interesting talk on "The Environment of Youthful Criminals and the work of the Neighborhood Guild." She told us how the Guild started and of its present work among the poor. The first idea of the Friends in establishing this mission was to start a colony of Friends, but they soon found that their first work must be to teach what simple truth is.

The motley crowd failed entirely to understand Friends' principles. Their work is divided into several departments, the First-day school, the kindergarten with its mother's meetings, manual training department, sewing class, singing class, and the evening classes which meet the social wants of the children and keep them off the streets and out of the saloons. The Saving Fund, however, is felt to do the community most good. Emily Coles Collins read a paper on "The Juvenile Court and the Probation System," and as illustration, cited the FRIENDS' MEETING-HOUSE, CHESTER, PA.

In this house, built 1735, Concord First-day School Union was held on the 18th instant. The cut was kindly furnished by the Chester Times.

good effects which have followed its use in Pennsylvania. The system as enforced in Philadelphia has proven so satisfactory that the judges are almost unanimous in approval of it, feeling that there will be fewer adult criminals if the youthful offenders are kept from the contamination of prisons and public police courts.

William C. Coles then gave a very full account of the George Junior Republic. This community of boys and girls, taken from the city streets, live on a 240-acre farm in New York State, and govern themselves by a plan based on the system of the greater Republic. The motto of the republic is "Nothing Without Labor." Their system of business is like that of the great world which they must enter later.

ELIZABETH L. GILLINGHAM, Sec. pro. tem.

MANSFIELD, N. J.—The Young Friends' Association met at the home of William L. Biddle, on Seventh-day evening, Fourth month 18th. Twenty members responded with sentiments at roll call. Thomas S. Bunting favored the Association with Discipline, reading the portion on plainness. In answer to the question, "How shall we best promote interest in our Young Friends' Association?" Bessie E. Bunting read an article from the INTELLIGENCER. Cyrus S. Moore stated the best way was to have sociability, an interest in the program, and be punctual. S. Anna Biddle's current topics were excellent. Susan Biddle read a good article entitled, "Could we direct our affairs better ourselves?" Cyrus S. Moore read the memoir of John Collins; such a beautiful life and character is well worthy of remembrance and an effort on our part to mould our life like unto his. Recitations were rendered by Charlotte Deacon, entitled "The Butterfly," and Dorothy Deacon, "Going to Market."

MABELLE E. HARVEY, Secretary.

LINCOLN, VA.—The Young Friends' Association met on First-day afternoon, Third month 20th. The meeting was opened by singing "Leaning on the Everlasting Arm," and the reading of the 121st Psalm. Caroline T. Pancoast recited a poem entitled "A Reverie." The question, "What books written by Friends ought we as Friends to read?" was discussed by Elizabeth Nichols and J. Russell Smith, after which the members sang "Life's Railway to Heaven," and then May Holmes read "The Blue Room of the Soul?" The question, "Which is the more important factor of a useful life, self-development or self-sacrifice?" was discussed by William T. Smith, George Hoge, J. Russell Smith, and others. Martha J. Brown recited "Why this Longing?" The singing of "Throw Out the Life Line," concluded the program.

CAROLINE T. PANCOAST, Sec.

EDUCATIONAL.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

On the evening of the 20th, Henry Wilbur, of New York, spoke on "Quaker Revivalism"; his address was interesting and instructive. He said that Quakerism of to-day is the product of two centuries. As the Christianity of the twentieth Century has grown from that of Paul, so Quakerism of former times has grown into the Quakerism of to-day, a rational view of life. Friends do not spread their beliefs. This is a mistake. The Society of Friends has just as much future as we choose to make for it. To make a bright future we must get our truths into the hands of men. We should make our meetings interesting, and should impress upon the people that our ministers are those who minister, whether by word, by heart, or by act. To do this each one must learn to know himself and to make it plain that Quakerism is every-day, applied Christianity.

Dr. Battin lectured on Fourth month 19th 1903 at New Garden Meeting-house before the Philanthropic Conference on "Arbitration in Business Life." It was recommended that a memorial on the subject of arbitration be presented to the State Legislature through the President of the Senate, W. C. Sproul (Swarthmore, 1891).

The following are the judges for the Interscholastic Oratorical Contest at Swarthmore on the evening of Alumni Day, Fifth month 2d, after the afternoon games,—J. H. Penniman, Dean of the College, University of Pennsylvania; Edward Brooks, Superintendent of Schools, Philadelphia; and Walton Clark, General Superintendent U. G. I. Twelve schools definitely accepted for this year's contest, while many others hope to enter next year. Each school represented is expected to have a number of friends present.

The contest in oratory between the Freshmen and Sophomore classes for the President's prize was a tie. The Freshmen scored two more points than their opponents as marked on thought and composition, but were two points behind as judged on delivery.

President Swain lately spoke before the pupils of West Chester High School.

On the twenty-fourth, Dr. Battin gave a very interesting lecture on "Dante" before the members of Dr. Appleton's World Literature class.

In our meeting on First-day President Swain addressed the students urging them to start on the right path in youth. He was followed by Dr. Bryan, President of the State University of Indiana (Dr. Swain's successor), in an earnest appeal for attention to the things that are worth while; this brought forth from Samuel E. Griscom, who was visiting the meeting, the appropriate quotation, "They that hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be filled." P. M. W.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

JOHN WILHELM ROWNTREE, who arrived at New York on the 19th ultimo, spent Sixth-day, the 26th, at the home of William P. Bancroft, in Wilmington. On the following First-day he was the guest of Richard H. Thomas, in Baltimore. On Third-day, the 27th, he went to the home of Charles F. Jenkins, in Germantown, to remain until the close of the week.

Edward Ferris, brother of David Ferris, writes from Custer county, Colorado, expressing his appreciation of FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, and adds these items of interest:

"I am living by myself in a cabin on the slope of the great Sangra de Cristo range of the Rocky mountains, 8,500 feet above sea-level, with the mountains back of me ranging from 4,000 to 5,000 feet higher still. I am one of a colony of five families, counting my single self one, our nearest neighbor being five miles, and the post-office nine miles distant. Our November (and other) snows have just now disappeared, although the high mountains are still covered—and there are over fifty high peaks in sight from here."

At the recent meeting of Abington First-day School Union, says the Ambler Gazette, Isaac Mather, a member of Abington meeting who is in the 96th year of his age, recited a poem by Thomas Moore. He also wrote a very interesting paper expressly for this union which was read by a member of Abington school. Both poem and paper were very highly appreciated.

LITERARY NOTES.

THE "Negro problem" will never be solved until the white people who are interested in its solution realize that Negroes are human beings like themselves. It is impossible to read "The Souls of Black Folk," by William E. Burghardt Dubois, (published by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago), without forming some conception of what it means to be treated as a problem and not as a man. Some of the papers which compose this volume appeared in the Atlantic Monthly and other magazines, where they caused an arrest of thought on the part of those who read them.

The author is a graduate of Harvard and a professor in Atlanta University. The shadow in which he has since dwelt crept across his life during his New England boyhood, when the school children were exchanging gorgeous visiting cards and a tall white girl declined the one he offered with a gesture of contempt.

The first chapter of the book depicts the worship of Freedom by the Negroes during their two hundred years of bondage; the second describes the breaking of the fetters and the work of the Freedmen's Bureau; in the third the author praises the work of Booker T. Washington, but demands that the Negro who is hungering for intellectual treasures shall have something more than an industrial education; other chapters tell of the kind of progress that has come to Tennessee since he, a lad of seventeen, taught his first school there, of the "Black Belt" and the traits of character produced by generations of slavery, and of the feelings now existing between "the sons of master and man."

The greatest intensity of feeling is in the chapter entitled "The Passing of the First Born." In it the author describes the joy and pride of fatherhood, the bitterness that filled his heart when he thought of his baby "within the shadow of the Veil," and the exultation that mingled with his tears for the little life gone out as he exclaimed, "Not dead, but escaped; not bond, but free."

Out of his grief and bitterness there is born this prophecy: "Surely there shall yet dawn some mighty morning to lift the Veil and set the prisoned free. Not for me,—I shall die in my bonds,—but for fresh young souls who have not known the night and waken to the morning; a morning when men ask of the workman, not 'Is he white?' but 'Can he work?' When men ask artists, not 'Are they black?' but 'Do they know?' Some morning this may be, long, long years to come. But now there wails, on that dark shore within the Veil, the same deep voice, Thou shalt forego."

As the rebellion in Morocco has broken out afresh Arthur Schneider's article in the Century just issued will be read with much interest. He is the American artist who for more than a year was the instructor and daily companion of the Sultan. In "Topics of the Time" acknowledgment is made of our inheritance from Emerson, and among the illustrations is a full-page wood cut of the Concord philosopher engraved by Timothy Cole from an excellent photograph.

The many readers of the INTELLIGENCER who made the acquaintance of Louisa M. Alcott's books in their childhood days will be interested in a letter published in St. Nicholas, written to two girls in 1871, by Anna Alcott Pratt ("Meg"), in which she describes the four real girls whose doings, with variations, are told in "Little Women."

Among the good things in Harper's Magazine are Hamilton Wright Mabie's estimate of Emerson's place in the thought and development of to-day, and the experiences of a New York woman who voluntarily labored among the servant and factory classes for months in order to study their conditions and discover why girls prefer factories to kitchens.

THE TWENTY-THIRD PSALM.

A PARAPHRASE.

"The Lord is my shepherd," Oh, the bliss of resting,
Within the care of One who loves so well:
Who knows each pathway, understands each danger,
Whose tenderness no tongue can ever tell.

"I shall not want," for He I know will give me,
From day to day, the very help I need,
The strength for working in life's busy places,
Or grace for resting on its daisied mead.

"He maketh me lie down" when I am weary,
For well He knoweth when the way is rough,
And so He says to me with loving firmness,
"Be still, my child, for thou hast toiled enough."

And when He comes, Himself and watches o'er me,
To aid my weakness by His perfect strength,
Until I almost love the forced seclusion
And learn to thank Him for His rest at length.

His loving kindness far surpasseth language;
For when I rise again to journey on
He leadeth me in scenes of richest beauty,
And never lets me walk one step alone.

Restored, He leadeth up some glorious mountain,
And if I ever wander from His side
He findeth me, and I just learn that safety,
Belongs to those who in His care abide.

And so we journey on; the paths He chooses
Are not what I should think the best,
But then, He knows the way and loves me truly,
So in that knowledge I have perfect rest.

Yes, even when I pass right through the valley,
All dark, with deaths grim shadows crowding near,
His rod and staff give then the needed comfort,
Whilst He is near me to support and cheer.

And when fierce foes arise to stay my progress
He nerves my arm and cheers me for the fight,
What can I therefore do but conquer grandly
And thank Him for the way He helped me right.

My cup of mercy then is running over,
And I am rich, possessing such a friend,
Whose arm doth never fail, who changeth never,
Who loving once, will love until the end.

If the chosen soul could never be alone
In deep mid-silence, open-doored to God,
No greatness ever had been dreamed or done;
Among dull hearts a prophet never grew;
The nurse of full-grown souls is solitude.

—Lowell.

LET THE CHILD BE A CHILD.

DEAR little Curly Head, careless and jolly,

Life, as you view it, is play;
Toiling is useless and fretting is folly,
At least when you're having your way:
Shouting for fun,

You romp and you run,
Worrying not over work to be done,
Seeing no tasks that the years are to bring,
Thinking the future will always be spring.

Dear little Curly Head, quickly forgetting
Bruises of heart and of limb,
Taking your own and unselfishly letting
Your brother have what is for him,

Thinking that they
Who choose the fair way
Are sure to be fully rewarded some day,
You borrow no sorrow and treasure no dread
Of heart-breaking tasks that are lying ahead.

Dear little Curly Head, shouting and singing,
Who is it frowns at the noise?
Know they not what the gray future is bringing,
After the play and the toys;

Do they not know,
As they harry you so,
That God hears the song of each child here below—
That if children ne'er shouted and never were glad Men never could sigh for the joys they once had?

Dear little Curly Head, why are they trying
To lure you away from your play,
To fret you with books while your childhood is flying
Like the blown rose's petals away?

Before you are care
And burdens to bear;
Oh, why are they trying to hurry you there?
Dear little Curly Head, God never planned
That men should be men as they come from His hand.

—S. E. Kiser, in Record-Herald.

HOW TO PREVENT NERVOUSNESS.

Hugh T. Patrick, in Christian Register.

FOR preventing nervousness in the child or removing that already present, nothing is so effective as the toughening of the body and the mind. The frequency with which I hear from a nervous patient that she "was never strong," "he was a delicate child," "she was always sickly," is truly startling. A child who is made to have hard muscles, strong lungs, and a vigorous digestion, who can bear changes of temperature and endure pain, is already a long way from nervousness. More important still is the toughness of the psychic fibre. The child who can support a disappointment, who can be crossed without a tantrum, and who habitually obeys, is building a bulwark against "nerves"; and the one who is not easily frightened, has self-control and a budding courage, has nipped half a dozen neuroses in the bud. But to procure this toughness, be it understood, a certain exposure to bodily discomfort and mental hardship is necessary. Many a father whose rugged rearing has given him a robust frame and a sturdy nervous system takes infinite pains and pleasure in denying his sons the very training that made a man of him. His unwise love strangles in infancy whatever of sterling qualities he may have transmitted to them.

Two capital errors in the training of children frequently come to my notice—errors that prepare the little unfortunate for later nervousness or fairly drive him into it. They are, first, leading the child into pleasures and duties beyond his years; second, magnifying his importance in the family and society. It is quite as dangerous to give to children the pleasures of adults as to require of them the labors of the mature. That there is a physical basis for all intellectual processes seems sometimes to be forgotten. Successive groups of brain cells and fibers come into existence with the successive years; and before the birth of these tissues certain psychic functions may not naturally exist. To force mature functions from an immature organism is to violate the virginity of nature, — a crime daily committed in the home and in the school, to be expiated in the sick-room, sanatorium or asylum. In the beginning the fault generally lies in a mixture of vanity and ignorance on the part of parents. They wish their children to excel in attainment, and they like to see them indulging in all the pleasures and excitements of our complex social existence. Later the young person so brought up whips himself on to ruin.

As regards the second error just mentioned, it has seemed to me that, if deliberately planned and scrupulously executed, the bringing up of some children could not better promote what I venture to call centripetal development—development centering in self. The child is not only made to be, but is made to know that he is, the focus of all domestic doings, the hub of the family wheel. Every sensation, perception, conception and emotion, is an event. The unlucky youngster develops with a distorted view of the relation of things. He sees enormously enlarged images of his tastes, his clothes, his pains, his likes, his aversions and his talents. These proportions do not fit the facts of existence, and the unfortunate individual is as sure to be caught in some form of nervousness as is one to go astray in a labyrinth of grotesque mirrors.

I must note one more point on prophylaxis of the neuroses in children. In one form or another fear enters into the make-up of nearly every sort of nervousness. It paralyzes judgment, ambition and the higher emotions. Childhood should be absolutely fearless—fearless for self and for the future. That the young should have no fear of man or God, no thought for the morrow, is natural and proper. It is natural and wholesome that the child should have no regard for his organs, no knowledge of hygienic rules, no conception of the significance of pain. When the parent makes the child a party to his apprehensions, confides his presence of ills, and communicates the ominous augury of bodily symptoms, he is assiduously rearing a little hypochondriac who will live to condemn the parent who made him a burden to himself and a curse to others. Fear of the dark, of thunder and lightning, of animals, burglars, accidents, spirits, devils and death, is born of parental foolishness, and is always potentially the seed of later nervousness.

ANDREW CARNEGIE has offered a gift equal to ten per cent. of his wages to every employe upon his Scottish estate who can assure him at the end of the year that he has abstained entirely from alcoholic liquors.

A WOMAN'S SCARS.

Lillie H. Hamilton French, in the Century.

I HAVE a clever friend from the South who, as a girl, and when the war had closed, worked in her father's tobacco fields, over the horses and over the broken-down fences, until comfort reigned at home again, and she took to letters as a profession. I saw her once hold up her toil-worn hands, full of scars, with each joint out of shape, while she said to me, laughing: "It is sometimes easier to escape the consequences of our sins than to get away from the records of our virtues."

That is the trouble, I suppose. Tradition has done nothing for her, and so the records of a woman's virtues have to be explained. A man with an arm or a leg missing, especially if he be an erect man, instantly arouses a thought of heroism—unless, of course, one has lived in the neighborhood of trolleys—and a certain spontaneous enthusiasm for the man takes possession of the beholder. Such a quickening of the pulse before the signs and tokens of an unknown woman's misadventures would be an impossibility, and a silk patch over one of her eyes would excite pity rather than applause.

Then there are the manners of some successful women who by their own endeavors have won a way in the world. What scars these manners are on an engaging womanliness—first a grace lost in the conflict, then a gentleness. Had a man suffered these losses, who would reckon then when the sum of his successes was told? And how convincing the very brusqueness and energy and even the lack of softness in his manners would be! We would believe in him at once. But in a woman, and perhaps wisely—who can tell?—these signs and tokens of an heroic struggle into which necessity alone may have driven her are counted as disfigurements, and the record of each of her virtues has to be explained, like the trousers of Rosa Bonheur, if their exercise has involved the sacrifice of a single feminine habit. The records of her pleasures are other concerns so long as fashion approves. Her hair may be sunburnt, but it must be because she has chosen to deprive herself of a bonnet for the benefit of some pauper. And her hands may be large and muscular, but the muscles must be those developed by an outdoor sport, not those which any manual labor indoors has strengthened, even when that labor has been undertaken because of grim poverty.

THE report of the Philippine Commission, issued by the bureau of insular affairs, shows that during the year 1902 the government issued licenses in Manila to 1,990 liquor shops, 1,430 of which were licensed to sell native wine (vino). The population of the city of Manila is reported as 302,154. The number of arrests made during the year was 19,398, divided among the races in the following proportions: Americans, 212 out of every 1,000; natives, Chinese, and foreigners respectively 60, 38 and 36 out of every 1,000.

EXCAVATIONS in the Catacombs of St. Cecilia at Rome have revealed a large under basilica that was used by the early Christians. Traces of an altar and episcopal chair were found. There was also found a number of ancient paintings, including a Greek portrait of Christ. One of the tombs discovered is declared by local archaeologists to be that of the Apostle Mark.—[American Friend.]

Whittier's "In School Days."

POETS do not usually err through reticence; in fact, some of the most renowned poets are accused of turning their emotions too readily into fame and hard cash, and still others are suspected of celebrating their lady-loves for reasons less of love than of literature and lucre. Even the life-long, unrequited attachment of Petrarch to Laura, it is occasionally insinuated, cost him more ink than heartache, after all.

With Whittier, gentle, genuine, dignified and incapable of playing at passion, it was far otherwise. In all his poems there is to be found but one allusion to his only grown-up love affair; and a recently published letter to Lucy Larcom, when she was editor of Our Young Folks, shows that he even had his doubts about the child poem, "In School Days," so well-known, so well-loved and so often recited, in which he told the fleeting idyl of his boyhood.

"Dear Friend Lucy: I could not make verses for the pictures, but I send thee herewith a bit, which I am sure is childish, if not childlike. Be honest with it, and if it seems too spoony for a grave Quaker like myself, don't compromise by printing it. When I get a proof I may see something to mend or mar. Thine truly, J. G. W."

Fortunately, the poem was neither marred nor mended; Miss Larcom did not consider it as too spoony; and we have preserved in verse the incident of the boyish poet and his little friend, sweet eleven-year-old Lydia Ayers, who was sorry that she spelt the word that sent her above him to the head of the class—"Because, you see, I love you!"—[Youth's Companion.]

A Prohibition Railway.

ONE of the railways of the United States—a Southern road, by the way—has taken a remarkable step in the way of prohibiting the sale of liquor in towns along its route. The projector of the St. Louis, Watkins, and Gulf Railroad, running from Lake Charles to Alexandria, Louisiana, bought and incorporated all the town sites along the line, and sold the lots under a deed containing the following stringent anti-liquor clause: "The said purchaser, his heirs, or assigns, shall not at any time manufacture or sell intoxicating liquors upon the said premises, except for medicinal, mechanical, or scientific purposes; and should this provision be broken, this deed shall immediately and ipso facto become null and void, and the title shall immediately and ipso facto revert to and vest in said vendor, and said vendor shall not be under any obligation to return any part of the purchase price." A case under this provision has already been tried, and the judge gave a verdict for the company, and the culprit had no redress. So the railway company's prohibition does prohibit, without doubt.—[Christian Guardian, Toronto.]

The Dog Laughed.

THE proprietor of a Third Avenue store owns a little black kitten that cultivates a habit of squatting on its haunches, like a bear or a kangaroo, and then sparring with its forepaws as if it had taken lessons from a pugilist.

A gentleman took into the store the other evening an enormous black dog, half Newfoundland, half-collie, fat, good-natured, and intelligent. The tiny black kitten, instead of bolting at once for shelter, retreated a few paces, sat erect on its hind legs, and put its fists in an attitude of defiance. The contrast in size between the two was intensely amusing. It reminded one of Jack the Giant Killer preparing to demolish a giant.

Slowly and without a sign of excitability the huge dog walked as far as his chain would allow him, and gazed intently at the kitten and its odd posture. Then, as the comicality of the situation struck him, he turned his head and shoulders around to the spectators, and, if animal ever laughed in the world, that dog assuredly did so then and there. He neither barked nor growled, but indulged in a low chuckle, while eyes and mouth beamed with merriment.—[New York Telegram.]

The Filipino a Man.

OUR most recent experiment in the way of race accessions—the Filipino—I shall not on this occasion discuss, for the reason that we seem as yet to be quite undecided as to how and where he shall be classed—that is, whether you will rate him as a black man or a white man. Just now the Filipino seems to be going through the interesting process of being carefully examined. If he can produce hair that is long enough and nose and feet that are small enough, I think the Filipino will be designated and treated as a white man; otherwise he will be assigned to my race.

If I were to consider the question purely from a selfish standpoint I should urge that our new subjects be classed as Negroes; but if I were to consider unselfishly the peace of mind of the Filipino himself, I should hope that he be so classified that in addition to all his other trials he will not struggle through all future generations considered and looked upon as a problem, instead of a man.—[Booker T. Washington.]

The King's Physician on Alcohol.

NOTHING has given so much encouragement to temperance reformers in recent times as the speech delivered by Sir Thomas Barlow, the king's physician, at the church house, Westminster. The bold, uncompromising, and faithful testimony borne to the evils of intemperance, particularly amongst women, marks an era in the onward progress of scientific temperance truth. The chief value of Sir Thomas Barlow's testimony is that in which he contends for effective treatment as against the dallying measures too frequently resorted to, and the excuses which are made to cover the evils.

Sir Thomas said, "No half-measures would do . . . drugs, more-over, are useless." He said that in some cases nurses and even doctors asked, "Why do you not give these people a little alcohol, just to stimulate them when they have this dreadful weakness, heart failure and pain?" "And it is just this damnable thing," said Sir Thomas Barlow, "that you have to stop." His sage advice is: "If you have any cases of alcoholic diseases among your own friends, I beseech you to get doctors and nurses who are teetotalers." Then he added, "Don't let them fall into the hands of a doctor who orders stimulants for them." This weighty testimony has led to much comment in the daily press of the country, and the danger which threatens the country cannot, in view of such authoritative statements, be longer ignored.—[The Scottish Reformer.]

The Founder of the Smithsonian Institution.

JAMES SMITHSON, Englishman, who founded the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, died in Genoa in 1829, and was buried there. The cemetery wherein his bones lie has been abandoned, and the land is to be used as a stone-quarry. All the bodies in it are to be removed. The Regents of the Smithsonian propose that James Smithson's remains shall be brought to this country and reinterred in the grounds of the institution which is so noble a monument to its founder. James Smithson was the illegitimate son of Hugh Smithson, who became Duke of Northumberland. From the family of his mother, a well-born woman, he inherited a fortune. He became a noted scientist with a strong political preference for republican institutions. He never married, and when he died left nearly all his estate "to the United States of America to found at Washington, under the name of the Smithsonian Institution, an establishment for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men."

The money, £104,960, was sent to the United States in 1835, and the institution was established by Congress in 1846. Smithson once wrote: "The best blood of England flows in my veins. On my father's side I am a Northumberland, on my mother's I am related to kings; but this avails me not. My name shall live in the memory of man when the titles of the Northumberlands and the Percys are extinct and forgotten." He hitched his wagon to the right star, and his forecast is well on the way towards fulfillment. His bones should come to Washington. Mr. Alexander Graham Bell, one of the Regents of the Smithsonian, strongly advocates bringing them overseas, and has offered to pay the expenses of removal.—[Harper's Weekly.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

RUSSIA has made eight demands upon China regarding Manchuria, some of which are felt to be a violation of the treaty entered into when the Chinese troubles were adjusted, as the granting of these demands would be to give Russia control of Manchuria to the exclusion of other nations, to the detriment of their commerce. Secretary Hay has cabled instructions to Minister Conger at Peking to express to the Chinese authorities the dissatisfaction of the United States with Russia's demands and our hope that China will not accede to them. A dispatch from London, dated the 27th ultimo, says that the Chinese Government has sent to the Russian Government at St. Petersburg a formal refusal to grant the demands of the latter.

THE Miners' Executive Boards, in session at Wilkes-Barre, after a full discussion of the situation issued an address to the miners saying: "The best interests of our organization will be conserved by an immediate resumption of work at all the mines where strikes or lockouts are now in force, and the reference of all matters of dispute to the Joint Board of Conciliation provided for in the award of the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission." As a result of this advice work has been resumed in nearly all the collieries pending the decision of this joint board.

JAMES N. TYNER, Assistant Attorney-General for the Postoffice Department, has been summarily dismissed by Postmaster General Payne, and his wife has been charged with abstracting papers and records from the safe of the Department. It is alleged that Tyner, who is old and feeble, has been a tool in the hands of Barrett, a nephew by marriage, who has used the mails for the circulars of "get rich quick" concerns. Acting Assistant Attorney-General Christianity, who was in the office when the papers were taken from the safe, has resigned pending the investigation.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, having completed his tour of the Yellowstone Park, arrived at Fort Yellowstone on the 22d ult. At the laying of the corner stone of the new gate at the northern entrance to the Park he made an address in favor of forest protection. The President reached Omaha on the 27th, where the streets were lined with people for a mile and a half along the route of the carriage drive. At Lincoln, Neb., he made a brief address on good government.

THE sixth annual Conference for Education in the South began its sessions in Richmond, Va., on the 22d ult. President Robert C. Ogden, of New York, in his opening address said: "Negro education is recognized as a part of the public educational system in every State, both South and North. The education of every child in our country is an admitted national duty, and leading minds find in this principle broad ground for a demand that the national Government should share with the several States, in proportion to the need, the financial responsibility involved in the discharge of that obligation."

THERE seems to be an epidemic of lynchings and mob outrages of which the colored people are the victims. In Bainbridge, Ga., on the 22d ult., a negro suspected of firing a farmer's house, was taken from the constable and beaten to death. In Thebes, Ill., a negro was hanged to a tree by a mob for attempting to assault a farmer's daughter. Afterward the whites charged down upon a settlement of negroes, and a race riot followed, in which many negroes were shot and wounded, and the tents in which they lived burned.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

- 5TH. Mo. 1.—IN AUDITORIUM, Y. F. A. Building, unveiling of a bust of William Still, to be presented to the Home for Aged and Infirm Colored People.
- 5TH. Mo. 2.—GIRARD AVE. FRIENDS' Association. Debate, followed by a social hour.
- 5TH. Mo. 3.—PHILADELPHIA EVENING Meeting, Fourth and Green Streets, 7:30 p. m.
- 5TH. Mo. 3.—AT CHICHESTER, DEL. Co., Pa., a Circular meeting under the care of a committee of Concord Quarterly Meeting, at 3 p. m.
- 5TH. Mo. 3.—JOHN J. CORNELL WILL attend Girard Avenue Meeting at 11 a. m.; Frankford Meeting at 3:30 p. m.; and Green Street Meeting at 7:30 p. m.
- 5TH. Mo. 3.—FAIR HILL MEETING, attended by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit the smaller branches.
- 5TH. Mo. 3.—A RELIGIOUS MEETING AT Friends' Home for Children, 4011

- Aspen Street, Philadelphia, at 3 p. m. Edward Clarkson Wilson, of Friends' Central School, will be present. All persons interested in the home are cordially invited.
- 5TH. Mo. 3.—BYBERRY FRIENDS' Association, at Byberry Meeting-House, 3 p. m. Address by John L. Carver, subject, "England."
- 5TH. Mo. 3.—THE VISITING COMMITTEE of Salem Quarterly Meeting will hold a meeting for Divine worship, in Lippincott's Hall, in Swedesboro, N. J., at 3:30 p. m.
- 5TH. Mo. 5.—PHILADELPHIA QUARTERLY Meeting at Fifteenth and Race Streets, at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, 3 p. m.
- 5TH. Mo. 5.—CAMDEN, N. J., Young Friends' Association.
- 5TH. Mo. 6.—FARMINGTON HALF-YEARLY Meeting, at Orchard Park, N. Y., at 11 a. m. Minister and Elders, day before, 2 p. m.
- 5TH. Mo. 7.—ABINGTON QUARTERLY Meeting, at Horsham, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, 11 a. m.

5TH. Mo. 8.—SHREWSBURY AND PLAINFIELD Half-Yearly Meeting, at Shrewsbury, N. J., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day after, 9:30 a. m.

5TH. Mo. 8.—PLYMOUTH, PA., FRIENDS' Association.
(Concluded on Page 288.)

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

NEWS NOTES.

THE British forces in Somaliland have been again defeated and put to rout by the Mad Mullah's troops.

THE net earnings of the Pennsylvania Steel Company for 1902 are stated in the annual report to be $3,690,864.08.

THE Empress Dowager of China has appropriated $400,000 for the Chinese Exhibit at the St. Louis Exposition.

NEAR Wilkes-Barre, Pa., 2,000 acres of coal land have recently been discovered, which are estimated to contain 300,000,000 tons.

GOVERNOR PENNYPACKER has signed the bill permitting the election of one woman as overseer of the poor in each borough or township.

THE National and International Convention of the Good Roads Association, has been in session in St. Louis this week, with more than 1,000 delegates in attendance.

A NUMBER of army officers in Alaska have been ordered court-martialed by Secretary Root on the charge of making use of commissary supplies for their individual profit.

A DISPATCH from Berlin dated the 24th ultimo says that 235 Mormon missionaries from Utah are to be expelled from Germany and Prussia because polygamy is not excluded from their doctrines.

FOR three hours on the 21st ultimo Governor Pennypacker, of Pennsylvania, heard arguments for and against the Grady-Salus Libel bill. All the leading newspapers in the State asked him to interpose his veto.

A DISPATCH to Washington says that United States Minister Leslie Combes was the means of preventing a war between Guatemala and Salvador. President Estrada, of Guatemala, has formally tendered him thanks for his good offices.

THE new Chinese Minister has publicly expressed his intention to take steps some time during the present year to establish schools for teaching the English language to Chinamen in sections of this country where the Chinese are mostly congregated.

SAMUEL SUTCLIFFE, the Republican leader of the Eighteenth Ward, has been appointed Chief of the Bureau of Street Cleaning, in Philadelphia. He says he intends to show that a "machine officer" can keep the streets clean.

JACOB A. RIIS, in an address at Witherspoon Hall, Philadelphia, said that the Philadelphia Children's Aid Society, started twenty-two years ago, was the first organization to take children from almshouses and similar institutions and place them in the hands of mothers.

COMPLAINTS have been filed before the Interstate Commerce Commission against a number of coal carrying railroads, that they charge unreasonable rates, discriminate against independent mining companies, and in favor of bituminous against anthracite coal companies.

THE joint conference of the Congregationalist, Methodist Protestant and United Brethren Churches, held in Pittsburg recently, proposed a plan for the amalgamation of the three bodies, which is to be submitted to the church members. If the members vote for union the new church will be called the United Church of America.

THE Interstate Commerce Commission, in its report on railroad accidents for the last three months of 1902, says that during that period 266 persons were killed and 2788 injured. Accidents of other kinds, including those sustained by employes while at work and by passengers getting on and off the cars, etc., bring the total number of casualties up to 938 killed and 11,873 injured.

A PHILADELPHIA young woman in the Patent Office, Washington, wrote 20,600 words on a typewriter in six and a half hours, and her superiors pronounced every word and line perfect. This is said to be just twice the usual day's work.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

(Concluded from page 287.)

5TH MO. 9-15.—PHILADELPHIA YEARLY Meeting. Friends desiring board during the week of the approaching Yearly Meeting, in Philadelphia, can apply to either of the following persons, Isaac H. Hillborn, 15th and Race Streets; Martha D. Hough, 1340 Spruce Street; Rebecca B. Comly, 1529 Centennial Avenue; Matilda K. Lobb, 1702 N. 18th Street; Sarah L. Haines, 1513 N. Marshall Street. Friends in the city having accommodations should notify the Committee.

5TH MO. 9.—NEW YORK MONTHLY Meeting, at 15th St. and Rutherford Place, New York, 2.30 p. m.

5TH MO. 9.—MIAMI QUARTERLY MEETING, Waynesville, O., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 2 p. m.

5TH MO. 9.—SALEM QUARTERLY MEETING at West, Ohio, at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, same day, 10 a. m.

5TH MO. 11.—A MEETING TO CONSIDER the establishment of a Friends' Flower and Fruit Mission, with headquarters at 151 Fairmount Ave., Philadelphia, in room 15, first floor of Central School Building, at 12.30 p. m.

5TH MO. 12.—THE EVENING MEETING in Race Street Meeting-house will be addressed by Henry W. Wilbur, of New York, on Temperance, and O. Edward Janney, of Baltimore, on Purity.

DR. HOLMES was talking with a friend on the subject of age shortly before his death. "You're five years my junior," said Dr. Holmes, "but I believe I don't envy you." "I can't see why you should," said his friend. "You carry your years much more lightly than I do." "Oh, that's natural," said the autocrat. "I have had five years' more practice." —[Gathered.]

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNSTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR } Cincinnati.
ECKERSTEIN }
ATLANTIC }
BRADLEY } New York.
BROOKLYN }
JEWETT }
ULSTER }
UNION }
SOUTHERN } Chicago.
SHIPMAN }
COLLIER }
MISSOURI } St. Louis.
RED SEAL }
THORSEN }
JOHN T. LEWIS & BRIGGS CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
OORNBELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

DWELLING house in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., built one hundred years ago, has always been painted with Pure White Lead and Linseed Oil—nothing else.

There is not a crack, blister, blemish or imperfection of any kind in the paint. Makers of mixtures, beat this record if you can!

Be sure the brand is right. Those in margin are genuine, and made by "old Dutch process."

If interested in paint or painting, address

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

A woman has used a lamp chimney of mine for fourteen years.

What a jolly good time she has had!

My name on every one.

If you'll send your address, I'll send you the Index to Lamps and their Chimneys, to tell you what number to get for your lamp.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

These trade-mark, crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA. SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR. K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR. Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers. For book or sample, write Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE: Sifts the flour and mixes to 1 lb. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CIRUS CREAMERS, Jr.) 520 1/2 12th St., Philadelphia

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts. 5 PHONES.

You can live without life insurance, but you won't live so much. Nothing adds to the zest of living like knowing your family is protected by a policy in the PENN MUTUAL LIFE, 921-3-5 Chestnut St.

SELF-FORGETFULNESS and a thoughtfulness for others is a motive that generally springs from a pure heart. A beautiful illustration is given in the life of Frances Willard. She arrived at a Western hotel ill, but she said, "Let her come up" to the request of a young lady reporter who desired an interview. Scarcely had the conversation opened when Miss Willard said, "Why dearie, how tired you look! Take my chair, child." "And I—well," said the reporter, when she sent flowers to Miss Willard's funeral, "nobody had called me 'dearie' for so long, nobody had called me 'child,' that I, homesick, overworked, discouraged—well, I put my head on Frances Willard's shoulder and cried it all out."—[Christian Standard.]

IN the development of the fraction "one-third" in a primary class, imaginary pies, bread and cakes galore had been divided into thirds, and the teacher gave the following problem:

"If Mary found a nest with six eggs in it and on the way to the house broke two of them, what part of her eggs would she break?"

The owner of a sparkling pair of eyes and fluttering hand was given permission to speak and said:

"The shells would be broken."

The merry riddle that ran around the class showed appreciation of the point.—[Gathered.]

TRUTH is sometimes funnier than fiction; and people who order books from publishers do some very funny things, so funny that they do not sound true. Harper & Brothers received an order the other day for some copies of a book entitled "A Vacation in a Buggy." The order clerk was puzzled, as no such title is on the firm's list. He filled the order on a venture by sending Mr. Bayne's "On an Irish Jaunting-Car Through Donegal and Connemara." It proved to be the book that was wanted!—[Harper's Literary Gossip.]

TEACHER: "What is an octopus?" Small Boy (who has just commenced to talk Latin) eagerly: "Please, sir, I know, sir; it's an eight-sided cat."—[Life.]

REDUCED RATES TO ATLANTA.

VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD, ACCOUNT OF NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF CHARITIES AND CORRECTION.

For the benefit of those desiring to attend the National Conference of Charities and Correction, to be held at Atlanta, Ga., May 6 to 12, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets to Atlanta from all stations on its lines, good going May 4 to 6, inclusive, and good to return to reach original starting point on or before May 16, at reduced rates.

LIZZIE J. LAMBERT,

PLAIN AND FANCY MILLINERY,

Successor to E. SHOEMAKER. 1020 Green St.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St.

PLAIN MILLINERY,

Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street From 736 Spring Garden Street.

It Pays Educators to Educate.

The Peoples University of Olympia, Washington, makes it pay to be in the educational business. The capital stock of that institution already pays a four per cent. dividend, and will eventually pay from six to ten per cent. The security is first-class—absolutely safe—and the enterprise highly commendable. Capital stock $1,000,000, divided into shares of $100. We will sell in blocks of not less than $10. The fact is we offer you a better investment than government bonds. Write for particulars, Eastern Office, Room 80, The Ruggery, Columbus, Ohio.

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,

Olympia, Washington. Endowment file No. 2. Be sure to mention the file number.

ELIZABETH LLOYD'S

"SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY"

placed in every school, would teach the beauty of Peace. Send twenty cents for one copy of the music and twenty-five copies of the words, to

ARABELLA CARTER,

Universal Peace Union, 1305 Arch St., Phila.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m. Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week. Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night; $2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk. 'Phone 1-33-55.

Home Kitchen Outfits

and all

House Furnishing Goods

J. FRANKLIN MILLER,

1626 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Black Petticoats.

It used to be that a well-dressing woman could not wear black satinette petticoats—they were not well made nor fine enough. Not so now; some of our special styles are almost as fine in appearance as those of black silk, and the cost is trifling:

Women's Petticoats

Of mercerized black satin; made with umbrella flounce and trimmed with one ruffle—$1.50.

Women's Petticoats

Of fine mercerized black satin; made with accordion flounce and finished with small ruffle. This skirt is extra full size—$2.00.

Women's Petticoats

Of fast-black satin; made with umbrella flounce and finished with two hemstitched ruffles; extra full size—$1.50.

Women's Petticoats

Of best mercerized black moreen; made with accordion flounce and finished with small ruffles; under ruffle of neva—$3.50.

Strawbridge & Clothier, PHILADELPHIA.

United Security Life Insurance and Trust Company OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Capital, $1,000,000
Surplus and undivided profits, 500,000

Banking and General Trust Co. Business

OFFICERS:
WILLIAM M. COSTES, President.
JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
ESMONDE H. AUSTIN, Second Vice-President and Treasurer.

CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS, Assistant Treasurer.
HENRY LABARRRE, JAYNE E. Counsel.
FRANCIS H. HEMPERLY, Accountant.
T. HEWSON BRADFORD, M.D., Medical Director.

DIRECTORS:
William M. Costes, William K. Versey,
Caleb J. Milne, J. W. Hampton, Jr.,
Y. C. Sweetman, Orlando Crease,
Charles Porter, I. Layton Register,
Robert Dornau, Esmonde H. Austin,
John G. Carruth, Silas W. Pettit,
William Bault, Joel Cook.

THE UNION CENTRAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Assets, $34,000,000

Plain Life and Endowment Policies with Annual Dividends.

The Highest Grade of Life Insurance at the Lowest Cost.

The Company for Those who Think for Themselves.

Good Contracts to Good Agents.

Lawton Brothers, Managers,
338 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

Insurance from Loss by Fire

Best of Companies

Lowest Rates

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Cleansing of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail $0.12. "The reading of which is a spiritual feast."
—FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education of Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Dookhobors. By Joseph Elkinton. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated, $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,

Telephones. Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ASSIGNEE AND RECEIVER.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS.
Saves to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults.

LAST OF THE SEASON.

THREE-DAY TOUR TO WASHINGTON.

UNDER THE PERSONALLY-CONDUCTED SYSTEM OF THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The last Pennsylvania Railroad Personally-Conducted Tour to Washington of the present season leaves Thursday, May 14. Rate, covering railroad transportation for the round trip, hotel accommodations, and transfer of passenger and baggage, station to hotel in Washington, $14.50 from New York, $13.00 from Trenton, $11.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points. These rates cover accommodations for two days at the Arlington, Normandie, Riggs, Ebbitt, Shoreham, Cochran, Gordon, Barton, or Hamilton Hotels. For accommodations at Regent, Metropolitan, National, or Colonial Hotels $2.50 less. Special side trip to Mount Vernon.

All tickets good for ten days, with special hotel rates after expiration of hotel coupons.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents; Tourist Agent, 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or address Geo. W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

GREATLY REDUCED RATES TO ATLANTA, GA., AND MACON, GA., AND RETURN, VIA THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

On May 4th and 5th, the Southern Railway will sell round trip tickets from Washington to Atlanta, Ga., account the National Conference of Charities and Corrections, May 6th to 12th, 1903, at one first-class fare plus twenty-five cents, final limit May 16th, 1903. Also to Macon, Ga. on May 4th and 5th, at rate of one first-class fare, plus twenty-five cents, final limit May 10th, 1903, account of the Sugar-Cane Growers' Convention, held at that point May 6th, 8th, 1903. Corresponding low rates from other points.

The Southern Railway operates three through trains daily to Atlanta, Macon and other points South. Dining-car service on all through trains.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa., will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.

STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM
PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue. Uptown offices, 810 and 1000 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. J. C. WHITELEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

WALL PAPER of
Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address

A. L. DIAMANT & CO.,
1024 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

JOSEPH L. JONES

LANSDOWNE AND DARBY SAVING BANK AND TRUST COMPANY

Full Paid Capital, $125,000.00.

2 per cent. paid on Check Deposits, 3 per cent. paid on Savings Deposits.

GEORGE FOSTER WHITE, President, Treasurer and Trust Officer; W. LANE VERELDEN, Vice-President; JOSEPH T. BUNTING, Second Vice-President; MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary; LEWIS LAWRENCE SMITH, Solicitor.
Acts as Executor, Administrator, Trustee, Guardian or Agent. Wills prepared and kept free of charge where this Company is named as Executor.
Aims at perfect service and perfect Security. Either the Franklin National Bank or the Girard National Bank will receive deposits for this company.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, FIFTH MONTH 9, 1903.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers.

Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,

N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.

• TELEPHONE NO. 13355.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XIX.	289
POETRY: TRUE PEACE.	289
WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson.—Continued. (Illustration).	289
"THE MEDICINE OF LIFE."	291
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
The Early Evangelism.	292
The Progress of the Doukhobors.	293
EDITORIAL:
Ready for Service.	294
The Louisiana Purchase.	294
Notes.	295
MARRIAGES, DEATHS.	295
SOCIETY NOTES.	295
THE HOWARD M. JENKINS PROFESSORSHIP.	296
PERSECUTION OF THE COLORED PEOPLE.	296
LETTERS FROM ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.—III.	296
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	298
EDUCATIONAL.	299
SUMMER SCHOOL OF ENGLISH FRIENDS.	299
NEW YORK SWARTHMORE ASSOCIATION.	300
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	300
LITERARY NOTES.	301
POETRY: A Day with Nature.	301
A REMARKABLE WILL.	301
MISCELLANY: The World Growing Better;
"Just Loved Me"; Sculpture at the St. Louis World's Fair.	302
CURRENT EVENTS.	303
NEWS NOTES.	304
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	304

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

WANTED.—AN ELDERLY FRIEND WOULD like a position as managing housekeeper or as companion, has had much experience in managing servants. Address Friend, this Office.

WANTED.—A COMPETENT WORKING housekeeper in a small family residing at Langhorne, 30 miles from city. Also wanted first-class girl. Must come well recommended. Address with reference P. O. Box 1266, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—BY J. WILHELM ROWNTREE of England, at a fair price or loan (preferably the former), for the purpose of historical studies, complete sets from the commencement of FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER; the United Friend, Extracts of Yearly Meeting minutes, conference reports and will books, memoirs, journals, epistles, pamphlets, tracts, etc., bearing upon Friends' history,—particularly in the nineteenth century and in relation to the separation. All historical material whether published or unpublished will be of value. Kindly communicate with Allen C. Thomas, Haverford, Pa.

WANTED.—BY LADY, A POSITION AS private secretary and bookkeeper, with educational institution preferred; or as a teacher of mathematics and bookkeeping. Address No. 86, this Office.

WANTED.—YOUNG WOMEN TO ENTER the Training School for Nurses of West Philadelphia Hospital for Women. Apply to M. E. Kelsey, Superintendent, 4035 Fairhill Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—FOURISHERS FOR THE SUMMER in country. Friends' Family. Moderate conveniences. Apply early, Box 125, Woodstown, N. J.

FRIENDS DESIRING LODGING ACCOMMODATIONS during the approaching Yearly Meeting in New York are requested to make application to Jennie C. Kitching, 25 Park Street, Jersey City, N. J.

BOARDERS WANTED.—2237 WALLACE ST. Thirty-two rooms with board. Also stable board.

BOARDING.—DESIRABLE ROOMS WITH board. Friends. 228 N. 32nd Street, Phila.

BOARDERS DESIRED IN FRIENDS' FAMILY on farm near Conshohocken. For further particulars address 5, 1800 Spring Mill Ave., Conshohocken, Pa.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1827 1st., N. W., Washington, D. C.

FOR RENT.—AT POINT PLEASANT, N. J., on Manasquan River, furnished cottage. Ten rooms and bath, wide porches, large shady grounds, ocean and river bathing, sailing, fishing, etc. Season $400. Box 135, Point Pleasant, N. J.

TO RENT.—BY SEPTEMBER 1st TO A refined family for board of owner (a lady) 1 room house in West Philadelphia. Address T. B. Hendrickson, 617 Market Street, Philadelphia.

FOR RENT.—"SUNSET," COTTAGE AT BUCK Hill Falls, near Inn. Four bed-rooms, hot-water heater. For rent for the summer, $50. Apply 1024 Race St.

FOR RENT.—BY THE MONTH, A FURNISHED house in Swarthmore, Yale Avenue, on new trolley line. Grounds and shade for children. For particulars address HENRY KENT, Swarthmore, Pa.

HELEN G. BORTON WHO IS A STUDENT IN Emerson College, Boston, is prepared to give "The Lost World," by Henry van Dyke as an evening program for Young Friends' Associations and other meetings. After Fifth month 8th for particulars address Helen G. Borton, Woodstown, N. J.

CALL AND SEE

Desirable Investment

to double your money

CLEMENT E. LLOYD

400 Chestnut Street, Room 45, Philadelphia

BUCK HILL FALLS.

She paints with white and red the moors
To draw the nations out of doors.

—Emerson.

IN some resorts children are not welcome, but at Buck Hill Falls pleasures and attractions are being planned for their especial benefit. Last summer a Children's Playground was laid out and provided with swings, seesaws, hammocks, a summer house and big sand box. Further improvements are to be made this year. A comfortable room is to be provided in the Inn for rainy days. Two good tennis courts are available for use, and there is boating on Glenmere for older ones in safe company.

Beginning in Sixth month this year there will be bird classes, with walks and opportunities for outdoor observation. (See special circular of this course.)

A Children's Club, under the care of Annie Hillborn, a trained kindergarten, will be organized during Seventh and Eighth months. Its plan, subject to modification, will be to meet daily from 9 a. m. to 12 m., and from 7 p. m. to 8 p. m.

The Club will occupy the playground in good weather and the playground in stormy. The "Leader" will organize games, read stories, plan amusements and little excursions, try to interest the children in nature and nature work, and in general keep them quiet and orderly through interest in their play.

Professor George H. Nutt of the George School will be a companion, counsellor and friend for the older boys, suggesting amusements and occupations such as carving, modelling, etc., for them in his tent on rainy days. (See special circular of this course.)

The privilege of joining either the Children's Club (yet to be named), or Professor Nutt's parties, is open to every one of a suitable age in the Inn or settlement and no charge will be made for membership.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Friends' Book Association.

The annual meeting of stockholders of Friends' Book Association of Philadelphia will be held in Room No. 4, second-story, Central Building, Fifteenth and Race Streets, on Second-day, Fifth month 11th, 1903, at 7:30 o'clock p. m. Election of Directors.

SAMUEL B. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,

Telephones. Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.

FULL COUNT

means full count and a few over, when we do the printing. You'll appreciate that point if you've ever had occasion to need just so many of a bit of printing and found the count short of the required number.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,
MAKERS OF THE
BETTER KIND OF PRINTING
1019-21 Market St., Phila., Pa.
Keystone Phone, Race 53-37 A. Bell Phone 3-47 69 A.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER,
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, } Principals.

Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for college or for College.

For catalogue, apply to

JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOYS AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to

GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Or Jenkintown, Pa.

CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogonia, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR
BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars address

A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class instruction.

For circulars address

ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register.

The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

THE OVERSIGHT OF EXPERTS

In the printing business there are many vexatious details, the mastery of which need experienced oversight to produce satisfactory results. The training of a quarter century has taught us many things which we employ for our patrons' advantage. Perhaps you have a catalogue, announcement, or circular which needs just such care as we can give it to realize your idea. Bring it to us. The equipment of a large plant is employed for your benefit.

FERRIS & LEACH, PRINTERS, 29-31 NORTH SEVENTH STREET

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,

CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,

619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,

929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA

Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

663 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

(Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.)

JOHN FABER MILLER,

305 SWEDS STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Thompson Shourd, 2212 Wallace Street,

Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tinga.

Richards & Shourd, Jobbing attended to.

CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,

1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa

Phone 5-47-78 D Filbert.

CHARLES BURTON,

Practical House and Sign Painter,

Office, 907 N. Thirteenth Street, } Philadelphia, Pa.

Residence, 1714 Woodstock Street, }

EDWARD T. BLACK

(S. W. BLACK'S SON)

REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER

The entire care of Real Estate a specialty

616 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,

Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,

1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the

New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered

Seeds $1.00; all three $3.25.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK

UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

LITERATURE FOR STUDY.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By

William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages.

Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF

FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper

for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago,

1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary review), 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50

copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND

ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman.

Pamphlet. 27 pages. *Dr. Boardman, a

Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY.

By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. *A beautiful lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies

30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELI-

GIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M.

Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50

copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

*All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,

N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Cleaning of Quakerism. An address by John

William Graham. 64 pages. $2.10. By mail, $2.15.

"The reading of which is a spiritual feast."—

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $2.00. By mail, $2.15.

The Love's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $2.10. By mail, $2.15.

The Doughlovers. By Joseph Elkinton. A historical review, with a number of personal experiences among them last summer. Illustrated, $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,

N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTH MONTH 9, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 19.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XIX.

It is not said, "Well done, good and successful servant," but it is said, "Well done, good and faithful servant,"
A WELSH FRIEND.

TRUE PEACE.

These lines were written by John Greenleaf Whittier on the "20th day, 1st mo. 1850," in an autograph album belonging to Sarah A. Barber, of Northwood, Mass., and were not discovered until her death, some years after the death of the poet.

MAY He who ever keeps
Watch over all, nor slumbereth, nor sleeps,
Be near thee still with His supporting hand,
Thy cool rock shadow in a weary land.
So shalt thou in thy daily duties move
By the still waters of our Father's love,
And the true peace which He alone can give
In the deep quiet of thy spirit live.
And when at last the summons shall be given
Thine eyes shall open on the bliss of heaven,
And earthly pomp and earthly joys wax dim
Before the white-robed saint and seraphim.
Eye hath not seen it nor the living ear
Heard the glad music of that wondrous sphere,
Nor mind of man in its extremest thought
One glimpse unclouded of its glory caught—
The joys prepared, the infinite reward
Of those who love the appearing of our Lord.

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

JOHN JACKSON.

(Continued from last week.)

THE school that began so modestly with eight pupils was destined to become well known throughout the Society of Friends, for it increased until the pupils numbered more than one hundred. As the school grew the building was enlarged, conveniences were added for the comfort of the pupils, and apparatus not generally found in inexpensive institutions was liberally provided. The accommodations for the pupils were in keeping with what most of them were accustomed to in their own homes. The dormitories each contained a number of double beds and were not heated in any way. The girls all went down to the basement to wash. The earlier pupils say that this room was cold, also, and that the water was often icy in winter; but that when a girl desired to take a full bath she could go into the laundry where it was warm. Pupils who were at the school in later years say that each one had a sort of closet in the basement, in which were her wash-basin and toilet appliances, that the basement was warmed and contained a shower bath with hot and cold water, and that many of the pupils took a full bath every morning. Much attention was paid to the health of the pupils. One girl who was delicate remembers that she was excused from the school-room during part of each session and was required to spend this time in the open air.

From a catalogue of "Sharon Female Seminary," issued in 1852, we learn that the charge for boarding, washing, and tuition in the English branches was $70 for a term of five months, including the use of all necessary class books and the library. French was $10 and drawing $5 extra, per term. The principal school-room is described as forty by twenty-four feet, with desks and seats for eighty pupils. "The whole building," it says; "is well warmed and ventilated, and furnished with commodious bath-rooms and a constant supply of water." Pupils were instructed in needlework and special attention was given to those who desired to become teachers. The following quotations from the catalogue will give a good idea of the character of the school and of the advantages which it offered:

"Lectures are given on natural philosophy, chemistry, astronomy, physiology and other subjects, accompanied by numerous experiments and illustrations. The school is supplied with a good collection of philosophical, chemical and physiological apparatus, a compound microscope, maps, globes, and numerous charts. The physiological apparatus includes a complete Parisian model of the human system, of papier-maché, which admits of dissection, and in connection with the charts and colored engravings, is used to elucidate, in a beautiful manner, the important science of physiology.

"An astronomical observatory is attached to the institution, which is furnished with instruments of the best quality and construction, affording an opportunity to the pupils to become acquainted with the details of practical astronomy. (In this observatory there was an equatorial telescope, made in Bavaria, which was imported in 1846, at a cost of $1,853, including the clock-work, which gave it a regular sidereal motion so that a star might be kept in the field of view for any desired length of time. Other instruments in the observatory were a meridian circle and a sidereal clock which together cost nearly one thousand dollars.)

"There is an extensive geological and mineralogical cabinet, containing over three thousand specimens of minerals and fossils, a collection of shells, and a well-selected library of standard works on scientific subjects, biography, history and general literature.

"The moral and religious instruction of the pupils is exclusively directed to the inculcation of virtuous principles, and to inspire them with a love of truth and right. They are encouraged to cultivate these nobler endowments as essential to their happiness and to a consistent and well-regulated life. While this leaves untouched the metaphysics of religion, it calls them to practical duty, and teaches them to regard the religious life as consisting in obedience to the Divine Spirit and fulfilling all the laws of their being.

The pupils attend the meetings of the Society of Friends.

"Experience having amply shown that the same instrumentalities which are adapted to promote the education of boys, are equally well suited to develop the minds of girls, the proprietors of this Female Seminary have endeavored to furnish it with all the aids to instruction in the various branches of science and literature usually employed in the higher seminaries of learning for the other sex. . . . The defective standard of education for girls, has, in a great measure shut out from them the light of science and prevented them from entering the portals of this 'temple not made with hands,' to explore its vast dimensions, and to contemplate the beautiful symmetry and perfection of its parts. There is no valid reason why girls should not enter this field of inquiry, and invited me to make a visit of a few days at his house, which was the Sharon Boarding School.

"'I should like,' said he, 'to hear thee defend making history a part of the education of young women. I am not inclined to any restriction upon the acquisition of knowledge, when it is knowledge of truth. But my plan has heretofore been to teach the sciences of nature: human and vegetable physiology, chemistry, botany, geology, mineralogy, astronomy, together with mathematics, which is at once the measurement of material things, and of the innocence of the mind. History I confess I have left out; for I do not think it of any use to the young to know much of man's doings in the past. They seem to me to be very little according to the truth.'

"I was struck with the freshness and simplicity and learn that fact is more wonderful than fiction, and that the study of nature, by unfolding the beauties of the creation around us, furnishes food for the mental faculties which no other pursuit nor any powers of fiction can supply."

SHARON FEMALE SEMINARY. (From the catalogue of 1852.)

Elizabeth Peabody's connection with the school and recollections of it as told in her "Memoirs of a Saintry Friend," give a picture of the school as it appeared to one who had had no previous knowledge of Friends. Her estimate of the character of John Jackson is also of value, and warrants a lengthy quotation. As her memoirs were not written until eight years after her visit, she says she does not attempt to quote the precise expressions used in conversation, but is sure that she recalls the exact ideas.

"It was when engaged in a journey to visit teachers of the Northern and Middle States, in order to persuade the adoption of a particular method of teaching history in schools, that I first became acquainted with John Jackson, a minister of Friends, in Darby, Pennsylvania. This good man called on me of his statement. The man had a face of singular sweetness and innocence of expression, but at the same time of remarkable brightness, and even acuteness. I saw he kept school in the highest sentiment, and it was refreshing to see a teacher who was looking for his method, not to the demands of conventional society, but to the needs of the minds and hearts of those he taught.

"I said to him that to me history seemed to be a science of nature; for human nature is still nature, the conduct of life developing passions and exercising faculties that are not perhaps the innocence of the mind, but which need to be known and estimated, in order to usefulness, or even innocence, of life.

"That is true," said he, "but I have thought the philosophy of the mind had best be studied in the quiet of it, and not in the record of its wanderings and crimes."

"It seems to me," I replied, "that it cannot be studied in the solitude of the closet, but only in the action of men on and among their fellows. Then only can they be said really to be alive. Mr. Emerson says we can study our own characteristics in the actions of nations, without personal pique.

"Have we not an opportunity to do that in every neighborhood," said he.

"But in neighborhoods the scale is so small as to be warped by accidents. . . . I think it is necessary to know many nations and for long reaches of time."

"But no history that I have read," said he, "is written with the intention of teaching the truth, but rather to serve narrow, worldly ends, and excite passions that lead men to war."

"Do you think that is the case with the history in the Bible?" I asked.

"Yes," said he with a smile. "So far as there is history in the Bible it is prejudiced and one-sided, and, besides, I think that a good deal which goes for history there is not history, but Oriental apologue."

"If that is so," I replied, "and I agree with you that it is,—does it not intimate to us that what history there is in this old book of Hebrew literature is written on the right principle,—the object of the writers being the science of human duty,—and that the writers used real history, as well as fictions, to illustrate the relations of God and man? They certainly have singular honesty; never sparing their own nation, but showing the difference of its action and God's law."

"I think they were honest men," said he, "who intended to tell the truth, and often did so. But they did not always know the truth; and, blinded by national prejudices, mistook the dictates of human passion for God's laws. They evidently thought God commanded the butcheries of the Canaanites and other wars. And all histories that I have ever read are histories of wars, as if mutual destruction were the special business of men. Warriors are always glorified in history as if they were the perfection of human nature. And this is why the study of history has not seemed to me the study of truth, or for the advantage of young people: I would not have them love or even tolerate war. Let them learn God's laws as they are manifested in the beautiful processes of nature, and repeated them in their own action."

The argument continued and Elizabeth Peabody finally succeeded in convincing John Jackson that history could be so taught as to show the evils of war; and that Americans especially ought to understand the philosophy of history, because every American has a share in the government of his country. One of her historical charts was introduced into the Sharon School, which was reproduced by the pupils, under the direction of a teacher and by the use of the Encyclopaedia Britannica and other books of reference, which were read to or by the pupils to illustrate the chart, class after class became much interested in the study.

ELIZABETH LLOYD.

(To be continued.)

THE art of living rightly is like all arts; the capacity alone is born with us; it must be learned and practiced with incessant care, with the silent diligence of duty, which has the best principle for its foundation, and which is nourished by conviction and rewarded by conscience.—[Goethe.]

"THE MEDICINE OF LIFE."¹

It is possible for us to be abroad under the sky these exquisite days, with eyes blind, and ears deaf to the miracle of spring in woods and fields. So it is possible for us in every season of the year, and wherever our lot is cast, to live only in part, where there might be fullness of life. I would direct your thought toward college life as a school of friendship.

The regular curriculum of the college has its one hundred and twenty hours for science and mathematics and history and language. This is the claim of the intellect for training for greatest efficiency—that its fibre may be strengthened, and that it may enter into the riches of knowledge, and command all sources of power. Happy is the student who comes with such intellectual hunger and thirst that the hours of the day are too few to satisfy him in all the pathways that open before him—life has such zest for him that enthusiasm keeps it ever glowing. But this happy student has yet other happiness, when college life becomes to him a school of friendship besides.

To know is only a part of life, so rich is our inheritance. There is that other great part of life—the "things of the spirit" in which are comprehended our relations to man and to God. We look into the eyes of our friend, and grasp his hand in the gladness of meeting, but we see only in part,—the outward part that images itself upon the outward eye,—the part that may suddenly fade away, to be lost to us forever. Just as God is intrenched behind and within the great universe which both reveals and conceals, so is man—made in His image we are taught,—intrenched behind and within the physical part which is his instrument for all physical activities, and the impassable barrier which the nearest and dearest cannot pass, to intrude upon the absolute isolation of the human soul. We might almost say this is the courtesy of our Heavenly Father to His children—this regard for their individuality—this provision for a "holy of holies." Our friend is one to whom we would open gladly this "holy of holies" of our soul. He cannot enter—he can only approach so nearly as his experience of life interprets our own. If it be the color of the hair, the look of the eye, the form and texture of the garment, the tone of the voice even that has drawn him to us, just the outward and visible part, then it may be a very slight tie that binds him to us—easily broken—easily set aside by the next comer who appeals more strongly to our fancy. If, however, it be the "faithful friend" of the Apocrypha, it will be in our hearts to say with Emerson: "I awoke this morning with devout thanksgiving for my friends, the old and the new. Shall I not call God the Beautiful, who daily showeth himself so to me in his gifts?"

This "faithful friend" of the Apocryphal writer "is a strong defence; and he that hath found such an one hath found a treasure."

"A faithful friend is the medicine of life; and they that fear the Lord shall find him."

"Whoso feareth the Lord shall direct his friendship aright: for as he is, so shall his neighbor be also."

It is hardly to be thought in this favored company, that "strong defence" is needed against outward enemies; but who of us does not at times need the "faithful friend" to defend him against himself. It may be that the experience of life has not yet brought us to the "things of the spirit": it may be that moral courage, that truthfulness and honor are weaklings still, and need a strong voice of pleading for the courage that can be true; for the honor that is the armor of God. Has our life been lived in the malaria of suspicion, of harsh judgment, of unbridled speech? These are the things that poison human life everywhere! Against such poison of our souls, the "faithful friend" may be the blessed antidote, "the medicine of life." For, he will have learned that sunbeams are better than clouds for dispelling malaria; he will help us to shine away "the things that harm and things that hurt"; he will teach us to plant our gardens so full of blossoming and fruitful things that weeds can get no root-hold. He will masterfully demand a padlock upon our lips; then there shall no more escape them, the words that let loose upon the air are like a pestilence slaying all joy, paralyzing all courage.

¹ Read to the students of Swarthmore College Fifth month 3d, 1903, by Elizabeth Powell Bond.

Have you found this friend to go through college with you—who one who calls out all the best that is in you; in whom you stimulate all that is best? Then your intellectual life has the setting that will promote its highest efficiency. Then, along with scholarship there will be growth in all things manly and womanly—the final aim of human effort. If you have found this "faithful friend," and if you yourself are the "faithful friend," it will be not only your own blessedness, but all others will in some measure enter into its good, because the sunshine is not farther-shining than honor and gentle-breeding, and noble purity.

The Apocryphal writer has pointed us the way toward the friendship that is the defence and the medicine of life—"Whoso feareth the Lord shall direct his friendship aright: for as he is, so shall his neighbor be also." "Whoso feareth the Lord"—the language of many centuries before Christ came for the ministry of love, is but another way of saying "Whoso liveth his life in the thought of God, measuring all its interests by his highest conceptions, he shall direct his friendship aright." The tie that binds him to his friend will be community of interest in "the things that are worth while."

Oh, to have a friend—this is a gift of God as beneficent as the fruitage that follows the beauty and grace of spring blossoming! Well may we thank God each morning for this gift of gifts, that makes the clouded day bright, that fortifies the day for hardship, that sweetens its leisure with intimate companionship.

At that last supper in the upper chamber, when Jesus seemed to open his very soul to his disciples; when at his hands the humble service of foot-washing became a sacrament of love; when he made it a seal of discipleship—their love for one another; in that last holy hour of close communion, Jesus said to them "I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." Here is our pattern. If we would be the strong defence, the medicine of life to some other soul, we must hold ourselves in a listening attitude toward our Father, o pass on to our friend each whisper from the Divine!

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 18.

THE EARLY EVANGELISM.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you rather unto God, judge ye.—

Acts, iv., 19.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, ii., 12-16; iii., 11-26; iv., 5-12.

We have seen already in the last lesson that one of the special experiences of Pentecost was "speaking with tongues." The writer of Acts assumes that this was speaking in foreign languages, and enumerates a great many languages as represented in the crowds that listened (Acts, ii., 5-13). He puts this belief in dramatic form, putting the phrases of astonishment into the mouths of men in the multitude which came together to hear. But it is most suggestive to observe that some of those who listened believed the disciples to be drunk (Acts, ii., 13), and that in his address to the amazed and listening people Peter did not call attention to the supposed miracle, but undertook to defend his comrades against the charge of drunkenness. Connected speech in languages comprehensible to those listening would hardly have needed such a defense. Moreover, we have the testimony of Paul as to the nature of "speaking with tongues." Evidently he thinks very little of it, though he admits it as an evidence of the Spirit's presence,—as one of the "gifts." He says: "For he that speaketh in a tongue speaketh not unto men but unto God; for no man understandeth" (I. Corinthians, xiv., 2). "He that speaketh in a tongue edifieth himself" (I. Corinthians, xiv., 4). "Let him that speaketh in a tongue pray that he may interpret." "I had rather speak five words with my understanding, that I might instruct others also, than ten thousand words in a tongue" (I. Corinthians, xiv., 13 and 19). Later (xiv., 28) he says of speaking with tongues, "if there be no interpreter let him keep silent." It seems a fair inference from these things that the phenomenon in question was the incoherent shouting of religious excitement. Any one who has attended revival meetings, especially among the negroes or other excitable people, will recognize this experience. I asked an intelligent negro woman what are the evidences of the Spirit's presence in the people at revivals, and she answered: "Some shout, some sing and some cry; some walk about and talk." Among the Mohammedan Arabs—a people nearly allied to the Jews—incoherent and unintelligible shouting is one of the acknowledged religious exercises.

Of very great interest is the reported address of Peter, indicating as it does the character of the evangelism of the time. He quotes from the prophets and from the Psalms to show that Jesus fulfills predictions there given. He speaks simply and directly concerning his faith in Jesus, that he is the Christ, and concerning the resurrection as bearing unquestionable witness to the mission of the Christ. His earnestness and enthusiasm were effective—many were moved, "received his word and were baptized." The success of this unpremeditated effort showed the way of future successes. From this time, whenever people could be gathered together by any means the apostles were ready to testify to their faith and to welcome others into fellowship. An example is given of a case following soon after Pentecost. Peter and John, going up to the temple to pray, met and healed a lame man at the temple gate. This was soon noised about, and those in the temple ran together "in the porch that is called Solomon's," where Peter again testified to the life and death of the Messiah and called upon his hearers to "repent . . . therefore, and turn again, that your sins may be blotted out, that so there may come seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord" (Acts, iii., 19).

So long as the ministry of the apostles reached only comparatively few it did not much attract the attention of the authorities. It could not seem dangerous that a few harmless and law-abiding people should cherish the seemingly foolish conviction that the crucified fanatic of the Passover season had been the long-looked-for Messiah. But when the teaching began to attract crowds in the temple porch and about the streets the matter took another aspect. It is hardly likely that the teaching itself was of much interest to the ruling classes. It is the politicians—the Sadducees—and the captain of the temple, not the earnest representatives of religion, the Pharisees, who first take note of their activities and proceed against the Christian teachers. It must be remembered that those who supported the Roman rule had had much experience with the dangers of excited mobs among the Jews. Street fighting had many times been necessary to put down the followers of some enthusiastic nationalist. Serious revolts had grown from just such small and seemingly trivial beginnings. Consequently the ruling class of the Jews, which was, of course, in sympathy with the Roman rule, was quick to scent danger when local leaders appeared and sprang into sudden popularity. That it was rather the collecting of crowds and the consequent disorder which occasioned the arrest of Peter and John (Acts iv.) appears in the fact that they were discharged without punishment, only a warning being given. But this experience marks the beginning of a persecution destined to become more and more active—a persecution which on one hand unified and strengthened the band of believers and on the other resulted in so scattering them that their message was carried to every part of the Roman world.

PROGRESS OF THE DOUKHOBORS.

From the Evening Journal, St. Thomas, Ontario.

ONE of the most difficult features of the Doukhobor settlements with which the immigration authorities have had to deal was the refusal of the settlers to homestead the land. Having no title to property, the members were at any time apt to march away from their farms on any occasion of religious excitement. Their opinions have within the past few months undergone a decided change in this respect. Every male Doukhobor over the age of eighteen years has applied for a quarter section, and 1,743 homestead entries have been made since Verigin's arrival in the country.

It is significant that the name of Nicoli Zebroff, who was the prime leader of the pilgrimage, appears as the attorney for five hundred of the settlers who have made application. All of these homesteads will be communal property, with one exception, that of a member of the colony who has declared in favor of individual ownership. In time this man will have plenty of followers. A beautiful slope on Thunder Hill has been selected by the members as a communal park, and in the center of it they will erect a temple, to be known as "Zion," in which their religious services will be held. This is their first effort since they have been in the country to establish a common place of worship.

Verigin, whose control over the Doukhobor villages is nothing short of marvelous, is doing much by precept and example to lead his people away from their most fantastic doctrines. His eighteen years of exile have made him in their eyes a martyr for the Doukhobor cause, and the advice that he gives is accepted by the Doukhobors as being the words of a man who knows better than anyone what is for their good. Over six feet in height, and, like all the Doukhobors, of massive build, Peter Verigin is both physically and mentally fitted to be the leader of his people.

Although seemingly a little thing, Verigin made one change during his visit to Winnipeg which is destined to have a great effect on the Doukhobor communities. While in the office of the Commissioner of Immigration he had expressed the wish to become a good Canadian, and the suggestion was made that he should begin by dressing in the clothing of the country. He said nothing, but when he reappeared at the Immigration Office on the following day a wonderful transformation in his appearance had taken place. His hair was cut short, the long, sweeping beard had completely disappeared, and in place of the Russian blouse and trousers, Verigin was attired in a suit of store clothes, with all the accessories of starched linen and neat cravat. Verigin was a little uncomfortable, but proud of the fact that he had sacrificed his personal feelings for his loyalty to his adopted country. The costume of his followers will not be long in undergoing a similar change.

Verigin has set them another and more important example. He has begun the study of English, and knows enough of it now to pronounce familiar words and to write his name in English characters. And this is not all. The Russian calendar has been discarded, and the Gregorian substituted for it, innumerable festival days have been dropped, and the new buildings which are being erected this spring will not be for the shelter of human beings and cattle alike. Roads through the various communities have been constructed, and a third school has been added to the two now being conducted. In all three the English language will be taught.

GOOD, honest hard thinking never hurt anybody. It is wholesome, natural, and health giving. It is exhilarating, not depressing. Bad air, late hours, unwholesome food, unnecessary stimulants, and the various dissipations of student life cause more men to break down in one year than all the honest thinking and study since the American colonies were founded.

—[Christian Register.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.

BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTH MONTH 9, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

READY FOR SERVICE.

As the year rolls onward and the time in Fifth month approaches for our annual gathering, the pulse of many of our members quickens at the thought of again assembling for a week of mingling, both socially and spiritually at Fifteenth and Race Streets, Philad'a. The burden bearers feel again the grave responsibility of trying to harmonize the various concerns that are presented, and the prayer of the truly concerned arises for the help that is ever granted to such as petition aright.

The fact that many of those who have been faithful and so helpful, have passed on to a future life since our last assembling, is painfully felt, but there is always the assurance that if the cause is a true one, other burden bearers shall arise. True it is "that the hands fall off, the work goes on." Sometimes however there seems to come an interregnum—where Power seems to be withheld—but this is perhaps only to test our faith and deepen our trust in the Divine guidance. Hope is strong that this year some are feeling in a peculiar manner that there is a need for their aid in the many good causes represented in our yearly meeting. We most earnestly desire that each one will individually be ready to respond if called with "Here am I; send me."

The ministry of service is ever needed by the Master, and in every heart there is surely some longing to aid in the redemption of the world from error. Let us seek diligently to discover wherein our talent lies, and cheerfully present ourselves as being ready for use in carrying forward the work of our day and generation, as have those worthies who have gone to their reward.

THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE.

ONE hundred years ago the territory of the United States was doubled by an outlay of $15,000,000, not only without bloodshed but without even a threat of war. Before the Louisiana purchase we possessed the eastern bank of the Mississippi river within fifty or sixty miles of the Gulf of Mexico, and already the settlers in the Ohio valley were looking forward to the time they would send their products, in large quantities, down the great river to the sea, and when the development of their resources would depend upon unrestricted navigation.

While the people of this country were pushing westward beyond the Alleghenies, the Louisiana province, which had been ceded by France to the Spaniards in 1765, was transferred back to France in 1800, when Napoleon Bonaparte was at the height of his power. Realizing the importance of securing the right of way in the Mississippi, President Jefferson sent James Monroe to Spain and France as a special envoy, with instructions to buy New Orleans and the river outlet for $2,000,000. Napoleon, partly because he realized that it would cost more than it was worth to hold this immense territory against American pioneers, and partly because he wished to see the United States become a powerful rival of England, offered to sell, not merely the little strip of land asked for, but the entire French possessions in America, at a price that amounted to about three and one-half cents an acre.

This was before the days of steamships and ocean cables, and James Monroe and Minister Livingstone had to assume an immense responsibility, but they proved equal to the occasion and signed off-hand the treaty which was afterward ratified by the American Government. They knew they could depend upon the support of Thomas Jefferson, who had been interested for many years in the exploration of the great Northwest, which, though nominally claimed by France or Spain, had never been traversed by a white man. Indeed, at the very time when his representatives in France were considering the purchase of this vast unexplored region, Jefferson was planning that tour of discovery which made the names of Lewis and Clarke so prominent in our country's history.

In later years, when our domain had been again enlarged by the Mexican War, it is worthy of note that the great struggle over the extension of slave territory took place, not on soil won from Mexico, but in Kansas and Nebraska, in the heart of the tract ceded by France. Perhaps it is also more than a mere coincidence that the first State which gave full suffrage to women was Wyoming, on the Rocky Mountain boundary of the Louisiana purchase.

Last week there was a great gathering of representative citizens in St. Louis, from all parts of our nation, including the President and his Cabinet and the governors of many States, to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the signing of the treaty that doubled our country's area. In the midst of the national rejoicing there was not a single memory of cruelty, injustice or oppression to mar the pleasure of the day. It is right that we, as a people, should celebrate, with appropriate ceremonies, the first great acquisition of territory in the world's history, for which there was no shedding of innocent blood.

In a letter to the editors Abby D. Munro writes that there are but a few dollars in the treasury of the Laing School with which to pay her teachers and that she is trusting a generous contribution will be sent her by the Friends of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting. She reports a very pleasant and successful school year, the only drawback being a lack of funds. The Philanthropic Committee has arranged that some one shall be in Room 1, between the Race Street and the Cherry Street meeting rooms, from 12 to 3 o'clock daily, during Yearly Meeting week, to receive contributions for the Schofield and Laing Schools, South Carolina, and the Friends' Neighborhood Guild, Philadelphia; and it is hoped that Friends will come prepared to contribute generously, according to their means, to these deserving institutions.

GEORGE DANA BOARDMAN, an eminent Baptist minister of Philadelphia, who was born in Burmah, Eight month 18th, 1828, died in Atlantic City, N. J., Fourth month 28th. Dr. Boardman was a cultured Christian scholar and a prolific writer upon religious subjects. He was an earnest upholder of the cause of Peace, and is known to the readers of the INTELLIGENCER as the author of an excellent pamphlet entitled "Disarmament of Nations, or Mankind One Body."

We hope our readers who are able to do so will respond liberally and promptly to the appeal for money for the Howard M. Jenkins Professorship Fund for Swarthmore College. They will remember that a Friend has offered to give $10,000 for this purpose if the remainder of the $40,000 necessary is subscribed.

MARRIAGES.

CHAPMAN—PINE.—Fourth month 30th, 1903, at the home of the bride, Mount Auburn, Cincinnati, Ohio, Mary Evans, daughter of William and Catharine J. Pine, and Charles H. Chapman, son of Noah H. and Mariana W. Chapman, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

COMLY—CHANDLER.—In Philadelphia, Pa., on Fourth month 18th, 1903, before Mayor Weaver, by Friends' ceremony, Ellwood T. Comly, of Philadelphia, formerly of Maple Glen, Montgomery county, and Mary H. Chandler, of Maple Glen, Pa.

KIRK—BALDERSTON.—In the Friends' Meeting-house, Newtown, Pa., Fourth-day evening, Fourth month 29th, 1903, under care of Makefield Monthly Meeting, William Biddle Kirk, of Upper Darby, Pa., and Martha Balderston, daughter of William Balderston, of Lower Makefield township, Bucks county, Pa.

DEATHS.

ATKINSON.—At Lahaska, Bucks county, Pa., on Fourth month 26th, 1903, Thomas S. Atkinson, son of Eliza H. and the late Joseph S. Atkinson, in his 44th year.

FOULKE.—At his home in Stroudsburg, Pa., Fourth month 17th, 1903, of cancer of the liver, after two years' illness, Samuel L. Foulke, M.D., aged 60 years, 7 months and 8 days.

Dr. Foulke was a son of Charles and Catharine Foulke. He was educated at the Samuel Alsopp school at Water Gap, a famous one in its day, and later attended the Jefferson Medical College, graduating in 1874. He began practicing medicine at Cresco, but in a short time came to Stroudsburg and entered the drug business, in which he remained, except for a brief period, until his death. Several years ago he went to Scranton and opened a pharmacy, which is now conducted by a son.

Dr. Foulke was a physician of more than ordinary ability, and a pharmacist and business man of high reputation. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and was interred at Scranton.

GILBERT.—In Philadelphia, Fourth month 28th, 1903, at the residence of her son-in-law, Dr. Wilmer Krusen, Mary A., widow of Pearson Gilbert, and daughter of the late Henry and Sarah Armitage, of Solebury, Pa., in her 80th year; a member of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting of Friends.

HAWLEY.—At his country-place, near Maiden Creek, Pa., after an illness of three weeks, Jesse G. Hawley, in his 64th year.

HAYDOCK.—At Locust Valley, L. I. Fourth month 6th, 1903, Samuel M. Haydock, son of the late Henry Haydock, and Martha B. Mott, his wife, in the 60th year of his age; a life-long member of New York Monthly Meeting.

Interment in Friends' cemetery, Prospect Park, Brooklyn. LAMB.—Fourth month 28th, 1903, at the residence of her daughter, Mary L. Cox, 1516 Linden Avenue, Baltimore, Md., Esther Lamb, widow of John Emerson Lamb, in the 93d year of her age.

TOMPKINS.—Suddenly, Fourth month 16th, 1903, Barthina N. Tompkins, in the 67th year of her age.

She was on her way to visit her son at Stamford, Conn., when trying to cross the track at Mamaroneck station she was run down by a New Haven local and crushed so that she died in an hour. She was brought to her home at Mt. Kisco, N.Y. The funeral held from her home on Fourth month 19th, was largely attended by relatives and friends. Charles M. Robinson, of Chappaqua, and James Wood, of Mt. Kisco, spoke words of sympathy to the bereft. She had been for thirty years a faithful attender of Mt. Kisco Meeting. She leaves one son, Stanley Tompkins, of Stamford, Conn., and a daughter, Anna Garlock, of Mt. Kisco. She was the daughter of Caleb and Abigail Norton, of Pittstown, Rensselaer county, New York.

WOODMAN.—Near Rushland, Bucks county, Pa., on Fourth month 20th, 1903, Martha S. Woodman, wife of Comly Woodman, aged 56 years; an esteemed elder of Wrightstown Monthly Meeting.

WRIGHT.—At Springboro, Ohio, Fourth month 26th, 1903, Emily Wright, in her 87th year.

SOCIETY NOTES.

CONCORD QUARTERLY MEETING held at Wilmington, Del., on the 28th ultimo, was largely attended by its own members as well as by many from the neighboring Quarters. We were also favored by the presence of Joshua Rowntree, a recorded minister, and his wife, Isabel, from London Yearly Meeting. These valued Friends were returning from Australia, where they went last autumn to attend the first general meeting of Friends there.

The morning session was full of interest, with many lively communications from concerned visiting Friends. Samuel S. Ash and Joseph Willetts spoke most acceptably, as did also our ministers. All the strangers were warmly welcomed, and Joshua Rowntree, both in ministry and prayer, touched a responsive chord in the hearts of all hearers. His minute was read in the business session, drawing us still closer in the bonds of love. The intermission for lunch was felt to be refreshing, physically and socially.

The usual business was transacted in a lively manner, and an account of the English Friends' method of answering queries was much appreciated. L. H. H.

On Third-day, the 28th ultimo, John J. Cornell visited the Girard Avenue and Germantown Friends' schools, and gave talks to the pupils. On Fourth-day he dined at the Friends' Boarding Home, in Germantown, and held a parlor meeting in the evening which was attended by about twenty-five persons. During the remainder of the week he and his wife paid social visits to twenty-eight families in Germantown. The meetings on First-day at Girard Avenue, Frankford and Green Street were all large and full of life. On Second-day they visited four families and attended Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting for Ministers and Elders. On Third-day, at Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting, John J. Cornell spoke acceptably from the text, "Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your reasonable service."

Joel Borton writes that Nebraska Half-Yearly Meeting was well attended and satisfactory, especially on First-day. In company with Joshua Mills he has attended nearly all the meetings composing Illinois Yearly Meeting and visited many families. He expected to attend Clear Creek Meeting on the 3d instant, stopping in Pittsburg, Pa., on the evening of the 6th, to hold a parlor meeting at the home of Samuel P. S. Ellis.

THE HOWARD M. JENKINS PROFESSORSHIP

HOWARD M. JENKINS PROFESSORSHIP FUND.

Previously acknowledged,	$125.00
Phoebe C. Wright,	$ 25.00
Charles F. Jenkins,	500.00
Elizabeth Lloyd,	5.00
	530.00
	$655.00

The Committee has felt great disappointment in the small amount so far contributed to this fund and is at a loss to understand the reason. There certainly can be no lack of appreciation of the services of Howard M. Jenkins in the cause of education and letters, both inside and beyond the limits of the Society of Friends, and it would seem that we could in no way better testify our appreciation of those services than by a liberal support of this fund for a Professorship in Swarthmore College, to which Institution he looked with such earnest and confident hope for the future maintenance and welfare of the Society to which his best energies were devoted. Will not his friends enable the Committee to report at Commencement the completion of the Fund?

ROBERT M. JANNEY, Chairman.

PERSECUTION OF COLORED PEOPLE.

LETTER FROM SCHOFIELD SCHOOL.

Editors FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

HERE are some facts that will show you how we have to share the sad burdens of those who look to us for sympathy and encouragement. The newspapers give a few lines to some terrible tragedy and the world rushes on—to money getting. These instances were brought to me by an old and reliable student, with names and dates, and both were within two months in our next county, back from a railroad.

A most worthy colored preacher was several years raising money among his race to start a school; at last he had a hundred acres, and on this land two large, good buildings were erected and all paid for. There was no opposition by the whites until the school had been open several months, having started last October. Then the whites went in a body and set fire to the school house, burning it entirely down. In the other building the instructors lived and had boarding students. The mob went again in the night, called out the teachers, beat one most horribly, telling him to promise he would never teach again, and then burned the house to the ground. His sons fired on the mob and three were wounded; and for this all will have to leave the place and the land they earned by years of labor. The Augusta paper said, "The better class of whites regret such lawlessness." And they do, but dare not say anything or their buildings would have the same treatment.

That school house should be rebuilt—there is no other way to prove to the wrong doers they are not conquerors. If I had the funds I would go there, have it rebuilt and a school established. There are plenty of brave colored teachers who feel as a colored man in Richmond (driver of a hack) said to me. "I ain't scared to die for my rights. George Washington said, blood must be spilled for freedom;" and then with manly firmness continued, "but I'd know when I was a dyin' some other man would be dyin' too," meaning his enemy.

The other fact has renewed in me the determination to raise $5,000 for a fund to educate young women. In the same county a brother and sister (former pupils of my student and informer) were plowing some distance apart in a large rolling field; a white man went to the sister and asked her to go bird hunting. She declined and also refused the money he offered her. When he seized her she struck him and got loose, going at once to her brother (aged 24), who said, "We will go home," and unfastening the mules they started. It was a mile away, but the white man followed, and when they were inside their own yard, he shot the brother dead.

There was a trial, but the court decided it was hard to tell who was to blame and dismissed the murderer. This young man had done no harm; there was nothing to fuss over but the protection of his sister's virtue. How does she feel now? The harrowing details in both cases cannot be told.

As my informant, Alfred, said to me, "It's discouraging to try and raise money for schools; the people feel it is no use," and then with the pathos of intense grief in his voice, continued, "It's a hard school for us, but we can't live together until you educate the whites; they are the heathen." There was a moment of hopefulness in his eye on leaving, as he said, "I'm glad you are well; the Lord leaves you here for he has more stones for you to turn over."

Aiken, S. C., Fifth month 3d. M. S.

LETTERS FROM ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.—III.

ON THE RIVIERA, NICE AND CANNES,

Fourth month, 1903.

Editors FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

OUR brief stay in Egypt, twelve and one-half days, was crowded with interesting sight-seeing and incidents which, as we draw farther from them, will in retrospect grow in interest and wonder, as the visit itself will no doubt be looked on by all of us as an event in our lives. I have not attempted to write promptly concerning it, because my Palestine letter, written in Egypt, was not mailed till our arrival at Naples two weeks ago, and I also preferred to have a little time to dwell somewhat on the wonders of the land of antiquities, and to separate in my mind in some measure all that we have seen in the short time named, which, had it been four months, would still have been fully occupied.

I find, though more than two weeks have elapsed, the task is not an easy one, and much that we have so quickly seen cannot yet be classified and arranged, even for such a record as this. Those who have spent the entire winter in Egypt, and paid more than a single visit to that wonderland, may well think it presumptuous in one who spent less than two weeks there to write at all, but it will be remembered these letters are not meant in any sense to be studies of the historic regions we have hastily passed through, but personal impressions only, addressed to those who are more or less interested in some members of our company, and who, having never visited the lands referred to, may be interested in some account of such a view as ours.

Our stay on the steamer after the rather hard trip to Palestine was all too short—one afternoon and night—and the next morning, Third month 11th, when we came from our staterooms, we lay in the harbor at Alexandria and were surrounded by small boats to take us ashore. Months before I had engaged, through friends, the services of a special dragoman to conduct our little party, and when I came on deck I found him awaiting me. I had heard much of his picturesque appearance, but the reality exceeded the description. He is an East Indian, quite black, and in his flowing, oriental costume and dignified and suave bearing, presented not only a striking but a handsome appearance, an object of decided interest to all our passengers. He took our little party ashore in his boat, and soon we were seated in the special train awaiting us, and we began the interesting ride to Cairo, where we arrived in less than four hours, and drove promptly to the world-renowned Shephard's hotel, to which we had fortunately been assigned.

A short time before our arrival we had a distinct though distant view of the great pyramids. And here we were, in thirty hours after leaving Jerusalem; it seemed in one sense almost like thirty days, the transition was so great from the sombre and dirty city to cleanly, bright, picturesque Cairo; and the contrast between the poor little inn we had left, with its rude accommodations, and this hotel, with its almost palatial parlors and dining rooms, bedroom suites with baths, and wonderful gardens outside, is scarcely to be described. But the most welcome change was that from dirt to cleanliness, from foul smells to purity of air.

Cairo is one of the most attractive cities in the world. So say those who have gone around the world, and so say we after our visit there, who have visited the chief capitals of Europe, not to mention the cities of our own country. Athens has an interest historic and otherwise all its own, and Constantinople is distinctly oriental and picturesque, but while a short visit to the latter city is well worth while, I can scarcely imagine any one desiring a long stay, while in Cairo and about it, one could profitably and pleasantly spend an entire winter.

I need hardly say the six days we spent there were fully occupied with sight-seeing, retiring early in the evening so as to be fresh for next day's work. I cannot attempt any detailed or orderly account of what we saw, but can write only of a few things that impressed us most. The pyramids and Sphinx of course rise first in one's mind, and thither we went soon after our arrival, taking the beautiful drive of ten miles each way in about an hour and a half, and mounting camels there for the short ride to the Sphinx, more for the novel experience than because they were needed.

The first experience in mounting a camel is not apt to be forgotten. The camel lies down, and when you are ready he slowly rises, first on his fore legs, throwing one forcibly back, but so deliberate is the movement that the first impression is he will remain in that position with his rider holding hard to keep from falling off behind, but in time the operation is completed by the raising of his hind quarters. And so when time to dismount comes one has to lean back forcibly, as he goes down in front, and every time I dismounted while in Egypt I had the sensation when he was half way down that he really was not going any further. The motion of riding to me after the first was not unpleasant.

On our first visit to the pyramids we were somewhat hurried, so a couple of days afterward, First-day, I arranged to spend the morning there alone and quietly study the vast piles and the great stone face. The vastness of these monumental tombs has often been described, and only by deliberate study can it be at all comprehended. I found that to me, like St. Peter's at Rome, they were a little disappointing at first sight, then they gradually grew on me until I became almost awed in wonder, and the impression, like that of St. Peter's, can never be forgotten while memory lasts.

Some idea of the vastness of Cheops may be formed by the statement of Herodotus, that 100,000 men were employed three months annually for ten years in making the road for transporting the stone, and in building the subterranean chambers for the coffins, and that the construction of the pyramid itself occupied twenty years more. It is understood that the three months covered the period of the Nile inundation, when the services of so vast a body of laborers could be economically obtained. The stone cutters and masons were probably at work all the year, at the quarries and on the pyramid.

Both the vastness of the pile and its extreme antiquity grew on me as I gazed. We are told it was built about four thousand years B. C., and that the Sphinx is older—no one knows how old. As I sat almost oppressed with the thought, Whittier's lines came to me:

"Our father's God, from out whose hand
The centuries fall like grains of sand."

And I could but remember something of what has transpired in the world while the Sphinx has looked impassively on, many centuries before Abraham made his offering, and Moses wrote, and Joshua judged, and David sang. During all the centuries since, through the rise and fall of empires, and in fact all the momentous epochs in the history of man, while the countless millions of the human race have lived and passed, as we are passing in our little lives, still the great stone face looks on.

That beautiful First-day proved to be more eventful in personal experiences to me than any day of our trip to the East. I had left Cairo early in the morning, and after spending nearly two hours in quiet meditation, my dragoman happened to mention that Sakkarah was only a few miles away across the Libyan desert. Some of our party—Dr. Swan and wife, J. Dundas Lippincott, and one of my daughters—had arranged to leave Cairo about the middle of the morning on the train for Bedrashen, about twenty miles distant, to spend the day on the site of ancient Memphis and at the tombs of Sakkarah, etc. They were to take donkeys at the station, and after visiting Memphis, ride as far as Sakkarah.

The suggestion of the dragoman did not at first appeal to me, but on thinking it over I became interested in what promised to be a most novel experience—to ride on camel back for nine miles across the Libyan desert to meet and greatly surprise our friends, visit the objects of interest with them, and with my camel accompany their cavalcade of donkeys on the return through Memphis to the railroad station and by train to Cairo. I naturally considered for some time before deciding. I had never ridden a camel except for a short distance a few days before, and I was not sure how the motion would suit me for so long a distance. Then the sun at midday was quite warm, and for the entire nine miles to our first stopping place there was no possible shade. But there was a gentle breeze blowing, the day and the temperature were ideal, and altogether the temptation to take the camel ride on the desert and surprise our friends was too great to be resisted. My dragoman selected two camels, had lunch put up to take with us, and about 11.30 we started.

The motion at first was not pleasant, but as we proceeded I grew accustomed to the long swinging walk, and after a while found even the trot quite tolerable. Gradually the pyramids sank behind us, while in front and around was only the great level stretch of the desert, reaching and forming part of the desert of Sahara, and stretching westward many hundreds of miles to the Atlantic ocean. While we were, of course, only on the edge, yet the sensation was the same as mid-desert travel, and the experience is one I can never forget. The sky was absolutely cloudless—from horizon to horizon I could not all the day discern the slightest fleck of cloud, and the blue of the sky was more intense than any I have ever observed. About 1.30 we arrived at Sakkarah, a town of underground tombs, and stopped at the only building, a rough one-story structure where visitors eat the lunch they bring with them.

I expected to find our little party there, but they had not arrived, so after waiting a while I ate my lunch, and was about starting to visit some of the tombs nearby, when I saw them coming on their donkeys, evidently eager for their delayed lunch. When they stepped briskly into the rude room they were so greatly surprised that I think at first they almost doubted their senses and my identity. After their railroad ride of twenty miles and their donkey ride of six miles, to find me awaiting them in that wilderness seemed almost an impossibility until they assured themselves by the laying on of hands that it was really I, and heard my explanation. If startling to them, it was to all of us a joyous meeting, and after they had lunched and rested, we visited the wonderful palatial tombs near by.

The necropolis of Sakkarah is a vast collection of sepulchral monuments of every description dating from perhaps 2500 years B. C. to later but still remote periods. The dim tapers we held in the dark chambers revealed wonderful beauties in art decoration in colors which, though painted perhaps four thousand years ago, are as fresh looking as ours of yesterday. Our friends and their guide, on their five donkeys, and myself and guide on camels, each of the party followed by an attendant on foot, then started on our return to the railroad station, passing the site of ancient Memphis, and dismounting to inspect the two colossal statues of Rameses, II., both lying on the ground but remarkably preserved and objects of great interest. Our rather grotesque looking party arrived at the station in good time, the camels which at first had been left behind by the donkeys, coming in some time in advance. We then had our twenty-mile railroad ride, and on arrival at the hotel soon after dark, I felt the day had been with me a full and memorable one. I had ridden fully fifteen miles on the camel, and as it was spoken of from one to another at the crowded hotel, I think I was an object of interest for a day or two. Certainly the experiences of the day will be cherished in my memory.

(Conclusion to follow.)

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

LANGHORNE, PA.—The regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held at the home of Sara E. Allen, on Fourth month 17th. The program opened with a recitation entitled, "The Meeting Waters," by Charles Fairer. Louisa Osmond read a paper on "Work," in which she said we should simplify and systematize our work, and use our strength with judgment; that there is a pleasure in being busy, if we are cheerful, and make the best possible use of our opportunities.

A biographical sketch of the life of Whittier was given by Anna R. Mather. J. Harvey Lovell recited "Barbara Freitche." In the question box which followed, the first question, "What are three essentials to comfortable living?" was answered by Edward Palmer who said they are health, steady employment and pleasant surroundings.

The second question "Should we expect boys to be as good as girls?" was answered by Arthur E. Bye, who said that we expect more of the girls in the home life, and more of the boys in public life. In answering the third question, "Are Friends keeping abreast educationally with other denominations?" Alfred Marshall thought they were ahead, and mentioned as illustration the large number of children from other denominations who attend Friends' schools. The meeting closed with the reading of Armit Brown's oration given at the Valley Forge Centennial.

MABEL A. ROW, Sec.

NEW YORK.—A regular meeting of the Friends' Association of New York and Brooklyn was held at 16th Street and Rutherford Place, Fourth month 26th, 1903.

The questions propounded by the Executive Committee of the General Conference of Young Friends' Associations were considered and the secretary of this Association was directed to forward replies thereto.

Reference was made to preparations for our next meeting, which in compliance with invitations extended by Friends in Flushing will be held at that place on the 10th of next month.

A thoughtful paper was read called "The Duty to the Meeting of Friends who attend it," some extracts from which follow: "The Friend who makes no mental effort in meeting, who allows his thoughts to drift instead of giving them direction, loses the real value of the meeting." "The meeting is the spiritual laboratory of its members. To it they should take whatever of uplift has come into their lives during the week, as material upon which to work." In short the author was a believer in the gospel of work, and claimed that the meeting was successful in direct proportion to the number of workers in it.

WALTER HAVILAND, Sec.

RICHMOND, IND.—At the business meeting in First month, the regular time for the reports of committees, the Visiting Committee was especially commended for its effective work in visiting the sick and "shut ins," and in distributing flowers and fruit.

All members present at the business meeting in Second month were appointed as a Social Committee to entertain the Christian Endeavors of East Main Street and South Eighth Street Friends' churches. This social was held Second month 3d, at the meeting-house. About eighty Friends were entertained and all pronounced it a most enjoyable occasion.

The Topic List for this year with one exception, has been carried out as printed in last Sixth month. First-day evening meetings during this last quarter have been well attended and the interest maintained.

At the regular business meeting in Fourth month the Executive Committee was appointed for the coming year. From this Committee of the Association, officers have been appointed as follows: Edith M. Winder, chairman; Ella Gibson, vice-chairman; Edith S. Moore, secretary; Pearl Green, corresponding secretary; John T. Moore, treasurer.

The Easter time being the eighth anniversary of our Association, a part of the time of the Easter meeting was given for appropriate remarks. The thought was expressed by one of the original members of the Young Friends' Association that while we have had many seasons of discouragement, and have felt many times as though our efforts were bringing few results, yet if each individual member would imagine the Young Friends' Association taken out of his life, he would realize how large a place it had occupied in his thoughts and how much it had meant to him as a means of spiritual development.

MARGARET BRECKENRIDGE, Sec.

ACCOITINK, VA.—The Young Friends' Association met at the home of Courtland Lukens, Fourth month 19th, 1903. The president opened the meeting by reading the 26th chapter of Acts. This was followed by a reading by Frank H. Wilkinson entitled, "Experiences in the Ministry," by J. J. Cornell. Sarah E. Cox reviewed the 2d chapter of Janney's History of Friends. After a short intermission the members answered at roll call with sentiments. Sarah E. Walton read an essay, "Thou God Seest Me," written by Susan T. Pidgeon. Joseph W. Cox read the conclusion of J. J. Cornell's essay on "Principles of the Society of Friends."

LEVETTA COX, Secretary.

THE temperance movement is certainly making some headway when saloon keepers refuse to employ bartenders who drink.—[Philadelphia Ledger.]

IN an Egyptian mummy case dating back to the age of Alexander, a papyrus has been found containing an ode by Timotheus, the Greek poet and musician. This is the oldest manuscript Greek book known to exist, dating from the fourth century before Christ.

EDUCATIONAL.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

DR. APPLETON was one of the patrons of "The Greek Play" given last week by students of the University of Pennsylvania. The play was attended by a number of persons from the college.

A regular meeting of the Audubon Club, held on the 28th ultimo, was the best attended of the year. Many of the students are watching the "spring migration" with interest.

The following subjects were discussed at the last meeting of the Historical Political Conference: "The United States and Latin America; a report of the seventh annual meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Science," by Dr. Kleene; "Lewis and Clarke's Expedition in History and Fiction," Helen Lease.

On the evening of the 2d, representatives from Friends' Select School, Media; George School; Friends' Seminary, New York; Abington Friends' School; Friends' Central School, Philadelphia; Friends' Select School, Philadelphia; Friends' School, Plymouth Meeting, and Swarthmore Preparatory School met in the Interscholastic Oratorical Contest in Parrish Hall. Of these George Eves, of George School, took first place; J. Carle Parry, of Abington, received second, and Perry B. Strassburg, of Plymouth Meeting, was third.

On First-day morning Dean Bond presented a paper on "College Life as a School of Friendship," before the students and others assembled for meeting.

P. M. W.

The following changes have been made in the Faculty of the Friends' School, Baltimore, for next year: Edward Clarkson Wilson has been appointed principal; Olive L. Whitson, of Chester county, has been appointed an assistant in the primary department; and Philip Howard Edwards, who has held the fellowship in Latin at the Johns Hopkins University for the past two years, and who will receive the degree of Ph.D. in Sixth month, has been appointed for the Classics.

SUMMER SCHOOL OF ENGLISH FRIENDS.

It has been arranged that the summer school of English Friends this year will begin on the 23d of Seventh month and continue for six weeks. Applications for admission can be addressed to Edward Grubb, M. A., Devonshire Chambers, Bishopgate Without, London, E. C., or to John William Graham, M. A., Dalton Hall, Victoria Park, Manchester.

The total charge for persons attending, including board and lodging, will be $8.75 per week. Persons staying two weeks will be given preference in assigning accommodations.

The school will be at Woodbrooke, which has been a fine private residence. It is charmingly situated in thirteen acres of private ground, including flower gardens, shady lawns, ornamental water, tennis courts, golf links, &c. Though on the outskirts of Birmingham, it is free from all town associations, and the beautiful open country of Worcestershire lies about it, offering rich attractions to the pedestrian and cyclist. Stratford, Kenilworth, and the Forest of Arden, are in easy distance for excursions. The famous model village of Hournville, near to the cocoa factories of Cadbury Bros., (an English Quaker firm of world-wide celebrity), is adjacent and offers an interesting study to students of economics. Birmingham is one of the most active and powerful centers of Quaker life in England.

The following is the draft program:—

First week, Seventh month 23-30.

- 1st hour. Rufus M. Jones,
 - " Present Day Ideas of God and the Spiritual Life."
 - 2nd hour. Dugald Macfadyn,
 - " Spiritual Instincts and the Gospel of Christ."
 - 3rd hour. Greek Class, Perhaps A. W. Richardson.
 - " Bible Class, (informal and expository), W. Little-boy.
 - Evening. P. H. Wicksteed,
 - " Principles and Problems of Economic Science."
- Second week, Seventh month 30- Eighth month 6.*
- 1st hour. R. M. Jones,—continues.

- 2nd hour. Prof. W. F. Adeney,
"Development of the Doctrine of the Person of Christ in the Early Church."
- 3rd hour. Prof. Starbuck, (probably), on "Psychology and Religion," or some such subject.
- 3rd hour. Greek Class, A. W. Richardson,
"Book of Revelations."
- Evening. P. H. Wicksteed,—continues.
Third week, Eighth month 6-13.
- 1st hour. Rufus M. Jones,—as before,—repeats.
- 2nd hour. Prof. A. S. Peake,
"The Nature and Organization of the Early Church."
- 3rd hour. Greek Class, Probably A. K. Brown.
"Bible Class, Susanna E. Wells.
- Evening. Eighth month 7th and 8th,
Conference on "The Bible at School."
- Evening. Eighth month 10th and 11th,
"Philanthropy in Relation to Social Prosperity." Margaret A. Sewell.

Fourth week, Eighth month 13-20.

- 1st. hour. Rufus M. Jones,—continues.
- 2nd hour. Paul Sabatier,
"Development of the Personality of St. Francis."
- 3rd hour. W. C. Braithwaite,
"Sources of the Gospel Narratives."
"Greek Class, T. E. Harvey,
- Evening. C. E. Stansfield,
"John Woolman."
- Evening. C. E. Stansfield, and S. E. Wells,
"Religious Education in the Society of Friends."
- Evening. T. E. Haven,
Fifth week, Eighth month 20-27.
- 1st hour. Rev. Kirsopp Lake,
"The Synoptic Problem," "St. Paul and the Corinthians."
- 2nd hour. J. W. Graham,
"Quakerism and Modern Psychology."
- 3rd hour. Greek Class, Rev. Kirsopp Lake.
"Bible Class, Joan M. Fry.
- Evening. Joshua Rowntree,
"Friends in Australia."
- Evening. J. Wilhelm Rowntree,
"Some Early Engravings and a Question."
- Evening. M. C. Albright,
"Art and Life," "The Ramayana—the popular Gospel of the Hindus."

Sixth week, Eighth month 27- Ninth month 3.

- 1st hour. Prof. W. M. Ramsay,
"Paul's Mental Development."
- 2nd hour. Rev. C. H. W. Johns,
"Hammurabi," "Babel and Bible."
- 2nd hour. A. N. Brayshaw,
"The Composition and Canon of the Old Testament."
- 3rd hour. Greek Class, J. W. Graham.
"Bible Class, M. A. Wallis.
- Evenings. Ernest W. Rowntree,
"The Value of Political Economy."
- Evening. M. A. Wallis,
"Marcus Aurelius."
- Evening. Eighth month 31st, Joseph Taylor,
"Indian Religions in Relation to Missionary Effort."
- Evening. Ninth month 1st, Henry T. Hodgkin,
"Modern Thought and the Missionary Motive."
Sub-titles of R. M. Jones's lectures: The Search for God. What is Personality? Self-realization. Self-sacrifice. The Wider Intimations. The Subconscious Life. The Testimony of Mysticism. The Testimony of Quakerism. The Test of Spiritual Guidance. Faith as a Sense of Spiritual Values.
Sub-titles of D. Macfadyn's lectures: The Sphere of the Gospel. The Gospel as an Interpretation of the Person of Christ. The Gospel as the Achievement of Right Relations to the Universe. The Cross as the Key of the Spiritual Order. Science, Psychology and Dogma.

A SEED is an ultimate, trigenerational, symbiotic unit in the plant life history, integrated from tissues and structures belonging to two sporophytic generations and the intervening gametophytic phase.—[Botanical Gazette.]

NEW YORK SWARTHMORE ASSOCIATION.

THE fifth annual banquet and reunion of the New York Swarthmore College Association took place at the Hotel St. Denis, New York, on the evening of Fourth month 18th. There were ninety or more members of the Association and their friends and invited guests who attended the dinner.

The time was arranged later in the season than usual in order to have the presence of Dr. Swain and his wife, who had just recently returned from Europe. The new President of Swarthmore responded to the toast "Our Alma Mater." Dean Elizabeth Powell Bond spoke of "The New Day." Both of these speakers were most enthusiastically received, and each gave words of encouragement for the future of the College. There was a great deal of life at this reunion, and everyone present evidently enjoyed the occasion. M.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

J. WILHELM ROWNTREE of York, England, who has been visiting friends in the neighborhood of Philadelphia for several days, left on Seventh day last for Chicago where he expects to remain a month. While in Philadelphia he secured from the Friends' Book Store a large collection of books covering sermons, travels and biographies of members of our branch of the Society of Friends. It is his purpose to write a history of the Society of Friends in America during the Nineteenth Century. As the Separation was by far the most important event during that period, it naturally will be covered in full. We have every reason to believe it will be done calmly and dispassionately, from a disinterested standpoint so far as all controversial matters are concerned.

To further the work there are many books, tracts and pamphlets which he would like to obtain. There are some of them in almost every Friend's home which are valued but lightly, and it would be of great assistance to John Wilhelm Rowntree if the sale, gift or loan of them could be obtained. As the advertisement on another page discloses, a complete set of INTELLIGENCER is particularly desired. We believe that John Wilhelm Rowntree will make good use of the material placed in hand and we trust Friends will go to the little trouble necessary to see what they can furnish him. Allen C. Thomas, of Haverford, Pa., is assisting John Wilhelm Rowntree and communications should be sent to him.

Prof. William W. Birdsall will arrive in Philadelphia the latter part of next week to attend the Yearly Meeting, and possibly for a longer stay.

Wilmer Atkinson, editor and proprietor of the Farm Journal, accompanied by his wife and three daughters, sailed from New York on the 6th instant. They expect to spend the summer in England and on the Continent.

Dr. Edward Martin, of the Medical Faculty of the University of Pennsylvania, a graduate of Swarthmore College, and a member of its Board of Managers, has been appointed Director of the Board of Health and Charities, of the city of Philadelphia.

Edward Shaw, the oldest member of Whitewater Monthly Meeting, at Richmond, Indiana, was 88 years old on the 29th of Fourth month. Twenty-five of his meeting friends, who love him, taking a warm dinner with them, surprised him by dining with him at mid-day on that occasion; this he and his children warmly appreciated. One of the guests was a great-grandchild. The reading of the following poem, written for the occasion, by Anna M. Starr, was much enjoyed:

How rapidly old Time is passing,
As he weaves each one our fate,
And the years he brings thee, Edward,
Make thy number eighty-eight.

And what quiet years of blessing,
Sweet and peaceful have they been,
Spent in making others happy,
Following the Light within.

Sons and daughters have been sent thee,
 Making life thus more complete,
 As their warm affections bound thee
 To a home thus doubly sweet.

Meek and lowly is thy spirit,
 Leaning on an Arm of strength,
 Which will never fail to lead thee
 To a peaceful close at length.

Seeds of gentleness and mercy,
 All along thy pathway sown,
 Now are springing up to bless thee;
 Such will come, and such alone.

For this gospel law is certain,
 What we sow, that shall we reap;
 Let us watch what seeds we scatter
 Lest the harvest make us weep.

Gently, Edward, thou art passing
 From this life to that beyond,
 Where a Father waits to greet thee
 And with Heavenly love respond.

Hail! All Hail! beloved brother,
 In thy peaceful, slow decline,
 Living now the Heavenly Kingdom,
 Ripening for the life Divine.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Atlantic Monthly commemorates the coming centenary of Emerson with a searching and illuminating article on "Emerson as a Religious Influence," by Dr. George A. Gordon, who, although standing at the opposite pole of religious belief, nevertheless pronounces Emerson's spirit "a tonic and inspiration of priceless worth and of inexpressible delight." Another timely paper is "The Mulatto Factor in the Race Problem," by Alfred H. Stone, of the Economic Association, who points out that the existence and power of this hybrid race has been overlooked hitherto, while it is really a considerable element in the Negro problem.

The Southern Workman for this month contains an enlightening article on "The Indian's Attitude toward Education" which will repay perusal by those who are interested in the government's methods of treating its wards. A chapter of the life in Africa of a Negro missionary sent out by the Presbyterian Church, South, is of more than ordinary interest, exhibiting as it does a devotion and persistency of purpose and a degree of success that are out of the common.

The dedication of the St. Louis World's Fair is the occasion of an interesting series of articles in the Review of Reviews on the Louisiana Purchase and its results, the exposition in forecast, and the city of St. Louis. The character sketch of the month is by W. T. Stead, his subject being the Right Hon. George Wyndham, whose name has been brought prominently before the public by its connection with the Irish land bill introduced last month in the British Parliament.

The North American Review has papers on several topics that are now occupying a large share of attention. Archibald R. Colquhoun discusses "The Future of the Negro"; W. Robertson Nicoll writes appreciatively of Ralph Waldo Emerson; Charles Johnston sets forth "The Present Tendencies of Russian Policy," and W. J. Long, in "The Modern School of Nature Study," replies to the criticisms upon his works made by John Burroughs in the Atlantic Monthly.

In McClure's Magazine for this month Lincoln Steffens gives another graphic picture of political corruption entitled "Pittsburg: a City Ashamed." Another notable article is "Waifs of the Street," by Ernest Poole, who reaches the conclusion that "the homeless, the most illiterate, the most dishonest, the most impure—these are the finished products of child street labor."

For Friends' Intelligencer.

A DAY WITH NATURE.

OH, Nature! Mother of us all!
 Whose love fills all our wants,
 Our feet, obedient to thy call,
 Now seek thy well-loved haunts.

Thy woods and hills and shady dells,
 Thy leafy lanes we prize;
 Thy flowery meads and crystal wells,
 Thy mountains and thy skies,

The fruited orchards bending low,
 And fields of waving grain,
 The Summer's sun and Winter's snow,
 The Spring's life-giving rain,—

All these are thine, and thou art ours;
 We yield to thee our days,
 And seek, with dedicated powers,
 To know thee and thy ways.

So, reverently, to-day we stand
 Mid many a rural scene,
 Where thou hast strewn with lavish hand
 Thy countless shades of green.

The maples' ever varying tints
 Relieve the woodside gloom,
 And here and there among them glints
 The dogwood's snowy bloom.

And deep within each quiet dell,
 With bending ferns above,
 There, nesting in their beauty, dwell
 The wildlings of thy love.

Each feathered songster round us yields
 To joy its pulsing throat,
 While overhead in azure fields
 The fleecy cloudlets float.

The Spring-tide perfumes round us flow,
 We breathe the cool, crisp air,
 And, quickened by the vernal glow,
 In Nature's new-birth share.

Oh, happy day! with favoring skies
 And charm of sight and sound,
 And merry hearts and laughing eyes
 And beauty all around!

And knowing this—that all we see
 Thy love and care afford—
 Our heartfelt thanks go up to thee,
 Our own and Nature's Lord!

ROBERT TILNEY.

A REMARKABLE WILL.

A CHICAGO lawyer of much skill at one period of his existence, but who died an insane patient in the Cook County Asylum, left the following remarkable will:

I, Charles Lounsbury, being of sound and disposing mind and memory, do hereby make and publish this, my last will and testament, in order, as justly as may be, to distribute my interest in the world among succeeding men.

That part of my interests, which is known in law and recognized in the sheep-bound volumes as my property, being inconsiderable and of none account, I make no disposal of this in my will. My right to live, being but a life estate, is not at my disposal, but these things excepted, all else in the world I now proceed to devise and bequeath.

Item: I give to good fathers and mothers, in trust for their children, all good little words of praise and encouragement, and all quaint pet names and endearments, and I charge said parents to use them justly, but generously, as the needs of their children shall require.

Item: I leave to children inclusively, but only for the term of their childhood, all and every, the flowers of the fields and the blossoms of the woods, with the right to play among them freely according to the customs of children, warning them at the same time against thistles and thorns. And I devise to children the banks of the brooks and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, the odors of the willows that dip therein and the white clouds that float high over the giant trees.

And I leave the children the long, long days to be merry in, in a thousand ways, and the night, and the moon and the train of the milky way to wonder at, but subject nevertheless to the rights hereinafter given to lovers.

Item: I devise to boys jointly all the useful, idle fields and commons, where ball may be played, all pleasant waters where one may swim, all snowclad hills where one may coast, and all streams and ponds where one may fish, or where, when grim winter comes, one may skate, to have and to hold the same for the period of their boyhood. And all meadows, with the clover blossoms and butterflies thereof, the woods with their appurtenances, the squirrels and birds and echoes and strange noises, and all distant places which may be visited, together with the adventures there found. And I give to said boys each his own place at the fireside at night, with all pictures that may be seen in the burning wood, to enjoy without let or hindrance, and without any incumbrance of care.

Item: To lovers, I devise their imaginary world with whatever they may need, as the stars of the sky, the red roses by the wall, the bloom of the hawthorne, the sweet strains of music and aught else they may desire, to figure to each other the lastingness and beauty of their love.

Item: To young men jointly, I devise and bequeath all boisterous, inspiring sports of rivalry, and I give to them the disdain of weakness and undaunted confidence in their own strength. Though they are rude, I leave to them the power to make lasting friendships and of possessing companions, and to them exclusively I give all merry songs and brave choruses to sing with lusty voices.

Item: And to those who are no longer children, or youths, or lovers, I leave memory, and I bequeath to them the volumes of the poems of Burns and Shakespeare and of other poets, if there be others, to the end that they may live the old days over again, freely and fully without tithes or diminution.

Item: To our loved ones with snowy crowns, I bequeath the happiness of old age, and the love and gratitude of their children until they fall asleep.

The World Growing Better.

JOHN G. WHITTIER was not one of those who think the past ages were the best ages. This is shown by the following reflections of his, which were published for the first time in the Outlook:

"Nothing is clearer to my mind than the fact that the world is growing better. It is sweeter, tenderer. There is more love in it. A worthy deacon of the old time in New England once described a brother in the church as a very pious man Godward, but rather a hard one manward. It cannot be denied that very satisfactory steps in the latter direction have been taken in the century now drawing to a close. Our age is tolerant as regards creed and dogma, and practically recognizes the brotherhood of the race; it is quick and generous in its sympathies whenever and wherever a cry of suffering is heard. It cannot look on poverty or pain without seeking to diminish their evil. It has abolished slavery; it is lifting woman to an equality with man before the law.

"Our criminal codes no longer embody the maxim of 'an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth,' but have regard not only to the safety of the community but also to the well-being of the criminal. All the more for this amiable tenderness do we need the counterpoise of a strong sense of justice. All the more for the sweet humanities and Christian liberalism which are drawing men nearer to each other and increasing the sum of social influence, we need the bracing atmosphere of the old moralities.

"It is well for us that we have learned to listen to the persuasion of the Beatitudes; but there are cries in all lives which require the emphatic 'Thou shalt not' of the Decalogue."

"Just Loved Me."

Two little four-year-olds were at play on the lawn when the tiny girl slipped and fell. In a moment her small companion had helped her to her feet again, and stood with an arm about her until her sobs ceased.

"What did little cousin do for you when you were hurt?" asked the mother a few minutes later.

"Nuffin; he just loved me," answered baby, the tears still standing in her blue eyes, but the comfort of the tenderness she had received shining through them. "He just loved me over it."

Oh, the divine wisdom of the treatment! There are so many falls and hurts when older people feel called upon to bring reproof, advice, warning, wise-sounding platitudes, instead of the blessed love that would heal and strengthen. Many a weakness, many a slip, many a wound grows into permanent scar and deformity for lack of the balm of sympathy and tenderness. Many a warped life and embittered heart might be saved if only there were some one to "love it over" the hour of hurt and danger and temptation.—
[Exchange.]

Sculpture at the St. Louis World's Fair.

THE Colonnade of States will be 1,000 feet long, consisting of two rows of Ionic columns 65 feet high, supporting a massive entablature. These columns form arcs, in each of which is a pedestal supporting a statue of a seated draped female figure, symbolic of one of the States or Territories formed from the Louisiana Purchase.

The statues are 20 feet high; and designed by different sculptors, they fulfill Poe's definition of the essential character of a poem, "variety in uniformity." The approaches to the cascades will contain portrait statues of aborigines, discoverers, pioneers, and statesmen, such as De Soto and Marquette, Lewis and Clarke, Livingston, Monroe, and Franklin, Daniel Boone and Sitting Bull. The heroic statues of Jefferson and Napoleon, the former by Daniel C. French, the latter by J. Q. A. Ward, will stand at the edge of a big basin.

Sculpture will be an interesting and striking feature of the exposition. The appropriation for this department is five hundred thousand dollars, of which about one hundred thousand

A NEW language has been invented for international use, entitled "Esperanto," which already has some eighty thousand adherents. It is claimed that it is much simpler than "Volapuk." A monthly journal, published in French and "Esperanto" is issued in Paris.

and dollars is for permanent work. The general scheme is designed to symbolize the history of the Louisiana Territory, representing the four successive occupants of its soil; First, the wild animals; second, the Indians; third, the discoverers and pioneers, the hunters, trappers, and explorers; and fourth, the advanced races, French, Spanish, and American, that have built up its present status of civilization. The sculpture will symbolize activities rather than actors; hence portraiture will be but moderately used. The figures throughout will be of heroic cast, in harmony with the size of the grounds, courts, buildings, and open spaces.—Frederick M. Crunden, in Review of Reviews.

CURRENT EVENTS.

In the presence of 50,000 persons, including representatives of the American Government, army and navy, Governors of a dozen States, diplomats from half of the civilized nations of the world and plain citizens of the Republic, the Louisiana Purchase Exposition was dedicated, on the 30th ultimo, by President Roosevelt, who was received with great enthusiasm and made an eloquent address. An address was also delivered by ex-President Cleveland, who received an equally warm welcome, being introduced as "the world's most distinguished private citizen."

The situation in Manchuria still claims the attention of the leading nations of the world. The Pekin correspondent of the London Times says that Russia claims to have been on friendly terms with China for two centuries, though the two countries have a continuous frontier of 3,000 miles, and objects to the interference of other nations. A dispatch from Washington, dated the 4th instant, says that Secretary Hay has good reason to believe that the Russian coup which was expected has been either abandoned or indefinitely postponed.

ARRANGEMENTS are practically completed for the ninth annual Conference on International Arbitration, which will open at Lake Mohonk on the 27th instant, and which will continue for three days. John W. Foster, ex-Secretary of State and counsel to the Alaska Boundary Commission, will preside. Among those who will address the Conference are William L. Penfield, who represented our Government before The Hague Court in the Fious Fund case; President Daniel C. Gilman, of the Carnegie Institute; Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood, of Boston, and Frederick W. Hollis, a member of The Hague International Tribunal.

A DISPATCH from London states that the British case in the Alaskan Boundary arbitration was handed to the officials of the American Embassy on the 1st instant to be forwarded to Washington. The case of the United States, which is to be laid before the Alaskan Boundary Commission, has been completed and was on the same day delivered at the British Embassy in Washington. The United States case makes a volume of 650 pages.

Two European sovereigns of the Protestant faith have recently paid friendly visits to the Pope of Rome, by whom they were cordially received. On the 29th ultimo King Edward VII. of England, who had been the guest of the King of Italy, drove to the Vatican, and after an imposing reception by ecclesiastics was ushered into the presence of Pope Leo, with whom he remained in private conference for twenty minutes. On the 3d instant Emperor William of Germany, accompanied by his two sons, visited the Vatican. The Emperor was in conference with the Pontiff for forty minutes, and showed his desire to pay deference to the feelings of the head of the Roman Catholic Church.

KING EDWARD arrived in Paris on the 1st instant and was accorded a hearty reception by Republican France. President Loubet, surrounded by the Cabinet Ministers, the President of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, the Grand Commander of the Legion of Honor, the military and naval dignitaries and the diplomatic corps, presented an imposing

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

PHILADELPHIA YEARLY MEETING.

5TH Mo. 9.—MINISTER AND ELDERS, IN Cherry Street Meeting Room, at 10 a. m.

5TH Mo. 10.—MEETINGS FOR DIVINE worship at Fifteenth and Race Streets, Fourth and Green Streets, Seventeenth and Girard Avenue, Thirty-fifth and Lancaster Avenue, School Street, Germantown, and Market Street, Camden, N. J., at 10.30 a. m.

5TH Mo. 10.—ANNUAL CHILDREN'S Meeting, Race Street, 3 p. m.

5TH Mo. 10.—MEETING FOR WORSHIP AT Fair Hill, 3.30 p. m.

5TH Mo. 10.—MEETINGS FOR WORSHIP at Race Street, Green Street, Girard Ave. and West Philadelphia, 7.30 p. m.

5TH Mo. 11.—FIRST BUSINESS SESSIONS of the Yearly Meeting, 10 a. m., and 3 p. m.

5TH Mo. 11.—A MEETING TO CONSIDER the establishment of a Friends' Flower and Fruit Mission, with headquarters at 151 Fairmount Ave., Philadelphia, in room 15, first floor of Central School Building, at 12.30 p. m.

5TH Mo. 11.—GENERAL CONFERENCE Friends' Associations, 8 p. m., Fifteenth and Race Streets. Address, "A Revival of Quakerism," Henry W. Wilbur, of New York. Five minute papers to open discussion, George G. Nutt, George School; J. Russel Smith, Philadelphia, Pa. Chairman, Jesse H. Holmes, Swarthmore Association; Secretary, Alice C. Bartram, Willistown Association.

5TH Mo. 11.—COMMITTEE OF TWENTY-two, for the Advancement of Friends' Principles, in Room No. 28, second floor of Central School Building, at 1 p. m.

5TH Mo. 11.—REPRESENTATIVE COMMITTEE Meeting in Room 1, at 6 p. m. Annual Meeting of Friends' Book Association, in Room 4, at 7.30 p. m.

5TH Mo. 12.—A MEETING UNDER the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting's Philanthropic Committee, at 7.30 p. m. Address on "Purity," by Dr. O. Edward Janney, of Baltimore; address on "Temperance," by Dr. Jesse H. Holmes, of Swarthmore.

5TH Mo. 13.—MEETING OF THE FIRST-day School Association, 7.45 p. m.

5TH Mo. 14.—MEETINGS FOR WORSHIP

at Race Street, Fourth and Green Streets, and Seventeenth and Girard Avenue, 10.30 a. m. Meeting of Representative Committee in Room 1, at 6 p. m.

5TH Mo. 14.—A MEETING UNDER the care of the Philanthropic Committee, (Concluded on Page 304.)

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

appearance. As the train entered the station the trumpets sounded a royal salute and the band played "God Save the King."

FOREST fires were raging for several days last week in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, owing to the dry weather and high winds. Millions of dollars worth of timber have been destroyed and several small villages. In the Adirondacks a timely snow storm had some effect in checking the flames. Companies of men and boys were organized in the burning regions to fight the flames.

NEWS NOTES.

THE corner-stone of a $10,000,000 steel plant was laid, on the 30th ultimo, at Brunswick, Ga.

TWO negroes arrested for murder were hanged by a mob, near Vicksburg, Miss., on the 3rd instant.

THE Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company announced an advance of 10 cents a ton on coal for the month of May.

THE coal companies are now beginning to give the men the back pay awarded by the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission.

PAUL B. DU CHAILLU, American author and explorer, died at St. Petersburg on the 30th ult. His body will be brought to New York.

GOVERNOR PENNYPACKER has vetoed the bill giving railroad companies the right to condemn lands used and occupied in whole or in part as dwelling houses by the owners thereof.

PRESIDENT BAER testified before the Interstate Commerce Commission at New York, that in view of the present unrest, the Reading is storing millions of tons of anthracite to meet any emergency.

ACCORDING to the Weather Bureau the 30th ultimo, was the hottest day in Fourth month, in Philadelphia, since 1888, the mercury reaching 90 degrees. At St. Louis, on the same day, the weather was bitterly cold.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S first act upon reaching St. Louis was to go to the International Good Roads Convention, and make a speech advocating the improvement of country roads in order to make farm life more attractive.

THE London Times correspondent at Tokio says that the Korean Government grants to Japanese subjects the same whale fishing privileges on the eastern coast already granted to the Russians since 1899, including three stations ashore.

IN Philadelphia on the 1st instant, some 6,000 carpenters and hoisting engineers declared a strike for 50 cents an hour, and 2,000 other building tradesmen went out in sympathy.

THE New York Court of Appeals, has affirmed by a unanimous decision, the constitutionality of the Ford Law passed three years ago, for the taxation at their real value of public service corporations. About $18,000,000 is the accumulated amount of taxes now due under the law.

MAY DAY was marked by many strikes and demands for higher wages and shorter hours in various parts of the country, but there were fewer serious conflicts than usual, and a considerable proportion of the employers either granted increases in pay or agreed to arbitration.

MAY WRIGHT SEWALL, President of the International Council of Women, has issued a call for a universal demonstration in favor of peace and arbitration, on Fifth month 18th, the anniversary of the day on which The Hague Tribunal was formally convened.

THE commencement exercises of the Hampton Normal and Educational Institute, held on the 29th ultimo, were attended by eminent educators from all parts of the country, including President Hadley of Yale, and Booker T. Washington.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

(Concluded from page 303.)

on "Equal Rights for Women." Address by Charlotte Perkins Gilman, of New York, at 8 p. m.

Friends desiring board during the week can apply to either of the following persons, Isaac H. Hillborn, 15th and Race Streets; Martha D. Hough, 1340 Spruce Street; Rebecca B. Comly, 1529 Centennial Avenue; Matilda K. Lobb, 1702 N. 18th Street; Sarah L. Haines, 1513 N. Marshall Street. Friends in the city having accommodations should notify the Committee.

5TH MO. 10.—CHRISTIANA, PA., YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Mary B. Pownall.

5TH. MO. 13.—EASTON AND GRANVILLE Half-Yearly Meeting, at Granville, N. Y., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 3 p. m.

5TH MO. 13.—A MEETING OF PHILADELPHIA First-day School Association, at 8 p. m.

5TH. MO. 16.—MANSFIELD, N. J., YOUNG

Friends' Association, at the home of Elizabeth A. Scott.

5TH MO. 16.—SHORT CREEK QUARTERLY Meeting, at Concord, Ohio, Ministers and Elders, day before at 2 p. m.

5TH MO. 18.—FAIRFAX QUARTERLY Meeting, at Hopewell, Va., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 3 p. m.

5TH. MO. 23.—STILLWATER HALF Yearly Meeting, at Richland, near Quaker City, Ohio. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 3 p. m.

REDUCED RATES TO SAN FRANCISCO AND LOS ANGELES.

VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD, ACCOUNT MEETING MASTER PLUMBERS' ASSOCIATION.

On account of the meeting of the Master Plumbers' Association, at San Francisco, Cal., May 19 to 22, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets to San Francisco or Los Angeles, May 11 to 17, inclusive, good to return until July 15, from all stations on its lines, at reduced rates. These tickets must be validated for return passage, for which the usual fee of fifty cents will be charged. For further particulars concerning rates, routes, and conditions of tickets, consult ticket agents.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.),
REAL ESTATE.

Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents, Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected. Keystone and Bell 'Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE!
Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 5 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 32nd & Media Sts., Philadelphia

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
5 PHONES.

Illinois-On-The-Strand

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Ocean view unexcelled Appointments first-class
Special spring rates
Bell 'Phone, No. 26 WALTON & FRENCH

NEW ARBORTON Kept by Friends.
OCEAN GROVE, N. J.

Half block from the sea. For particulars address
HANNAH BORTON,
Hot salt baths. 7 Sea View Ave., Ocean Grove, N. J.

The Pennhurst, Second House from Beach.
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator in street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD,

THE KATHLU,
1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILL, OPEN ALL THE YEAR
OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,
Atlantic City, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

It Pays Educators to Educate.

The Peoples University of Olympia, Washington, makes it pay to be in the educational business. The capital stock of that institution already pays a four per cent. dividend, and will eventually pay from six to ten per cent. The security is first-class—absolutely safe—and the enterprise highly commendable. Capital stock $1,000,000, divided into shares of $100. We will sell in blocks of not less than $50. The fact is we offer you a better investment than government bonds. Write for particulars, Eastern Office, Room 80, The Ruggery, Columbus, Ohio.

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY, Olympia, Washington.

Endowment file No. 2. Be sure to mention the file number.

ELIZABETH LLOYD'S

"SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY"
placed in every school, would teach the beauty of Peace.

Send twenty cents for one copy of the music and twenty-five copies of the words, to

ARABELLA CARTER,
Universal Peace Union, 1305 Arch St., Phila.

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
JOSEPH L. JONES

Seventeen Cents per year for
One Thousand Dollars of Life
Insurance for Fifteen Years!
This is the record of policy No.
43,964, maturing July 5th, 1901.
Particulars free on request.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,

921-3-5 Chestnut St.

GETTYSBURG AND WASHINGTON.
PERSONALLY-CONDUCTED TOUR VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The battlefield of Gettysburg, and the National Capital in all the glory of its Spring freshness, are attractions so alluring that few would feel like refusing to visit them. It is to place these two attractions within easy reach of every one that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company announces a tour over the interesting battlefield, through the picturesque valleys of Maryland, and an entertaining stay at Washington.

The tour will leave New York 8.00 a.m., and Philadelphia 12.20 p.m., Saturday, May 23d, in charge of one of the Company's tourist agents, and will cover a period of six days. An experienced chaperon, whose special charge will be unescorted ladies, will accompany the party throughout. Round-trip tickets, covering transportation, carriage drives, and hotel accommodations, will be sold at the extremely low rate of $22 from New York, $21 from Trenton, $19 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents; Tourist Agent, 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or address George W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

High-grade Underwear.

Our lines of Spring Underwear, both foreign and domestic, are now complete and were never better. We especially mention our fine assortment of open-mesh and unshrinkable undergarments, of which we show every worthy kind at most favorable prices:

I. & R. Morley's celebrated Underwear
For men; of unshrinkable natural wool; light weight.

The Famous Stuttgarter Underwear
For men, women and children; of sanitary wool; medium and light weights.

Dr. Deimef's Linen-mesh Underwear
For men and women; undoubtedly the best of its kind.

Belfast Linen-mesh Underwear
For men; a worthy make, and one we can recommend—$2.00 each.

Ramie Underwear
For men; made in Sweden; this promises to be one of the most popular makes in men's open-weave underwear.

Cellular Aertex Underwear
For men; made (in London) of a light porous cotton fabric—$2.00 each.

English White Gauze Shirts
For men; long or short sleeves; made by I. & R. Morley, of London—50 cents each.

Mercerized Balbriggan Underwear
For men; looks and feels like silk; in novi, light blue or heliotrope—$1 each.

Strawbridge & Clothier, PHILADELPHIA.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night; $2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
Phone 1-33-55.

Home Kitchen Outfits
and all
House Furnishing Goods

J. FRANKLIN MILLER,
1626 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

WALL PAPER of
Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,
1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,
Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
Unlike all other brands. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample, write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets
and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET,

PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

Merchants' Trust Company,
611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $500,000.00
CAPITAL (paid in), 250,000.00
SURPLUS 50,000.00
UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 42,349.59
Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveying clear. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $2 and upwards, per annum.
JOSEPH R. RHOADS, President.
JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice President.
HORACE B. PEARSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas.
CHARLES F. EARLY, Secretary.
WM. B. LANE, Title and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS
NICHOLAS BRUCE, J. BOLTON WINFREY,
S. DAVIS PAGE, WARREN G. GRIFFIN,
EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
JOSEPH R. RHOADS, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED I. PHILLIPS,
THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
CHAS. S. HINCHMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
EDWARD S. SAVES, EDGAR DUDLEY FARIES,
JOHN H. CRAVEN, HORACE B. PEARSON.

United Security
Life Insurance
and Trust Company
OF PENNSYLVANIA
603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Capital, $1,000,000
Surplus and undivided profits, 500,000

Banking and General Trust Co. Business
OFFICERS:
WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS, Assistant Treasurer.
HENRY LABARRÉ JAYNE, Counsel.
FRANCIS H. HEMPERLY, Actuary.
T. FRAWSON BRADFORD, M.D., Medical Director.
DIRECTORS:
William M. Coates, William H. Lucas,
Caleb J. Miller, William R. Verner,
V. C. Sweetman, J. W. Hampton, Jr.,
Charles Porter, Orlando Crease,
Robert Dorrain, I. Layton Register,
John G. Carruth, Esmonde H. Austin,
William Bault, Silas W. Pettit,
Joel Cook.

THE UNION CENTRAL LIFE
INSURANCE CO.
Of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Assets, $34,000,000
Plain Life and Endowment Policies with Annual Dividends.
The Highest Grade of Life Insurance at the Lowest Cost.
The Company for Those who Think for Themselves.
Good Contracts to Good Agents.

Lawton Brothers, Managers,
338 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

Insurance from Loss by Fire
Best of Companies
Lowest Rates . . .
R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY
N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ASSESSOR, AND RECEIVER, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. REGISTERED AND TRANSFER AGENT.
SALES TO RENT in Burglar-proof Vaults. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia
409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders, . . . $ 4,457,613.08
Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,317,764.17
Assets of the Company, 61,615,271.43
Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.
Samuel R. Shipley, President
T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
Asa S. Wing, Vice-President
Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dep't
J. Roberts Foulke, Trust Officer
Charles A. Alamp, Actuary
J. Barton Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
Samuel H. Troth, Treasurer
C. Walter Borton, Secretary
Samuel R. Shipley, James V. Watson,
T. Wistar Brown, William Longstrech,
Henry Haines, Edward H. Ogden,
Richard Wood, Thomas Scattergood,
Charles Hartsborne, J. Preston Thomas,
Asa S. Wing, Robert M. Janney,
Philip C. Garrett, Marriott C. Morris,
Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

INTERCHANGEABLE 1,000-MILE REFUND TICKETS.

Commencing June 1, 1903, interchangeable 1,000-Mile Refund Tickets will be placed on sale, limited to one year from date of issue, good only for transportation of the owner, with usual free allowance of 150 pounds baggage, over any of the following lines:

Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. (Between all points east of Ohio River and between Pittsburg and Kane. Also to and from points on Philadelphia and Reading Railway and Central Railroad of New Jersey between Philadelphia and New York.)
Chesapeake and Ohio Railway. (East of and including Huntingdon.)
Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad.
Erie Railroad. (East of and including Jamestown and Suspension Bridge.)
Lehigh Valley Railroad.
Pennsylvania Railroad.

These tickets will be sold at the rate of $30.00 each, subject to refund of $10.00 on surrender of cover to Trunk Lines Mileage Ticket Bureau, No. 143 Liberty Street, New York, at any time within eighteen months from date of purchase.

This form of ticket will be issued in deference to requests of numerous patrons of the lines in interest desiring one ticket good over several lines instead of having to provide themselves as at present with a separate ticket for each line they desire to use.

Agents at principal stations of the railroads named above will have these tickets on sale and give all further information regarding them that may be required.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.
STEAMSHIP LINES
FROM
PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.
O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue. Up-town offices, 828 and 905 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
J. C. WHITNEY, sd V. P. and T. M. W. P.
TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.
Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)
Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

LIZZIE J. LAMBERT,
PLAIN AND FANCY MILLINERY,
Successor to E. SHOEMAKER. 1020 Green St.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St.
PLAIN MILLINERY,
Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street
From 736 Spring Garden Street.

LANDSOWNE AND DARBY SAVING FUND AND TRUST COMPANY

Full Paid Capital, $125,000.00.

GEORGE FOSTER WHITE, President, Treasurer and Trust Officer; W. LANS VANDERLEN, Vice-President; JOSEPH T. BUNTING, Second Vice-President; MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary; LEWIS LAWRENCE SMITH, Solicitor.
Acts as Executor, Administrator, Trustee, Guardian or Agent. Will prepared and kept free of charge where this Company is named as Exe. or Agent. Either the Franklin National Bank or the Girard National Bank will receive deposits for this company. Aims at perfect service and perfect Security.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, FIFTH MONTH 16, 1903.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,

N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.

* TELEPHONE NO. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XX.,	305
POETRY: THE WORLD IS TOO MUCH WITH US,	305
PHILADELPHIA YEARLY MEETING,	305
WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson,—Continued. (Illustrated),	306
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON: Social Life of the Early Church,	308
FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF WEST CHESTER FIRST-DAY SCHOOL,	308
MEN'S WIVES,	309
EDITORIAL: The Art of Life,	310
Justice to the Colored Race,	310
Notes,	311
BIRTHS, DEATHS,	312
SOCIETY NOTES,	312
LETTERS FROM ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.—III.,—Continued,	312
THE SUFFRAGE CONVENTION AT NEW ORLEANS,	314
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.,	316
EDUCATIONAL,	317
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES,	317
LITERARY NOTES,	318
POETRY: Yesterday and To-morrow,	318
MISCELLANY: Against Cigarettes; Old-Time Kitchens,	318, 319
CURRENT EVENTS,	319
NEWS NOTES,	320
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS,	319

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—RELIABLE HARNESS MAKER. Permanent situation to a suitable person. Address T. Ellwood King & Co., 3533 Lancaster Ave., Philad'a.

WANTED.—BOY IN OFFICE OF A LAW firm: bright, intelligent, industrious, not under 16 years of age, with a good common school education. Address in own handwriting No. 87, this Office.

WANTED.—BY YOUNG WOMAN, A POSITION as assistant at store, or mother's helper. Reference given. Address Box 415, Salem, New Jersey.

WANTED.—A YOUNG BUSINESS WOMAN with some capital to engage in a branch of the poultry business and another line. Address No. 88, this Office.

WANTED.—BY J. WILHELM ROWNTREE of England, at a fair price or loan (preferably the former), for the purpose of historical studies, complete sets from the commencement of FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER; the United Friend, Extracts of Yearly Meetings, conference reports and all books, memoirs, journals, histories, pamphlets, tracts, etc., bearing upon Friends' epistles,—particularly in the nineteenth century and in relation to the separation. All historical material whether published or unpublished will be of value. Kindly communicate with Allen C. Thomas, Haverford, Pa.

WANTED.—BY LADY, A POSITION AS private secretary and bookkeeper, with educational institution preferred; or as a teacher of mathematics and bookkeeping. Address No. 86, this Office.

WANTED.—YOUNG WOMEN TO ENTER the Training School for Nurses of West Philadelphia Hospital for Women. Apply to M. E. Kelsey, Superintendent, 4935 Parrish Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—BOARDERS FOR THE SUMMER in country. "Boarder's Family," Modern conveniences. Apply early. Box 125, Woodstown, N. J.

BOARDERS WANTED.—QUIET HOMELIKE place. Special rates and care for convalescents or those requiring restricted diet. Box 75, Mickleton, N. J.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1847 1st St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

COUNTRY HOME TO RENT FOR THE SUMMER. About thirty miles from Philadelphia, in Chester county. House large and airy, very fully and comfortably furnished, ceilings high; fourteen rooms and bath, with modern conveniences. Electric lighting and telephone. Large lawn with amphitheater and roomy verandas. Stable with use of horse, carriage and cow. Man employed on place whose services may be secured if desired. Large garden planted. Trolley within three minutes walk, ten minutes from station. Terms $2000 per month. Address "Country," care of this Office.

FOR RENT.—AT POINT PLEASANT, N. J., on Manasquan River, furnished cottage. Ten rooms and bath, wide porches, large shady grounds, ocean and river bathing, sailing, fishing, etc. Season $400. Box 133, Point Pleasant, N. J.

FOR RENT.—'SUNSET,' COTTAGE AT BUCK Hill Falls, near Inc. Four bed-rooms, hot-water heater. For rent for the summer, $250. Apply 1024 Race St.

HELEN G. BORTON WHO IS A STUDENT IN Emerson College, Boston, is prepared to give "The Lost World," by Henry van Dyke, in an evening's program for Young Friends' Associations and other meetings. After fifth month 8th for particulars address Helen G. Borton, Woodstown, N. J.

Monograms, Book Plates

Engraved or embossed stationery, invitations, cards and things of that sort. The growth of this branch of our work speaks well for the satisfaction it is giving our customers.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,
MAKERS OF THE
BETTER KIND OF PRINTING
1019-21 Market St., Phila., Pa.
Keystone 'Phone, Race 53-37 A. Bell 'Phone 3-41-69 A.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

A golden, lazy summer afternoon!
The air is fragrant with the scent of June,—
Wintergreen, sassafras and juniper,
Rich birch-breath, pungent mint and spicy fir
And resinous cedar;—
—Alfred Billings Street.

FAMILIES with children at school cannot well visit Buck Hill Falls during Sixth month, but if your time is your own, that of all the year is the time to come. Everything about the Inn will be fresh and new, the woods are at their best, the laurel is in bloom, there are other flowers in abundance. The weather is fine, the air delicious. Rates at the Inn by the week are reduced. By all means come in Sixth month. The new steam-heating plant and the open fires will take away the mountain evening chill.

A number of rooms are already taken for Sixth month, but there is still a good selection, and there are several cottages available.

Those who wish to form house parties can rent cottages at a lower rate during Sixth month than at other times.

Mary Mann Miller's bird classes with outdoor study and observation will give added interest to a visit at that time.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

OPPOSITE THE BRITISH MUSEUM THACKERAY HOTEL (TEMPERANCE) Great Russell Street, LONDON

Passenger Lift. Electric Light in all Rooms. Bath Rooms on every Floor. Spacious Dining, Drawing, Writing, Reading and Smoking Rooms. All Floors Fireproof. Night Porter. Telephone.

BEDROOMS from 2 to 4-6 per night
Inclusive charge for Bedroom, Attendance, Table d'Hôte Breakfast and Dinner from 8-6 to 10-6 ($2.50 to $9.00) per day.

Full Tariff and Testimonials on Application.
Telegrams: "THACKERAY, LONDON."

New York Yearly Meeting.

Friends expecting to attend the approaching Yearly Meeting in New York and desiring lodging accommodations at the meeting-house or elsewhere are requested to apply at once to

JENNIE C. KITCHIN,
55 Park St., Jersey City, N. J.

CALL AND SEE
Desirable Investment
to double your money

CLEMENT E. LLOYD

400 Chestnut Street, Room 45, Philadelphia

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, L.L.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School, FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS., PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }

Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Feena.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, M.S., Principal,
Or,
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR
BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.
For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class instruction.

For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 39-28 D.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
OFFICES: } 643 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
} Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
325 SWEDEN STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Thompson Shoups, 2012 Wallace Street,
Charles W. Richards, 1029 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shoups, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa.
Phone 3-54-78 D. Filbert.

CHARLES BURTON,
Practical House and Sign Painter,
Office, 907 N. Thirteenth Street,
Residence, 1714 Woodstock Street, } Philadelphia, Pa.

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)

REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sanson Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, Editor,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $3.50.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,
27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By WILLIAM EDWARD TURNER, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet. 27 pages. * Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. * A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

* All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Meaning of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $2.00. By mail, $2.25. "The reading of which is a spiritual feast." FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 68 pages. $2.00. By mail, $2.25.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $2.00. By mail, $2.25.

The Douk Hobors. By Joseph Elkinton. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated, $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

THE DOUKHOBORS

Their History in Russia and Their Migration to Canada. By JOSEPH ELKINTON
8vo, 344 pages, 3 maps, 50 illustrations. Postpaid, $2.00.

"Timely, interesting and valuable."—Public Opinion.

"An extremely interesting book to all in sympathy with religious idealism."—The Outlook.

Only adequate account in English of this unique people, and their great migration.

FERRIS & LEACH, Publishers, 29-31 North Seventh Street, PHILADELPHIA

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844. }
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTH MONTH 16, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 20.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XX.

WHEN we may feel most closely tried,
Let's look upon the brighter side,
And view the many comforts given
To aid us on our way to heaven.

ISAAC TOWNSEND.

From a letter to Samuel Comfort, written in 1860. Composed by I. T. when in his 87th year.

THE WORLD IS TOO MUCH WITH US.

"THE world is too much with us." Night and day
No time have we to pause beside the way,
Where roadside flowers in tender beauty bloom,
Or violets veil the dust above a tomb.

"The world is too much with us." Pelf and sin,
The stress of self, and Earth's tumultuous din,
The ceaseless probing into things unknown,
Eat through our lives as acids through a stone.

"The world is too much with us,"—yet, if we Linked earnest effort to high purity,
Then we would cease through sorrow care to grope,
And see, at times, the shy, sweet face of Hope.
—William H. Hayne.

PHILADELPHIA YEARLY MEETING.

THE meeting of ministers and elders held on Seventh-day, the 9th instant, in the Cherry street end of the meeting-house was well-attended. Samuel H. Broomell and Sarah Ann Conard served as clerks. Minutes were read for John J. Cornell, a minister, and Eliza H., his wife, an elder, of Baltimore Monthly Meeting; and for Abel Mills, a minister, and Elizabeth, his wife, an elder, of Clear Creek Monthly Meeting, Illinois. Several visitors from other yearly meetings were present without minutes. A concern that was received with much unity was that Friends should be on their guard against outside flattery and absorption into other religious organizations.

The attendance at Fifteenth and Race streets on First-day morning was thought to be larger than ever before. The Race street end of the house was full by 9.45, the Cherry street end by 10.15, and soon afterwards every available place in the lecture-room of the school building was occupied. Several hundred remained in the yard during the meetings, and several hundred others went away when they found they could not get seats.

In the Race street meeting John J. Cornell was the first speaker. He said that the most important place to lead a religious life is in the home; the same self-control and courtesy that are manifested in business intercourse and in society should prevail in the family life. Love manifested towards one's neighbors would cause integrity in business and adjust the relations of capital and labor. Love in the world of politics would cause a wide departure from the methods now in vogue. While every citizen has a right to criticise public actions and political platforms, no one has a right to traduce a man's character. To bring about such a political transformation Christians should cease to cavil at one another's creeds and unite in demanding the righteousness that exalteth a nation.

Abel Mills, of Clear Creek, Illinois, entreated all to find out, by means of the inner light, the path that God would have them tread, and then follow it.

Keziah Wilkins spoke especially to the young, urging them to be as careful to keep up their acquaintance with God as with their most intimate earthly friends. Several others spoke briefly, and an earnest prayer was offered by John J. Cornell.

In the Cherry street meeting Isaac H. Hillborn spoke in explanation of the words of Jesus to Peter when he promised him the keys to the Kingdom of Heaven. He believed that these words were spoken to Peter because God had revealed to him that Jesus was the Christ, and he had given expression to this revelation. He believed, also, that everyone who is obedient to the divine revelation will receive the keys of the Kingdom.

Joel Borton spoke of the mission of Jesus on earth to bear witness to the truth, and said that only those who, like him, are faithful witness-bearers, can hope to grow to the full stature of a Christian life.

Matilda E. Janney appealed to young husbands and wives to cherish one another and set a good example to their children.

Mary Travilla said that although no organ had sounded its soft notes she believed that many hearts present had been touched by God's instrument, that their burdens had been lifted and their griefs assuaged.

Other speakers were Henry Sheldrake and John Conard.

In the lecture room Henry W. Wilbur, of New York, Robert Hatton, Samuel Jones, Peter Smedley and Isaac H. Hillborn spoke acceptably.

In the afternoon the thirty-second annual children's meeting was held in the Race Street house. Louis Ambler presided. E. Clarkson Wilson gave a brief address to the children, in which he advised them to aim, first of all to be good men and women—to hold on to all their gladness, and drop out worry about their ability to do things, to remember that they have but one life to give, and to be more concerned about making a life than making a living. The schools that took part in the exercises were Woodstown, N. J.; West Chester, Plymouth, New Garden, West Philadelphia, London Grove, Newtown, Swarthmore, Germantown, Fairhill, Willistown and Girard Avenue, Philadelphia.

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

JOHN JACKSON.

(Continued from last week.)

BEFORE giving extracts from a number of letters written by former pupils of the Sharon Female Seminary, some further quotations will be made from Elizabeth Peabody's memoirs, as she visited the school several times and seems to have thoroughly entered into the spirit of the place.

"When we came in sight of Sharon Boarding School I found it a large, square building, with an observatory on the top. Its most unpretending architecture had more of the quaint Quaker angularity than of the immortal curves of beauty. But the flat lawn around was laid out very prettily in circles and curves; and the trees were scattered about in graceful groups, and flowers were trailed over trellises here and there, showing that the owner was not the victim of any sectarian prejudices, but worshipped toward the Spirit of Universal Beauty, and 'considered the lilies of the field, how they grow.'

"The size of the house was immense. He had enlarged it continually as the school had gradually increased. There were nearly a hundred girls in the school and many came out to meet us, their playful greeting of the good man, and his playful replies, showing the sweet spirit that pervaded their intercourse. I was presented not only to Mrs. Jackson, but to 'Sister Jane' [Jane Peirce] and 'Sister Mary' [Mary S. Pancoast],—not sisters as I afterwards found by blood or law, but by love and union of spirit. These ladies were two of the first eight scholars with which the school began ['Sister Mary' was the very first pupil enrolled]; for the principals were so modest they began with only eight. These two had remained as assistants ever since they were pupils.

"In the course of the next few years I came to learn, what I would hardly before have believed, that a perfect friendship and union may possibly exist between four people, living all the time together, provided they have a standard independent of themselves, and one with the Eternal Love that sympathizes with all his creatures, to which each can refer all thought and feeling for judgment, and thence derive guidance of their individual action. . . . So manifestly pure were the sisters, so tenderly loved by the wife, and so faithfully they loved the wife, as well as the husband, that in many years of acquaintance with them I never saw a particle of jealousy of each other, or with each other, on either side. . . . These four persons lived together for twenty years; and besides the school they kept, they brought up two daughters and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, without any serious disagreement, though the parents were very fond and indulgent.

"Something might have been added to the charm and elegance of the life by a more specific, classical culture of the imagination; yet hardly this in the case of John Jackson himself. His nature was of a peculiar felicity; and then his idea of God was so large and ever growing, and he worshipped so constantly in 'the temple whose dome is the sky,' and 'whose lights the sun, moon and stars,'—'whose organs are ocean winds and thunder,' with choirs of birds mingling their songs with the waters and flowers for incense and exquisite ornament; 'that magnificent temple in which Jesus sat on a mountain and taught'; that not only was his whole life a service of duty done to man for God's sake, but he instinctively felt that he was 'put into the garden to dress it and keep it.' When he had departed from the sight of those he loved, for the forever of this world, they found the grounds around his house consecrated with sweetest remembrances of him. 'There is not a tree or shrub planted here,' his widow said to me, 'that we did not all consult upon and agree to its exact locality.'

"Landscape gardening and horticulture are doubtless the first service of man to beauty; and thus was he led by the hand of beautiful nature towards the fine arts. It was a long way to go from a Quaker meeting-house, though he did not quite reach this last goal. His organization did not let in upon him the world of music; had it done so he would doubtless have gone the whole way; as it was he 'had a testimony against music,' on which he thought much time was wasted. I was led about the house to see its convenient arrangements. It was lighted by gas, which Mr. Jackson himself made in a neighboring building, and was altogether convenient and comfortable, and I did not fail to mark that the two chambers of the assistant 'sisters' were the most beautifully furnished in the house.

"Mr. Jackson had by his father's will the homestead, a large farm whose culture was affording an increasing income, as the neighboring city of Philadelphia was growing. If he kept school he was obliged to take a partner to cultivate it and receive but half its produce. [This partner was George S. Truman, who is now living at Genoa, Nebraska.] The school could not be profitable in money, because he made the price of tuition and board the minimum, for the express purpose of attracting the farmers' daughters and others of that class. . . . To make money was no part of the motive or plan. Their only concern was to provide everything needful for the instruction of the scholars, and not go beyond their means. I happened to be present once when the yearly accounts were settled. The income from all sources was so exactly balanced with the expenditures that Mrs. Jackson remarked that the school was anything but remunerative. Mr. Jackson replied: 'It balances; and could we live so usefully any other way, or even so happily? We are educating our children to support themselves, and they will have the farm unencumbered. We might lay up more money if we did not keep the school; but we should not so entirely employ all our faculties, and should not have 'Sister Mary' and 'Sister Jane' in our home, nor entertain so many interesting and intelligent strangers as visit us on account of our school. Our life is larger, freer, more of life in every respect. Could we spare our school?' Mrs. Jackson sympathizingly replied, and said she had not made the remark in the intention of expressing discontent; she was perfectly satisfied."

At the time of the establishment of this school the teaching of physiology to girls was quite an innovation, and several of the parents were somewhat shocked at the idea of having a model of a woman's form exhibited to the pupils and even taken to pieces before their very eyes. The subject was taught so judiciously that these objections were overcome. Lectures on physiology were given by Ann Preston, M. D., who was for many years Dean of the Woman's Medical College of Philadelphia. All the teaching of the sciences was made as practical as possible. "Aunt Rachel" taught the relations of healthful cookery to social comfort as an application of chemistry, while "Uncle John" endeavored to make his pupils good chemists, performing many experiments before them in his laboratory, which was back of his large school-room, and opened into it by folding doors. When teaching botany he took his pupils into the fields to study and encouraged the cultivation of plants. He wished to impress upon their minds that stores of enjoyment lay at their own doorsteps. His classes in astronomy studied the heavens from the lawn, and from the observatory on the top of the house. "Aunt Rachel" taught grammar and the use of the English language with great skill, and one of the assistant teachers was an excellent mathematician. With such a wide range of subjects there was something to interest every mind.

"SISTER MARY" AND "SISTER JANE."

From a daguerreotype taken at Sharon, by Sallie G. Hughes, of Wilmington, Del.

Ann A. Townsend, in her memoir, speaks thus of John Jackson and his school: "It was his aim not only to cultivate and expand the intellect, but also to imbue the tender minds of the children with the necessity of a life of daily self-denial, in order to enjoy that peace which the world can neither give nor destroy. The relation which existed between the preceptor and pupils was interesting even to the casual beholder. Many who have shared his instructive counsel date their awakened interest in their spiritual welfare from that time. One of the pupils who went there at the age of sixteen and remained several years, was asked by a friend, 'How long has this been thy home?' She replied, 'I began to live here.' She spoke out in those few words the fullness of her spirit, realizing that the inner life is the true being." The memoir also quotes the following extract from a letter written by another pupil:

"I can never tell what I owe to his instruction. A life chaste, earnest, humble, ever faithful to the admonitions of right, ever recognizing the divine law of progress, by which the soul approaches its Maker, manifesting in word and deed kindness and love to the great brotherhood of man—such a life might be somewhat of acknowledgment of what the pupil owes to a teacher like him. How many and what pleasant memories come with his name! I remember one morning, when standing in the cabinet with one of my classmates, looking at the fossil impressions which raindrops had made upon the fragment of one of the oldest geological formations, he came in, with that benign smile so characteristic of him, took one of the Bridgewater treatises, and read from it the scientific history of what we had been examining. We had wondered before, now we were filled with awe, not from terror, but from the sublimity of the truth, which his few words and the short extract which he read, revealed to us. I felt that it was no ordinary privilege to be thus taught. Yet so it was ever. I never went with a question without having it answered plainly, fully; there was always time, there was always a smile with which to satisfy every inquiry. And now I cannot look at a pebble, or go in imagination to the farthest extremity of the universe, but I feel that he has led the way, and I follow dimly and afar off where he has gone shedding light upon mystery. Truly can I say that I always felt in those Sharon days, that worship was exalted when he mingled in it; social life was purified when in his presence; and that as a teacher, he led and guided us by a measure of the same love and care with which the infinite Father guides and instructs his children."

ELIZABETH LLOYD.

(To be continued.)

A YOUNG man who had been brought up in a religious home spent a summer in a community of strangers, persons who, though of considerable social standing, yet gave little consideration to the things of religion. The young man wrote home, after a few weeks, "Religion never before seemed so important to me as it does here, where it is discounted. You cannot imagine the smallness of the lives and interests of these folks. Their conversation, and especially their constant social bickerings, would astonish you. Nobody seems really happy, with a deep-down unchanging happiness. As near as I can make out, all this is due to the lack of real spiritual impulses. A true revival of religion would mean the social and intellectual salvation of this entire community."— [The Friend, Philadelphia.]

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 19.

SOCIAL LIFE OF THE EARLY CHURCH.

GOLDEN TEXT.—This do in remembrance of me.—
Luke, xxii., 19.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, ii., 43-47; iv., 32-37; v., 1-11.

We are often told that the early Church was communistic, having all goods in common; and unquestionably there are many passages which seem to support this view. Some have inferred that this is therefore the Christian ideal of society: that all men who accept that ideal should "sell their possessions and goods and part them to all, according as any man has need" (Acts ii., 45). Barnabas sold his field and laid the money at the feet of the disciples. Ananias and Sapphira were struck dead on bringing only part of the price of a possession. How then shall we excuse ourselves if we do not bring to the general use those things which we are accustomed to call our own. All this involves some misconception of the conditions among the early Christians. They were by no means undertaking to present a scheme of life for the world to follow, for they had no expectation that the world would endure. The Messianic kingdom, with totally new conditions, was to be ushered in almost at once. What a waste of effort, then, to plan and scheme for a life of one kind when they were convinced that life of another kind was imminent. Everything was temporary—a makeshift for the fragment of time still remaining. It is manifestly absurd to build a permanent scheme of life on the actions of men in this state of mind. And it must be noted that as the expectation of the immediate return of the Master faded away the ideal of goods in common faded away also. We do not find it in the churches established by Paul; indeed, it seems to have been confined to the Apostolic Church at Jerusalem, and there it succeeded so ill as a system that collections had to be taken in the churches of Asia Minor for the support of the mother church. We may even question whether a full communism of goods was practiced at Jerusalem. Barnabas is especially mentioned as bringing the price of a field to the apostles; this especial mention would seem to imply something unusual. If all who had possessions in the infant Church had done the same, why is Barnabas singled out for approving mention? In the story of Ananias and Sapphira Peter's condemnation is at least in part directed against the assumed deceit—the "lie to the Holy Ghost"; though it must be confessed that a fair reading of the story leaves a sense that the writer looked upon a full surrender as the only proper course. But we cannot too often remember that a generation at least had passed between the facts and Luke's record of them; and that the mother church maintained a special relation to all others. It may easily be that a tradition of absolute communism in the Church of the apostles grew up among the Christians at the same time that they adopted quite another system among themselves. That they did adopt quite another system is plain from Paul's emphasis on his own independence while on his missionary journeys and by the total lack of any mention of difficulties about communistic management in the various epistles of the time. Of course the Christian principle of brotherhood made every true Christian hold his goods, like himself, as ready always for service. He would not leave his brother in want when he had plenty; but of formal communism in the early Church at large we have no evidence.

We read (Acts ii., 42) that the Christian Community at Jerusalem "continued . . . in fellowship in the breaking of bread and in prayers." This is assumed to be the sacrament known as "the Lord's Supper," and we are referred to the passage in Jesus' farewell discourse, where he broke bread and gave it to his disciples, saying, "This is my body, which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me," (Luke xxii., 19). It is worthy of note that Matthew and Mark, both nearer to Jesus than Luke, omit altogether the command "this do." It is not probable that Jesus had any idea of instituting a ceremonial; it was rather "the announcement of his impending death and the assurance that it would result not in evil but in good to his disciples. . . . As the bread was broken and the wine poured out, so must his body be broken and his blood shed, but not in vain" (McGifford). After his death, when the disciples ate together this solemn and beautiful hour could not but return to them. It is certain that the Lord's Supper was a very early institution in the Christian Church. But it was not the mere symbol it has since become. It is probable that whenever they ate together they ate the Lord's Supper. The common meal was hallowed by the remembrance of the Passover Supper at Jerusalem. So also were other services in common—the prayer, the hymn, the common labor. When a few were together the Lord was with them in an especial way. In this sense the idea of the sacrament is one most worthy to endure; it should stimulate hospitality and brotherly communion.

FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF WEST CHESTER FIRST-DAY SCHOOL.

The fortieth anniversary of the establishment of the West Chester First-day School was celebrated First-day morning, Fifth month 3d, by appropriate exercises.

There was a large gathering, not only of present day workers, but of others, many of whom at some period in the history of the school have been active in the work.

Lydia H. Hall, of Swarthmore, in whose heart and mind was conceived the thought of starting the First-day School and who opened it in her home Fifth month 3d, 1863, with nine children enrolled, was present. Beside her sat Wm. M. Hayes and Thomas B. Brown, also former superintendents.

The exercises were opened by Herbert P. Worth, the superintendent, reading the parable of the sower. Having expressed his appreciation of the interest shown by the large attendance, he extended to all a cordial welcome.

A very interesting historical account of the school since its beginning was given in a paper by Mary Darlington. She referred to Lydia H. Hall as the pioneer who, with prayerful spirit, dispensed the truths of God as they were given to her, to the little band of children gathered under her roof. In course of time the small quarters were outgrown and the school was removed to the school building on the meeting-house grounds, where Lydia H. Hall was assisted by Alice Paschall Darlington Derrick and Jennie Hibberd Logan as teachers. Wm. M. Hayes, John H. Reed, Wm. P. Sharpless and Thomas B. Brown in turn acted as superintendent, the latter serving fifteen years.

In 1892 Herbert P. Worth assumed control, all being united in the feeling that he was the right man in the right place. He brought to the work the vigor and enthusiasm of young manhood, with the conviction that First-day schools have a place to fill and a work to do toward the advancement of the principles of the Society of Friends.

For many years Darlington Hoopes conducted the Bible Class. He was followed by Prof. George L. Maris, who always acknowledged the strength and wisdom of Sarah Hoopes, whom he often termed his "balancing power." Elizabeth F. Darlington and Martha Sharples were also leaders of this class. In the gallery sat Thomas Jenkinson, Emily Jackson and Philip Sharples, silent yet sympathetic advocates of the First-day School movement.

A responsive exercise entitled "Service" was given by members of the school, led by Helen Foulke.

Prof. John Russell Hayes, a former scholar, read a poem, "Yesterday and To-morrow," which dwelt upon happy incidents of the past and the need of consecrated lives to meet the problems of the future. As a closing exercise the whole school repeated the twenty-third Psalm.

Lydia H. Hall expressed the thought that while the First-day School had been undertaken with fear and trembling, her faith was strong, then as now, that if we keep our faith in the direct Guidance and the Sermon on the Mount, we will still be a people respected for our simplicity and love of truth. A letter was read from Prof. George L. Maris, now in Florida, regretting his inability to be present. Remarks befitting the occasion were made by Dr. Jesse C. Green, Thomas B. Brown and John Jackson, of Lansdowne. S. R. P.

I HAVE peered into quiet "parlors" where the carpet is clean and not old, and the furniture polished and bright; into rooms where the chairs are neat and the floor carpetless; into kitchens where the family live and the meals are cooked and eaten, and the boys and girls are as blithe as the sparrows in the thatch overhead, and I see that it is not so much wealth and learning, nor clothing, nor servants, nor toil, nor idleness, nor town, nor country, nor station, as tone and temper, that render homes happy or wretched. And I see, too, that in town or country good sense and God's grace make life what no teachers or accomplishments, or means or society, can make it—the opening stave of an everlasting psalm; the fair beginning of an endless existence; the goodly, modest, well-proportioned vestibule to a temple of God's building that shall never decay, wax old, or vanish away.—[Dr. John Hall.]

MEN'S WIVES.

"This place is perfect," Charles Kingsley once wrote to his wife from the seaside, "but it seems a dream and imperfect without you. I never before felt the loneliness of being without the beloved being whose every look and word and motion are the keynotes of my life. People talk of love ending at the altar—Fools!"

Within a few days of his death, having escaped from his sick room, he sat for a few blissful moments by the bedside of his wife, who was also lying seriously ill. Taking her hand tenderly in his he said, in a hushed voice: "Don't speak, darling. This is heaven."

John Bright spoke of his wife as "the sunshine and solace of his days." When she died he said: "It seems to me as though the world was plunged in darkness and that no ray of light could ever reach me again this side of the tomb." It was Cobden who shook him at last from the lethargy and despair which were paralyzing his splendid energies. "There are thousands of homes in England at this moment," he said, "where wives, mothers, and children are dying of hunger. Now, when the first paroxysm of your grief is past, I would advise you to come with me and we will never rest until the Corn Law is repealed."

Dean Stanley said: "If I were to epitomize my wife's qualities I couldn't do it better than in the words of a cabman who drove us on our honeymoon. 'Your wife,' he said to me, 'is the best woman in England—and I quite agree with him.'"

"Why should you pity me?" Mr. Fawcett, the blind Postmaster-General, remarked to a friend who had expressed sympathy with him in his affliction. "My wife is all the eyes I want, and no man ever looked out on the world through eyes more sweet or true."

No man ever relied more completely on his wife's guidance and counsel than John Keble, the poet of the "Christian Year." She was, as he often declared his "conscience, memory and common sense."

Dr. Pusey declared that the very sight and smell of the verbenia affected him to tears, for it was a sprig of verbenia he offered to Miss Barber when he asked her to marry him—"the most sacred and blissful moment" of his life.

Dr. Wordsworth, late Bishop of Lincoln, said that his wedded life had been "as near perfection as was possible this side of Eden."—Tit-Bits.

ALTHOUGH good never springs out of evil, it is developed to its highest by contention with evil.—[Ruskin.]

It is not by deliberate, but by careless selfishness, not by compromise with evil, but by dull following of good, that the weight of natural evil increases upon us daily.—[Ruskin.]

DESPISE not the little things. A word of one syllable, a nod of the head, a motion of the hand are each very small matters, but they are frequently the difference between truth and falsehood, between right and wrong.—[Kennett Advance.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTH MONTH 16, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE ART OF LIFE.

NINETEEN centuries ago the Divine Master came upon earth to teach men the art of life. There fell from his lips few words that could possibly give rise to theological controversy. He gave his brief span of human existence to teaching men by precept and example that greatest of human achievements, the art of living. He went about doing good, healing the sick, giving sight to the blind, teaching men the simple, direct lessons of patience, comfort and hope, and telling his followers that the reason he spoke these things unto them was, that their joy might be full. We have very imperfectly mastered the art that he exemplified for us. The theory of it is simple and direct enough, but the tendency of the ages has been to complicate the means by which the teachings of Jesus are to be worked out. He went about his Father's business. To do that is the art of life, the chief end of man's existence.

Men say the ministers and missionaries go about the business of the Father, but most men must toil in the market place of commerce, in the shops and at the looms to gain the means of sustenance. They have little time for other business than their own. Thus it is that men have failed to appropriate unto themselves the blessedness of being "ministers of God, to do his pleasure," while the daily round of toil goes on. Had God meant us to spend our time only in preaching and works of healing, he would have placed us in an environment that made no other demands upon us. We are about His business when we make the desert blossom as a rose, and turn the spindles which supply the needs of humanity.

The policeman at the crossing, who all day long protects the surging crowds from injury or imprudence and directs the stranger along the right road, ought to joy in the fact that he is serving a divinely appointed task. The merchant may feel himself a servant in God's kingdom when he dispenses to his human brotherhood the things that are needful to the body. The farmer, sowing and reaping through summer's heat, is providing for the needs of God's children. The engineers guiding their trains laden with a freight of humanity safely to their destination are working out their share of divinely appointed work.

We clumsily apply the art of life we have been taught, because we allow the thought of gain, advancement or position to overshadow the thought that the daily work we do, and for which we both rightly and necessarily are paid, is a share of God's work given into our care and keeping. How it would revolutionize men's daily toil if they felt that the work they were doing, often wearisome to the body and poorly remunerated, was a share of God's service!

While fixed periods of religious worship and definite moral efforts have an important place in developing our best life and thought, Christianity will only serve its highest purpose when it makes men feel that all essential material work is "a part of God's great plan;" when in the hurried life of the world, we can believe that showing "faith by my works" has a larger significance than is usually attributed to it; and the effect of such a belief would react with equal benefit upon both work and worker.

JUSTICE TO THE COLORED RACE.

THE two instances of persecution of colored people in South Carolina, narrated in Martha Schofield's letter in our last issue, call our attention afresh to the helplessness of a subject race. We have been advised again and again to allow the Southern people to deal with the race question in the Southern States in their own way. Those cases are illustrations of what their way is in communities where the majority of the white people are ignorant and brutal.

In a recent letter to the Public Ledger a South Carolinian writes: "If the South could be let alone with its race question it would soon solve it to the satisfaction of both races." Those of us who lived through the old anti-slavery days have heard this plea before. All that the South then wanted was to be let alone, first to deal with its slaves as it saw fit, and then to take its slaves wherever it saw fit. But the system of slavery was a leprous sore, eating away the life of the nation, and it had to be gotten rid of at any cost in order that the nation might live.

This same Southern gentleman says that if all the negroes were educated their laboring class would disappear and "the white man would have all the labor to do, and still feed the negro." There is no law of God or man that requires us to feed those who will not work, so the latter part of this fear is an idle one. As to the first clause, since the colored man has been toiling for generations in order that the white man might live at ease, it perhaps would not hurt the white people of the South if they were obliged for a time to do their share of the world's work.

This same cry has been raised against the working classes in all ages of the world, regardless of their color; everywhere when common schools were first proposed the objection was raised that with universal education the laboring class would disappear. In controversy of this argument a distinguished educator says that they can make shoes cheaper in Lynn, Mass., than in Philadelphia, because the workers in the Lynn shoe factories are high school graduates and work with brains as well as hands.

What is needed for the settlement of the race question is a new infusion of the spirit of chivalry, so that the strong will feel it to be their duty to protect the weak, and the wise to share their wisdom with the ignorant. Very few friends of the colored race would object to an educational test for suffrage if it were made to apply to blacks and whites equally; but in many parts of the South the policy of the whites seems to be to give the negro as little education as possible and then to discount the little he possesses, so as to keep him perpetually disfranchised.

It would be as suicidal for one part of our nation to allow injustice to go unrebuked and unmolested in another part as to allow a contagious disease to spread itself unchecked. But as it has taken careful scientific research to learn how to stamp out contagious diseases, so it will require the utmost wisdom of sociologists to put an end to colorphobia. As a beginning of the end we would suggest that industrial education of the colored people be supplemented by Christian education of the white people.

IN view of the proverbial antagonism between the French and the English the recent visit of King Edward to the President of France is felt to be of peculiar significance. Baron D'Estournelles de Constant, who was a French delegate to The Hague Peace Conference, hopes that one result of it will be a treaty of arbitration between the two nations. He also gives America the credit for not allowing The Hague Court to die a silent death. The submission of the "Pious Fund" case and the Venezuelan imbroglio, coupled with the munificent gift of Andrew Carnegie, he believes has awakened continental Europe to the importance of this tribunal. His hopeful view of the situation is fresh evidence of the growth of peace sentiment in the French Republic.

THE "Good Word" attributed to a Welsh Friend in our last issue was quoted by John Simpson to Samuel Comfort, in 1831, when the latter was under discouragement on account of seeing so little good result from much religious service expended by Friends in visiting meetings, etc. It was taken from a letter written by Samuel Comfort to Jane Johnson, of Philadelphia.

THE Pennsylvania State Department of Agriculture has issued the first number of a monthly bulletin entitled "The Economic Zoologist," which deals especially with the habits of destructive insects and their manner of extermination. It should be of value to those engaged in farming, gardening and horticulture, and will be sent free, upon application to Prof. H. A. Surface, Economic Zoologist, Harrisburg, Pa.

BIRTHS.

DARLINGTON.—In Focopson, Chester county, Pa., on Fourth month 29th, 1903, to Emlen and Mary Parker Darlington, a daughter named Edith Parker Darlington.

PASCHALL.—At Holly Oak, Delaware, Fifth month 2d, 1903, to Henry Morris and Katharine Aldrich Paschall, a son, who is named Charles E. Bayard Paschall.

PASSMORE.—In East Bradford, Chester county, Pa., on Fourth month 15th, 1903, to Isaac A. and Annie D. Passmore, a son named Samuel Ralph Passmore.

DEATHS.

ENGLE.—Rebecca W. Engle, wife of Charles H. Engle, a valued and important member of Mount Holly Monthly Meeting, N. J., departed this life on the 17th of Fourth month, 1903.

She has been an earnest worker on the Philanthropic and George School Committees of the Yearly Meeting, a constant attendant of, and faithful member in the discharge of her duties in the monthly meeting, whether official duties or her obligations as a member.

EVANS.—On Third month 27th, 1903, at her home in Gwynedd, Pa., Mary E., daughter of Ellen H. and the late Cadwallader Roberts Evans; a member of Gwynedd Monthly Meeting.

FELL.—In Buckingham township, Bucks county, Pa., on First-day, Fourth month 26th, 1903, Elias Hicks Fell, in his 75th year; a life-long member of Buckingham Monthly Meeting.

He was the last survivor but one of the fourteen children of Eli and Rachel (Bradshaw) Fell, and was born Second month 11th, 1829, on the farm where he died, which had always been his home.

MELONEY.—At the home of her parents, Martin W. and Jane Meloney, near Avondale, Chester county, Pa., Cornelia N., their youngest daughter, aged 23 years, 2 months and 12 days; a member of New Garden Monthly Meeting of Friends.

She bore seven months of pulmonary trouble with much patience, hoping for a long time that she might be restored to health. Toward the close she became resigned and was favored to give evidence to her afflicted parents, brothers and sisters that their loss will be her eternal gain through the mercy and goodness of the Lord.

MOORE.—At Mullica Hill, N. J., Fourth month 17th, 1903, Deborah D., wife of Samuel Moore, and daughter of the late Aaron K. and Annie E. Pancoast, in her 60th year; a member of Woolwich Preparative and Pilesgrove Monthly Meeting.

PENROSE.—At his home in Larned, Pawnee county, Kansas, Third month 4th, 1903, Elisha Penrose, aged 86 years, 10 months and 23 days.

He was the eldest son of Josiah and Rachel Garretson Penrose, and was a native of Adams county, Pa., where he lived until 1880. He then removed with his family to Kansas, where he resided until the time of his death.

LEWIS TUDOR.

On the first of Fourth month, 1903, Lewis Tudor passed to his heavenly home. He was the son of Isaac and Mary Garretson Tudor, was born and reared a Friend, and lived with his parents on their farm, in Adams county, Pa., until his father's death.

He was an active abolitionist. At the time of the fugitive slave law, making it a criminal offense to feed and harbor runaway slaves, Stephen Weekly, of Cumberland Valley, had taken some runaway slaves on their way to freedom, and in consequence he was arrested and his farm confiscated. Lewis was one who was active in giving and collecting means to redeem their home, his kind, good heart and hand being ever ready to relieve the distressed. He was active in reform work, temperance, equal suffrage, and anti-tobacco claiming his particular attention.

A few years before the rebellion he started a nursery near Richmond, Virginia, and had a large and valuable stock on hand. All his property was destroyed, and he was thankful to escape with his life and a few personal effects he could take with him. After that he engaged in commission business in Baltimore for many years. Three years ago he left Baltimore and came to Chester county. He was twice married, first to Sarah Russell, of New Market, Maryland, afterward to Mary G. Hoopes, of Chester county, Pa. A kind, true friend and companion, he is sadly missed by those who knew him best.

"Forever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread
For all the boundless universe
Is life. There are no dead."

E.

SOCIETY NOTES.

OUR esteemed friend Joel Borton, on his way home from Nebraska, stopped off at our little village of Benjaminville, and held a meeting on the evening of the 4th instant. The meeting was large for a farming community, and gave close attention to the speaker, as for one hour he dwelt on the importance of living in a spirit of love, Christ-love, meek and compassionate. He urged upon his hearers to apply to their individual selves the saying of Jesus to Pilate, during his examination, "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I might bear witness to the truth," for each one has it in his power, to witness before the world, to the efficacy of Truth, in his daily life, if he be earnest and sincere in his desires to know what is this truth, and endeavors to live it out. After the meeting many expressed to the speaker their hearty appreciation of his words. We are few in numbers and sometimes feel isolated, indeed, and gladly welcome any true messenger of the Gospel as he comes among us.

ELIZABETH H. COALE.

Joel Borton and Joshua Mills arrived at Prairie Grove, Iowa, on the afternoon of Fifth month 1, from Nebraska Half-Yearly Meeting. A parlor meeting was arranged for that evening at the home of Theo. and Hanna Russell. Quite a number of appreciative young people with a few older ones were present, and we believe all felt it to be an evening well spent. Joel's message was that of Right Living. He spoke earnestly and seriously and was listened to attentively, after which an excellent paper was read on the subject, "Who is Thy Neighbor?" which called forth serious questions and answers. A number of those present repeated Bible texts or beautiful sentiments. Then a period of social mingling was much enjoyed as it gave all a chance to become better acquainted with our guests. The young people then sang that appropriate and beautiful hymn "God be with you till we meet again," when the company dispersed carrying with them, we believe that which will be as bread cast upon the waters.

Our Friends spent but twenty-four hours in this vicinity, yet several families were visited, each one regretting that the time was so limited. "Uncle Joshua" has visited us several times and always finds a warm welcome from our little meeting and henceforth our new friend Joel Borton will be classed with our valued Friends.

Just here we feel like saying that much more good might be accomplished by our ministering friends if they would spend a longer time at our weak meetings. Could they spend days instead of hours a greater interest would be awakened in our midst, yet we are thankful for even what we have received and trust it will bear fruit of pure, upright, honest and faithful living.

H. M. R.

On Fourth-day evening, Fifth month 6th, upon the invitation of Samuel P. S. Ellis, Friends and others of Pittsburg and vicinity assembled at his home, 5716 Rippey Street, East End, to meet Joel Borton, of Woodstown, New Jersey.

Although our meeting was small, there being but twenty-five present, much interest was manifested.

We started the meeting in the customary way with a few minutes of silence after which were read those words of consolation set forth in the 15th chapter of John, from whence was derived the name of our Society. After a few moments of prayer our friend told us his reasons for asking for the meeting, which were made more evident to our minds as the evening progressed.

Continuing he spoke of the importance of friendly intercourse between us, comparing it aptly to the words of John, that no branch can bear good fruit when severed from the vine.

After closing his remarks with verses applicable to the occasion we enjoyed a half hour's social intercourse and then took leave of our friend, feeling refreshed and bettered for his short stay among us.

B.

On First-day, Fifth month 3d, Joel Borton was very acceptably in attendance at Friends' meeting at Clear Creek, Ill., accompanied by Joshua L. Mills. His presence was greatly appreciated, his ministry was encouraging, and helpful, entreating all to be faithful and strive for the advancement of the Christian Church. He called on most of families of Friends in this immediate neighborhood. M. E. P.

Rachel M. Lippincott has a minute from Pilesgrove Monthly Meeting, N. J., to attend New York Yearly Meeting. The minute granted to R. Barclay Spicer by Short Creek Monthly Meeting includes New York Yearly Meeting.

LETTERS FROM ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.—III.

(Continued from last week)

ONE of our interesting experiences was the visit to the Egyptian Museum of Antiquities. This collection, unequalled in extent and historical value, has quite recently been transferred to a new fire-proof building, and is not yet fully catalogued.

We had one half-day's cursory inspection of a collection that would require twelve whole days of careful study for even tolerable acquaintance. I was perhaps most impressed with the mummies of the three kings, Sethos I, Rameses II, and Rameses III, as they lay side by side exposed to the inspection of curious crowds more than 3,000 years after their entombment. The hair and teeth and the bones generally are remarkably well preserved, and the wonderful embalming process of the ancients—one of the lost arts—has almost preserved the expression of these ancient kings. The authorities tell us that Rameses II—the great Rameses—was the Pharaoh of the Captivity, whose daughter found Moses in the bulrushes. And yet his remains lay before us in a better state of preservation than those embalmed a hundred years ago—probably much better than those of Napoleon who died eighty years ago.

Aside from all the historic objects of interest in Cairo, the street life of the city in its wonderful variety and picturesqueness cannot but attract, even fascinate, more or less, every observer. It is a thoroughly Oriental city, but the European element, Greek, Italian and French, blends with the marked characteristics of the East, making in the combination a singularly striking effect. To sit on the broad portico of Shephard's hotel, on the Sharia Kamel, and watch the life flowing by is something to be remembered. There are Syrian dragomen, barefoot Egyptians, Greeks in absurdly stiff tunics, Persians, Bedouins, Englishmen in Panama hats and knickerbockers, native women of the poorer class in black veils with only their eyes visible, Armenian priests, Algerian Arabs, merchants, beggars, soldiers, boatmen, water carriers, workmen, clergymen, gamblers, invalids, sportsmen; all classes and conditions of life in every variety of costume and every shade of complexion, on foot, on donkeys, on horseback, and in carriages, a motley crowd, ebbing and flowing without intermission through the stately street. The picturesque but obstructive camel has been ruled out only during the past year, to make the tide of travel flow more easily on the crowded street.

Cairo to me seemed Constantinople, Athens, and Naples combined, with a touch of laughing Paris, and just enough of sober London to contrast and heighten the effect. Many features of its street life which interested me greatly I cannot touch on now. But our six days have passed, and we leave the charming city both with reluctant backward glances and with eager anticipation, for have we not before us a taste of the Nile? We left on the evening of Third month 16th on the train for Luxor, where we arrived next morning, 450 miles from Cairo. Luxor is one of the chief points of attraction in Egypt, as it is a centre of antiquarian interest. The remains of the temple of Luxor and the ruins of Karnak are here, and it is famous as the site of Thebes "the hundred-gated city." We visited the first-named on foot soon after arrival, and the ruins of Karnak in the afternoon on donkeys. Here the temple of Ammon stood, the most stately creation of the great architectural age of the Pharaohs, and to this day no other building in the world has equalled it in size.

We had planned to take next day the trip to the Necropolis of Thebes, wonderful in the size of its tombs, in their decorative art, and in number of tombs already excavated, illustrative of the immense size of the ancient city. The weather was very warm, at least 90° in the shade at mid-day, so we breakfasted early in order to start at 7 o'clock. We were rowed across the river, where we were met by donkeys, and during the forenoon we rode perhaps 18 miles, stopping occasionally to visit one of the noted tombs. One I remember was 330 feet long, divided into many vaulted chambers. In another—the Tomb of Amenophis II, discovered in 1898—we saw the body of the king wrapped in its shroud, and still adorned with the garlands placed there many centuries before the Christian era. In an adjoining chamber we saw three bodies side by side, a man and two women, evidently members of the royal family.

It was all most interesting, but in our half-day we could inspect but a small percentage, illustrative however, of the whole. The trip was a hard one in the hot sun, and on arrival at the hotel about one o'clock we were quite ready for rest, and did little more during our stay at Luxor, although some of our party, including President Swain, always the most energetic seeker after information of the company, revisited the temple of Luxor at sunset that day, and the ruins of Karnak next morning.

At two o'clock in the afternoon of next day we boarded the steamer Puritan, and for four days lived the idle Nile life, welcome after the strain of donkey riding and sight-seeing at Luxor and vicinity, and also welcome because there has been with me since boyhood something of a longing to see this historic river, ever since I read George William Curtis's "Nile Notes of a Howadji," just fresh from the press, and glowing with the eloquent enthusiasm of a richly endowed intellect, in sympathy with all that is beautiful in nature and ennobling in art. But Curtis's experiences and those of others were spread over months as they sailed idly along the great river, bathed in the elixir of the Egyptian air and sunshine, and surrounded with the charming scenery and all the accessories of an ideal vacation time. Our four days on a steamer running on schedule time was surely not a realization of such a dream. But it was at least a real taste of something of which I had dreamed, and henceforth I can think of the Nile with some appreciation. We steamed slowly over the 450 miles from Luxor to Cairo, mostly tying up to the shore at night, partly to allow inspection of the river by day, and partly because in the darkness it is almost impossible to keep from running aground. Even in the day time, though our boat drew only two and a half feet of water, we occasionally ran on a sand bar, when the Arab boatmen would sometimes jump overboard and push the boat off by main strength, and sometimes adopt other devices, but in one way or another they always succeeded in floating her. The brief experience was a novel but most pleasant one, and we learned by observation and reading much of which previously I had scant information.

We all knew of the annual inundation of the Nile and that to it and it alone Egypt owes her marvelous fertility in the narrow region overflowed by its waters. But always in the past, until quite recently, more than half the wealth of the great river, the sediment and rich soil from the hills of Abyssinia, during the floods is washed into and wasted in the Mediterranean Sea, and from the beginning of May, for two months, the water is so low that irrigation has been difficult and scanty. But the engineering skill of the times promises to work wonders. A dam just about completed at Assiut—through which we passed in a lock—will store up an immense quantity of water during the flood time of the late summer and early autumn, and distribute it gradually as needed during the growing season, thereby allowing the irrigation of hundreds of thousands of acres of what is now desert land. But the great work is at Assuan, 135 miles above Luxor. Here an immense dam one and a fourth miles long, and 100 feet high is almost completed, which it is claimed will add ten million dollars every year to the productive yield of Egypt, transforming into a fertile garden by systematic irrigation an area of desert twice as large as the State of Rhode Island. True it undoubtedly is that "Egypt is the gift of the Nile." This wonderful river flows nearly all its length of 4,000 miles through a rainless region, and has no tributaries in Egypt; but the equatorial rains of the summer pour into it through the Abyssinian rivers and are the cause of the overflow which alone makes the wealth of this wonderland. The system of dams referred to will no doubt in time be extended indefinitely up the river, thereby utilizing and economizing its wealth and distributing it among the people by systematic irrigation over a vast area of now worthless territory.

There is probably no more barren and unproductive soil than that of the Egyptian desert, without irrigation, and there is probably no soil in the world as rich and productive after it receives the water of the Nile with its priceless sediment, for no other soil of which I have heard produces three or more abundant crops per year. The comparison between our farming operations, interspersed at times with long periods of drought, and then with excessive rains, is interesting, even though the opportunity for scientific irrigation may never present itself with us.

After the important question of the development of the material resources of Egypt and the prosperity of her people, that which interests the world, and especially seekers after health, is her marvelous climate, which would seem to have no equal in the world. The air is dry and bracing, sunshine perpetual, and malaria unknown. The rainfall at Cairo is about one and a half inches per year; further up the Nile rain is almost unknown, a light shower being regarded by the natives almost as a wonder of nature. There is little doubt its climate is one of the most healthful in the world, and a winter in Egypt is recommended for a renewal of the springs of life. We were all impressed with the life-giving properties of the wonderful air and sunshine, free even in their warmth from enervating qualities, and we regretted that our time to test the effects was so brief.

We arrived at Cairo at ten o'clock on First-day evening, remained on the boat all night, and early next morning drove across the Great Nile bridge thronged even thus early with carriages, pedestrians, horsemen, donkey riders, and camels, bearing their heavy burdens of all sorts of freight, and took our last look at Cairo as we sped to the railroad station, where all our ship's company gathered to take the special trains for Alexandria which we reached at noon, and sailed that afternoon for Naples. Let me say right here that no one of my readers can realize more than I that Egypt in a single letter is like the history of the world in one small volume. I think we all look back upon our visit there with peculiar interest. Some of us have already planned a whole winter's sojourn there, with at least two full months on the Nile in our own chartered dahabeah, with a small but congenial company—can we indeed hope for the same which we have had? Is it a fact that we are infected with the spirit of the Arab proverb? "He who has once tasted of the water of the Nile longs for it inexpressibly for ever more."

And now after three restful days at sea, our little company which has been together daily, almost hourly, for about two months in the closest association, on ship board and on shore, is about to separate. It would be hard for any one not with us to realize how we had grown to look on the ship as our second home, with what satisfaction we returned to it after each visit to shore, and how, after the varied experiences we shared together, the members of our immediate party seemed in a certain sense to be our own household.

We all go our several ways at Naples for a few days, but our immediate party, Dr. Swain and wife, J. Dundas Lippincott and my own family, come together again on the voyage to Villa Franca before we finally part, they to return home on the steamer, we to spend some time on the Riviera, then Paris and a visit to England.

There is a certain something more than regret felt in sundering ties like those which have undoubtedly strengthened between the members of our little company, during the trip now closing, and which it is hard to realize began only two months before. But the sadness after all is an unconscious tribute to the success of the trip and the good fellowship of those who now must separate and henceforth can no more meet as we have done of late. If each of us could have contributed in our measure to the general well being, as those who have been named, surely the experience would have been an ideal one for all.

As it is, when we dined together at Nice a few hours before the steamer sailed at midnight on Fourth month 2d, underneath the general cheer, there was an undertone of sadness, but I think we all felt we had been greatly favored in most congenial intercourse with each other and as co-participants in a trip, which will be memorable in all our lives.

ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE SUFFRAGE ASSOCIATION AT NEW ORLEANS.

THE meeting of the National American Woman Suffrage Association gave my wife and me the opportunity we had long hoped for of visiting the Crescent City. So on the morning of Third month 16th we left for Washington, which had been selected as the starting point for delegates and members from the Middle and Eastern States. We spent the entire afternoon in the Library of Congress, and were much impressed by the beautiful symmetry and finish of the marble columns in the main hall and with the decorations both of the building and the reading room. When train time approached we repaired to the station and soon recognized some familiar faces among those gathering for the trip. Our train left about 9 o'clock and two Pullman sleepers were occupied by our party. We reached Salisbury, N. C., by daylight and about two hours later took breakfast at Charlotte.

Of our journey across the Carolinas and Georgia I have written in a previous article. We arrived at Atlanta two hours late and the delay there deprived us of considerable daylight by which to pass over what was thenceforth new ground to us. We reached Montgomery, Ala., about 10 p.m., and Mobile between 3 and 4 a.m. As daylight approached we were conscious of passing through a flat country and over wide stretches of water on low trestle work, just as we cross the Gunpowder and Bush rivers on the way to Baltimore. A large part of the distance between Mobile and New Orleans is of this character; looking much like the marshes approaching Atlantic City, only intersected by many more, and much wider streams. It was broad daylight when we reached Biloxi, Miss., a summer and fishing resort for New Orleans people, about thirty-five miles distant from that city. Then came Mississippi City, Pass Christian and Bay St. Louis, all quite important places, but of which one does not see much from the railroad. We were almost always in sight of, or crossing, water; now the mouth of the Pascagoula River, then the Bay of Biloxi, then St. Louis Bay (the bridge here being a mile long) and and, last, the outlet of Lake Pontchartrain into Lake Borgne, with numerous other smaller bodies of water; while on our left was Mississippi Sound, as that part of the Gulf of Mexico which washes the shore of Mississippi is called. Later we passed a succession of swamps covered with a low species of palmetto, which grows low and spreads out fan-shaped.

We reached New Orleans on time and were landed right on the wharf with the air full of the odor of sugar. This being Fourth-day morning and the Convention not assembling until Fifth-day afternoon we devoted the intervening time to sight-seeing. In the morning we explored that part of the city adjacent to our boarding place; the afternoon was spent in visiting five of the cemeteries, which are a peculiar feature of New Orleans. With very few exceptions all interments are made above ground owing to the porous nature of the soil a couple of feet below the surface. All excavations have to be cemented and foundations for high or large buildings have to be made by driving piles, at times to a depth of fifty or sixty feet. The cemeteries in the French Quarter, of which there are four, each occupying an entire block, resemble walled cities. These walls are probably eight feet thick and, on the inside, are divided into square openings, large enough to contain a single coffin; these are arranged in tiers, four or five in height, and look like ovens, and indeed are sometimes so called. The ends of these openings, on the reception of a coffin, are bricked up and sealed usually with marble slabs, sometimes with wood and even cheaper material. The tombs are arranged, generally, in rectangular avenues. The principal exceptions to this arrangement are in the Old St. Louis, which is the resting place of the French and Spanish noblesse; and is not laid out regularly, but is so intricate that it is with difficulty one finds his way out; and in the Metairie, which is the richest and handsomest of all, and which, while it has straight avenues has also curved ones. Many of the tombs in the New St. Louis and Metairie cemeteries are very handsome and costly, and one could spend days in visiting and inspecting those "Cities of the Dead." Fifth-day morning we devoted to a partial examination of the French Quarter, the old city, full of memories of both the French and Spanish occupation. One hardly knows how to begin a description of this wonderful district, totally unlike anything we had ever seen, and to describe which with any minuteness would far exceed the limits of our space.

The Convention was called together in the afternoon for its formal opening, and the session was devoted to organization, appointing of committees, and other routine business. At its close the delegates and members attended a reception given to them at the residence of Mrs. Reuben Bush, a leader in the exclusive set of New Orleans, which placed the seal of good society at the outset on the convention and its members. The general opening took place the same evening, when the hall, a fine room seating about one thousand people, but capable of holding many more, was well filled.

Addresses of welcome were made by two prominent New Orleans gentlemen, and responded to by Susan B. Anthony and Anna H. Shaw, after which the President, Carrie Chapman Catt, delivered her annual address, which was a masterly effort and received the very highest endorsement, not only from the large audience, but from the city press next day. This meeting was the keynote of all that followed; the meetings increased in numbers each evening until the closing one, when it was said there were 1,300 people present. Another feature was the continued increase in the number of men. It was remarked by some of the residents that if we stayed another week there would be more men than women in the audiences.

It would be impossible to give any adequate idea of the many addresses made both by members of the Convention and by such of the residents of New Orleans as appeared before it. The audiences were always thoroughly alive; they were quick and responsive to the forcible arguments adduced by the speakers and applauded often rapturously, the many telling points made by them. The convention was an undoubted success and was said by its officers to have been the most enthusiastic one ever held. The evening following the close of the convention, Mrs. Catt, by invitation of one of the commercial bodies of the city, delivered an address on "The Home and the Municipality." There were about 1,500 people in the hall and ante-rooms, and the papers next day estimated that about as many more had been unable to obtain entrance. The next evening Anna H. Shaw delivered her lecture, "The Fate of Republics," at the request of the Era Club, the Suffrage Club of New Orleans; and although the weather was inclement, there were about as many in the hall, but not so many outside.

It was generally conceded by all with whom we talked and by remarks overheard that the convention had been productive of much good and had helped along the suffrage movement in that section very materially. One evidence of this is that at the meeting of the Era Club, about a week later, the names of eighty prominent women of New Orleans applied for membership. The Progressive Union, a body composed of 1,600 of the prominent business men of New Orleans, were very sympathetic with the movement, and their president, M. J. Sanders, who addressed the convention one evening on "The Value and Influence of Woman in Public Life," announced himself as a full convert to the cause after hearing Mrs. Catt's magnificent annual address.

The women of Louisiana have already the right to vote on all matters submitted to its citizens as taxpayers; and many men are beginning to see that if they have a right to vote to tax themselves for municipal improvements, they have equal right to vote for the men who are to have the spending of their money. The opinion was expressed that the Southern States would be the first of the older commonwealths to give the ballot to women, under the belief that so doing would help to settle the momentous problem which weighs so heavily on the South; but that it would undoubtedly be accompanied by some restriction, probably an educational qualification, which should apply equally to both races; and also, that without their votes it will be impossible to get rid of the corruption that prevails in state and municipal government, and which, judging from the outspoken remarks of the resident male speakers is about as intense as with us in the North.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The regular meeting of the Philadelphia Young Friends' Association was held on Second-day evening, Fifth month 4th. The regular program consisted of an address by Dr. Benjamin F. Battin, of Swarthmore College, student, "The Philosophy of Quakerism." Dr. Battin, a student of the philosophies of all times and thinkers, treated with comprehensive clearness the general understanding of the terms of philosophy and religion, and then specified the points in which the faith of Friends has a philosophical basis. He wished all Friends to realize the necessity of understanding the principles which we profess; also the dangers of skepticism in a superficial study or unsound reasoning. Some of our greatest philosophers, such as Kant, have been strengthened in their belief in God after years of study. The principle of the Inner Light, so identified with Friends, is as philosophically sound as that of the existence of God. Dr. Battin said: "It is the emphasis of this cardinal principle that is the distinguishing feature of the Society of Friends. What a marvelous power for developing character lies in such a principle, as opposed to that of mediate revelation! The ethical value of this doctrine is incalculable, particularly in the light of the philosophical doctrine of Socrates, that if we know the good, we will do it." The beauty of symbolic thought in the use of the word "light" was brought out. The freedom of the individual is also especially emphasized in the Society of Friends, and is of a necessity closely allied to the perfection of self-control and obedience to the divine will. Dr. Battin gave us an incentive to think more earnestly and deeply, and to add our influence to the practical demonstration of the faith of Friends.

CAROLINE F. COMLY, Secretary.

BYBERRY, PA.—The last session of the Friends' Association was held at the meeting-house on the afternoon of the 3d, with a large attendance.

Arabella Carter read the first chapter of James. The subject of a Phonograph Entertainment or Social Evening was introduced, and given to the Executive Committee for decision and action. Three o'clock was the hour chosen for the beginning of future sessions, and so announced.

John L. Carver, formerly of Byberry, now of Philadelphia, then entertained the audience for about an hour with a very interesting and instructive talk on "England," with the no less entertaining description of the trip across the Atlantic on a freighter. The land trip being made mainly a wheel, they were enabled to come nearer nature, both human and outdoor, than can the usual tourist, and the little incidental sketches given by the speaker left us with a better idea of the places and people than would be gathered by many hours' reading. His descriptions of the farming country, the coal regions, the moors, the railroads, etc., were heard with marked attention, and the end came all too soon. While this sort of a talk at the regular meetings was an innovation, it was none the less acceptable and variety surely lent the charm usually accredited to it. In response to interesting questions much further information was gained and words of appreciation came from the hearers.

A. C.

NEWTOWN, PA.—The meeting of the Friends' Association was held at the home of Ellie J. Burroughs on the 6th instant. The President read the third chapter of the epistle of John. The first paper of the afternoon was read by Anna Worthington—subject: Give characteristics of an ideal Friend and a sketch of an ideal Friend.

Her ideal was a practical religion taken into every day life. She failed to see why an ideal Friend should differ from any other ideal person. He must be devoid of the opinions of others, yet ever true to his own ideals of life; fearless in expressing the truth as it is given to him to see it. For a sketch of an ideal Friend she read the INTELLIGENCER article on our departed friend Charles M. Stabler.

On behalf of the Discipline committee Sarah W. Hicks read an article prepared by Isaac Eyre on "The Origin of the Discipline and the Changes Made in It," which paper was directed to be very carefully preserved in the archives of our society.

Ruth Anna Harvey, in response to the query—"How shall we spend our First-days?" deprecated the habit of later rising on that particular day; the mind was disturbed from its calmness and serenity by the haste necessitated before going to the usual place of worship, which seemed the important duty of the day. If recreation was needed nature study was both pleasant and uplifting.

Edward S. Hutchinson supplemented his paper of two months ago by a few additional remarks on "Can a True Peace Man be a True Patriot?"

Lavinia Blackfan read an article on "Child Thieving and the Juvenile Court," which called forth considerable expression and the need of bettering the condition of the cities' slums.

S. J. R.

HOPWELL, VA.—The Young Friends' Association was held Fourth month 26th, with a full attendance. The members answered to the roll call with sentiments from Henry W. Longfellow.

The regular exercises were omitted and Dr. O. Edward Janney, of Baltimore, gave us a very interesting talk on George Fox. He gave us a beautiful description of his pure, childlike life. He said, that George Fox did not possess the gift of language as a fluent speaker, but his holy spirit excelled in prayer, as though an angel spoke from Heaven. Some remarks were expressed after Dr. Janney's talk, as follows: At this age, we cannot appreciate the freedom we have from persecution, and cannot realize what moral courage it took to do right. George Fox went on doing good, bringing men from evil to good. How many of us have this moral courage, and can stand up for what is right? And how many of us are working and pleading for the Temperance cause?

C. P., Cor. Sec.

CORNWALL, N. Y.—The Friends' Association met at the home of Theodore Ketcham, First-day afternoon, Fourth month 26th. The program consisted of a paper by Elizabeth K. Seaman, entitled "Thoughts"; a selection, "Our Affairs in Others' Eyes," by Eva Ketcham, and a reading, "Quakerism as it was and is," by James Seaman. The paper by Elizabeth K. Seaman was especially interesting and much discussed. It consists of thoughts on the subject so much before us just now, "The Greatest Need of our Society." In the mind of the writer we need to feel individual responsibility. Each must study what the Society stands for and follow out the course marked out by our discipline. Since we received our name from this saying of Jesus, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you," it is very clear that we as individuals must follow him. When we realize that we are each a part of the whole, and that the perfect work is marred if we fall in coming up to the standard of our profession, a long step has been taken in the right direction, and we will learn to walk with increasing confidence.

A. M. B.

CINCINNATI, OHIO.—The Friends' Association met with Elizabeth Johnson, Fourth month 26th. After the opening selection a poem, entitled "Life and Death," was read by Rebecca Hopkins. The first paper was on "The Religious Observance of Days and Times," and was prepared and read by Grace Hall. It treated in a historical way the principal religious holidays and festivals, including Sunday, Thanksgiving Day, Christmas and Easter, touched upon the church seasons, and told why it has never been the custom of Friends to observe such days and times.

Pierce Cadwalader's paper, "Does the freedom of the individual conscience tend toward the dissolution of the Church?" was both interesting and instructive, and carried those who heard it into new fields of thought. He said in part: "What is known as the Church is an institution of man; the doctrines of the different denominations are formed according to the ideas of certain men. While religion has always existed since man came upon the earth, the majority of people are believers in doctrines rather than religion. The Friends have always been guided by the Inner Light, receiving their teaching direct from God. The Inner Light is not a doctrine, and does not require any teacher or Church. No man can lay out a plan of life for another, but each individual must be free to follow his own 'enlightened conscience.' If every one in a community did this, the dissolution of the Church might follow, but the cause of religion would advance." The paper called out a good many remarks, and was discussed at some length.

N. C. Murray read again his excellent paper on "The Ideal Friend," which will be sent to the Committee for the Advancement of Friends' Principles. A poem, "The Other Side," read by Louis Stiemler, completed the program.

GRACE D. HALL, Assistant Clerk.

EDUCATIONAL.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

SWARTHMORE was favored by a visit from Joshua Rowntree and wife of England. The former spoke in collection, relating many experiences during the Boer war, and giving his idea of the harm done by such contests in our times.

The Declamation Contest for the Andrew C. Pearson prizes was held in Parrish Hall on the evening of the 8th. This is the first contest of its kind, but it was a great success. There were eight students whose courses in English met the requirements to make them eligible. Of the seven who competed Agnes Sibbald was given first prize and Elizabeth Sutton second.

A meeting of the Historical Political Conference was held on the 8th. Dr. Linetacher, of the University of Pennsylvania, gave a short talk, and Dr. Hull gave some information concerning Valley Forge and its historical connections. On the following day about twenty-five students accompanied by Dr. Hull, drove to Valley Forge. They went over a great deal of the historic ground and visited many places of interest en route.

Many students of the College attended the sessions of the yearly meeting on First-day. P. M. W.

Attention is called to the following notice:
Alumni, Ex-Students and Friends of Swarthmore:

At a meeting of the Faculty, held Third month 9, 1903, a Committee on Archives was appointed, the duties of which are as follows:

1. To take charge of all relics of historical interest in connection with Swarthmore College, which relics shall, from time to time, by gift or purchase, come into the possession of the College.
2. To collect, take charge of, and place on file or in suitable books of record, accurate information of important events relating to Swarthmore College.
3. To collect, take charge of, and place on record, copies of printed matter, such as invitations, program, etc., issued by the College, or by classes, societies, or clubs connected with or affiliated with the College and thought worthy of preservation.
4. To collect and take charge of printed documents, articles, and books published by the members of the corps of instruction.

It is therefore urged upon all the Alumni, ex-students, and friends of the College, that they co-operate in this movement, which is intended to collect and preserve everything pertaining to the life and history of Swarthmore College, by donating or loaning any or all such relics.

The Committee will be glad to receive program, invitations, scrap-books, photographs, photograph albums, newspaper clippings, badges, pins, medals, athletic cups, prizes, publications of students, books, magazine and newspaper articles, etc.

Please forward the same to the Chairman of the Committee, Benjamin F. Battin, Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Pa.

In case of doubt as to the value of any relics, or the possibility of duplications, address correspondence to the Committee on Archives.

ELIZABETH POWELL BOND,

WM. I. HULL,

BENJ. F. BATTIN, Chairman,

Committee.

Fourth month 25th, 1903.

GEORGE SCHOOL NOTES.

Under the auspices of the Science Club, Arbor Day was celebrated on the twenty-fourth, by planting two elm trees on the campus. The president, George Eves, opened the exercises by making a short speech; then Florence Stackhouse read the Governor's proclamation. Resolutions were ordered sent to Myra Lloyd Dock of the State Forestry Commission, thanking her for a present of a mossy-cup oak to be planted on the campus. Resolutions were also ordered sent to Dr. Rothrock of West Chester, also a member of the Commission, thanking him in behalf of the club for the important work he had accomplished in the preserving of Pennsylvania forests. Dr. Joseph S. Walton gave a brief talk on "Arbor Day" and the exercises closed with a song by the Glee Club.

On Fourth month 27th, Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh completed his course of lectures on English Literature. This course, aside from being very instructive, was most entertaining and enjoyable throughout. On the 20th, Dr. Brumbaugh's subject was "The Nature Poets." He spoke of the rise of democracy and of the great debt of gratitude which we owe to Gray, Burns, Goldsmith and Wordsworth, who found companionship in nature and wrote of the things around them and of the common people.

The last lecture, on the 27th, was chiefly upon the works of Milton, Ruskin, Tennyson, and the prose fiction of the 19th Century. He said that the works of Ruskin should be read and studied much more than they are, for they contain the elements of good prose to a greater degree than any other writings of our language. In closing, Dr. Brumbaugh spoke of the books of to-day and gave the students some sound advice about reading. He said a book to be of any use to the reader must possess three qualities; it must interest him, it must make him think, and it must help him to lead a better life.

At the Inter-scholastic Oratorical Contest of Friends' Schools held at Swarthmore, Fifth month 2d, George School, represented by George Eves, received the prize—a silver loving-cup. The subject of his oration was "The Problem of the South."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

THE Westtown, Old Scholars' Association of Westtown Boarding School will hold its Seventh Annual Reunion Seventh-day, the 6th of Sixth month, 1903. The meeting will be held in their large new tent. Special trains will be run by the Pennsylvania railroad and interesting speakers will address the meeting. It is expected that this will be a very large gathering. Other information in reference to the reunion will be furnished by the registrar, Albert T. Bell, 66 Reade Street, New York.

Hiram Brooke, who died Fourth month 21st, at the St. Elmo Hotel, Third and Arch streets, where he had lived for forty-five years, was a descendant of Friends. He was born in Montgomery county, Pa., eighty years ago, and began business in Philadelphia as clerk in a dry goods store. He retired from business forty years ago and lived with great simplicity. In his will he left bequests to 65 religious and charitable institutions, including the following legacies: Friends' Meeting, Fifteenth and Race streets, $3,000; Friends' Central School, $3,000; Friends' Meetings, Girard Avenue, $500;

Spruce Street Meeting, $500; Green Street Meeting, $500; Library Association of Friends', $500; Swarthmore College, $500. To the other branch of Friends he was equally generous.

Joshua and Isabella Rowntree of Scarborough, Yorkshire, England, have been visiting Friends of both branches in Philadelphia and vicinity. They left on Seventh-day, the 9th, for New York on their way home to England. They came here from Australia by way of the Pacific Coast. Joshua Rowntree represented London Yearly Meeting at the first session of the Australian Yearly Meeting.

A fire at Swarthmore College on the 8th instant, destroyed the old gymnasium, which was used as a stable. Three horses were burned one of which belonged to the College. The fire was discovered about six o'clock in the morning. It is not known how it originated. The loss was covered by insurance.

Abel Mills, of Illinois, who has been a subscriber to the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER for over forty years paid his first visit to the office of that paper this week.

LITERARY NOTES.

The last volume of the "History of Woman Suffrage," recently issued by Susan B. Anthony and Ida Husted Harper, answers effectively the demand for accurate information, not only on this specific subject, but on the different phases of what is called "the woman question." No amount of tracts and leaflets could supply the information contained in this big volume of 1,140 pages, all so thoroughly indexed that its value as a general reference book is fully assured. The introduction of twenty pages comprises a general review of the past and present status of woman suffrage, why its success has been so long delayed, the reasons for expecting its ultimate triumph, etc. The first chapter covers thoroughly the ground of the contention made by many that women already have the right to vote guaranteed them by the National Constitution of the United States. The succeeding twenty-one chapters contain not only the eloquent speeches made at the national suffrage conventions by the leading exponents of this cause, but also the famous debate in the United States Senate on amending the constitution so as to enfranchise women, and the discussion in both Houses of Congress on admitting Wyoming with woman suffrage. The reader thus gets the views of the opponents as well as the advocates.

The politician who attempts to secure any credit for his party in its attitude on this question will not find it in the caustic chapter on the record of national political conventions. General interest possibly will center in the chapters on the various States, which contain the laws for women, their educational advantages, the offices they are filling, the amount of suffrage they possess and how they got it, and the record of their Legislatures on this subject. The story of the four States where women possess the full franchise is particularly interesting.

A valuable chapter is the one on "Great Britain and Her Colonies," all of which confer some form of franchise on women. The part relating to New Zealand and Australia is especially apropos. Club women will enjoy the chapter on National Organizations of Women, as about one hundred of these are carefully classified and considered. Those who are "seeking for a sign" as to the effect of woman suffrage in the States where it prevails, will find it in the mass of testimony which has been systematically arranged in the Appendix.

The immense amount of research and work which have been put upon this book can only be appreciated by a full examination. It is perhaps the most valuable contribution yet made to the cause of woman's enfranchisement. Susan B. Anthony has published it at her own expense, with no expectation of any financial profit, as the price—three dollars—barely covers the cost of production. It should be very generally placed in libraries where the public can have access to it.

YESTERDAY AND TO-MORROW.

Closing part of an ode read at the 40th Anniversary of the West Chester First-day School.

WELL, those old times have faded far, and coming back to-day
We look with tears on the golden years that have vanished into the gray.

Gone are the friends of long ago, and many a gentle face
No more will look with kindly cheer from the well-remembered place.

Yet even the old gives way to the new, the tale itself repeats,
And rosy children and calm-eyed youth to-day hold our old seats:

And these are the golden days for them in the West Chester
First-day School,
Where gentle teachers lead by love, and where kindness is the rule.

To you in your golden morn of life we look with happy hope;
Yours be the finer deed than ours, yours the grander scope,
Here you will learn with clearer mind the lessons taught of old,—

To look with hate on the arrogant power that is trafficked for with gold:
To cherish and hold through all your days the high resolves of youth,

To reverence Righteousness alone, to be loyal only to Truth:
To stand in your simple strength unmoved by the foolish cries of the day,

To know and follow a straighter path than merely the popular way;

Distrusting the call to the "Strenuous Life," which says to every man,
"Rush, rush at your highest speed, my friend: take every prize you can,"—

A doctrine born of a restless age, this doctrine of stress and strain—
Its roses shall to ashes turn and its fruit be only pain.

Nay, let meek Woolman lead your path, and simple, greatsouled Penn,—

Saintly, unselfish guides, who never taught their fellow men
That might make right, or that Saxon blood was meant to rule the earth,

Or that aught in God's eye makes men great but the power of honest worth.

Within these quiet Quaker walls there comes assurance sweet
That you, dear hearts, from Honor and Faith and Truth will not retreat;

That come what may, you will cheer the world with love and joy and song,

Cherishing all that is pure and true, hating whatever is wrong.
So shall God's sweet peace be yours, and you shall go your way

Blest by the light that shineth more and more to the perfect day.

—John Russell Hayes.

Against Cigarettes.

MRS. COULTER, the only woman member of the Utah Legislature, introduced a stringent anti-cigarette bill which has passed both Houses and been signed by the Governor. It provides a fine of $5 or five days' imprisonment for any person under eighteen years of age who has in his possession a cigarette, cigar, tobacco, or opium. The anti-cigarette bill for which the women of New Jersey have been working has been vetoed by Governor Murphy, who declared, "Most boys of sixteen smoke, and generally without injury." On the same day that Governor Murphy made this assertion, Leo Mitchell, a seventeen-year-old boy of Marinette, Wis., the second Marinette boy within one week to lose his mind from the effects of cigarette-smoking, was adjudged insane and sent to the Northern Hospital at Oshkosh. If the mothers of New Jersey had had the right to vote, the Governor of New Jersey would probably have done like the Governor of Utah, and signed the bill. —[Women's Column.]

Old-Time Kitchens.

WITH the best will in the world, I have discovered little about the classical kitchen, except that it existed, that it probably stood apart from the house, and that sometimes it was provided with a chimney. When one remembers the banquets of Athenæus and Lucullus, or, for that matter, the Sabine fare of Horace, this chimney might be taken for granted. But as a matter of fact, it must have been long the luxury of the few, for the chimneyless kitchen survived until such recent time that to-day there is still near Oxford, as cooks in the university will tell you with archaeological pride, an ancient kitchen where a circle of holes round the roof takes the place of our chimney. But the old classical cooks had such a reverence for their art—the "godlike art of cooking," some of them called it—that no doubt they understood how to control the holes we think so barbarous.

Cooks who could quote Homer and knew Plato by heart, and who thought the mastery of all the arts and sciences a mere preparatory course to the study of cookery, never could have been willing to work in a kitchen reeking with smoke like a crofter's cottage. Indeed, one among them went so far as to declare an architectural training necessary to the cook, so that he might build his kitchen to suit himself, and secure the right amount of light, and avoid being exposed to all the winds that blow, for smoke, he wisely observed, according to which way it goes, makes a great difference when you dress a dinner. And I fancy there are times when the chef to-day would be ready to give up his chimney for the chance of playing his own architect.—[Elizabeth Robbins Pennell, in Harper's Bazar.]

FROM the result of my observations it is my judgment that the discontinuance of the liquor feature of the canteen has been beneficial to the army. Now that the temptation has been removed from the immediate presence of the young men of the army, they are less likely to indulge in the use of liquor.—[General Miles's Report.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

MINISTER BOWEN and the representatives of the three blockading Powers have signed the protocols referring the question of preferential treatment for their claims to The Hague Tribunal, and also the conventions providing for the settlement of the allies' claims by the several commissions which are to meet at Caracas this summer. An important clause in the protocol provides that in case The Hague decides adversely to the blockading Powers' contention for preferential treatment, the manner of payment of the other creditor nations shall be such "that no Power shall obtain preferential treatment."

In the Italian Chamber of Deputies recently an inquiry concerning the present status of the investigation of the lynchings of Italians at Erwin, Miss., in the summer of 1901, elicited the information that Congress had voted $50,000 indemnity for the families of the victims, but that the guilty parties had not been punished by the State government. Concerning this affair Signor Bacelli said: "I can only hope that the great American nation, which in many respects stands at the head of civilization, will understand that lynching is a custom which certainly is no honor to so lofty a civilization, and that it will suppress it."

LORD LANSDOWNE, Foreign Secretary of Great Britain, announced in the House of Lords, on the 6th instant, that the British Government would regard the establishment of a naval base or a fortified fort on the Persian Gulf by any other Power, as a very grave menace to British interests, and would resist such establishment with all the means at its disposal. The motive for this action is the protection of the British sea route to India, and the prevention of the German plan to construct a railroad from Bagdad to some point on the Persian Gulf.

AFFAIRS in Manchuria are still in an unsettled condition. Minister Conger cabled the State Department that the Russians had re-entered Niu Chwang, and then retired. The

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

- 5TH MO. 17.—PHILADELPHIA EVENING Meeting, at Fourth and Green Streets, 7.30 p. m.
- 5TH MO. 17.—CORNWALL, N. Y., FRIENDS' Association, at the home of Nathaniel D. Brown, at 3 p. m.
- 5TH MO. 17.—UNIVERSAL PEACE UNION will commemorate the Third Anniversary of the opening of The Hague Court, in the historic church of the Mennonites, Main and Herman Streets, Germantown, Philadelphia, at 3 p. m. and 8 p. m. Address in the afternoon by Governor Samuel F. Pennypacker; in the evening by Charles Emory Smith. Also several other speakers.
- 5TH MO. 18.—FAIRFAX QUARTERLY Meeting, at Hopewell, Va., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 3 p. m.
- 5TH MO. 20.—PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY Meeting, at Fifteenth and Race Streets, 7.30 p. m.
- 5TH MO. 21.—QUAKERTOWN, PA., Friends' Association, at the home of Hannah M. Penrose.

- 5TH MO. 21.—GREEN STREET MONTHLY Meeting, at Fourth and Green Streets, Philadelphia, at 3 p. m.
- 5TH MO. 22.—DUANESBURG QUARTERLY Meeting, at Chent, N. Y., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 3 p. m.
- 5TH. MO. 23.—STILLWATER HALF Yearly Meeting, at Richland, near Quaker City, Ohio. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 3 p. m.
- 5TH MO. 23.—BLUE RIVER QUARTERLY Meeting, at Blue River, Indiana, 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 2 p. m.
- 5TH MO. 23.—NOTTINGHAM FIRST-DAY School Union, at Penn Hill, at 10 a. m. Topics for discussion, "Suggestions to Young Teachers," "Moral and Practical Results of the First-day Schools," "Duties of the Superintendent."
- 5TH MO. 24.—CONFERENCE UNDER the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor, in the meeting-house at Stanton, Del., at 2.30 p. m. Elizabeth Lloyd will speak on "Equal Rights for Women."
- 5TH MO. 24.—A MEETING AT RADNOR,

Pa., at 3 p. m., appointed by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit the smaller branches.

- 5TH MO. 25.—WARRINGTON QUARTERLY Meeting, at Pipe Creek, Md., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 2 p. m.

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

Russian Foreign Office at St. Petersburg explained that this was merely a movement of troops from Moukden province southward, instead of northward, the departure to be made by sea. To the French Ambassador at St. Petersburg the Russian Foreign Minister Lamsdorff repeated the statement that Russia had given the United States assurance that there would be no interruption of the open door policy in Manchuria.

THE Powers have notified Bulgaria that she must not attempt the acquisition of any part of Macedonia. On the other hand, the reforms in Macedonia, which were suspended through the outbreak of violence at Salonica, must be carried out. On the 6th instant, the Bulgarian revolutionists attempted to commit at Monastir anarchistic outrages analogous to those perpetrated at Salonica, but were defeated by the imperial authorities and their leader, Dietcheff, was killed. It was Dietcheff who planned the capture of Ellen M. Stone.

NEWS NOTES.

THE Pennsylvania Building at the St. Louis Exposition is to be a reproduction of Independence Hall.

THE National Conference of Charities and Correction was in session the past week at Atlanta, Ga.

KING EDWARD arrived in London from his continental journey on the 5th. He was received with much enthusiasm.

THE Irish Land bill passed its second reading, on the 7th instant, by the very large majority of 417, the vote being 443 to 26.

A FIRE in Ottawa, Ontario, on the 10th instant, destroyed over 300 homes, and caused a loss of $1,000,000. The fire is thought to have been of incendiary origin.

THE National Congress of Mothers, in session at Detroit, has been occupied especially with the subject of child labor in the south and with the relation of the home to the school.

AFTER a term of five years the German Reichstag dissolved on the 30th ult. Great fears are expressed in Berlin of large Socialist gains at the approaching elections for the new Reichstag.

Geo. WILLIAMSON CRAWFORD, of Alabama, a Negro student of law at Yale, won the third prize for debate on the 1st inst. He is the second Negro at Yale to win a student's prize this year.

THE Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company has begun work on a new shaft, near Pottsville, Pa., to tap a coal basin which is estimated to contain one-half the unmined anthracite in the world.

THE 28th annual meeting of the American Academy of Medicine was held in Washington on the 11th and 12th. Among the subjects discussed were the teaching of hygiene in the public schools, and the causes of the bubonic plague.

A DISPATCH from Manila reports the capture by an American force, on the island of Mindanao, of ten forts; 115 Moros were killed, 13 wounded and 60 were made prisoners, including the Sultan. The Americans lost two killed and seven wounded.

THE Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has sustained the decision refusing to grant a charter to the "First Church of Christ, Scientist," on the ground that the teachings of the church are in conflict with the laws for the prevention of the spread of contagious diseases.

It is proposed by one of their descendants, Fred F. Ayer, of New York, to erect in Salem, Mass., a monument to Lawrence and Cassandra Southwick, Friends who settled in Salem about 1630 and were martyrs to the cause of religious liberty.

In a dense fog off the Virginia coast the Old Dominion Line steamer Hamilton, on the 5th instant, struck the Clyde Line steamer Saginaw, bound from Norfolk for Philadelphia. The Saginaw sank within ten minutes. The Hamilton was only slightly damaged. Twenty of the passengers and crew of the Saginaw lost their lives.

SAID a white sister for whom old Aunt Hannah was washing :

"Aunt Hannah, did you know that you have been accused of stealing?"

"Yes, I hear about it," said Aunt Hannah, and went on with her washing. "Well, you won't rest under it, will you?" said the sister.

Aunt Hannah raised herself up from her work, with a broad smile on her face, and, looking up at the white sister, said :

"De Lord knows I ain't stole nuthin', and I knows I ain't, an' life's too short for me to be provin' an' splainin' all de time; so I jest goes on my way rejoicin'." They knows they ain't tellin' the truf, and they'll feel ashamed and quit after awhile. If I can please the Lord, dat is enough for me."—[Gathered.]

GENERAL BOOTH recently told an anecdote which reveals the ruling principle of his work.

A little girl injected this into her bedtime prayer :

"O Lord, don't let the birds get into Robbie's trap. Oh, I know they can't! Amen."

"Dolly" said her mother, "what makes you so certain?"

"Cause I smashed the trap."

"We pray for souls threatened by the trap of Satan," said the general, "but we smash the traps."—[Baptist Commonwealth.]

"PA," said little Georgie, "why did Diogenes live in a tub?" "Oh," replied his father, as he fished a crumpled piece of drawn work out from under himself, "I suppose that was the only place he could find where they didn't have sofa pillows and these tidies all over everything."—[Chicago Times-Herald.]

OH, trouble is a thing which many people borrow,
And the flight of time gives other folks some sorrow.

And it is a fact, my dear,
Which to me seems very clear,
That to-day will be yesterday, to-morrow.
—[St. Nicholas.]

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
REYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR } Cincinnati.
ECKSTEIN }
ATLANTIC }
BRADLEY } New York.
BROOKLYN }
JEWETT }
ULSTER }
UNION }
SOUTHERN } Chicago.
SHIPMAN }
COLLIER }
MISSOURI } St. Louis.
RED SEAL }
SOUTHERN }
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

DON'T be confused by all this talk about White Lead chalking, for this is one of its most desirable properties. Pure White Lead properly applied will not crack, peel or scale, but when it fails will do so gradually from outside wear.

It will protect whatever it is applied to as long as a vestige of the paint remains, and does not require to be scraped or burned off when repainting becomes necessary.

If interested in paint or painting, address

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

Who makes the lamp chimneys?

Macbeth makes the good ones.

His name on every one.

If you'll send your address, I'll send you the Index to Lamps and their Chimneys, to tell you what number to get for your lamp.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

It Pays Educators to Educate.

The Peoples University of Olympia, Washington, makes it pay to be in the educational business. The capital stock of that institution already pays a four per cent. dividend, and will eventually pay from six to ten per cent. The security is first-class—absolutely safe—and the enterprise highly commendable. Capital stock $1,000,000, divided into shares of $1.00. We will sell in blocks of not less than $50. The fact is we offer you a better investment than government bonds. Write for particulars, Eastern Office, Room 80, The Ruggery, Columbus, Ohio.

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,
Olympia, Washington.

Endowment file No. 2. Be sure to mention the file number.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hotel 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8:30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $5 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
Phone 1-33-55.

Stint, stint, stint! Save, save, save!

What for?

While you are answering this question, consider whether less saving, united with a policy of life insurance, will be more conducive to the happiness of your family and yourself. Consult the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

MY SKIES ARE SELDOM GRAY.

I've had my share
Of carking care,
Of fickle fortune's frowns;
I've braved and borne
The cold world's scorn
And had my ups and downs.
Yet I can still
A ditty trill

Or sing a roundelay;
For though I hold
Nor lands nor gold,
My skies are seldom gray!

The stress and strife
Of toilsome life
Have taught me one glad truth.
Not he who must
Crawl in the dust,

But he who will—forsooth!
And so I sing
My song, and fling
My load of care away;

For though I hold
Nor lands nor gold,
My skies are seldom gray!
I would not give
A fig to live
Divorced from fret and moil;

The bread I eat
Is rendered sweet
Because of daily toil.
And so I still
A ditty trill—

A blithesome roundelay:
For though I hold
Nor lands nor gold—
My skies are seldom gray!

—[James Ball Naylor, in National Magazine.]

It might be thought that the day had gone by when to the English mind America appeared as a land of waste places and wilderness unredeemed. But a story which a recent visitor to England brings home shows that there are still honest
Britons who do not understand our ways of life.

At a dinner-table the American happened to remark that there was a curfew in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and some other towns.

"A curfew?" asked an English lady.
"Yes, a bell that rings at half-past nine to call the children off the street."

"Oh! I see," said the English lady, affably; "I suppose after dark there is danger from wolves."—[Youth's Companion.]

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE
GRADE OF ICE
CREAM AND
CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT
MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP
CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE
AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS
SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
5 PHONES.

Illinois-On-The-Strand

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Ocean view unexcelled Appointments first-class
Special Spring rates
Bell Phone, No. 26 WALTON & FRENCH

THE DRIFTWOOD

OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Special Spring Rates. For particulars address
SARAH J. FAXSON and SISTERS

NEW ARBORTON

Kept by Friends.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.

Half block from the sea. For particulars address
HANNAH BORTON,
Hot salt baths. 7 Sea View Ave., Ocean Grove, N. J.

The Pennhurst,

Second House
from Beach
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,

1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts.
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like
and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL

Manufacturing Optician

118 S. 15th St. (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

ELIZABETH LLOYD'S

"SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY"
placed in every school, would teach the beauty of Peace.
Send twenty cents for one copy of the music and twenty-five copies of the words, to

ARABELLA CARTER,
Universal Peace Union, 1305 Arch St., Phila.

Cold Storage of Furs

Our Cold-storage plant is one of the largest and probably the best equipped in the United States; we believe that it is the only one in Philadelphia.

We still have room for some additional garments, but the vaults are filling fast. Send postal and we will call; or call up our fur department on either phone.

Furs kept in cold air (it never gets above freezing in our vaults) regain much of their original lustre; it is like going back to their natural atmosphere—an improvement over the old tar-paper and moth-ball methods.

We will do needed repairing and alteration on most favorable terms; should be done before storing the garments.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

United Security Life Insurance and Trust Company OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Capital, $1,000,000
Surplus and undivided profits, 500,000

Banking and General Trust Co. Business

OFFICERS:
WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS, Assistant Treasurer.
HENRY LABARRE JAYNE, Counsel.
FRANCIS H. HEMPERLY, Actuary.
T. HEWSON BRADFORD, M.D., Medical Director.

DIRECTORS:
William M. Coates, William H. Lucas,
Caleb J. Milne, William R. Verer,
V. C. Sweetman, J. W. Hampton, Jr.,
Charles Porter, Orlando Creste,
Robert Dornau, I. Layton Register,
John G. Carruth, Esmonde H. Ausin,
William Eault, Silas W. Pettit,
Joel Cook.

J. T. JACKSON & CO. Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)
Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address
A. L. Diamant & Co.,
1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son, Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.
902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILADA.

MILTON PHILLIPS Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street
I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

LIZZIE J. LAMBERT,
PLAIN AND FANCY MILLINERY,
Successor to
E. SHOEMAHER. 1020 Green St.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St.
PLAIN MILLINERY,
Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street
From 736 Spring Garden Street.

LANSDOWNE AND DARBY SAVING FUND AND TRUST COMPANY

LANSDOWNE, PA. Full Paid Capital, $125,000.00. 2 per cent. paid on Check Deposits. 3 per cent. paid on Savings Deposits.

GEORGE FOSTER WHITE, President, Treasurer and Trust Officer; W. ANNE VERLENDEN, Vice-President; MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary; LEWIS LAWRENCE, Cashier; THOMAS T. BUNTING, Second Vice-President; Acts as Executor, Administrator, Trustee, Guardian of a Minor. With full power of charge where this Company is named as Executor, Aims at perfect service and perfect Security. Either the Franklin National Bank or the Girard National Bank will receive deposits for this company.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.
CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES,
ASSIGNOR, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. REGISTER AND TRANSFER AGENT.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON I. INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

GETTYSBURG AND WASHINGTON. PERSONALLY-CONDUCTED TOUR VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The battlefield of Gettysburg, and the National Capital with all the glory of its Spring freshness, are attractions so alluring that few would feel like refusing to visit them. It is to place these two attractions within easy reach of every one that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company announces a tour over the interesting battlefield, through the picturesque valleys of Maryland, and an entertaining stay at Washington.

The tour will leave New York 8.00 a.m., and Philadelphia 12.20 p.m., Saturday, May 23d, in charge of one of the Company's tourist agents, and will cover a period of six days. An experienced chaperon, whose special charge will be unescorted ladies, will accompany the party throughout. Round-trip tickets, covering transportation, carriage drives, and hotel accommodations, will be sold at the extremely low rate of $22 from New York, $21 from Trenton, $19 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents; Tourist Agent, 263 Fifth Avenue New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or address George W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

SAID little Johnny Green,
"This is the funniest world I've ever seen:

A fellow is sent out of bed
When he hasn't a bit of sleep in his head,
And he's hustled out of it, don't you see,
When he's just as sleepy as he can be."
--[Boston Transcript.]

A LITTLE bird sat on a telegraph wire,
And said to his mates, "I declare,
If wireless telegraphy comes into vogue
We'll all have to sit on the air."
[St. Nicholas.]

LITTLE Tom was looking at a drop of water through the microscope. Here and there and everywhere were darting animalcula.

"Now I know," said he, "what sings when the kettle boils. It's these little bugs."
--[New York Times.]

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co. STEAMSHIP LINES FROM PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.
O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue. Uptown offices, 808 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

Home Kitchen Outfits and all House Furnishing Goods

J. FRANKLIN MILLER,
1626 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis.
Ringe & Ellis, REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents, Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected. Keystone and Bell Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. E. COCK,
Telephones. Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.
CONSHOCKEN DAIRIES. Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
JOSEPH L. JONES

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE!
Sifts the flour and mixes to 1 lb. of best bread in 3 minutes. Solid subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (ORUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 52nd & Media Sts., Philadelphia

These trade-mark crisp-crumb lines on every package.
GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
Unlike all other flours. Ask Grocers. For book or sample write Farwell & Rhines, Waterbury, N. Y., U.S.A.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, FIFTH MONTH 23, 1903.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
Friends' Intelligencer Association,
 (LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers.

Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
 N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
 * * * TELEPHONE NO. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXI.	321
POETRY: THE RHODORA.	321
PHILADELPHIA YEARLY MEETING.	321
WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson.—Continued.	322
TWO BOOKS BY DR. BARTON.	324
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON: Persecution.	325
EDITORIAL:
Emerson, the Man.	326
Notes.	326
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS.	327
SOCIETY NOTES.	327
NEBRASKA HALF-YEARLY MEETING.	327
ANNUAL REPORT OF FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION.	329
PHILADELPHIA YEARLY MEETING REPORTS:
First-day Schools.	330
George School.	330
EVENING MEETINGS.	331
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	332
EDUCATIONAL.	332
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	333
POETRY: Ultra; The Meadow Lark; From the Holy Scriptures of the Sikhs.	333
METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR FOURTH MONTH 1903.	334
MISCELLANY: The Boyhood of Emerson; Without Wine Sauce; Size of Philadelphia.	334
CURRENT EVENTS.	335
NEWS NOTES.	336
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	335

New York Yearly Meeting.

Friends expecting to attend the approaching Yearly Meeting in New York and desiring lodging accommodations at the meeting-house or elsewhere are requested to apply at once to JENNIE C. KITCHIN,
 55 Park St., Jersey City, N. J.

WANTED.—A YOUNG FRIEND TO HELP care for three small children. Friends' family, out of city. Address W. M., 2 East 14th St., N. Y. City.

WANTED.—YOUNG OR MIDDLE-AGED woman to assist with general house-work in small family. No. 39, this Office.

WANTED.—DESIRABLE UNFURNISHED room with board. Two women Friends—City. Address No. 90, this Office.

WANTED.—RELIABLE HARNESS MAKER. Permanent situation to a suitable person. Address T. Ellwood King & Co., 3533 Lancaster Ave., Philadelphia.

WANTED.—BY YOUNG WOMAN, A POSITION as assistant at store, or mother's helper. Reference given. Address Box 415, Salem, New Jersey.

WANTED.—BY J. WILHELM WINTROBEE of England, at a fair price or loan (preferably the former), for the purpose of historical studies, complete sets from the commencement of FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER; the United Friend, Extracts of Yearly Meeting minutes, conference reports and all books, memoirs, journals, epistles, pamphlets, tracts, etc. bearing upon Friends' history,—particularly in the nineteenth century and in relation to the separation. All historical material whether published or unpublished will be of value. Will communicate with Allen C. Thomas, Haverford, Pa.

WANTED.—YOUNG WOMEN TO ENTER the Training School for Nurses of West Philadelphia Hospital for Women. Apply to M. E. Kelsey, Superintendent, 4035 Fairhill Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—BOARDERS FOR THE SUMMER in country. Friends' Family. Modern conveniences. Apply early. Box 123, Woodstown, N. J.

THERE ARE VACANCIES FOR EDUCATED refined young women who wish to study nursing. Address chief nurse, Hospital of Women's Homeopathic Association, 20th St. and Susquehanna Ave., Phila., Pa.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1827 1st St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

TORRENT.—COUNTRY HOME, THOROUGHLY furnished, for the summer. Large house and grounds, with fine old shade trees; ample porches. Spring water. Two bath rooms. Gas. Carriage house, and stable room for four horses. 15 minutes by train from city. $200 per month. Address 504 S. Lansdowne Ave., Lansdowne, Pa.

DESIRABLE THIRD-STORY FRONT ROOM suitable for two young men, without board, in Friends' family. 1702 N. 13th Street, Phila.

COUNTRY HOME TO RENT FOR THE SUMMER. About thirty miles from Philadelphia, in Chester county. House large and airy, very light and comfortably furnished, ceilings high; fourteen rooms and bath, with modern conveniences. Electric lighting and telephone. Large lawn with ample shade and roomy verandas. Stable with use of horse, carriage and cow. Man employed on place whose services may be secured if desired. Large garden planned. Trolley within three minutes walk, ten minutes from station. Terms $200.00 per month. Address "Country," care of this Office.

FOR RENT.—"SUNSET" COTTAGE AT BUCK Hill Falls, near Ina. Four bed-rooms, hot-water heater. For rent for the summer, $50. Apply 1024 Race St.

HELEN G. BORTON WHO IS A STUDENT IN Emerson College, Boston, is prepared to give "The Lost Word," by Henry van Dyke as an evening's program for Young Friends' Associations and other meetings. After Fifth month 8th for particulars address Helen G. Borton, Woodstown, N. J.

WE LOOK AHEAD.

See future orders from customers we satisfy. So even the most trivial order executed with a view to what you and your friends may think of us after it's done. Does it make us careful? Rather.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.
 MAKERS OF THE
 BESTER KIND OF PRINTING
 1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

O sacred flowers of faith and hope,
 As sweetly now as then
 Ye bloom on many a birchen slope,
 In many a pine-dark gleam.

—Whittier.

THE improvements under way and now nearly completed at Buck Hill Falls, made necessary by the growth of the settlement and the demand for accommodations at the Inn, will cost approximately $16,000.00. To meet these obligations the Treasurer would like to dispose of 100 shares of treasury stock within the next thirty days.

The par value of stock in the Buck Hill Falls Company is $100, and for the present stock will be sold at this price, i. e., $100 per share. There are now over 200 stockholders in the Company, whose holdings range from 1 to 150 shares each. The average is about five shares per person.

During the past two years the Company accumulated a surplus of $600.84. It is the intention of the management to pay dividends just as soon as it can conveniently be done. With the improvements contemplated we expect to considerably increase our earning capacity.

Many friends have spoken of their interest in the enterprise and of their intention of investing in its stock at some future time. Their co-operation at this time would greatly assist the management.

We, of course, would have no difficulty in borrowing the sum necessary to be raised, but would prefer not to do it and will not have to do it if, as mentioned above, all those who are interested in the enterprise would come forward at this time.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
 1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHARLES F. JENKINS, President
 MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary and Treasurer.

Pocono Third Years Assembly AND Summer Schools

NAOMI PINES, PA.

New Assembly Inn, opens June 1, 1903.

Overlooks lake three miles long, half mile wide. 400 acres of Old Pines. Rowing, sailing, bathing. 2000 feet Elevation. Open fire places and blankets a necessity. Always cool. Walk to Sandusky. Shady walks. Billie conference July 27th. Summer schools July 27th to August 15th. WAS at twelve, including President ISAAC S. J. and the ES. JOSEPH WALTON, etc.

New Audit ^{settled} and Lecture Hall in the Pines.

Write L. H. BEDELL, Manager,
 Reasonable Terms. Naomi Pines, Pa.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
 ARCHITECTS
 Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia: furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.
Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jenkintown, Penna., in miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Or,
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR
BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction fit for business or to enter college. Terms are moderate by reason of endowment. For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, E. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class education.

For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Friday, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 340 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

AQUILA J. ¹⁰⁴⁻¹¹⁷¹¹¹

Dealer in Choice ^{side, below} Coal.

1827 North 10th Street, NERY ^{Philadelphia}

Garden ^{Street.}

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

THE OVERSIGHT OF EXPERTS

In the printing business there are many vexatious details, the mastery of which need experienced oversight to produce satisfactory results. The training of a quarter century has taught us many things which we employ for our patrons' advantage. Perhaps you have a catalogue, advertisement, or circular which needs just such care as we can give it to realize your idea. Bring it to us. The equipment of a large plant is employed for your benefit.

FERRIS & LEACH, PRINTERS, 29-31 NORTH SEVENTH STREET

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
679 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
NO. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
663 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
{ Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
395 SWADE STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.

Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Thompson Sheds, 2212 Wallace Street,
Charles W. Richards, 1922 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa.
Phone 3-54-78 D Filbert.

CHARLES BURTON,

Practical House and Sign Painter,
Office, 507 N. Thirteenth Street, } Philadelphia, Pa.
Residence, 1714 Wondstock Street, }

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)

REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

LIZZIE J. LAMBERT,

PLAIN AND FANCY MILLINERY,
Successor to
E. SHOEMAKER. 1020 Green St.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $3.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Established 1831 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEORGE C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1377 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St.
PLAIN MILLINERY,
Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street
From 726 Spring Garden Street.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By WILLIAM EDWARD TURNER, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet, 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope), 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet, 27 pages. B Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents, 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet, 1 page. B A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet, 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

B All the above will be sent by mail-at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Pleading of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12. The reading of which is a spiritual feast.—FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.11. The Love of a Sufferer. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12. The Doubt-brothers. By Joseph Elkinton. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among their last summer. Illustrated, $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTH MONTH 23, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 21.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903. XXI.

It is not the condition which makes miserable, but the want of God in the condition.

ISAAC PENINGTON.

THE RHODORA :

ON BEING ASKED, WHENCE IS THE FLOWER ?

IN May, when sea-winds pierced our solitudes,
I found the fresh Rhodora in the woods,
Spreading its leafless blooms in a damp nook,
To please the desert and the sluggish brook.
The purple petals, fallen in the pool,
Made the black water with their beauty gay ;
Here might the red-bird come his plumes to cool,
And court the flower that cheapens his array.

Rhodora ! if the sages ask thee why
This charm is wasted on the earth and sky,
Tell them, dear, that if eyes were made for seeing,
Then Beauty is its own excuse for being :
Why thou wert there, O rival of the rose !
I never thought to ask, I never knew :
But, in my simple ignorance, suppose
The self-same Power that brought me there brought you.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

PHILADELPHIA YEARLY MEETING.

THE business sessions of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting began at 10 a. m. on Second-day, Fifth month 11th. The attendance during the week was large. In the men's meeting after prayer by Allen Flitcraft the reports of the quarterly meetings were read ; 104 of the 117 representatives were present during the day.

A feeling of sadness pervaded the meeting because Howard M. Jenkins and Clement M. Biddle were missed from their accustomed seats. Several spoke feelingly of the loss sustained and William W. Birdsell, said :

" They were both Friends, not only by inheritance but by deep and thorough conviction. They were Friends in a far deeper sense than many of us, who, because our fathers were Friends, attend meeting in a formal and perfunctory manner. Useful in their day and generation to a very unusual degree, their absence is a real loss to our Society and to the community, and we should turn our thought to a contemplation of their noble examples."

Through his participation in the Parliament of Religions ten years ago Howard M. Jenkins did much to create a renewed interest in the principles of the Society of Friends, an interest that is continuing to grow among all Christian people.

Reference was also made to his efforts to bring the different branches of the Society into closer relations.

Henry W. Wilbur hoped there would be inspiration enough in the examples set by the two departed ones to arouse many others, who, perhaps, were not doing their parts, so that the real activities of the Society, the burden of the work, would not fall upon a few.

In addition to the minutes read in the meeting of ministers and elders, a minute was read for R. Barclay Spicer, a member of Short Creek Monthly Meeting, Emerson, Ohio. A cordial welcome was extended to all visiting Friends.

Interesting epistles were read from Genesee, Indiana, Illinois and New York Yearly Meetings, and a committee was appointed to prepare, jointly with women Friends, an epistle to the other yearly meetings.

At the opening of the afternoon session Isaac H. Hillborn was appointed clerk and Charles F. Jenkins and William T. Hilliard assistant clerks for the ensuing year.

The report of the Joint Committee of the Several Yearly Meetings for Work Among Isolated Members was felt to be encouraging, and Philadelphia's section of this committee was continued.

The report of the Committee on Philanthropic Labor was read, showing much active work. This will be printed in next week's issue.

Attention being drawn to faithful Friends who were not able to be present because of their bodily infirmities, a minute of sympathy was directed to be prepared.

In the women's meeting 95 of the 110 representatives were present. When the minutes for visiting Friends were read Margaretta Walton and others expressed their thankfulness that so many from other meetings, both with and without minutes, had come to give strength by their presence and words of counsel.

The epistles from all the other yearly meetings were read. That from Ohio was particularly interesting because the Friends there had co-operated with the Anti-Saloon League to secure the passage of the Beal Local Option bill, which had resulted in closing the saloons in seventy-six towns and cities.

Matilda E. Janney spoke of the great change in the contents of the epistles ^{light} was ^{settling} the past forty years ; to-day every one ^{of the} efforts made to advance temperance, purity, ^{settling} justice to Indians and negroes, equal rights for women and other reform work.

Sarah Griscom was appointed clerk for the ensuing year, Matilda Garrigues assistant clerk and Mary H. Whitson reader to assist the clerks.

THIRD-DAY, FIFTH MONTH 12TH.

In the men's meeting the remaining epistles were read. The report of the Committee on George School was approved and the committee authorized to erect the new dormitory and make the other proposed improvements. (See page 330.)

The Representative Committee reported that the property of Philadelphia Young Friends' Association had been formally transferred to the trustees of the yearly meeting, with the understanding that the association is still to have the control and management of the property and pay all expenses connected therewith. This committee also reported that $2,808.14 of the income of the Jeanes Meeting House Fund had been appropriated during the year toward the erection and repair of meeting houses, and that Isaac H. Hillborn's "Principles of the Society of Friends" would be printed and 2,500 copies of Howard M. Jenkins's "Religious Views of the Society of Friends" purchased, both for free distribution. Feeling allusion was made to the loss sustained by the committee in the death of its assistant clerk, Anna J. Williams.

The report of the trustees of the yearly meeting showed that the various gifts and legacies entrusted to them, amounting to more than $1,000,000, had been wisely administered. The details will be published in the Extracts. The only change made in the trustees was the substitution of Israel Hallowell's name for Franklin W. Hallowell's.

The committee in charge of the Joseph Jeanes Fund reported that it had given $10,850.87 (a portion of which was unexpended income of the preceding year) to the Friends' Boarding Homes under the care of the quarterly meetings, and that these homes had been enjoyed by 84 permanent and 20 transient boarders.

The Committee on Education reported that it had expended $9,548.42 of the income of the Samuel Jeanes Fund, and $1,925.64 from the yearly meeting treasury. This had been used to pay the salary of the superintendent of Friends' schools, to aid needy schools, to supply reference books and increase school libraries and to send out lecturers and hold educational conferences; also to extend the circulation of FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER and "Scattered Seeds." Several Friends spoke highly of the faithful work of the superintendent, Louis B. Ambler.

The report of the Committee on First-day Schools (see p. 329) was followed by much expression concerning the value of this branch of our work. Isaac H. Hillborn said he believed the First-day School to be the best means of spreading Friends' principles and testimonies. Toward the close of the session John J. Cornell spoke to the members of little meetings, urging them not to be discouraged because of small numbers and apparent inactivity, but to be hopeful and cheerful that the NERY realize the benefit to be gotten from the live "Garden" meeting.

In the women's meeting the report of the correspondent for isolated members was read; in this it was stated that the Friends' meeting recently held in Pittsburg, by appointment of Joel Borton, was the direct outgrowth of the epistles sent by the yearly meeting to its members in that city and vicinity. A committee was appointed to act jointly with men Friends in the preparation of an epistle to be sent this year, and also to prepare a message of sympathy to be sent to those who had been kept from the meeting by physical disabilities.

In connection with the report of George School the clerk made a minute expressing the meeting's appreciation of the generosity of the Friend who had made himself responsible for $35,000 toward the erection of a new dormitory. The meeting united with the appointment of the following Friends to serve on the Committee on George School for four years: Anna T. Cernea, S. Robinson Coale, Charles Saunders, Robert Kenderdine, Mary H. Atkinson, Lucy Biddle Lewis, Mark Penn Cooper, Robert L. Pyle, Laura H. Satterthwaite, Morris Cheyney and Emma W. Peaslee; and also with the appointment of William C. Parry in place of Rebecca W. Engle, deceased, though much regret was expressed that a woman had not been selected to fill this vacancy. Afterwards William C. Parry was excused at his own request, as he felt that he would not be able to attend the meetings of the committee.

At the opening of the afternoon session Robert Hatton visited the meeting in gospel love.

FOURTH-DAY, FIFTH MONTH 13TH.

At the opening of the session Edward H. Magill spoke of the importance of united action on the part of Christian churches to suppress the liquor traffic, and proposed that the other religious denominations of Philadelphia be invited to join with Friends in a conference on this subject some time during the week of the next yearly meeting. There was general unity with this proposition, and it was referred to the Philanthropic Committee for its consideration and action.

(Continued on page 328.)

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY. III.

JOHN JACKSON.

(Continued from last week.)

The former pupils of the Sharon School have very vivid recollections of Aunt Rachel's practical talks upon various subjects. One remembers that they were cautioned never to leave pins in the clothing which went to the wash, and that they were fined one cent for every pin that was overlooked. Another says that sometimes Aunt Rachel was prevailed upon to give one of her talks instead of hearing the regular lesson, doubtless to the great delight of any whose lesson was not well prepared. Sometimes, when all were gathered together, she would recite to them classic poetry, giving Collins's "Ode to the Passions," and other selections, with much dramatic ability. Sometimes she would give them advice concerning morals and manners which was more appreciated afterwards than at the time; concerning manners the "Young Ladies' Friend" was her guide, and, as school girls were much the same then as to-day, it is not surprising that her favorite manual became rather a by-word among them.

Jane P. Graham, who was one of the earlier pupils and was afterward at the head of a boarding school herself, thus writes concerning her school life:

"One of the best-preserved memories of my happy Sharon school days is the persistent energy with which 'Aunt Rachel' labored to make us refined and elegant, and the insistence with which some of us resented the suggestion that we were not already so. For, however crude our manners and expressions might be, we were loyal to our home training, and few of us were willing to accept 'The Young Ladies' Friend' as our standard of refinement.

"But we learned by slow degrees that she had at heart only our best interest, and the fulfillment of her own duty, and so, in the end, the seed that she cast upon the stormy waters returned to her in the bloom and fruit of respect and grateful friendship, which endured to the end of her life.

"This culture of which a boarding school so often fails, from this far standpoint, seems to me one most to be desired, as from it grow all beautiful qualities of mind and heart—and so I reverence this teacher of my girlhood, and give to her memory the sympathy which should have been hers in those years so long ago."

Another interesting glimpse of Sharon life is given in a letter by Martha John, of Penrose, Ill., to George S. Truman, First month 12th, 1900:

"I have long had some of John Jackson's writings in my library, yet not until now, in my 69th year, had it occurred to me how young a man he was when he laid down his life—only 45.

"And 'Aunt Rachel!' Her address to the pupils of Sharon school is so familiar! More than we then knew, her school girls imbibed help and strength from her talks—far more than she got credit for in those days. Comparing the opportunities accorded to women now with those times, when R. T. J. had almost to apologize for giving as a study for girls the deep lessons in physiology and hygiene—comparing the then and now, throws light upon her ability and devotedness to a great work."

After the death of Rachel T. Jackson, a little girl who went to Sharon when she was only four years old and remained there several years, wrote as follows to one of her daughters:

"I always hoped to kiss Aunt Rachel once more and thank her for all her kindness to me when I was a little child. Many, many nights I even yet dream I am a child at Sharon, and so happy with all of those that are gone, and others that are no longer any more of the child than myself.

"I still see Sister Mary in the big school room, standing by the desk, teaching us Longfellow's 'Psalm of Life.' How little did I appreciate it then, but in after life, long after I thought I had forgotten it, it came back to me word for word, like a sermon to cheer and help me on."

Lydia H. Price, of West Chester, Pa., in a recent letter to a friend, says: "In looking over old letters I find one of my sister, Philena Heald's, written when at Sharon Boarding School, and I thought some extracts might be suitable for the proposed memorial of dear 'Uncle John.' I have often been asked to contribute, but my memory is poor; I only know that no one ever exerted a greater influence over my life than he. Indeed, it seemed his pupils almost worshiped him. He seemed to me always the same sweet, patient spirit amid trying conditions. I never saw him moved from the balance, always seeming prepared for emergencies. And his ministry moved me as no other ever did—so clear, so spiritual, so in advance of the time in which he lived, yet withal so humble. His deep interest in science, especially his love for astronomy, added lustre to his spiritual powers, increasing his reverence for the creative Power that ruled the universe of worlds."

The letter of her sister, after speaking of the two faithful teachers who taught at Sharon for so many years and did so much for the comfort of the pupils, and also of Aunt Rachel's kindness to her, continues thus:

"And, dear Uncle John! I need not tell thee he occupies a conspicuous corner in all of our hearts. I love him dearly, and now that he seems so feeble I think of him as one who has a very slight hold of existence in this sphere; and, as the tide of his life rolls on, methinks his spirit blends ever more and more with that of divinity. His serene countenance is sometimes radiant with holy joy, and I imagine his real life even now to be more nearly associated with the good and pure who dwell in higher spheres and partake of infinite joys, than with the stern world of matter. Do not wonder, then, with these thoughts in my mind, that the feeling of love and respect I entertain for him almost amounts to reverence, and that in his presence something akin to awe possesses me, as though a being who had won a place in some bright sphere and longed to throw off the mortal coil and let the freed spirit go to join its kindred, were near. They think he is much better than a year ago; as I did not see him then, of course, it seems to me that if he were much worse he could not live. Sometimes he coughs incessantly for several minutes, till he is almost exhausted, and he is often so oppressed that it is with great difficulty that breathing is carried on. And yet he is cheerful, happy, and sometimes full of spirits; never murmurs, but when asked how he is answers invariably, in a happy tone, 'Oh, right smart,' or something similar.

"Is it, indeed, true that, after the long lapse of years, I now tread the paths so familiar to thee? That, in the old school room, where thou didst labor to store thy mind with useful knowledge, I am striving to acquire something also that may prove a blessing in the future, a source of enjoyment, perhaps, when all else may fail? For is it not possible for us, while cultivating the intellect, was we the channel of human sympathy, to develop the gentler and more divine attributes of our settled; thus sowing the seed for true happiness? And doubtless thou hast felt the influence or the effects of the genial atmosphere that surrounded thee in thy Sharon life; or, if not taken cognizance of, like silent, unobtrusive angel visitants that come and go so softly, we, in the busy routine of earth life, scarce know that they have been, yet minister they sweetly to the weary soul, oft bring to the lonely, sorrowing heart, from out their store-house of heaven's best gifts, joy and consolation.

"And to think, in all the interval which has rolled by, those faithful spirits, Sister Jane and Sister Mary, have been constant and untiring in their line of duty as made known to them, and are still day after day pursuing their avocations with apparent interest and spirit.

"Last Seventh-day evening I spent in the cabinet, in company with Samuel Townsend, William H. Johnson, Isaac Tyson and Ann Preston. We had a rich season together. I cannot tell thee how much it was enjoyed. Many topics were discussed. Samuel was very interesting, gifted in intellect and in soul. Cousin Ann had spoken beautifully to us in the school room. First-day morning at Darby Samuel spoke. It was indeed one of the practical, real, substantial sermons, clothed in such beautiful language, while all felt instinctively that the Infinite Mind had imbued him with the true spirit of love, and impressed those great truths on his heart, to scatter among the wayward children who travel life's rough way. Then dear Uncle John arose, and, in his simple, but impressive, manner, spoke thus: 'And hath it ever entered into the heart of man to conceive of the good things which will be given unto us when God is our teacher and eternity the term of our tuition?' Thee, perhaps, can form some idea of the drift of S. T.'s discourse by the manner in which Uncle John continued it, as it were. This, though short, was full of spirit and life. A perfect stillness ensued. I thought all present must feel what a world of beauty and lofty sentiment those few words contained. Sister Jane and I talked about it after we came home, and she said that to her it was instinct with rich truth and beauty."

(To be continued.)

For Friends' Intelligencer.

TWO BOOKS BY DR. BARTON.

Two books by Dr. George A. Barton, of Bryn Mawr College, published within the last year, deserve more than the passing notice they have received from the INTELLIGENCER.

The first of these, "The Roots of Christian Teaching as Found in the Old Testament," will be found of the greatest value in the religious use of the Old Testament. Especially the First-day School teacher will find in it a wealth of helpful suggestion. The need has frequently been felt and commented on, for some means by which the teacher, as he reads the Scriptures, should be led to take a helpful view of what he reads. Dr. Barton has met this need very successfully. As he says in the preface, the purpose of the book is to "show those who would study the Old Testament devotionally, how to 'fasten the mind on those things which should be shaken.'" "The writer would take the reader apart for brief meditations upon the great themes of Christian truth, Christian character, and Christian duty, as these are foreshadowed in the Old Testament."

Many have been perturbed by the suggestions of polytheism in the Old Testament writings, by laws recognizing slavery, by the savage conditions of warfare under supposed divine sanction, and, in general, by the sharp contrast between the "old dispensation" and that inaugurated by the founder of Christianity. In the essays, or rather meditations, before us the beginnings of the higher ideals are noted; we are made to feel the Godward gravitation, the pressure toward righteousness, manifest even in the midst of credulity, passion and violence.

The idea of God's spirituality germinates "in those childish conceptions of deity possessed by nearly all primitive peoples, who believe their god to be the genius, or spirit of a spring, a tree, a rock or other natural object." Later "it was thought that these divine spirits could be persuaded to come and live in objects of the worshiper's selection or even of his manufacture," thus shaking off "the limitations of environment." After a time corrupting practices crept into idol worship and it was prohibited and all sanctuaries except that at Jerusalem were abolished; so that "prayers had to be made directly to the Great Spirit" without idol or altar of sacrifice. Thus were men led to the condition in which they could feel that neither in this mountain nor at Jerusalem but in spirit and in truth must the Father be worshipped.

In such helpful fashion the book deals with problems of sin and suffering, with the Christ and his message, with sacrifice and its meaning. So also he sketches the lessons to be found in the lives of the patriarchs, of the judges, of the prophets. There could hardly be a more unpromising character for purposes of religious teaching than that of Samson whom Professor Toy calls "a moral idiot." Yet we may find in his story "a parable of the way in which the noblest opportunities of birth and the largest endowment of personal power may be prostituted, and how far, accordingly, a life which begins with fairest prospects may end in deepest gloom." It pictures "the dark end which awaits those who devote to selfish ends bright talents and golden opportunities."

Nearly all of the well-known characters of the Old Testament are thus treated in separate chapters, which frequently cover only two or three pages. The essential meaning and lesson of each life is presented with directness and power. Joshua gives "forcible expression to the dignity of simple manhood and the dynamic force of faith and courage." Deborah and Jael suggest "the power to inspire and achieve" which women will bring to the civilization of the future. Other subjects are "Sin as Separation from God," "The Temple of the Heart," "Priesthood," "Satan," "International Peace," "The City of God." Altogether it may be safely said that no more helpful book for directing the devotional use of the Old Testament is to be found among the publications of many years.

The other of Dr. Barton's books, "A Sketch of Semitic Origins," is intended mainly for students, yet parts of it, and especially its conclusions, are of great interest to the general reader. The first chapter is devoted to a discussion of the origin of the Semitic people and their relations with other peoples. An exhaustive review is presented of previous attempts to trace the Semites to their ancestral home. The conclusion is reached that their earliest ancestors, so far as we can find out, lived in the Mediterranean region, in the pre-glacial ages, when Europe and Africa were united in the West, and a Saharan ocean separated the North African countries from those of the South. The geologic changes which ended some 80,000 years ago separated North Africa from Europe. Sometime thereafter an eastward movement took place among the North Africans, which resulted in the settlement of the Nile valley by those who were to be the ancestors of the Egyptians, and also in the establishment of a great section of emigrants in Central Arabia. This settlement continued for a very long period in this environment, taking on so deeply thereby the stamp of their desert surroundings that it has persisted as a race characteristic among all those peoples who have come to be called Semites.

The social and religious conditions of these primitive peoples is presented in much detail, together with the development therefrom in later times of the various customs and usages of Babylonia, Phœnicia, Canaan, Israel, and other peoples related to them. Of special interest to us is the description of the original mother-goddess of the primitive Semites and the attempt to show that all, or nearly all, the deities of Semitic nations are in a sense her direct descendants; that is, they result from the deification, under varying conditions, of her qualities and functions.

Naturally most space is given in this discussion to the origin and developing characteristics of Jahweh, the God of the Hebrews after Moses, who was destined after a long course of evolution to grow into the God of Christendom. Dr. Barton believes Jahweh to have been adopted by the Hebrews from the Sinaïtic tribe of Kenites. A concluding chapter deals with Semitic social and religious influences on the non-Semitic world.

JESSE H. HOLMES.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 20. PERSECUTION.

GOLDEN TEXT.—If this counsel or this work be of men, it will be overthrowed; but if it is of God ye will not be able to overthrow it.—Acts, v., 38, 39.
Before study of Lesson read Acts, v., 17-32; vi., 1-15; vii., 56-60.

The apostles and their followers did not cease to draw crowds together after the arrest of John and Peter. They must obey God rather than man; and they were God-driven to present their message to men. They frequented especially "Solomon's porch"—a covered colonnade on the east side of the temple court. As Jews and Gentiles alike were allowed in this outer court, and as people from all parts of the world thronged here, a great opportunity was thus given them. But the success of their movement carried with it the danger of opposition and persecution. As long as the Christians were an obscure sect, few in numbers and living quietly according to the law, there was no occasion to interfere with them. But when people gathered about them constantly in the court of the Gentiles and in the streets, and when the idea that the Messiah had come and had been crucified by the leaders of the Jews began to find a lodgment in multitudes of minds, the matter took on another aspect. For a time it was the "high priest and those that were with him" (that is, the Sadducees) who led the opposition: "Ye have filled Jerusalem with your teaching, and intend to bring this man's blood upon us." Peter was brought before the council, and some "were minded to slay him." But other counsel prevailed. It is not perhaps a matter for surprise to find one of the Pharisees opposing a plan of the Sadducees; for whatever cause a very noble address from Gamaliel, a noted teacher of the law, led to modification of the proposed sentence. The apostles were beaten and released with the command to keep quiet. The next persecution came from another source. Among the synagogues in Jerusalem was one called the Synagogue of the Freedmen, the membership of which was made up almost wholly of foreigners, especially of Greeks. These were, of course, mainly proselytes—those who had come into Judaism from the outside. It may be remarked that such converts are often more zealous for the faith than are those who are born into it. Among these freedmen one Stephen was converted to Christianity and taught it among his fellow-members. Not being able to controvert his assertions, they brought against him charges of blasphemy based on perversions of his teachings, and he was taken before the high priest for judgment. Had Stephen been more discreet he might doubtless have fared as had Peter and John; but he displayed that grand recklessness which is often characteristic of heroic souls. His oration was a skillful one. The story of their own history had an unflinching interest for all Jews; and such a full outline of their past from a convert could not but be gratifying. But his use of that history was unusual and unforeseen. His conclusion was too true to be denied, yet too severe to be endured: "Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye. Which of the prophets did not your fathers persecute? and they killed them which shewed before of the coming of the Righteous One; of whom ye have now become the betrayers and murderers; ye who received the law as it was ordained by angels, and kept it not." What visions of Amos driven back to the desert, of Elijah persecuted and punished, of Isaiah sawn asunder, of Jeremiah almost starved in his dungeon, of John the Baptist beheaded, of the innocent Jesus crucified, rose up in the minds of the chief priests at this stern indictment! Yet what could they do or say?—was it not all true? But Stephen had a further truth to which he must bear witness right at the close of consequences, and when he proclaimed a vision of Jesus at the right hand of the Father, the charge of blasphemy needed no further settling. Stephen was condemned to death, and the sentence was carried out by stoning, according to the law. A young man, afterward known as Paul of Tarsus, stood by and "was consenting to his death." A general persecution of the Christians followed (Acts viii., 1), which had no other effect than to scatter this teaching far and wide "throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria."

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTH MONTH 23, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

EMERSON, THE MAN.

So much is being written about Emerson as poet, essayist and philosopher, and concerning the influence of his writings upon the religious and intellectual growth of the human race, that there is danger of our losing sight of his unusual sameness as a man. We are in the habit of making allowance for the eccentricities and weaknesses of men of genius. We lament the immoral habits of one writer, but try to forget them in the beauty of his poems; we forgive another for being cross and irritable in his home because he has put so much fire and soul into his writings; and we excuse a third for not providing a maintenance for his family, as we do not expect a man of genius to be practical.

With Emerson there is nothing in his private life to excuse or forgive. In his boyhood it was one of his delights to help his mother in her household duties, and, while yet a college student, he said, "It appears to me the happiest earthly moment my most sanguine hopes can picture, if it should ever arrive, to have a home, comfortable and pleasant, to offer mother." This hope was realized when, a few years later, he took her to live with him in the old manse. A beautiful relationship also existed between himself and his brothers and sisters; in his journal he again and again spoke of his brothers, who died young, as being much more gifted than himself.

His married life seems to have been ideal, and his writings and lectures did not prevent him from being the most delightful of fathers. It was his habit on First-day afternoons to take his children long walks in the woods and study with them the flowers and birds. He was much interested in their schoolmates and had part of the out-of-town pupils at his home. His children made a confidant of him, and he, in turn, trusted them. His theory concerning their training deserves to be written in letters of gold in every home: "We must arm them with as much good sense as we can, and throw them habitually upon themselves for a moral verdict."

As a citizen Emerson conscientiously attended the town meetings, found time to serve as a member of the school committee, gave much thought to the conduct of government, and expressed his convictions by his ballot when election day came. As a man of affairs he managed to provide a comfortable maintenance for his family, with something to spare for his poorer neighbors. He was able to accomplish this because he understood the true meaning of economy, and had learned the philosophy of going without the non-essentials.

With many illustrious men the esteem in which they are held is greater everywhere else than in their own towns; but if one would form a high conception of the man, Emerson, let him go to Concord and hear the testimony of those who still remember him. It is said of many who attended his lectures that they did not pretend to understand what was said, but "they liked to put themselves under the influence of one who had obviously lived the heavenly life from his youth up, and who made them feel for the time as if that were the normal mode of existence." The feeling of his neighbors toward him is fittingly expressed by Hawthorne: "It was good to meet him in the wood-paths, or sometimes in our avenue, with that pure, intellectual gleam diffusing about his presence like the garment of a shining one; and he so quiet, so simple, so without pretension, encountering each man alive as if expecting to receive more than he would impart. . . . It was impossible to dwell in his vicinity without inhaling more or less of the mountain atmosphere of his lofty thought."

No persecutions to which the Jews of Eastern Europe have been subjected have so aroused the protests of their co-religionists as have the recent massacres in Kischeneff, Besarabia. Meetings have been held during the past two weeks in the synagogues of the principal cities of this country to raise funds for the relief of the survivors and to voice the indignation caused by the atrocities. There had been strong anti-Jewish feeling among the populace, and the rioting was precipitated by the mysterious disappearance of a Christian child whom the Jews were accused of having done away with for ritual purpose. The Russian Government cannot be held directly responsible for this outbreak, but the local authorities seem to have been very slow to act.

It is pathetic that this should have happened so soon after the Czar's proclamation of religious toleration. But it is the feeling of level-headed Jewish sympathizers that it is "neither fair nor wise to execrate the government of Russia because of the murderous brutality of a frenzied mob. Russia is not likely to treat with consideration any appeal for justice when it is coupled with denunciation." The thought that comes uppermost in our minds in this connection is of the insane outbreaks of horrible brutality on account of race prejudice in some parts of our own country; and this makes us sympathize the more profoundly with whatever sincere desire there is in Russia to bring about religious liberty.

There seems to be nothing that the United States can do now except to send relief, as is being done; and later if these Jews begin to emigrate to the United States in great numbers, and arriving here succeed in passing the immigration inspectors, yet show that they are ill fitted for the struggle to exist in a strange land, the United States might protest against any treatment of these people which it deemed responsible for the influx of paupers to this country.

OWING to the space occupied by the report of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, and the pressure upon our columns in other ways we are obliged to defer the publication of several valuable contributions, both prose and poetry, and also some reports of meetings and associations.

The article in last week's paper "The Suffrage Association at New Orleans," should have been credited to Robert Tilney. A continuation of his southern trip, describing the charms of New Orleans, will appear next week.

BIRTHS.

JOHNSON.—In West Marlborough, Chester County, Pa., Fourth month 30th, 1903, to Albert Sidney and Tacie Moore Johnson, a daughter, who is named Helen Louise.

PUSEY.—At Avondale, Pa., Fourth month 19th, 1903, to Samuel H. and Mary Wood Pusey, a daughter, who has been named Rebecca Marian.

MARRIAGES.

JOHNSON—LAMB.—At the residence of the bride's parents "Cedarcroft," Baltimore county, Md., on Fifth day evening, the 16th of Fourth month, Howard Cooper Johnson, son of George K. and Sallie K. Johnson, of Philadelphia, and Edith Lamb, daughter of George M. and Anna Roberts Lamb.

DEATHS.

FIELD.—On the 8th of Fifth month, 1903, at his home near Port Chester, N. Y., James Field, aged 80 years.

He was a valued elder and life-long member of Purchase Monthly Meeting.

MARTIN.—At Kennett Square, Pa., on the 10th of Fifth month, 1903, William S. Martin, aged 70 years. Interment at London Grove.

MATTHEWS.—On Second-day, Fifth month 11th, 1903, at the residence of his son-in-law, Granville Matthews, John D. Matthews, in the 84th year of his age. For nearly sixty years a member of Gunpowder Monthly Meeting. His favorite quotation was:

"So live that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan . . .
Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one that wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

PARRY.—On the 9th of Fifth month, at Warminster, Pa., John Parry, son of Oliver and Philena Parry, aged 21 years.

In the springtime of life, when the world seemed bright and full of promise, John Parry was called from the scenes of earth. One day when the flowers were blooming, the air laden with fragrance and all nature astir with life, in the old Bucks county farmhouse where his pure, short life had been spent he quietly passed away. Only three weeks before his death he had acted as pall bearer at the funeral of Charles Webster, a loved friend and school mate, little dreaming that the summons would so soon come for him.

His funeral took place on the 13th of Fifth month, at the Friends' meeting-house at Horsham. It was one of the largest funerals ever held in that quaint old meeting-house and the service was beautiful and impressive. His quiet, manly manner had won for him a legion of friends. Pure in thought and deed, he leaves to his loved ones the memory of his beautiful life.

SWARTZLANDER.—At Yardley, Pa., Fifth month 14th, 1903, Joseph Swartzlander, in his 90th year.

SOCIETY NOTES.

The message of the Lord was sounded among the gathered few at a meeting appointed for Joel Borton on Third-day, the 5th of this month, at 2 p. m., in the Friends' meeting-house, Hoopston, Ill. Being much concerned for the advancement of truth among us and the acceptance of its power and efficacy to win for righteousness in the earth, and especially for the harmonizing of differences of views that necessarily must exist in the home and in the Church, he dwelt upon this at considerable length, portraying conclusively to the mind its effects, earnestly desiring that all might become strengthened against a contentious spirit. When those in this relation are thus directed, harmony and peace will flow around them and they will be united in that love which will prove to be a strength in every time of need. If we were seeking for the truth through the divine channel there would be less looking into men and less heeding of their opinions, but a seeking for Christ, the pure word, the only true Light.

Here closed his labors on the present mission in the West, and with yearning hearts for his welfare we bade him farewell and started him on his way homeward.

CHAS. A. LUKENS.

Joel Borton, with Joshua L. Mills as companion, on his way to attend Nebraska Half Yearly Meeting, spent thirty-six hours in West Liberty, Iowa.

He visited a number of the families belonging to Wap-sinoc Monthly Meeting and residing in the town, and held an appointed meeting the evening of Fourth month 21st, which was quite well attended by Friends and friendly people. The message on "The Essentials of a Religious Life," bore with it the assurance of the reward for work well done. Such visits are greatly appreciated by those who are striving to keep alive the spirit of Quakerism in our western meetings. J.

NEBRASKA HALF-YEARLY MEETING.

THE meeting for ministers and elders convened Seventh-day afternoon, the 25th of Fourth month. The pleasure of thus meeting our Friends was mingled with sadness when we thought of those who were not with us, some of whom had passed into the great beyond, while others lingered very near the border. On the other hand, we felt that we were unusually favored at this time in having with us so many visiting Friends, among whom were Joel Borton, from Woodstown, N. J., Mary G. Smith and Joshua L. Mills, of Illinois, and John Cory, of Iowa. We were greatly encouraged by their words of loving sympathy and wise counsel.

First-day morning was bright and sunny, and the hall in which we gathered was well filled. Isaiah Lightner read a portion of the 11th chapter of Luke, after which the meeting settled into a prayerful silence, which was voiced by an expression of thankfulness for our favorable surroundings, and the privilege of thus assembling with our friends, some of whom had come long distances to mingle with us in the quiet, love and peace that is felt in the presence of the great helpful power, "Our Father."

Joel Borton spoke of the necessity of presenting ourselves to God, there being nothing higher and holier than this presenting everything, mind and body, with the same zeal and earnestness that we use in business life. To be an acceptable offering our minds must be kept clear and in a growing condition. We have no right to wear them out with unnecessary hurry or worry about that over which we have no control. If our feelings are kept in a normal condition, we are stronger to help others. The world today is hungering for love and sympathy.

As long as we live we will have something to overcome. The greater the effort required the greater the development.

Mary G. Smith referred to the law as written by Moses being simply typical of the higher law. The written law alone fails to bring the highest development. It is individual work that saves our lives. It is a great glory to have our heads crowned with this Christ life, this consciousness of right doing. By it we are enabled to lead lives of peace that will in the highest, truest sense help those with whom we come in contact, for "No man liveth to himself alone."

After an enjoyable season of social mingling, as well as physical refreshment, the clerks of the First-day School Association came to the desk. The usual report was read from Genoa School, it being the only one now in session. A program was carried out by the young people, many of whom were not members with us. Their kindly help and interest was much appreciated by all. Our visiting friends also gave us messages of good cheer and caution.

Second-day morning, at the opening of our meeting for business, a prayer went up for guidance and direction, that we might overcome what is selfish in our lives. We were also encouraged to take fresh hope and remain faithful in our work.

The reading of the queries called forth some discussion, which showed the necessity of individual faithfulness to the requirements of the Discipline.

A letter was read from Adaline Garlock, Boise City, Idaho. This dear friend is much missed from our midst, and a deep feeling of sympathy went out to her as she told of the advantages and disadvantages of her far Western home, the never-ending struggle against the saloon, the degrading effects of the Mormon faith and practices, the demoralizing influence exerted by the soldiers of the regular army, whose barracks are located near her home.

Acceptable communications were also received from Edward Coale and from Blue River Quarterly Meeting, which brought out the thought that our faith must be permeated by a cheerful hope. For a faith without hope is like a home without the mother.

A dear Friend, advanced in years but young in spirit, commended the younger as well as the older members for their earnestness in performing the services required at their hands.

As the meeting drew near the close it was felt that new ties of love and sympathy had been formed between our little Western meeting and those in the far East.

The Macedonian cry, "Come over and help us!"

had not been in vain. It had not only been heard, but a way had been provided that it might be answered.

A fervent prayer arose that we might ever be faithful in following the divine leadings in all things, spiritual and temporal; then, after a few moments of living silence, the meeting closed with the words, "May God be with us till we meet again."

KATIE E. SHOTWELL,

LIZZIE LIGHTNER,

Clerks for the day.

PHILADELPHIA YEARLY MEETING.

Concluded from page 322

The first four queries were read and their answers considered. Some mid-week meetings reported an increased attendance since they had been held in the evening. Concerning a free gospel ministry Jesse H. Holmes said: "A far more flagrant and serious violation of our testimony in this respect than listening to a paid minister and attending his church is the obstructive indolence of our own ministers and members. Too often our indolence and failure to speak when we are clearly directed to do so stand in the way of flow of thought in our meetings, which would be for the comfort and strength of those assembled."

In the women's meeting six queries were answered. Several Friends expressed a desire that some monthly meeting would propose the omission from the first query of the words, "and is the behavior of those assembled becoming?" They feel that these are no longer needed.

Dr. Hannah Thompson, of Wilmington, reminded Friends of their belief that all members of the human race are God's children, and pleaded that no child of refinement and good moral character be excluded from Friends' schools on account of color. Ruth Peirce DeCou earnestly seconded this plea.

Abel Mills visited the meeting; he encouraged all to greater faithfulness and urged the importance of teaching children early to seek the Divine guidance.

FIFTH-DAY, FIFTH MONTH 14TH.

Both ends of the meeting-house were filled during the morning meetings for worship. In the Race Street end there were sermons by John J. Cornell, David Newport, Dr. Hannah Thompson, Sarah Hall and Sidney Yarnall, and an earnest prayer by Lydia H. Price. In the Cherry Street meeting the speakers were O. Edward Janney, of Baltimore; Emma Gaskill, of Jenkintown; Ezra Fell, Sarah T. Linvill, Samuel S. Ash and Isaac H. Hillborn.

The afternoon session, in both men's and women's meetings, was devoted to the queries. Among the many helpful thoughts expressed we note two.

William W. Birdsall said that dependent children should be more than "fitted for business"; they should receive such education as would make them good and useful members of the community.

Sarah Griscom said that if preventive care were properly extended by Friends who recognized its need, there would be very few offenses requiring the attention of the meeting.

John J. Cornell visited the women's meeting, bearing a message of glad tidings. He encouraged those whose hearts had been touched and tendered by Divine love to make public acknowledgment, and not hold back through fear of being misunderstood.

SIXTH-DAY, FIFTH MONTH 15TH.

The attendance was noticeably smaller than during the preceding days. The statistical queries were answered.

There are 70 First-day Schools within the limits of the yearly meeting, with 579 officers and teachers, 4,667 pupils and 21,009 volumes in the libraries.

There are 32 day schools under the care of monthly or preparative meetings, taught by 162 teachers, 109 of whom are members, with 2,193 pupils, 443 of whom are members, and 191 have one parent a member.

The total membership of the yearly meeting was reported to be 11,052 of whom 1,716 are minors; this shows a net loss of 218 members during the year; but some of these may have removed to other yearly meetings.

O. Edward Janney said that none need be troubled by the slight decline in numbers, as it is evident that there is more activity in the Society to-day than there has been for years, and that the young people are doing a larger share of the work than ever before.

The report of the treasurer showed a balance on hand of $203.97. Edmund Webster was re-appointed treasurer, and it was directed that $4,500 be raised the ensuing year.

Margaretta Walton visited the men's meeting with a message which encouraged the young, impressed those in the prime of life with a sense of their responsibility and comforted the aged.

The epistles to other yearly meetings and to isolated Friends were read and met with the approval of the meeting.

Farewell words were spoken by John J. Cornell, O. Edward Janney and Abel Mills, and the meeting concluded.

In the women's meeting the balance reported in the treasurer's hands was $705.13, of which about $100 would be needed to pay for the parlor and resting rooms fitted up for visiting Friends during the week. It was decided to appropriate $100 each to the Schofield School, the Laing School and Friends' Neighborhood Guild, Philadelphia.

Words of loving counsel were spoken by Emma Gaskill, Mary Travilla, Margaretta Walton and others. After the clerk read the concluding minute, she uttered the aspiration, "Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name." With this prayer finding a response in all hearts, the meeting came to a close.

The morning meetings for worship in the lecture room of the school building, which preceded the business sessions, were well attended and full of life. Each morning there were brief, but earnest, words of counsel, encouragement and prayer from many Friends, and those who attended came away with the feeling that they had been spiritually refreshed.

ANNUAL REPORT OF FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION.

To the Stockholders :

Thirty years have elapsed since Friends' Book Association was organized under the belief that a pressing need then existed in our Society for such an enterprise. A retrospect of the work of the Association shows that belief to have been well-founded, and though it has not been possible to accomplish all that was hoped for by those who organized the movement, much has been done and still more may be done as means are provided.

For some years past the business of the store has been about self sustaining and no more. The superintendent's report for the fiscal year ending Third month 31st, 1903, shows a slight falling-off in amount of sales and in gross profits, which with an increase in the running expenses make a deficit of $622.11 in the net result of the year's business. Fortunately we have a surplus fund derived from the profits of former years to cover this deficiency, thereby enabling us to leave the capital stock intact.

A selection of books and stationery from our stock was taken to Asbury Park, N. J., during the conference held there in Ninth month last, with very satisfactory results, the sales being greater in amount than had been anticipated, beside proving a great convenience to many of those in attendance. The addresses delivered by John William Graham at the conference have been published in pamphlet form and are now on sale at our store.

During the year the hand of death has removed from us one of our most earnest laborers, Howard M. Jenkins. His intelligent and well directed efforts to increase the usefulness of the Association make his loss the more deeply felt. The vacancy in the Board occasioned by his decease has not been filled.

Signed by direction of the Board,

SAMUEL B. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

Philadelphia, Fifth month 11, 1903.

PHILADELPHIA YEARLY MEETING REPORTS.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE SUBJECT OF FIRST-DAY SCHOOLS.

To the Yearly Meeting :

DEAR FRIENDS:—Though some schools have been greatly affected in attendance the past winter, owing to the number of stormy First-days, yet, so far as we know, they have generally been kept open as usual, and there has been some interchange of visits made, we believe to profit. These visits of the Committee have been cordially received as expression would indicate.

We have not much that is out of our usual order to report, but believe that no ground has been lost. On the other hand, sincere effort has been put forth by earnest workers in the various centers, more or less effectively perhaps, according to the depth of purpose, and of faith in the Spirit of Love which reigns over all.

At the early fall meeting a concern was expressed, into which the Committee thoughtfully entered, on account of the lack of zeal so evident in some places among those who are in sympathy perhaps with the general purpose of the school yet withhold their active participation. The cause, it is feared, is suffering from the need of just such help as these could furnish.

As this subject came before us we found that in many places this condition exists. So general was the sympathy with the concern that a committee was appointed to prepare a circular to be sent to all of the unions, and by them, if thought best, to be forwarded to the Superintendents. Here it was hoped that kindly effort would be made to reach those especially who are sufficiently interested to remain to the school.

The paper set forth that the schools are here as an opportunity with such a variety of work that the diversity of gifts among us could find an opening for their expression and enlargement, while adding to the strength and effectiveness of the service.

If we have thus thrown out but a single thought that will awaken the pure mind we shall feel that the labor is recompensed. For while reports from the Visiting Committee come in from some quarters laden with encouragement, telling of earnestness and loyalty, with harmony and good feeling evident in a large degree, yet we can still hope for the awakening of a number whose spiritual and mental gifts could be used in increasing the usefulness of the schools, and through them, lead by natural growth to the fulfillment of our hopes.

Many of the dear young people of our Society who have been sharers of the best that the First-day School has to give are already contributing of their strength in return; yet to those who are not we appeal to consider well whether they have not something of value to pass along to those who are succeeding them.

The valuable lessons received at Asbury Park are mentioned in some reports as being an inspiration. One of these says: "We trust some of the good seed sown broadcast at the late Conference may have fallen in good ground with us and will continue to bring forth much fruit, but such plants need constant care and culture, and we must give our share of labor and attention.

Temperance teaching, as well as the distribution of temperance literature, is reported in some sections, and we trust is not overlooked anywhere.

It is indicated by reports that life is stirring within our borders, not alone in those schools in which location and other conditions invite and favor success, but we are gratified that the precious life is at work where numbers are small, and that the bright star of hope shines for them as for others.

From one of these smaller schools we learn that it is wide-awake and conscious that material for valuable lessons is to be found on every hand.

When word comes as it does from others that those who attend meeting nearly all remain and take part in the exercises, we rejoice and are glad, yet it is earnestly to be desired that this might be truly said of a larger number of the schools.

The amount expended by the Committee in the service has been fifty-one and 4-100 dollars ($51.04).

Signed on behalf of the Committee.

MARY McALLISTER,
ALFRED W. WRIGHT, Clerks.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON GEORGE SCHOOL.

To the Yearly Meeting:

The consideration of this report revives with much force the solemn sense of our great loss by the death of Howard M. Jenkins. He was a member of the first committee appointed by the Yearly Meeting for the administration of the John M. George trust; took an active part in the organization of the school and continued deeply concerned for its usefulness and diligent in the work which its management involves.

We have also lost by death Rebecca W. Engle, a valuable member of the Committee. Her services, especially as a member of the Sub-committee on Admissions, will be much missed.

During the year there have been but very few cases of severe illness, and the general health of the school has been unusually good.

An addition was made last summer to the infirmary. It comprises a small kitchen and a consulting room on the first floor, and two small sunny bed rooms on the second floor. This improvement has been found very useful and satisfactory.

At the suggestion of the teacher of botany, arrangements have been made to plant a collection of about twenty-five varieties of oak trees.

The want of a more suitable place for running any other athletic exercises of the boys has long been felt. Ground is being graded for that purpose. The expense of this work is being met, principally, from funds collected by the students and others.

The class graduated in Sixth month, 1902, consisted of fourteen young men. The number of pupils enrolled during the present year is 205, of whom 163 have been boarders and 42 day scholars, as follows:

Boarders who are members of our Society	127
Boarders who have one parent a member	10
Boarders other than above	26
Day pupils who are members of our Society	18
Day pupils who have one parent a member	3
Day pupils other than above	21

Of the boarders, 70 are girls and 93 are boys, and of the day pupils, 19 are girls and 23 are boys. The average is a little less than sixteen and one-third years.

There are 21 teachers, 17 of whom are members among Friends.

The accounts for the school year ending Eighth month 1st, 1902, show:

Net expenses of the school	$49,864.05
Receipts on account of pupils, etc.	25,054.67

From income of endowment fund $24,809.38

In this statement no receipts or payments on account of the farm, for permanent improvements, nor for furniture, are included.

It includes a charge of $1,646.99 for depreciation of furniture. An analysis of the expenses indicates that they amounted to $304.52 for each boarding pupil, and to $122.93 for each day pupil.

It may be interesting to many members of the Yearly Meeting to know that the net expenses, as above stated, were as follows:

Provisions—about 26 cents per day for each person boarded	$13,634.01
Salaries	18,907.00
Wages, other than laundry wages	3,992.92
Laundry wages	611.00
Laundry supplies	73.68
Fuel	2,396.54
Water	203.70
Gasoline	216.75
Electric lamps	37.74
Freight	223.53
Tableware	116.54
Books and stationery	559.71
Printing and advertising	538.46
Laboratory supplies and apparatus	598.66
Manual training supplies	178.72
Board of pupils outside of school	58.93
Stable	128.40
Care of grounds	385.45
Alterations and repairs	2,925.75
Charge for depreciation of furniture, etc.	1,646.99
Committee expenses	261.33
Miscellaneous	2,168.34

$49,864.05

The amount expended last year on alterations and repairs was unusually large. The average for the last six years is $1,741.84.

The Treasurer estimates that the amount of income of the endowment fund used for the school during the current school year will be about $2,300.00 less than as stated above for last year.

The following is an abstract of the accounts for the year ending with the Third month:

Balance in hand Fourth month 1st, 1902	$6,887.72
Received from the Trustee, income	$22,000.00
Received for tuition, etc., net	26,764.84
Received from farm, sales of produce, etc.	3,268.89
Received contribution—applied on improvement of infirmary	60.35
	52,637.08

$59,524.80

Paid on farm acct.	$3,587.23
Paid on furnishing account	1,132.14
Paid on school account (of this $603.35 was for the improvement of the infirmary)	47,405.79	52,125.16
Balance in hand Fourth month 1st, 1903	$7,399.64
The farm accounts show:
Stock, per inventory, Third month 28th, 1902	$3,938.25
	3,587.23	7,525.48
Stock, per inventory, Third month 27th, 1903	$3,856.75
	3,268.89	7,125.64
Loss	$399.84

As explanatory of the loss on the farm operations, we may say that seven of the best cows were condemned and killed on account of tuberculosis, and thirty-five pigs were lost by hog cholera.

Counting the loss on the cows at $30.00 each, and on the pigs at $12.00 each, makes $630.00.

Harriet W. Paist, by her last will dated the Third-day of June, 1898, bequeathed the sum of $5,000 to her executors, in trust, to pay the net income to a niece during life: and further said, "It is my will that this principal at the time of her death shall be paid to George School, near Newtown, Bucks county, Pa., the interest to be applied annually to the education of female members of our Society of Friends (holding their Yearly Meeting at Fifteenth and Race Streets, Philadelphia), whose limited means would exclude them from enjoying the benefits of this school." She further said "I give and bequeath to George School all the residue and remainder of my estate after the legacies and expenses are paid incident to the settlement thereof, under the same restrictions before named."

The subject being brought to our attention, we adopted the following minute:

"George School, through its General Committee, hereby nominates and appoints the Corporation, 'Trustees of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends,' its trustee to receive from the treasurer of the Yearly Meeting or from the executors of Harriet W. Paist, deceased, or from any other person, the real estate, ground rents, and all sums paid from said estate under the will of said Harriet W. Paist for the benefit or use of George School. And said Corporation is hereby authorized to hold said property under the following trusts: 'To keep the principal of said bequest invested, and collect the interest and income therefrom; and further to pay the funds, principal and income, as the Yearly Meeting shall from time to time direct; such directions being consistent with the terms of the bequest of said Harriet W. Paist.'"

We have been informed by the trustees that, upon the reception of a copy of the above, they adopted a minute as follows:—

"On motion, it was resolved that the communication be received and filed, and the trust therein set forth be accepted by this Corporation, subject to the approval of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends, or of its Representative Committee."

We recommend that, as the will of Harriet W. Paist provides that the income from her bequest shall be used annually, the Yearly Meeting shall give a permanent direction to the trustees that the whole amount of such net income as reported each year shall be included in the payments to the George School Committee for the following year.

In consideration of the concern mentioned in our report last year, plans have been drawn for an additional dormitory and for changes in the main building of the school. Several plans were sketched, considered and rejected. Very general satisfaction is felt with one which has been worked out in detail. The proposed dormitory would have lodging rooms, for, say, sixty-six boys, a study room for boys, parlor for boys, several chambers for guests, rooms for a teacher with a family, rooms for some of the men help, etc. The changes in the main building would result in a greatly-increased capacity in the assembly room, an enlargement of the dining room, additional class rooms, etc. It is planned that the kitchen shall be in a one-story extension north of the main building. These additions will make the total accommodation sufficient for about one hundred boarding pupils of each sex. It is estimated that the proposed dormitory and the addition to and changes in the main building, including provision for lighting and heating and consequent necessary work on the grounds around the buildings, etc., will cost about $60,000.00.

Considerable sums have been offered as contributions toward meeting the cost of the proposed improvements, and a friend has offered to guarantee that if the Yearly Meeting will appropriate $25,000.00, the remainder of the expenditures, not including that for furniture of rooms and school equipment, will be met by contributions. The principal and treasurer of the school seem confident that with the increased capacity of the school, and with ability to do its work more effectively and with less difficulty as to preservation of order, the income of the institution will be increased much more than its expenditure will be.

We recommend that the proposed appropriation be made.

We recommend that, in case the proposal respecting additional buildings be accepted, the Yearly Meeting shall, as money will be needed for furniture, authorize the trustee to pay over during the coming year $28,000.00 of the income of the funds.

If the proposal respecting new buildings shall not be accepted, we propose that the trustee shall be authorized to pay over $23,000.00.

On behalf of the Committee,
WM. P. BANCROFT, Clerk.

Fourth month 24th, 1903.

EVENING MEETINGS.

ALL of the evening meetings held during the week of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting were large and interesting. On Second-day evening at the Conference of Friends' Associations, such live thoughts upon "The Revival of Quakerism" were given by Henry W. Wilbur, George G. Nutt, J. Russell Smith, and a dozen others who participated in the discussion, that it was felt the revival had already begun. We give two seed thoughts that were dropped:

"No society that has a definite purpose and the grit to live up to it can outlive its usefulness."

"The Society of Friends will continue to live because it is the most democratic religious organization in existence."

On Third-day evening J. Eugene Baker presided with ability. Dr. O. Edward Janney portrayed the beauties of a pure life and invited the young men to sign the "white cross pledge." Jesse H. Holmes said he wanted the people who attended temperance meetings simply to be interested or entertained, to go to work and do something. The discussion that followed was unusually animated.

On Fourth-day evening, at the meeting of Philadelphia First-day School Association, the strength given to the meeting by the First-day schools, and the much greater strength that might be given if there were more faithful workers, was shown in a well-written paper by Alexovna M. Rohr, principal of London Grove Friends' School. The practicability of class grading in First-day Schools was discussed by J. Russell Smith and Lucy Biddle.

On Fifth-day evening the new department of philanthropic work, "Equal Rights for Women" attracted the largest evening audience of the week. Susan W. Janney presided and Charlotte Perkins Gilman, of New York, gave an address on "The Duties of To-day." She spoke of important changes for the better that have taken place where women have equal privileges with men, and said that it is the duty of women to participate in the affairs of government. A number of new members were added to the "Friends' Equal Rights Association."

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

LANCASTER, PA.—The Lancaster Friends' Association met at the home of Robert Houston on the afternoon of Fourth month 26th, and a well-attended and interesting meeting was held. After a Bible reading by the president, Clarkson Whitson, Clinton Arnold answered the question, "How did the custom of Friends not removing their hats in meeting and in the presence of ladies originate, and should we adhere to it?" Some discussion took place concerning the question.

Sarah H. Gilbert read a selection from "The Pennsylvania Pilgrim," it being a description of Friends' meeting in Germantown in 1688.

Clarkson Whitson read a paper entitled, "What is the Present Outlook in Respect to the Future of the Society of Friends?"

Ellen Greist read an extract from a sermon on "The Quaker Ministry," given at Asbury Park by John William Graham.

Sentiments were given by some members and after a brief silence meeting adjourned.

LUCY H. ARNOLD, Cor. Sec.

RISING SUN, MD.—West Nottingham Young Friends' Association was opened on the 3d of Fifth month by the reading of a selection entitled "A Tuned Receiver," found in the INTELLIGENCER. This contained much food for thought which was proven by the comments following. At roll call the majority responded with appropriate sentiments.

Edwin Buffington in his fifteen minutes' talk considered "The Development of Society," comparing it to the unfolding or the developments of nature. Back of this development is what we call Life, the same dynamic force or power implanted in the soul of humanity, which is Divine, that is causing the evolution of Society. We are at present passing through a great transition period, in which two modes of thought are uppermost, that which unfolds from within, the other acted upon by something outside of self, necessary to arouse this Divine thought into action. He said that the silence which is customary with Friends is a dead one, unless there is something garnered which will help develop and uplift, a turning within and conversing with the Father in secret.

The remarks by Henry W. Wilbur, on "Little Ways of Bettering our World," at the recent General Conference were reviewed and commented upon. The thought was expressed that the kingdom of happiness, like the kingdom of heaven is within us.

"Little Worries and how to Get Rid of Them" was a subject generally discussed, a remedy for worry was sought after, and it was finally decided, that if we would each consider how small a part of the universe we really are, there would be less room for selfish thought. Worry is of itself wrong. If we accept the little worries which we daily encounter, as blessings, by surmounting them, they will help to strengthen our characters, and through the wisdom of the All Wise Father, we will be led to eventually see that all things happen or work together for our good. We were pleased to have with us as visiting friends Burling Hull and wife of Baltimore, the former adding some words of encouragement. After observing the customary silence the Association closed to meet in one month.

JANETTE REYNOLDS, Cor. Sec.

FLUSHING, LONG ISLAND.—A regular meeting of Friends' Association of New York at Brooklyn was held in Flushing, L. I., by invitation of Friends of that place, Fifth month 10th, 1903.

Answers to the questions put by the committee for the advancement of the work of Friends' Associations were forwarded, as follows:

First Question. What is the present condition of your Association? Is the interest well maintained and the work progressing satisfactorily?

First Answer. Interest is well maintained by a few members and the work done is mostly by these. The average attendance is much smaller than formerly,—say one-third to one-quarter, but lack of attendance is not all due to lack of interest. These conditions of course leave something to be desired.

Second Question. What line of work have you found to be of the greatest interest and value in the past? Have you any suggestions to offer as to other lines of work for the future?

Second Answer. We have studied the books of discipline of the various Yearly Meetings of America and Great Britain, but at present we gain most interest from the reading and discussion of papers on ethical and other subjects prepared by our own members; with a view to promoting truer living and deeper thinking; to stand for Quakerism and to make Quakerism stand for more in the world. We are glad to think that most of us are the better Friends for these frank discussions, and for the social mingling at our meetings. A feeling of brotherhood exists not always easily attained.

Third Question. Would any suggestions in regard to future work which this committee might be able to make be acceptable to your Association?

Third Answer. Any suggestions regarding future work would be welcome.

WALTER HAVILAND, Sec'y.

CORNWALL, N. Y.—The Friends' Association met at the home of Nathaniel D. Brown, First-day afternoon, Fifth month 17th. The following selections were read and discussed: "Ready for Service," by Marianna Seaman, and "Friends as Citizens," by Rowland Cocks. Arrangements were made for a Friends' picnic to be held Sixth month 13th at Plum Point. After a general giving of sentiments the meeting adjourned.

A. M. B., Cor. Sec.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.—The Young Friends' Association held its Fifth month meeting on the Sixth instant. The exercises opened with a reading from the twenty-third chapter of Luke, which tells how talebearing and detraction caused the death of the most blameless one of earth.

It is the custom of the association to have a paper on some important subject, and as far as practicable have the other exercises relate thereto.

After disposing of routine business a very excellent paper on the subject of "Talebearing and Detraction," was read by the president, Cornelia Gavitt, which called forth numerous expressions of approval and a lively discussion of the subject. William Williams contributed a reading from the life of St. Paul, which showed that the life of that most eminent apostle of Christ was barely rescued from the mob that was fired to frenzy by the tongue of a talebearer.

A new feature was introduced at this meeting, a review of the reports of the various associations that have appeared in print within the last month. Even those who had read the reports were entertained and benefited by having the important suggestions and information brought out more pointedly by the synopsis and subsequent discussion. This exercise was generally approved and will be continued.

YARDERY S. BROWN, R. S.

EDUCATIONAL.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

The Joseph Leidy Scientific Society held its last meeting of the year on the 12th. Arthur Collins gave an account of some original work he had done in connection with the sodium spectrum. He also explained the relation between this work and astronomy. Prof. Hoadley gave a short report from the Physics department and Charles Bedell gave an account of work and results he had obtained in experiments to determine the Hysteresis loss in different qualities of steel. The principal topic of the evening was, "A Plea for Plant Preservation;" in presenting this Prof. Price urged that we do all in our power to prevent needless destruction, especially of the rarer species of plants.

Prof. Hayes delivered an Ode at the dedication of the monument to the Delaware County Soldiers and Sailors of the Civil War, at Media, on the 9th instant.

The inter-society debate between Delphic Omicron and Eunomian Sigma was held on the 14th. The question for debate was, Resolved: That the question of negro suffrage should have been left with the individual States, and should not have been determined by an amendment to the constitution of the United States. Louis N. Robinson, Anna L. Curtis and Maurice Hansell, of the Eunomia Sigma team, debated the negative side of the question and won from Aldus Wilbur, Maude E. Rice, and Harold Mowery, the Delphic Omicron representatives.

The musical clubs of the college gave an entertainment in Parrish Hall on the evening of the sixteenth.

The plan of studying the system of education among Friends was continued at the last meeting of the Young Friends' Association. Short sketches of the colleges under the care of Friends were given as follows. Bryn Mawr, Lois Fomance; Swarthmore, Sara E. Wood; Haverford, William E. Hannum. Pres. Swain gave a very interesting talk on the system of education in Indiana. After brief remarks by Dean Bond and E. J. Durnall, the association adjourned until the fall of 1903. P. M. W.

GEORGE SCHOOL NOTES.

On Fourth month 2d, Dr. Holmes, of Swarthmore College, gave a lecture before the Young Friends' Association on "Habits."

After the lecture, a reception was given in the library in honor of George Eves. A few appropriate remarks were made by the chairman of the reception committee, Bertha Pancoast, and then Dr. Holmes, in his usual happy manner, presented the beautiful loving cup to George Eves, who responded with a few well chosen words. Speeches were also made by Dr. Walton, Clara Adams and Prof. Hiatt.

A debate between the third team of the Philomathean Society of the University of Pennsylvania and a George School team, George Eves, Charles Parker and Howard Smith, was held in the Assembly room Fifth month 15th. The question, "Resolved: that the recent movement in the South towards the disfranchisement of the negro is to the interest of those States and to the welfare of the United States," was discussed on the affirmative by George School and on the negative by the University of Pennsylvania. The judges, Edward S. Hutchinson of Newtown and G. W. Moore, Superintendent of the public schools of Chester Co., decided in favor of the negative.

After the debate, the Union and Ciceronian debating societies tendered the visiting team a reception in the library.

The annual Junior Recital was held on the 16th. The two plays, "King Rene's Daughter" and "The Unexpected Guests," were very well presented and showed careful preparation on the part of all who participated.

On Fourth-day, the 15th, ground was broken for the new dormitory for boys, to be erected on the triangle east of the main building, and the work is being pushed forward as rapidly as possible. A. W. L.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The 20th of Fourth month marked the eighty-third mile stone in the life of Francis Asbury Beall, generally known and respected as one of the pioneer citizens of Preble county, Ohio. For over fifty years he has resided on the same farm, within a few miles of where he was born. The family arranged to celebrate the occasion by the coming together of the near relatives of the old couple.

Asbury has but one child, Fannie Vanskiver, who with her husband was among the happy company that gathered around the well-filled tables. One table was given to the four oldest couples there; the combined ages of the four oldest men made 317 years. The table cloth on the old-fashioned six-legged table was almost two hundred years old, being spun of flax and woven by Mary's great-grandmother.

Most of those gathered to celebrate this birthday were descendants of the Browns, who settled in this place early in 1800. There were seven brothers and two sisters, who were Friends, and assisted in keeping the West Field meeting to the present time through their descendants. All left wishing Uncle Asbury many more birthdays. Three states, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, were represented among the guests. R. A. B.

John H. Vail of Quakertown, N. J., and daughter Evangeline (Swarthmore '91) have been spending the winter in California visiting places of interest from San Diego northward, staying for the past few months in the family of Barclay J. Smith, San Francisco. They went late in last month to Lake county for a brief stay, where they camped on the banks of Clear Lake, William Woverton, son of Dr. William and Anna Wilson Woverton, of Vancouver, Wash., who was with them went bathing in the Lake on the 7th instant and was drowned. He was a young man of much promise, an only son in his 28th year. The body was found two days later and taken to the home of his parents for burial. The mother and sister, Florence, had started east on a visit when the news reached their home; they were recalled by wire. Another sister, Mary, lives at Swarthmore, Pa.

Elma M. Preston and traveling companion were present on the 2d instant at the semi-annual meeting of the College Park Association of Friends (Joel Bean's meeting), where they met several members of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, who gave them a kind welcome. On the evening of the 6th they left San Francisco for Yosemite Valley, to return in about ten days.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

ULTRA.

'MIDST the marvels round about thee,—
Floweret blue from earth upspringing,
Feathered songster heavenward winging,
Fulgent stars their harmonies singing,—
Wonder and marvel of all art thou,
O Mind that dwellest in Man!

Empyre widening ever thou seekest,—
Darksome recesses to treasuries molding,
Secrets of forest and field unfolding,
Flashes of lightning fearlessly holding:
Scaler of limitless heights art thou,
O Mind that reignest in Man!

Realms of beauty rare enchant thee,—
Musical murmurs from woodlands blowing,
Silvery ripples to seaward flowing,
Roseate cloudlets radiant glowing:
Circling afar is thy wistful sway,
O Mind that rulest in Man!

Valies there are beyond thy vision,—
Where the dawn her light is spending,
Dissonant chords harmonious blending,
Whither the infinite reaches are trending;
Silence prevaileth and humble art thou,
O Mind that abidest in Man!

ANNA WILDMAN.

THE MEADOW LARK.

A BRAVE little bird that fears not God,
A voice that breaks from the snow-wet clod
With prophecy of sunny sod,
Set thick with wind-waved goldenrod.

From the first bare clod in the raw cold spring,
From the last bare clod, when fall winds sting,
The farmboy hears his brave ^{ring} ring,
And work for the time is a ^{ring} thing.
—^{ems.} Hamlin Garland.

FROM THE HOLY SCRIPTURES OF THE SIKHS.

BE kind! Make this thy mosque,—a fabric vast and fair;
Be true! Make this thy carpet, spread five times for prayer;
Be just! When art thou this, thy lawful meat thou hast;
Be good! In this behold thy God-appointed fast.
Thy cleansing rite a heart that no lustration needs,
Thy rosary a crown of self-forgetful deeds,
—E. Martinengo-Cesaresco.

METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR
FOURTH MONTH, 1903.

Mean barometer,	29.913
Highest barometer during the month, 6th,	30.464
Lowest barometer during the month, 15th,	29.355
Mean temperature,	53.5
Highest temperature during the month, 30th,	90.
Lowest temperature during the month, 5th,	28.
Mean of maximum temperatures,	62.1
Mean of minimum temperatures,	44.9
Greatest daily range of temperature, 4th,	37.
Least daily range of temperature, 13th,	5.
Mean daily range of temperature,	17.2
Mean temperature of the Dew Point,	40.
Mean relative humidity, per cent.,	65.7
Total precipitation, rain, inches,	4.50
Greatest precipitation in any 24 consecutive hours, 1.59 inches of rain, on the 13th and 14th.

Number of days on which .01 inch or more precipitation, 11.

Number of clear days 13, fair days 6, cloudy days 11.

Prevailing direction of the wind from northeast.

Thunder storm on afternoon of the 8th.

Lunar halo on 5th.

SENSIBLE TEMPERATURE DATA.

Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 62.5° on 30th.

Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 28.5° on 5th.

Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 46.1°.

Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 62° on 30th.

Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 29.5° on 4th.

Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 47.4°.

Mean of wet bulb thermometer for this month, 46.7°.

NOTE.—Some snow fell with rain on morning of the 4th. A killing frost, ice, ground frozen on the 5th; heavy white frost on the 6th.—In suburban districts killing frost also occurred on the 10th, and 22d, and light frost on the 27th.

The means of the daily maximum and minimum temperatures, 62.1° and 44.9° respectively, give a monthly mean of 53.5°, which is 0.9° above the normal, and 0.7° above the corresponding month in 1902.

The total amount of precipitation for the month, 4.50 inches, is 1.20 inches more than the normal, and about one inch more than fell during Fourth month, 1902.

JOHN COMLY, Observer.

Centennial Avenue, Philadelphia, Fourth month 30th.

Boyhood of Emerson.

THE following letter, written by Emerson a month before he was ten years old, gives us an interesting glimpse of his boyhood. It is taken from Cabot's "Memoirs of Emerson," published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

BOSTON, April 16, 1813.

DEAR AUNT:—I am much obliged to you for your kind letter. I mean now to give you an account of what I commonly do in one day, if that is what you mean by giving an account of one single day in my life. Friday, 9th, I choose for the day of telling what I did. In the Morning I rose, as I commonly do, about five minutes before six. I then help Wm. in making the fire, after which I set the table for prayers. I then call mamma about quarter after six. We spell as we did before you went away. I confess I often feel an angry passion start in one corner of my heart when one of my brothers gets about me, which I think sometimes they do by unfair means, after we eat our breakfast; then I have from about quarter ^{to} ^{seven} till eight to play or read. I think I am rather inclined to the former. I then go to school, where I hope I can say I study more than I did a little while ago. I am in another book called Virgil, and our class are even with another which came to the Latin School one year before us. After attending this school I go to Mr. Webb's private school, where I write and cipher. I go to this place at eleven and stay till one o'clock. After this, when I come home I eat my dinner, and at two o'clock I resume my studies at the Latin School, where I do the same except in studying grammar. After I come home I do mamma her little errands if she has any; then I bring in my wood to supply the breakfast room. I then have some time to play and eat my supper. After that we say our hymns or chapters, and then we take our turns in reading Rollin, as we did before you went. We retire to bed at different times. I go a little after eight, and retire to my private devotions, and then close my eyes in sleep, and there ends the toils of the day. . . . Give my love to Aunt Haskins and Aunt Ripley, with Robert and Charles and all my cousins, and I hope you will send me an answer at the first opportunity, and believe me, I remain your most dutiful Nephew,

R. WALDO EMERSON.

Without Wine Sauce.

THE following suggestive incident, given in the New York Evening Post, serves to show how much we help or hinder another, quite unconsciously it may be, by our example: A young man sat at a hotel table with a gentleman and lady friend for whom he felt the greatest respect. The waiter said to the gentleman "Will you have pudding with wine sauce?" "Yes," was the answer. The young man's craving for strong drink was aroused at the mention of the wine sauce, and he was also about to reply affirmatively to the waiter's question, when his lady friend quickly said "Pudding without wine sauce, if you please." "Without wine sauce," came the young man's reply.

Afterwards in the parlor he said to her, "I want to thank you for doing me a great favor." She looked astonished. "You do not know what it meant to me when you said at the dinner table, 'Pudding without wine sauce, if you please,'" He then told of his struggle against strong drink, and how near he had come to falling, saved only by her timely example. The uniform example of abstinence from all use of intoxicants on our part can harm no one, and may help many.—[Selected.]

Size of Philadelphia.

SOME idea of the great size of Philadelphia may be gathered from the figures in the department reports just printed. There are in the city 1,147.71 miles of paved streets, beside 412.29 miles of unpaved roads in the suburbs. All but a small percentage of these streets have modern "improved" pavement of asphalt, granite block or brick. The paved surface would make a continuous driveway, 30 feet wide, from here to the Mississippi.

There are, beneath these streets, 951 miles of sewers. They would form a continuous water course as long as the Ohio river.

The streets, with 318 city bridges, are lighted by 9,426 electric arc lights and 33,409 gas and gasoline lamps. One thousand, four hundred and nineteen and six-tenths miles of water pipe convey water to 242,506 premises. Only 11,738 premises are not supplied with city water.

There are more than 800 miles of conduits for electric wires, representing more than 5,000 miles of ducts, and there are still 18,189 miles of electric wires in the air, sustained on 61,981 poles.

There are 435 miles of street railway track, enough to reach from the Delaware to Lake Erie. Yet how few Philadelphians know more of this great city than the little space within which their own daily interests lie.—[Public Ledger.]

WHOEVER thinks nature study a fad of modern times should read ancient history. Nearly three hundred and fifty years before Christ Alexander the Great placed at the disposal of his tutor, Aristotle, the services of one thousand men throughout Asia and Greece, with instructions to collect and report details concerning the life-conditions and habits of fishes, birds, beasts and insects. To this magnificent equipment of assistants Alexander added fifteen thousand dollars in gold for books and laboratory supplies. While praising the modern millionaires who give so generously to biological research, let us not think that interest in natural phenomena began with them.—[Youth's Companion.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

ACCORDING to the latest dispatches the Russian occupation of Manchuria is virtually assured. China has undertaken not to alienate any part of Manchuria to any other Power; also not to alter the present administration of Mongolia; not to open new treaty ports in Manchuria and, lastly, to employ foreigners in the administration of Manchuria. It is also understood that Russia retains the telegraph line from Port Arthur to Mukden, and the customs revenues at Nin Chung are to be paid into the Russo-Chinese Bank. The United States Government has had pledges from Russia that the commercial privileges of this country shall not be curtailed.

SECRETARY CHAMBERLAIN, on the 12th instant, announced to the House of Commons that as a result of the British military operations in the Sokoto and Kano districts, ending in the capture of the Emir of Kano, 100,000 square miles of territory had been added to northern Nigeria and would be administered by the government of that territory. Nigeria is a British-African protectorate on the Niger river, bordering on the French Soudan at the south.

ARTICLES of incorporation have been filed with the Secretary of the Interior for a railroad to be built in Alaska from Valdez, the most northerly port that is open all the year, to Eagle City, on the Yukon River. The road is expected to open up for development one of the greatest mineral and agricultural districts in the country, and to cause the settlement and development of the Copper River Valley, the Nizina and Chittyna mining districts, including the copper deposits in that district, and also the Tanana river and Yukon districts.

WILLIAM H. ROBERTS, stated clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, has received returns from 203 of the 237 presbyteries on the question of creed revision. Of the returns received 185 are in favor of all the overtures, 13 are partly affirmative, 2 negative and 3 took no action. This vote ratifies the proposition, which required a majority of two-thirds of the presbyteries, and practically assures the adoption of the revised Confession of Faith by the General Assembly, which is now in session in Los Angeles.

MANILA'S mediæval wall, built by Spaniards several hundred years ago, is almost the only one of the kind left in the Orient. A part of the least picturesque portion of this wall has been torn down because it was in the way of wharf improvements on the river and seriously obstructed commerce, but Secretary Root has given assurance that the remainder shall be preserved as it now exists.

UNLESS some efforts are speedily made by historical societies to preserve the building which served for seven years as the Capitol of the Northwest Territory it will be destroyed in a few weeks. It is a frame house, two stories high, with two rooms on each floor, in Vincennes, Ind. It was built in 1805, and, like most buildings erected in the West at that time, it is held together by wooden pegs instead of nails. William Henry Harrison read his first message as Governor of the Territory within its walls. In August, 1810, Tecumseh and seventy-five of his braves came to the building every day for ten days, seeking a place in the council. It ceased to be the home of the Government on March 13, 1813, when the capital was moved to Corydon.—[Philadelphia Ledger.]

A VOLCANIC eruption occurred on the 29th ultimo, at the town of Frank, Northwest Territory, on the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains. The earth opened up for three-quarters of a mile in length and millions of tons of rock slid off the top of Turtle Mountain, which overhangs the little town. The coal pit mouth and several buildings near thereto were buried. It is estimated that the loss of life is about 70 residents of the town, and in addition about 50 miners were entombed in the mine. The Canadian Pacific Railway at once arranged for trains to convey doctors, nurses and hospital stores, both from the east and west, to Frank.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

NEW YORK YEARLY MEETING.

- SEVENTH-DAY, 5TH Mo. 23.
10 a. m. and 3 p. m. Meeting of Ministers and Elders, 15th St. and Rutherford Place.
1.30 p. m. Annual Meeting of Friends' Home Association.
5 p. m. Executive Committee of the First-day School Association.—Meeting House.
7.30 p. m. First-day School Association.
- FIRST-DAY, 5TH Mo. 24.
10 a. m. First-day School.
11 a. m. Meetings for Worship in New York and Brooklyn.
3 p. m. First-day School Union.—Meeting House.
4.30 p. m. Meeting for Worship.
8 p. m. Young Friends' Association. Paper by Alice Mary Brown, of Cornwall.
- SECOND-DAY, 5TH Mo. 25.
9 a. m. Devotional Meeting.
10 a. m. and 3 p. m. Business Meetings.
8 p. m. Educational Meeting.
- THIRD-DAY, 5TH Mo. 26.
9 a. m. Devotional Meeting.
10 a. m. and 3 p. m. Business Meetings. Joint Session.

- 8 p. m. The Friends' Equal Rights Association. Paper by Lucretia L. Blankenburg, "The Contribution of Friends Towards the Advancement of Women." Address by Carrie Chapman Catt: "Women a Practical Factor in Civic Life."
- FOURTH-DAY, 5TH Mo. 27.
10.30 a. m. Meeting for Worship.
3 p. m. First-day School Association. Address by Dr. Jesse H. Holmes.
8 p. m. Meeting under care of Committee on Philanthropic Labor.
- FIFTH-DAY, 5TH Mo. 28.
9 a. m. Devotional Meeting.
10 a. m. and 3 p. m. Business Meetings.
- 5TH Mo. 23.—NOTTINGHAM FIRST-DAY School Union, at Penn Hill, at 10 a. m. Topics for discussion, "Suggestions to Young Teachers," "Moral and Practical Results of the First-day Schools," "Duties of the Superintendent."
- 5TH Mo. 24.—CONFERENCE UNDER THE care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor, in the meeting-house at Stanton, Del., at 2.30 p. m. Elizabeth Lloyd will speak on "Equal Rights for Women."

5TH Mo. 24.—A MEETING AT RADNOR, Pa., at 3 p. m., appointed by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit the smaller branches.

5TH Mo. 24.—PHILADELPHIA EVENING Meeting, at Fourth and Green Streets, 7.30 p. m.

(Concluded on Page 336.)

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

NEWS NOTES.

TWELVE HUNDRED slot machines were burned in Philadelphia on the 19th by order of Director of Public Safety Smyth.

GOVERNOR PENNYPACKER has signed the bill raising the age limit of children employed in the coal mines from 14 to 16 years.

RECENT advices from Venezuela say revolutionists are making headway in Venezuela. In a battle near La Guayra the Government lost more than 1,000 men.

THE last Congress increased the number of Government offices by 9,501; the salaries of the new office holders will amount to $7,927,639 annually.

THE Woman's General Missionary Society of the United Presbyterian Church, at its convention in Pittsburg, decided to support a woman missionary for every man in the field.

THIRTY-THREE thousand persons are dying each week of plague in India, according to a report from Consul-General Patterson, at Calcutta.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT rode among the Grand Sequoias and through the Yosemite National Park with John Muir, who is authority on the "big tree country."

In a riot at Bridgeport, Conn., on the 17th, caused by a strike of trolley workmen and the employment of non-union motormen in place of the strikers, the Mayor and 18 officials were injured.

A DISPATCH from Manila states that on the 18th instant in an encounter between American-Philippine forces and a band of "fanatics," twenty of the latter were killed and a larger number wounded.

EX-LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR HENRY CLAY KNOBLOCK of Louisiana was shot and killed on Main street, Thibodeaux, on the 19th, by James Garault, a barber. The tragedy created intense excitement.

GOVERNOR YATES, of Illinois, has signed the Mueller bill, the Chicago Traction measure, the threatened defeat of which, by the alleged unwarranted use of Speaker Miller's gavel, led to a riot recently in the House of Representatives there.

MANY meetings have been held this week in commemoration of the opening of The Hague Court; among these were one in the historic Mennonite Church, Germantown, Philadelphia, on the 17th, and one on the 18th in Eutaw Street Friends' Meeting-house, Baltimore.

GOVERNOR PENNYPACKER has signed the Grady-Salus Libel bill, for the restraint of newspapers and the immediate result is that the newspapers of Pennsylvania are vying with each other in publishing cartoons which hold him up to popular ridicule.

RICHARD HENRY STODDARD, the well-known poet and author, died in New York on the 12th instant. His last literary work was his "Recollections, Personal and Literary," a volume of memoirs covering a period of more than fifty years.

HEREAFTER all members of the Protestant Episcopal Church who have been working for the advancement of the interests of labor will be associated with one organization. At the annual meeting of the Christian Social Union, it was decided to merge with the Church Association for the Advancement of the Interests of Labor.

MAYOR JONES, of Toledo, has been made one of the Vice-Presidents of the American Peace Society. The President of the Society is Robert Treat Paine, the Secretary Dr. Benjamin Trueblood. There are 100 General Peace Societies and 350 branches which carried on propaganda during the year.

TOME INSTITUTE at Port Deposit, Md., endowed by the late Jacob Tome was dedicated on the 15th instant. Among those present were President Remsen of the Johns Hopkins University, President Sharpless of Haverford College, Provost Harrison of the University of Pennsylvania. It is considered to be more fully equipped and more generously endowed than any other secondary school in the country.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

(Concluded from page 335.)

5TH MO. 24.—THE VISITING COMMITTEE of Salem Quarterly Meeting will attend the meeting at Salem, at 10 a. m.

5TH MO. 25.—WARRINGTON QUARTERLY Meeting, at Pipe Creek, Md., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 2 p. m.

5TH MO. 26.—BURLINGTON QUARTERLY Meeting at Crosswicks, N. J., at 10.30 a. m. Ministers and Elders the day before at 11 a. m. Stages will meet the 8.20 train from Philadelphia at Bordentown. Carriages will meet the 9 o'clock trolley from Trenton at Yardville. The stage will meet the 9 o'clock train from Philadelphia on the 3.15 p. m. accommodate ministers and elders.

5TH MO. 27.—SOUTHERN QUARTERLY Meeting at Easton, Md., at 10 a. m. Meeting of Ministers and Elders the same day at 9.15 a. m.

5TH MO. 28.—BUCKS QUARTERLY MEETING at Buckingham, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 11 a. m.

5TH MO. 29.—NOTTINGHAM QUARTERLY Meeting at Deer Creek, Md., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 2 p. m.

5TH MO. 31.—A PHILANTHROPIC CONFERENCE in connection with Young Friends' Association, at Horsham Meeting-house at 3 p. m. Address by Lucretia L. Blankenburg, "What Friends have done to advance the cause of Equal Rights."

5TH MO. 31.—A CONFERENCE UNDER THE care of the Philanthropic Committees of the Yearly and Quarterly Meetings, in the Meeting-house at Fallsington, Pa., at 2.30 p. m. The meeting will be addressed by Joel Borton, of Woodstown, N. J., on the subject of "Temperance." Joel Borton also expects to attend the morning meeting at same place.

5TH MO. 31.—OBSERVANCE OF CENTENARY birthday of Emerson in Goose Creek Meeting-house, Lincoln, Va., at 1.15 p. m.

6TH MO. 2.—CENTRE QUARTERLY MEETING at Fishertown, Pa., at 10 a. m. Meeting of Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding at 3 p. m.

ONE of the readers of the INTELLIGENCER sends the following interesting reminiscences:

Nicholas Wain, of Philadelphia, was at supper at a Pike county hotel in company with two preachers of the Gospel. They reached the table about the same time and found three good-sized trout before them. Instantly the three fish were transferred to the plates of the "divinity" and one dominie proceeded to ask a blessing. Nicholas reached over and forked one of the trout to his plate, remarking as he did so, "I watch while you pray!"

At the beginning of the century a well-known Hibernian living near Marshallton, Chester county, made application to become a member of Bradford Monthly Meeting. In due course a committee waited upon him to learn his reasons for making the request. He replied, "I've lived among the Quakers these many years—and have observed their ways, and I find them to be an economical, God-fearing and money-making people, and I want to be wan of 'em!"

Two boys played about the outside of old Plymouth Meeting-house in Montgomery county. The day was warm, and the sermon was lengthy and of a character well-known by frequent repetition. One boy said, "Is he most through?" "Oh, no," replied the other, "he has only got as far as the unquenchable fire."

ELIZABETH LLOYD'S

"SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY"

placed in every school, would teach the beauty of Peace. Send twenty cents for one copy of the music and twenty-five copies of the words, to

ARABELLA CARTER,
Universal Peace Union, 1395 Arch St., Phila.

It Pays Educators to Educate.

The Peoples University of Olympia, Washington, makes it pay to be in the educational business. The capital stock of that institution already pays a four per cent. dividend, and will eventually pay from six to ten per cent. The security is first-class—absolutely safe—and the enterprise highly commensurate. Capital stock $1,000,000, divided into shares of $100. We will sell in blocks of not less than $50. The fact is we offer you a better investment than government bonds. Write for particulars, Eastern Office, Room 86, The Rugeley, Columbus, Ohio.

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,

Olympia, Washington.
Endowment file No. 2. Be sure to mention the file number.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night; $2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
Phone 1-33-55.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets

(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETTI.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,

Telephones. Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
JOSEPH L. JONES

He was 57; he looked about 40, despite daily business cares and responsibilities innumerable, about which he refused to worry.

Why?

The future of his family was made secure, his own old age provided for by a policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

VERY LOW RATES TO MANY POINTS REACHED VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

The Southern Railway Company announces the sale of tickets at extremely low rates from points on its lines for the following special occasions.

Asheville, N. C., Southern Educational Association, June 30-July 3, 1903.

Asheville, N. C., Southern Student Conference and Convention, Y. W. C. A., June 12-22, 1903.

Asheville, N. C., American Society of Civil Engineers, June 8-12, 1903.

Asheville, N. C., National Dental and adjunct Societies, July 24-31, 1903.

Athens, Ga., Summer School, July 1-August 9, 1903.

Atlanta, Ga., National Convention B. Y. P. U. of America, July 9-12, 1903.

Knoxville, Tenn., Summer School, June 23-July 31, 1903.

Monteagle, Tenn., Bible School, July 1-August 30, 1903.

Nashville, Tenn., Peabody College Summer Schools, June 1-July 30, 1903.

St. Louis, Mo., Saengerfest of North American Saengerbund, June 17-20, 1903.

San Francisco, Cal., and Los Angeles, Cal., National Encampment, Grand Army of the Republic, August 17-22, 1903.

Tuskegee, Ala., Summer School, June 26-August 7, 1903.

Above rates open to the public. Tickets will be sold to above points from all stations on Southern Railway.

Detailed information can be had upon application to Chas. L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

J. H. Riage, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis
Ring & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.) REAL ESTATE.

Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents, Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected. Key stone and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

VINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET,

PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

OPPOSITE THE BRITISH MUSEUM

THACKERAY HOTEL

(TEMPERANCE)

Great Russell Street, LONDON

Passenger Lift. Electric Light in All Rooms. Bath Rooms on every Floor. Spacious Dining, Drawing, Writing, Reading and Smoking Rooms. All Floors Fireproof. Night Porter. Telephone.

BEDROOMS from 2-6 to 4-6 per night

Inclusive charge for Bedroom, Attendance, Table d'Hote Breakfast and Dinner from 8-6 to 10-6 ($2.10 to $2.60) per day.

Full Tariff and Testimonials on Application.

Telegrams: "THACKERAY, LONDON."

Illinois-On-The-Strand

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Ocean view unexcelled. Appointments first-class. Special Spring rates. Bell' Phone, No. 26. WALTON & FRENCH

The Marlborough. Kept by Friends.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.

Under entirely new management. One block from bathing grounds and hot sea baths. For particulars Address SAMUEL E. LIPPINCOTT, 17 Sea View Avenue.

THE DRIFTWOOD

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Special Spring Rates. For particular address SARAH J. FAXSON and SISTERS

NEW ARBORTON Kept by Friends.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.

Half block from the sea. For particulars address

HANNAH BORTON,

Hot salt baths. 7 Sea View Ave., Ocean Grove, N. J.

The Pennhurst,

Second House from Beach

MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. W. M. R. HOOD.

THE KATHU,

1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE., ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet. M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL

Manufacturing Optician

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND CAKES. IS THE BEST THAT MONEY Term. KILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PROVE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Hilbert Sts.
5 PHONES.

Merchants' Trust Company,
611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $500,000.00
 CAPITAL (paid in), 250,000.00
 SURPLUS, 50,000.00
 UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 49,349.39
 Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveying done. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $2 and upwards, per annum.
JOSEPH R. RHOADS, President.
JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President.
HORACE B. PEARSON, 2nd Vice-Pres. & Treas
CHARLES F. EARLY, Secretary.
WM. B. LANE, Title and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS:
 NICHOLAS BRICE, J. BOLTON WINFENNY,
 S. DAVIS PAGE, WARREN G. GRIFFITH,
 JOSEPH R. RHOADS, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
 JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED J. PHILLIPS,
 THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
 CHAS. S. HINCHMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
 EDWARD S. SAYRES, EDGAR DEXLEY FARIES,
 JOHN H. CRAVEN, HORACE B. PEARSON.

United Security
 Life Insurance
 and Trust Company
 OF PENNSYLVANIA
 603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Capital, $1,000,000
 Surplus and undivided profits, 500,000

Banking and General Trust Co. Business

OFFICERS:
 WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
 JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
 ESMONDE H. AUSTIN, Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
 CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS, Assistant Treasurer.
 HENRY LABARRE JAYNE, Counsel.
 FRANCIS H. HEMPERLY, Actuary.
 T. HEWSON BRADFORD, M.D., Medical Director.
DIRECTORS:
 William M. Coates, William H. Lucas,
 Caleb J. Milne, William R. Verzer,
 V. C. Sweetman, J. W. Hampton, Jr.,
 Charles Purter, Orlando Crease,
 Robert Dornan, I. Layton Register,
 John G. Carruth, Esmonde H. Austin,
 William Bault, Silas W. Pettit,
 Joel Cook.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
 Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,
 1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,
 Wall Papers and
 Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.
 902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

Home Kitchen Outfits
 and all
 House Furnishings Goods

J. FRANKLIN R.,
 1626 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY
 N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
 ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES,
 ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
 FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OF CORPORATIONS. REGISTRAR AND TRANSFER AGENT.
 INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
 Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders, $ 4,457,613.08
 Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,317,764.17
 Assets of the Company, 61,015,271.43
 Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS: Samuel R. Shipley, President
 T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
 Asa S. Wing, Vice-President
 Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept.
 J. Roberts Foulke, Trust Officer
 David G. Alsop, Actuary
 J. Barton Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
 Samuel H. Froth, Treasurer
 C. Walter Borton, Secretary

DIRECTORS: James V. Watson, William Longstreth, Edward H. Ogden, Thomas Scattergood, Charles Hartsbarne, J. Preston Thomas, Robert M. Janney, Marriot C. Morris, Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

Wash Goods in Black

Black Dresses for Summer need not necessarily be uncomfortably warm if one chooses the materials carefully. There are plenty of dainty and dressy thin materials that are as cool and airy as the white goods. We have an unusually large and attractive stock of them selected with an eye to comfort as well as style and beauty:

- Black Silk Muslin
Rivals China silk in appearance and style, but is much less expensive—30c to 50c per yard.
- Black Embroidered Swisses
Make dressy gowns, but are as sheer and thin as their pale-face sisters—60c and 75c.
- Black Batiste Lace Stripes
Make cool afternoon gowns, and are here in many dainty patterns—15c to 25c.
- Black Madras
A cool, semi-dressy fabric. In lace open-work effect, in figures that have the lustre of silk, and in a host of other designs that give a dressy material at little cost—15c to 25c.
- Black Lawn
Run with little lines of open-work like fine hemstitching, with lace stripes in smart canvas effects, with tiny figures that give a delightful play of light on the sombre surface—10c to 25c.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
 PHILADELPHIA.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co. STEAMSHIP LINES
 FROM PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.
 O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue. Uptown offices, 826 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
 J. C. WHITNEY, ad V. P. and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

BREAD MACHINE
 FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
 Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted.
Scientific Bread Mach. Co.
 (OTIS CHAMBERS, Jr.)
 52nd & Media Sts., Philadelphia

These trade-mark crossbones lines on every package.
GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA
SPECIAL DIETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
 Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers. For book or sample write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

LANSDOWNE AND DARBY SAVING FUND AND TRUST COMPANY

Full Paid Capital, $125,000.00. 2 per cent. paid on Check Deposits, 3 per cent. paid on Savings Deposits.

GEORGE FOSTER WHITE, President, Treasurer and Secretary. W. LANE VERLINDEN Vice-President, Joseph T. Bunting, Second Vice-President; Acts as Executor, Administrator, Trustee, Guardian or Agent. Will be prepared and kept free of charge where this Company is named as Executor. Aims at perfect service and perfect Security. Either the Franklin National Bank or the Girard National Bank will receive deposits for this company.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, SIXTH MONTH 13, 1903.

SUMMER BOARD.

The Wellswood, Open for guests
Sixth month 1st
HAMPTON FALLS, N. H.

About 20 can be accommodated. Large rooms, open fireplaces, wide piazzas, shady lawns, modern conveniences. Charming walks and drives. Hampton and Eye beaches, and many points of historic interest accessible by steam or trolley cars. Friends' family. Address GEO. C. HERBERT, Hampton Falls, N. H.

Illinois-On-The-Strand

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

WALTON & FRENCH

Ocean view unexcelled Bell 'Phone No. 26
Will remain OPEN throughout the year

THE PENNINGTON,

Permanent and Transient Boarding
for Friends.

215 E. 15th Street, New York City.

THE HOBART,

Write for booklet.

310 SEVENTH AVE., NORTH ASBURY PARK, N. J.
Address E. H. BAKER, Formerly of Atlantic City.

The Marlborough,

Kept by Friends.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.

Under entirely new management. One block from bathing grounds and hot sea baths. For particulars Address SAMUEL B. LIPPINCOTT,
17 Sea View Avenue.

THE DRIFTWOOD

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Special Spring Rates. For particulars address
SARAH J. PAXSON and SISTERS

NEW ARBORTON

Kept by Friends.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.

Half block from the sea. For particulars address
HANNAH BORTON,

Hot salt baths. 7 Sea View Ave., Ocean Grove, N. J.

The Pennhurst,

Second House
from Beach.

MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,

1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILE,

OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

WANTED.—POSITION AS ASSISTANT IN institution, Friends' boarding home or school. Address F. K. D., this Office.

WANTED.—WE CAN OFFER A GOOD HOME, with reasonable compensation, to a worthy woman, in our small family. She to relieve my delicate wife of the cares of housekeeping, assist with household work and care of two children. Address H. H. Stabler, 1201 Clinton Street, Baltimore, Md.

WANTED.—CARE OF SEMI-INVALID, either sex, or would take charge of one child over five years of age. City or suburbs. Moderate wages. Reference. Address Q. H. M., this Office.

WANTED.—YOUNG WOMEN TO ENTER the Training School for Nurses of West Philadelphia Hospital for Women. Apply to M. E. Kelsey, Superintendent, 4035 Parrish Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—BOARDERS FOR THE SUMMER to country. Friends' family. Modern conveniences. Apply early. Box 112, Woodstown, N. J.

HELEN C. BORTON WHO IS A STUDENT IN Emerson College, Boston, is prepared to give "The Lost Word," by Henry van Dyke as an evening's program for Young Friends' Associations and other meetings. After Fifth month 1st for particulars address Helen G. Borton, Woodstown, N. J.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1827 15th, N. W., Washington, D. C.

BOARDERS DESIRED IN FRIENDS' FAMILY 3 or 4 firm. Desirable location. Address S. 800 Spargill Mill Avenue, Conshohocken, Pa.

TO RENT.—BY SEPTEMBER 1st, TO A RE-fined family, for board of owner (a lady), 11-room house in West Herts, Pa. Address T. B. Heudrickson, 617 Market Street, Philadelphia.

FOR RENT.—S. W. COR. TWENTIETH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 12 rooms and a bath, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

FOR SALE OR RENT.—A VERY DESIRABLE summer or winter residence at very low figures because the owner has no further use for it. Sixteen rooms, all modern conveniences. Large grounds, plenty of shade, good water. Good steam and electric car service. Schools as good as the best. Immediate possession. Good also for sale a number of first lien mortgages on farms in Missouri, in South East Kansas or in Oklahoma, placed by men of good reputation and long experience. For particulars, address R. HAINES PASSMORE, Real Estate and Loan Agent, West Chester, Pa.

ELIZABETH LLOYD'S "SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY"

placed in every school, would teach the beauty of Peace.
Send twenty cents for one copy of the music and twenty-five copies of the words, to

ARABELLA CARTER,
Universal Peace Union, 1305 Arch St., Phila.

OPPOSITE THE BRITISH MUSEUM

THACKERAY HOTEL (TEMPERANCE)

Great Russell Street, LONDON

Passenger Lift. Electric Light in all Rooms. Bath Rooms on every Floor. Spacious Dining, Drawing, Writing Reading and Smoking Rooms. All Floors Fireproof. Night Porter. Telephone.

BEDROOMS from 2-6 to 4-6 per night

Inclusive charge for Bedroom, Attendance, Table d'Hôte Breakfast and Dinner from 8-6 to 10-6 ($2.70 to $2.60) per day.

Full Tariff and Testimonials on Application.

Telegrams: "THACKERAY, LONDON."

BUCK HILL FALLS.

Ye who love the haunts of Nature,
Love the sunshine of the meadow,
Love the shadow of the forest,
Love the wind among the branches,
—Langfellow.

will enjoy the outdoor freedom of camping out. For the last two summers tenting at Buck Hill Falls has been one of its features. The air is so dry, the soil so porous, the drainage so good that people who ordinarily are afraid of "rheumatics" have slept to tents without a twinge. One dear friend, now around three score and ten, has had two seasons of it, and is regretting that the building of a family cottage will force her indoors. The tents have wooden floors and double roofs so that they are absolutely water tight, and even in rainy weather they have been pronounced drier than rooms in the Inn or cottages. The best testimony of their comfort and convenience is that everyone who has occupied a tent wants the same accommodations, when he or she comes again.

The tents are furnished with good wire spring beds with mattresses, chiffoniers, washstands and basins, towels, sheets, and blankets, identical with those in the Inn. Some have rocking chairs and clothes poles.

The charge is only $3 per week for a tent capable of holding two people; $5 per week for a tent to hold four persons; $5 per week for a tent holding six comfortably. At these prices occupants are expected to keep their tents in order, but fresh water is brought every day and the slops removed. Try it.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,

1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Pocono Pines Assembly

AND

Summer Schools

NAOMI PINES, PA.

New Assembly Inn, opens June 1, 1903.

Overlooks lake three miles long, half mile wide. 400 acres of Old Pines. Rowing, sailing, bathing. 2000 feet Elevation. Open fire places and blankets a necessity. Always cool. Wide verandas. Shady walks Bible conference July 14-26. Summer schools July 17th to August 15th, faculty of twelve, including President ISAAC SHARPLESS, JOSEPH WALTON, etc.

New Auditorium and Lecture Hall in the Pines.

Write L. H. BEDELL, Manager,
Reasonable Terms. Naomi Pines, Pa.

School Catalogs.

Turning out quite some few good specimens of what school catalogs ought to be, just now. Always have given more than ordinary attention to this sort of work. Result—satisfaction, more orders.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE
METER KIND OF PRINTING
1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
* TELEPHONE NO. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXIV.	369
POETRY: IN WORD AND POWER.	369
HAPPINESS AND SERVICE.	369
WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson.—Continued.	370
THE GENTLEMANLINESS OF CHRISTIANITY.	372
EMERSON'S QUAKERISM.	372
EDITORIAL:
The Higher Tolerance.	374
Notes.	374
BIRTHS, DEATHS.	375
COMMUNICATIONS:
Proposal to Visit Western Friends: Friends Invited to Fishing Creek.	375
NOTES OF LONGDON YEARLY MEETING.	375
NEW YORK YEARLY MEETING.	375
BLUE RIVER QUARTERLY MEETING.	377
CENTER QUARTERLY MEETING.	377
LETTERS FROM ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.—III.	378
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	380
EDUCATIONAL.	381
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	381
LITERARY NOTES.	382
POETRY: Submission.	382
MISCELLANY: The Life of an Art Queen; Emerson's Courtesy: A Porto Rican in Pennsylvania.	382
CURRENT EVENTS.	383
NEWS NOTES.	383
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	384

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OFFICES: { 623 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
 { Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
395 SWEDE STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Thompson Shourds, 2212 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds. Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa
Phone 3-54-78 D Filbert.

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sansom Street. Philadelphia, Pa.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Taos, Biddie Ellis.
Ringe & Ellis. LAW (Pa and N. J.)
REAL ESTATE.

Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
Keystone and Bell' Phones. 920 Chestnut St., Phila.

J. Linden Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
ARCHITECTS
Telephone Connection 937 Chestnut Street, Philad'a

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,
Telephones. Girard Building and
216 W. Coulter St.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.
HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR.
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,
FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, graded education, and prepares for college.
J. EUGENE BAKER,
ANNA W. EAKMAN, } Principals.
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.
Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.
Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.
For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.
Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.
Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever they are vacating school. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Or,
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.
The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.
For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.
A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.
Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.
For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)
New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.
For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer
1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 39-38 D.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
5 PHONES.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, SIXTH MONTH 13, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 24.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XXIV.

To talk well is good, but to live well is much better.

THOMAS CHALKLEY.

IN WORD AND POWER.

Lo! this one preached with fervent tongue;
The world went forth to hear;
Upon his burning words they hung
Intent with ravished ear.

Like other lives the life he led,
Men spoke no word of blame;
And yet unblest, unprofited,
The world went on the same.

Another came and lived and wrought,
His heart all drawn above.
By deeds, and not by words, he taught
Self-sacrificing love.

No eager crowds his preaching drew;
Yet one by one they came:
The secret of his power they knew,
And caught the sacred flame.

And all around, as morning light
Steals on with silent wing,
The world became more pure and bright,
And life a holier thing.

—W. Wiltsham Row.

HAPPINESS AND SERVICE.¹

I wish to speak briefly on "Happiness and Service." Surely if there is any place in the world favorable to the living of a happy life it is in college, and college trained men and women should carry with them from their Alma Mater all the elements of happiness. Among those things which stand out as glittering possibilities, but which are attained by the few, and are not necessary to a happy life, are wealth, fame and power.

Wealth is all right, if it comes naturally and under economic laws, but if it comes through the sacrifice of home, and the finer things of life, it is all wrong. I can think of a man who has accumulated his millions, but with his wealth there has come a curse to his family. He has a degenerate son and a wife who has lost her reason. If wealth is the cause and not merely the accompaniment of the misery, it comes at too dear a price.

I was present at one of the installations of Thomas B. Reed as Speaker of the House of Representatives. As he walked up the aisle and took his place at the Speaker's desk, he was greeted with loud and prolonged applause, as his achievements deserved, for he had honorably won a place of great distinction. Among other things he said, "The honor lasts but for a moment, the anxiety and responsibility for many weary days and nights." It is ever thus with place and power. If wealth, fame, position, power, come to you in the fulfillment of your position in life, well and good, but they are not necessary for a happy life, and usually do not bring it. It is the opportunities open to all normally constituted men and women which offer the greatest possibilities for happiness.

¹Address of President Swain to the Senior Class at Swarthmore College, Sixth month 7th, 1903.

It is your privilege to enjoy every power and gift which God has given you. You have been here these years to train these powers and gifts in the direction of their greatest development. You have a right to enjoy those things which cause the body to come to its highest perfection. The food which brings health and strength and life should be pleasant to the taste. The table is the best center of friendship and domestic affection.

I trust your eye has been trained. To such an eye, Nature and Art afford an infinite variety, and should be a never-ceasing source of happiness. The same scenes are imprinted upon the retina of all alike, but the eye sees only what it brings the power of seeing. The charm of the sunset, the splendor of the mountains, the glory of the sea, the sublimity of the heavens, the beauty of the rose and all Nature in her myriad and wonderful forms should be yours to enjoy.

To the enjoyments of the eye may you have added those of cultivated ears. To realize what a harmony of sweet sounds are ever present to our ears, we must remove ourselves for a time from the haunts of birds and animals and insects and men. I went once to the high Sierras above the timber line, above the clouds, and above the habitation of living things. I could not hear a sound from animal nature, only the occasional roar of the avalanche as a field of ice or snow would yield through the heat of the advancing summer and fall to the glacier or valley below. I cannot adequately describe the awful stillness of such surroundings. Not until we have witnessed the intense quiet of the high mountains do we realize the contribution to our happiness of the many sounds of animal life. As one slowly comes down from the highest mountain, if one but observes the new notes, as he descends to the plains below, there appear a thousand voices of which he had before scarcely been aware.

The eye, the ear, and the other senses in their normal use bring to us the manifold joy of the outer world. "Natural History," says Darwin, "and domestic affection make a man truly happy." The variety, the evidence of law, the beauty in the animal world, satisfied the longing of his mind, and the fire-side the longing of his heart. What natural history was for Darwin, some field of study or labor should be to every human being. If you follow your highest insight and better tastes, you should find a life work which should bring solid contentment to you. "I could be happy anywhere in the months things are growing," said a young botanist: he referred to the summer months when the plants are growing. In a larger sense there is no moment when you have once learned to see the world about you, when something on which your mind is set is not growing. It may be a plant, an animal, a school, an enterprise, or a cause which you cherish. If your mind is made up and your heart is set upon the accomplishment of a purpose, you will reap satisfaction in the growth of your undertaking.

Darwin was right when he placed domestic affection as a necessary part of happiness. The elevation of the family is an important, if not the most important end of civilization. He who allows the pursuit of wealth, the struggle for place, the thirst for glory, or the feverish haste of modern life to encroach upon the joys of domestic life, crowds out the most sacred ties which bring joy to life.

High in the scale of life's privilege is that of exercise. Physical exercise, including brain work, should bring with it joy. The child on the play ground let loose from schools, the athlete who rejoices in his art, the student in his leisure hours, or the man of productive labor, each in his way should have pleasure. It was said of Dr. Elliott that he could do an immense amount of work, for he found such keen enjoyment in it. May you so happily adjust your lives that the keen enjoyment of productive labor will be one of your choicest blessings. This is of the highest importance, for the labor of every person has much in it of routine, and the doing itself should be attractive.

As you go farther along in the journey of life, you will come to see more and more that Shakespeare was right when he said:

"The purest treasure mortal time affords
Is spotless reputation."

Out in the cemetery west of the site of my Alma Mater, there rests the mortal remains of a noble woman who served her generation of college students and who was loved by all who knew her. On her tombstone are these words from the Sacred Book: "Unspotted before the World." The consciousness that one lives a healthful, cheerful, unspotted life before the world is one of life's choicest blessings.

"Oh! it is not the amount of good done which measures the love or heroism which prompted the serviceable deed, or the happiness which the doer gets from it. It is the spirit of service which creates both the merit and the satisfaction."

Abou Ben Adhem had a dream. He saw an angel writing with a pen of gold, and on inquiry the angel said he was making a list of those who loved the Lord.

"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nay, not so,"
Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low,
But cheerily still; and said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow-men."

The angel wrote, and vanished. The next night
It came again, with a great wakening light,
And showed the names whom love of God had blessed,—
And, lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest!

If you love the animal, the mineral and the vegetable world, and above all your fellow-men, it is the best indication that your name will be found on the list of those who love the Lord.

With all your natural and acquired possessions, and with all the splendid hopes and aspirations and optimisms of youth, I trust you have firmly fixed in mind that you fill the highest ends of your own life by serving and cooperating with your fellow-men. One may accumulate a fortune and bless the rising generation by founding a university; another help a young man or woman by word or deed or money to a higher life; another serve his community, his state or nation in a position low or exalted. God hath not set by metes and bounds the fields of service or happiness. "Do well thy part, there all the honor lies."

For myself I know no more inspiring sight than a band of earnest, chosen young men and women, with trained eyes to see, with cultured ears to hear, with healthy bodies subservient to their educated wills, with love of home, of country, of God, eagerly going forth to serve each in his chosen way according to his light and gifts, the family, the community, the state, the college which has made it possible that he should receive life's best gifts.

Lovingly, hopefully, expectantly, your Alma Mater commissions you to go forth as workers among men. May you be happy. May you be of service. May your greatest happiness be in your service.

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

JOHN JACKSON.

(Continued from last week.)

GEORGE S. TRUMAN contributes the following account of Sharon's connection with the Underground Railroad:

"Situated in close proximity to the Great Southern Post Road, formerly known as the King's Highway, leading from Philadelphia through Chester and Wilmington, down through the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia, it was perfectly natural that the fugitive in his search for freedom should make Sharon one of his points of rest and recuperation, but no record was ever kept for precautionary reasons, as our friends, Thomas Garrett and John Hunn, situated on this line, had fully realized, being virtually bankrupted with fines and prosecutions under the Fugitive Slave Law for acting the part of the Good Samaritan to these poor creatures.

"On the Southern road near the State line there was a public house called the 'Practical Farmer,' the occupant of which was always on the lookout for fugitives in order to get the reward offered by the masters for their apprehension, but after they had got past this they were generally pretty safe. In Chester they had a valiant friend in Samuel Smith, a colored Methodist preacher, who almost invariably piloted them to Sharon, where he announced his arrival in the night by dropping pebbles on the roof just below my chamber window. The most of those who came were men who were safely stored in the haymow until the next evening; and although our family was large, yet until after they were gone very few knew of their presence. We had also a most efficient helper in William Brown, a colored quarryman, who had lost one leg by a premature explosion. He walked on a wooden stump and withal was more active than many men with sound limbs. Whenever notified he was always on hand to escort passengers to the next stopping place or put them safely on the way, and I have no recollection of any who passed through our station who were ever returned to their masters.

"The travelers were only moved in the night season except when imperatively necessary, as when belated, and their pursuers were close behind them, in which case it was necessary to resort to stratagem to get them to a place of safety. I call to mind one morning when three men came in just after daybreak. Their pursuers were seen mounted on horses riding round the farm on the lookout. It was necessary to be expeditious and the large dearborn wagon used by the school was got out and straw placed in the bottom. The men were told to lie down and bags of apples were placed on each side of them. They were covered with bags of hay and two flour barrels were placed in the tail of the wagon as though going to mill. To carry out the deception further I went in my shirt sleeves, the mill not being much over a mile distant. I had hardly got out of the lane before I perceived that I was pursued; the man rode alongside, gave a hasty glance in the wagon and passed on. Fearing I might be pursued I quickly turned off the main road and made for a station about five miles distant. Finding the occupant was not at home I was at a loss how to proceed as there was no other safe point in that direction. I therefore kept on, nor stopped till near sunset, when I brought up at Attleborough at the close of Bucks Quarterly Meeting. Here I parted with my companions and the next day returned home.

"But the most interesting case that occurs to me was that of Allen Ricketts and family, consisting of a brother and sister, one half-brother and two sisters and a niece. They were owned by a man near Baltimore and I presume were house servants. Their owner died insolvent and the administrator thought it necessary to sell the slaves in order to pay their debts. Their master's children, with whom they had always been brought up on terms of intimacy, advised them to leave, and they accordingly did so and in course of time arrived at the home of Daniel Gibbons in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and were sent by him to his sister Rachel Hunt, of Darby. Here they found homes, and were appreciated by their employers for their integrity and faithfulness. Allen was taken into the family of John and Rachel Hunt, where he remained for a number of years as gardener and chore boy. He was sent to Friends' school with the rest of the family and acquired the rudiments of education—the three R's of which we hear so much.

"In this neighborhood they resided quietly for several years until the younger members had grown to man- and womanhood. A man who had known them in their old Maryland home came to reside in their neighborhood, obtained work close by and finally married one of the sisters. He opened a correspondence with the creditors of their former master, one of whom, having obtained a claim to them, came in search of them without making himself known. He professed to be a drover going west after a drove of horses and hired Allen to go with him. When they reached Harrisburg, unknown to Allen, they switched off on the road to Baltimore and as soon as they crossed the State line he slipped handcuffs on Allen and conveyed him to Baltimore where he sold him to a slave trader by the name of Slatter. Here he was confined in a jail just back of the Philadelphia depot, on Pratt street, preparatory to shipping a vessel load to New Orleans. The slaves' dwelling was attached to the house and some of those he thought trustworthy were used as house servants. One of these, a young woman, Allen persuaded to furnish him with pen and paper, and he wrote me of his situation, appealing to me for help in his dilemma. He got the young woman to mail the letter for him and I received it very fortunately on the afternoon of one of the weekly lectures for the neighborhood which were held at the school and a goodly number assembled. Allen being known to them all, when the news was read to them it created quite a sensation, and it was decided that I should go to Baltimore that evening and see what could be done.

"Accordingly, the next morning at sunrise found me in that city, and after hunting up our valued friend, John Needles, we went to see Slatter and had quite a talk with him, but previously I went into the jail to make sure that Allen was there. I found him overjoyed to see me and earnest in the hope that some way might be found to help him out of his troubles. The jail was nothing but a large room bare of everything but a few benches, and surrounded by a high brick wall enclosing a yard where the inmates, shackled and otherwise, might exercise under the supervision of the keeper.

"Slatter, from his talk, did not incline to terms, as he expatiated on the price which, as a likely slave, Allen would bring in New Orleans—about $1000. But finally, perhaps as a matter of bluff, he agreed to take $800 for Allen provided the cash was paid not later than that day week, and I returned home not very hopeful of the prospect in view. After reporting the situation a subscription was started and through the energy and influence of John Jackson $500 was soon raised and the balance was advanced by a wealthy Friend of Philadelphia, so that at the allotted time I was in Baltimore, and with my friend John Needles as witness, called on the trader prepared to consummate the bargain. He appeared to be very much surprised, and so expressed himself, as he did not expect the money would be forthcoming in so short a time, and rather hesitated about confirming his agreement on the ground that he could get so much more by shipping Allen south. He then asked me to allow him to see the letter I had received from Allen, stating that he himself used a certain kind of paper and if any of his house servants had been instrumental in communicating with me he would sell them south at once. Fortunately I had left the letter at home and could not gratify him. When we had completed the papers it was nearly train time, and under the laws of Maryland the railroad companies were not allowed to carry colored people unless two residents of the State gave bonds as to their freedom, under heavy damages. John Needles and I went over to the depot to get tickets and the bond prepared, Slatter saying he would come over to sign the same and bring Allen with him, which he accordingly did, though I have it from Allen that before doing so he applied the lash to make him disclose his aids in getting the letter to me, but without success. Allen is still living in Darby and has been placed in many positions of trust, enjoying the respect and esteem of his employers. The rest of the family have passed away in the home of their adoption, no one having ever disturbed them, but the faithless brother-in-law found it too hot in the neighborhood for him and was obliged to leave."

ELIZABETH LLOYD.

(To be continued.)

THE GENTLEMANLINESS OF CHRISTIANITY.¹

ONE of the first marks of gentlemanliness is modesty. Christianity teaches modesty of deed, of gift, of religion. Take heed that you do not your righteousness before men, merely that men shall see it and praise you. Let your light so shine before men that, seeing your good works, they may glorify your Father who is in heaven. "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thine inner chamber, and having shut thy door, pray to thy Father in secret."

The ideal of gentlemanly reserve is held up in the injunction, "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast your pearls before the swine, lest haply they trample them under their feet, and turn and rend you."

Gentlemanly dignity is pre-eminently a Christian trait. Through his life, and especially in the great crises of it, Jesus exemplified this virtue. When the apostle who had bargained with his enemies to betray him asked him to his face, "Is it I?" he answered simply, "Thou hast said." When Judas came to betray him by a kiss, his words to the trembling wretch were simply, "Friend, do that for which thou art come," and to the armed mob who came to seize him he said, "Are ye come out as against a robber with swords and staves to seize me? I sat daily in the temple teaching, and ye took me not." In his trial before the Sanhedrin and before Pilate and Herod, and through the last sad hours of torture, we realize beneath the tragic pathos of the scene what a wealth of manly dignity was there.

That gentlemanliness which consists in simplicity and restraint of speech is embodied in the brief injunctions, "Let your speech be yea, yea, nay, nay," and "Swear not at all."

Self-control in its perfection is shown by the contrast: "Ye have heard that it was said to them of old time, Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment; but I say unto you, that everyone who is angry with his brother shall be in danger of the judgment."

Courtesy to women and to men—to the lowliest as to the highest—has received a high and lasting sanction from the kindly consideration for the woman with the alabaster box of ointment, for the widow with her mite, for the many sick of loathsome diseases who importunately pressed upon the great physician to be healed, and for the wretched thief who was crucified with him and to whose dying ears came the gracious, cheering words, "This night we will sup together in Paradise."

The cheerfulness of Jesus and his disciples, their entire aversion to asceticism, was so marked as to incur from their enemies the charge of being winebibbers and gluttons, and from their friends, the disciples of John, the wondering question as to why they fasted not. The account of their lives as they journeyed up and down through Judea is one of cheerfulness and gladness, which came of a gentlemanly self-forgiveness and a minimizing of their difficulties and hardships. And because of their loveableness they enjoyed the true gentleman's popularity, "advancing in favor with God and men."

Courage, physical as well as moral, was manifested on various occasions by Christianity's founder, when he faced excited crowds of threatening opponents; and the secret of his courage, the secret of every true gentleman's courage, was revealed in his words to his disciples, "Be not afraid of them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul."

Self-respect, soul-respect, respect for one's own higher, inner self, which yields neither to undue anxiety for material welfare nor to the pressing temptations of the world, is embodied in the allusion to the birds and the lilies, in the rejection of Satan's three-fold temptation to wealth and power and spiritual pride, and in the question whose bare statement is deemed a sufficient answer, "For what shall a man be profited if he shall gain the whole world and forfeit his soul?"

The chivalry which is awakened by the weak and the helpless, which takes the weaker side and insists on fair play, is grounded in Christianity: "When he saw the multitude, he was moved with compassion for them, because they were distressed and scattered, as sheep not having a shepherd." And the parable of the good Samaritan brands the priest and the Levite, who passed by on the other side, not only as uncharitable, but as not gentlemen.

Broad charity, which begins but does not stay at home, and a cosmopolitanism which rises above narrow provincialism and realizes that beyond the mountains there are also worthy human beings, are founded upon the reminder that God "maketh his sun to shine on the evil and the good, and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust," and upon the assurance that many shall come from the East and from the West, and shall sit down with Abraham, and with Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven. Perhaps its greatest manifestation was in the memorable scene in the temple when the sinning woman was saved from her accusers by the warning, "Let him that is without sin among you cast the first stone at her," and then dismissed with the kindly words, "Neither do I condemn thee; go and sin no more."

¹ A portion of a paper read to the students of Swarthmore College, before meeting, by Dr. William I. Hull, Fifth month 24th, 1903.

That knowledge of the world and of its temptations, a resistance to which constitutes virtue as distinguished from innocence, is enjoined upon the apostles in the words, "Behold I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves; be ye therefore as wise as serpents, and harmless as doves"; and it is illustrated by those wonderfully clever replies to the chief priests and the elders when they asked him by whose authority he taught, and to the Pharisees when they asked him if it was lawful to pay tribute unto Caesar.

And finally, that purity of heart, that purity of speech and of thought, as well as of deed, which we associate with every gentle, perfect knight, and which makes Sir Galahad so strong in our affectionate remembrance, was first riveted upon man's passionate attention and emulation by him who "moved like a ray of sunshine" amidst the foulness of the world, illuminating and sweetening all that he touched, but himself remaining unstained,—by him who gave the assurance that the pure in heart should see God—God's image in the lowliest of human beings, forbidding all impure thoughts, and God Himself, from whose presence all impurities are banished.

Modesty, reserve, dignity, simplicity of speech, self-control, courtesy, cheerfulness and loveableness, physical courage, self-respect, chivalry, broadness of sympathy, knowledge of the world and purity of heart—what a list of gentlemanly virtues is this! Can we be true gentlemen, lacking any one of them? And yet, we painfully ask, may we hope to attain to so exalted a standard?

We marvel not that when King Arthur and his knights sought to attain to their ideal of chivalry, their thoughts should have turned from their own table round, back to that other table in the large upper room at Jerusalem, where the first knights of Christendom were instructed how to use their authority over unclean spirits in the journeyings upon which they were soon to be sent. Nor need we marvel that those simple-hearted, mediæval knights, realizing that at that last supper had been held up the standard of perfect knighthood, should have made it their most anxious quest to find the holy grail which had been touched on that occasion by the lips of him who had expressed the idea of chivalry, and which ever afterwards in remembrance of him vanished from sight when any impure thing approached it.

I know not if in our college life we can aid each other to attain to our ideal of gentlemanliness by any such bond of apostleship or knighthood as those of old. But this I know, that to be a true Christian one must be a true gentleman, and that the highest ideal of gentlemanliness is to be found embedded in the precepts of Christianity and realized in the lives of those who have followed most closely in the footsteps of its founder.

EMERSON'S QUAKERISM.

Addressed to the students of Swarthmore College.

ON this centenary of Emerson's birth much is being said throughout the land as to the teachings and happy influences of that wisest and sweetest among modern philosophers.

In this presence there is one trait of Emerson's thought which it seems very fitting to recall to-day, and that is his sympathy with Quakerism. Too liberal to hold to any single church or creed, and alive to whatever was loveliest and of best report in the worship of ancient Greek or Druid, mediæval Catholic or Mohammedan, modern Puritan or Cavalier, Emerson has yet paid his tribute to the serene and simple spirit of Quakerism. Being asked in England as to who were his chief friends in America, he replied: "I find many among the Quakers."

Edward Emerson says this of his father: "Spirit, and not form, was what he had been striving for in public worship, and the simple worship of the more liberal Quakers pleased him much."

And to a cousin, who asked him to define his religious position, Emerson replied, speaking very slowly: "I believe I am more of a Quaker than anything else; I believe in the 'still, small voice,' and that voice is the Christ within us."

Yet in another mood Emerson the poet could avow his reverence for the venerable beauty of that early Church that existed for centuries before Calvinism or Quakerism were thought of. His lines in "The Problem" come to mind:

"I like a church, I like a cowl;
I love a prophet of the soul;
And on my heart monastic aisles
Fall like sweet strains or pensive smiles."

Thus, and in many another passage, does the great Emerson's serene philosophy and world-wide tolerance show itself; and, although he declared himself "more of a Quaker than anything else," yet surely there is no sect, no earnest people, that may not gather from the starry utterances of our noble seer a calm assurance that they all are gradually coming together in that common brotherhood "Toward which the whole creation moves." J. R. H.

"If, instead of a gem or even a flower, we could cast the gift of a rich thought into the heart of a friend, that would be giving as the angels give."

MUCH stress is laid in these days upon the importance of well-prepared sermons and lessons. No minister or teacher would be long tolerated who neglected thorough preparation for the pulpit or the class. It is not, however, so carefully insisted on that they must be in the power of the Holy Ghost. A minister would feel at a loss in his pulpit if he had failed to prepare his sermon, or having prepared it, had forgotten to bring it with him. It is not so certain that all ministers would feel the same embarrassment because of the absence of the Holy Spirit. Why shouldn't they?—Baptist Commonwealth.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, SIXTH MONTH 13, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE HIGHER TOLERANCE.

It was a long step in advance when men came to see that they ought to let one another alone in the matter of personal beliefs. It has taken long ages to learn to live up to the ideal, but we may congratulate ourselves that the world has, for the most part, come to believe in religious tolerance, and, among the more forward nations, to try pretty consistently to practice it. But there is a higher and better thing than tolerance; there is a better way of regarding one another's beliefs than merely tolerating them. We ought to make a sympathetic effort to appreciate and understand them. If "we are members one of another" (Ephesians, iv., 25), if we are to be as a "building fitly framed together" that "groweth unto an holy temple" that is to be "buildd together for an habitation of God through the Spirit" (Ephesians, ii., 21, 22), then it will not do for us merely to tolerate one another. We must each grapple with the other's thought and get out of it whatever is for us. We must not be shy of one another; we must not be suspicious of one another in regard to matters of belief. We must not divide ourselves up into schools, and take sides with parties. We must not say, "I am a liberal," or "I am Orthodox," and merely tolerate the existence of those who do not believe or express themselves as we do. We are to learn of one another.

We must remember that truth is the same for all, and none of us see it clearly. Each of us needs all the light he can get from others, especially from another who has a different point of view.

It is very easy for the younger generation to leave all the old beliefs behind and to strike out on new lines, but it is better to make use of all the old material that has proven valuable and to build on old foundations. It is easy for the older ones to rest in the beliefs they have found good to live by, and to ignore, or even try to suppress, the eager outreaching of younger minds with new problems and conditions to face, but it is better to travail sympathetically with the young "radicals" and, perchance, have the opportunity of contributing to the solution of the new problems, something from the experience of a life-time.

It is not that we are to acquiesce in one another's errors. If we feel that some one is wrong let us speak out in a way that will be most effective to make our protest tell. If some one thinks us in error and says so, let us examine carefully and see if there is some truth in the criticism. If we find there is, let us mend; if not, let us not be hurt, nor angry, but rather sorry that he does not see the truth which is so clear to us.

Christians need to get together, not so much by glossing over and ignoring their honest differences, as by honestly and frankly understanding the differences, and so getting at truth from different view points, thus broadening out and coming at more of truth.

This is especially the case with those of the same "household of faith," who have to work together in intimate association with one another, and who are in the best of positions to understand each other and to broaden one another and grow together into "an holy temple," a fit habitation of the Spirit of the universe.

Is the telegraphic news of the 4th instant are two items, one immediately following the other. The second states that a negro was lynched in Greenville, Miss., for assaulting a woman; the first records the conviction of a white man, at Carthage, Mo., for leading the mob that hanged a negro at Joplin recently, and his sentence to ten years in the penitentiary. That one lyncher has been made to feel the arm of the law is a source of encouragement.

At the annual meeting of the Progressive Friends, held at Longwood, Pa., last week, two important committees were appointed. Florence Kelley, daughter of the late Judge Kelley, of Philadelphia, gave a startling revelation of the hardships of child labor in Pennsylvania, and a committee was appointed to investigate the subject and ascertain what changes are needed in the laws of the State. Another committee was appointed to study the conditions and needs of the colored people in the villages and towns in the vicinity of Longwood, it having been stated that there had been no perceptible improvement within thirty years.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE commencement, which was of unusual interest this year, took place this week. The exercises of the graduating class were held on the afternoon of Second-day, and the commencement exercises on Third-day morning. On Third-day afternoon the Alumni met for their annual business meeting and in the evening held their annual reunion. In next week's issue full reports of these occasions will be given. The addresses of Joseph Wharton and President Swain and the oration on "Quakerism at Swarthmore," by Elizabeth Sutton of the graduating class, will be published.

Among the most interesting events of the day was the announcement that $493,600 of the $600,000 that has to be raised in three years, is already in the hands of the Treasurer. It is also understood that work is to begin on Wharton Hall, the new dormitory for boys, this summer.

BIRTHS.

GREEN.—At Swarthmore, Pa., Fourth month 26th, 1903, to Howard B. and Mary L. W. Green, a daughter, who is named Florence Wolverton.

DEATHS.

ATKINSON.—On the morning of Sixth month 7th, 1903, at her home in Upper Dublin, Montgomery county, Pa., Hannah Atkinson, widow of the late Thomas Atkinson, in her 94th year. The funeral was held at Upper Dublin Meeting-house on Fourth-day.

She was the daughter of James and Margaret (Good) Quinby, and was born in Amwell township, Hunterdon county, New Jersey. Immediately on her marriage she removed to Bucks county, and about sixty years ago she and her husband located in Upper Dublin.

She was active and deeply interested in all reform movements, but her outside interest and sympathies seemed to rest particularly with the colored people. Speaking in her last illness and shortly before her death, she expressed great satisfaction with what she had been able to do for this race, particularly in anti-slavery times, when their home had been a station on the Underground Railroad. She was a regular attender of meeting and a member of Horsham Monthly Meeting. Her five children, James O., Wilmer and Albert Atkinson, Emma E. Smith and Mary Anna Jenkins survive her.

KIRKBRIDE.—At her home in Bustleton, Pa., on the morning of Fifth month 24th, 1903, Jane T., wife of John B. Kirkbride.

She passed from a home beautified by its atmosphere of peace, its perfect freedom from hurry and discord, where mutual tenderness and sympathy lightened every care, and where her guests delighted to linger because of its exceeding restfulness. G.

REYNOLDS.—On Fifth month 28th, 1903, Annah May, daughter of Hiram L. and Amy S. Reynolds, aged 15 years and 10 months. Interment at West Laurel Hill.

FRANKLIN SMITH.

Franklin Smith, a notice of whose death was in last week's INTELLIGENCER, was born in 1830, thus making him 73 years of age. His high integrity of character was unquestionable, as well as his uniform disposition and uprightness in his transactions as a business man. The Scriptural injunction is illustrated in his departure, "Therefore be ye also ready." * * *

COMMUNICATION.

PROPOSAL TO VISIT WESTERN FRIENDS.

Editors FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

I HAVE read the letters upon "Conditions in the West" with great interest. I came from England last year to visit Friends, all under that name, and was encouraged by the late Howard M. Jenkins and Friends of both sides so that I visited many meetings around Philadelphia. I find myself now in the Middle West and would gladly visit any meetings so far as my means allow. If Friends in Nebraska or Iowa will write me at once, and refer to Isaac H. Hillborn or Herbert P. Worth at the same time, some work may be done. Otherwise I was intending to pass on to California in two or three weeks as there are no meetings in this locality.

ALFRED COOK.

305 Dakota Ave., Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

FRIENDS INVITED TO FISHING CREEK.

Editors FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

I wish to call attention to the fact that the series of meetings included in the general term of the Half Yearly Meeting, at this place, convenes next week, the 17th, 18th and 19th. We are always glad to have concerned Friends from other sections with us, and hope some may feel that their presence and labors are required at this time. Millville is easily reached by rail, by way of Watsonstown, and by stage, by way of Bloomsburg.

SARAH J. KESTER, Cor.

NOTES FROM LONDON YEARLY MEETING.

Taken from reports in the Friend (London) for Fifth month 29th.

ONE of the assistant clerks of London Yearly Meeting on Ministry and Oversight is Joan M. Fry. This is the first time that a woman has sat at the clerk's desk of this meeting.

At the opening session of the yearly meeting "application for leave to attend was made on behalf of Isaac Clothier and his wife and daughter, and Wilmer Atkinson (brother-in-law of the late Howard M. Jenkins), and his wife and three daughters, all of Philadelphia, belonging to the 'other body' in that city. Leave was granted."

Statistics of London Yearly Meeting show a total membership of 17,617, being an increase for the year of 141. The number of particular meetings are 326, "allowed meetings," 43. The number of ministers are 375, an increase of six.

In connection with the "mission membership" a concern was expressed as to the importance of helping young members to suitable work. Dr. Thomas Hodgkin said he would like to see Friends engaged as wardens of prisons, feeling "the great influence for good that the sympathy of a simple-hearted Quaker in such a position might be." Warders come more closely in contact with the prisoners than governors or chaplains.

An earnest concern was felt in the yearly meeting in regard to the present state of the ministry, and especially in regard to the appearance of so few young members in the ministry. Our custom of recording ministers was earnestly considered, some expressing themselves as ready to discontinue it if that should seem best. A desire was expressed that a conference be called "to consider the general subject of the ministry and our own practise in recording ministers." A committee was appointed to consider the matter of such a conference.

A subject that received a great deal of consideration in the meeting of Ministry and Oversight was that of the adult school and mission membership in its relation to the Society. Steps were taken to encourage the bringing of this membership into more vital relationship with the meetings.

NEW YORK YEARLY MEETING.

(Concluded from last week.)

ON Third-day morning the nine queries were taken up and answered. In the afternoon the Philanthropic Committee made its report. The Friendly Employment Society of New York has been active for 41 years. It furnishes sewing to worthy women, thereby enabling many to be self-supporting who otherwise would have to be dependent on charity. The Friendly Aid Association has given temporary relief and assisted in getting employment in thirty families during the past winter. A mission kindergarten is held at Rutherford Place during the summer. The usual activities in Purity, Temperance, Colored People of the South, Prison Reform, Peace, and Equal Rights departments were reported. Reference was made to the importance of work among the colored people of the North, and a concern was expressed that more attention be given to this much-overlooked field for work. A memorial of Robert S. Haviland was presented and called forth much expression. The memorial was ordered to be printed in pamphlet form in addition to its insertion in the minutes of the yearly meeting.

Third-day evening was devoted to a meeting of the Friends' Equal Rights Association. Marianna W. Chapman presided, and there were addresses by Lucretia L. Blankenburg, of Philadelphia, on "The Contribution of Friends Towards the Advancement of Women," and by Carrie Chapman Catt, on "Woman as a Practical Factor in Civic Life."

FOURTH-DAY.

On Fourth-day morning there was a public meeting, at which the first speaker was Abel Mills. Lydia Price spoke of the making of good homes, and of the humble home from which the beautiful need not be excluded. Henry W. Wilbur took the text, "Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost." He said that men have been so much taken up with the myth and miracle of the story of the loaves and fishes that they have overlooked the little lesson of economy contained in the closing words. He spoke of economy in the spiritual life, drawing illustration from the manufacturer's careful saving of the by-products and from the practice of thrift in temporal things. "May 'we lift up our eyes unto the hills from which cometh our strength'; may we gather up the fragments of the little things, not for ourselves, but all." Joel Borton, who attended the yearly meeting on Fourth-day and Fifth-day, spoke from the words in Job, "There is a spirit in man and the inspiration of God giveth it understanding." Martha Townsend, of Baltimore, spoke from the words, "The Master has come, and calleth for thee."

Fourth-day afternoon there was a session of the First-day School Association, addressed by Jesse H. Holmes, whose subject was "The Teacher and his Material." He said in substance: The necessary characteristics of a First-day school teacher are (1) intelligence—not a tremendous amount, just an ordinary, respectable amount; (2) industry—not merely in making a living, but the kind that will not let him rest with meager preparation of the lesson; and (3) courage—that he may say what he thinks, irrespective of the ordinary way of thinking. There must be no steering clear of certain "dangerous" questions. It is better for a teacher to teach right out from his heart, even though he be sometimes mistaken. There is not much danger in honest mistakes; there is danger in getting into ruts. It is very desirable to be right, but it is better to be honest than it is to be right. Among the "dangerous" questions that a teacher must face fairly and squarely are those connected with the Bible. There will be the question of the verbal inspiration; if he has to give it up he must do so frankly and not shrink. If he comes to the conclusion that the Bible is the verbally-inspired standard of life he ought to stand by that and teach it; but in that case he is not a Friend. One thing is essential to be a Friend—the personal standard—the sense of right of the individual, the only standard. A Friend cannot make the Bible his standard, ignoring the immediate revelation of God.

A second series of questions that have been too long lightly touched as "dangerous" are those relating to Jesus and his place in the plan of salvation. We shall find, for instance, that the materials for the study of the miraculous birth of Jesus are very meager. We find that we cannot know all about it; therefore we must honestly and frankly acknowledge it an open question. As to the usually accepted plan of salvation, we find it not very definitely outlined in the Gospels; that it was worked out in church councils, by majority votes, with many opposed. Even those that have most faith in it, do not agree. So we cannot agree. The teacher must have his opinion of it, but must not teach it dogmatically. If he teaches that his scholars must hold the view he holds then he is not a Friend. He must not teach it as settled, for it is not settled. So in regard to the Trinitarian and to the Unitarian view. He must study it with an open mind and present the result of his studies frankly, on whichever side he finds himself standing. He must teach what he believes, but must not teach that every one must believe as he does. God is not angry with us because we know so little about him. The Trinitarian and the Unitarian views are both noble attempts to express the idea of God. Both are true, but neither expresses the whole truth nor the final truth. Making one's own sense of right the only standard may lead the teacher into mistakes, because our faculties through which the light comes to us and by means of which it is interpreted to us, are fallible. And yet in regard to character-building it never fails us. There is no other way of building up character than by following one's own sense of right. By our very mistakes we grow. The very teachings of Jesus, like everything else in the Bible, are to be tested by means of the faculties that have been given us for that purpose. The teachings of Jesus are pre-eminent because they have been tested and not found wanting.

A First-day school teacher, then, who accepts as his only standard his sense of right is a Friend in good standing. He is to go into his class and teach what he believes. If his sense of right, because of defects in his faculties of mind, leads him off into vagaries, or away from what the common sense can approve, then the superintendent of the school must get some one to take his place.

An interesting discussion followed, in which the distinction was clearly made by Edward H. Magill and others between the infallible light of God and the fallible faculties of man by which it is perceived.

Being asked as to the use of the Bible as the text book Jesse H. Holmes said he thought we should use the Bible as much as possible; it has been found of so much value, that if we do not find it so we must feel that there is something wrong with ourselves.

In the evening a meeting was held under the care of the Yearly-Meeting's Committee for the Advancement of Friends' principles, Henry W. Wilbur, presiding. In the discussion of the plan of the work a Friend asked whether the object should be to advance Friends' principles or to enlarge the borders of the Society. Henry Wilbur said the two things cannot be separated. Edward Rawson said "If we work only to build up the Society with nothing back of it but this, there is no danger of our succeeding."

William M. Jackson thought we should speak of Friends' principle rather than principles. The same Inner Light comes to all men as to Friends. They have their theories, but they are only theories, their lives are governed by the same principle. We are not Friends because of our attitude toward war, for instance, or toward intemperance.

Elizabeth Stover said, if we were sufficiently convinced of the need of our message it would be impossible for us to be idle.

William M. Jackson said, it is impossible to do anything in a neighborhood from the outside, unless there is found some one in the neighborhood who is concerned, and is willing to be a leader.

FIFTH-DAY.

On Fifth-day at the morning session the report was heard of the Yearly Meeting's Committee on Isolated Members and also the report of the joint-committee of the several yearly meetings.

In this connection Joel Borton gave some account of his recent visits within the limits of Illinois Yearly Meeting, and of an appointed meeting he attended in Pittsburg.

The Committee on the Advancement of Friends' Principles reported that it has held monthly sessions during the year. Sixteen meetings have been visited, thirty visits having been made. It has used $88 in traveling expenses. Visiting meetings was not regarded by the Committee as an end to be sought, but, in each case to inspire some Friend or Friends on the ground to take up the work, and be actively interested in the advancement of Friends' principles in the neighborhood. Also, speaking in meeting is not the only service, but it is always looked for by those who are visited. The Committee would encourage all who can to develop in themselves what power they may have to speak in public. For the use of the committee the coming year $200 was appropriated.

With the session of Fifth-day afternoon the business of the yearly meeting was brought to a close. Parting words were spoken by Lydia H. Price, Rachel M. Lippincott, Margaretta Walton, Joel Borton and Abel Mills.

Each day during the session of the yearly meeting except Fourth-day a devotional meeting was held at 9 o'clock. The exercises were always brief and the expression general. These meetings were felt by all who attended them to be seasons of refreshment.

BLUE RIVER QUARTERLY MEETING.

"GATHER up the fragments that nothing be lost," was an important command of the Master, which is too often lost sight of in this work-a-day world. To acknowledge the spiritual feast with which we have just been blessed is the purpose of thus giving some account of Blue River Quarterly Meeting, held at Highland Creek Meeting-house, Washington county, Indiana, 23d of Fifth month, 1903, near the place where it was first established over 80 years ago. In the first place the weather was fine and a recent rain had seemed to make all nature rejoice. Next a whole-souled band of representatives from Chicago, Clear Creek, and Hoopston cheered our hearts. Still another blessing was in store, the like of which we had not had for years and years before, and that was the company of visiting Friends, for which we felt humbly thankful to the All Father for these tokens of His loving favor in sending laborers into the field so white unto harvest. Samuel R. Battin, wife and daughter, with minutes from their monthly meeting in Ohio, and Sarah J. Bogue, of Maple Grove Monthly Meeting, Indiana, members of Indiana Yearly Meeting, were acceptably with us. Our assembling together was felt to be in a remarkable degree favored with the overshadowing of the Father's love in the sweet spiritual communion of kindred souls and voiced in the spoken words.

The meeting for ministers and elders on Sixth-day at 2 p. m., though small, was felt to be a profitable season in which we were led to feel that of ourselves we could do nothing. The First-day school quarterly conference held Sixth-day evening was said to be good by those who attended.

First-day opened fair and bright. We had a very satisfactory First-day school in the morning; then meeting in which the spirit of devotion reached the highest, perhaps, of any of the different sessions, and spread as a canopy over the meeting, and was apparent in the different offerings.

At noon a bounteous lunch was served in the shade of the forest trees, an hour of social enjoyment following. There were supposed to be over a thousand present. At 2 p. m. the meeting again convened; a number of testimonies were given.

On Second-day evening an appointed meeting was held which closed the series of meetings.

"Drop thy still dew of quietness,
Till all our strivings cease :
Take from our souls the strain and stress
And let our ordered lives confess
The beauty of thy peace."

Salem, Ind.

SIDNEY TRUEBLOOD.

CENTRE QUARTERLY MEETING.

CENTRE QUARTERLY MEETING was held at Fishertown, Fifth month 30th and 31st and Sixth month 1st. We were glad to have with us David and Ann Branson, of Virginia, Sarah R. Matthews, of Washington, and Lucy Sutton of Baltimore. Also several representatives from other parts of our quarterly meeting. First-day School Association convened at 2 p. m. on Seventh-day. After encouraging reports from our schools were read, a short program was rendered by the children and some older members. Much interest was manifested in the discussion of the question, "How can we best teach our children an idea of God?" The meeting of Ministers and Elders was held at the close of the Association.

Three meetings for worship were held on First-day. Weather being damp and cool, the attendance was not so large as usual but the house was comfortably filled at every session and beautiful order prevailed.

David Branson, Sarah R. Matthews and Reuben P. Kester were favored to present the Gospel of Christ in a clear, practical manner, which found acceptance in seeking, responsive hearts.

A meeting for worship was also held on Second-day morning, which was followed by the regular business of the Quarterly Meeting.

A philanthropic meeting was held on Second-day evening. R. P. Kester gave a very interesting and helpful talk on "Character Building." He emphasized the importance of good home training. Sarah R. Matthews read a paper on "Work among Women and Children," which was much appreciated. She told us that not in the cities alone is this work to be done; if we desire to help, we will find an opportunity in country neighborhoods, also. David Branson spoke of the harmful results of whiskey and narcotics. Short remarks were made by others, and the last session of our Quarterly Meeting closed. All felt we had a most helpful gathering.

The social feature of these occasions is not without its beneficial results, as it brings in close touch laborers in the vineyard. The young are inspired, the aged are cheered by exchange of greeting, and all are stronger to go forward with the Master's work.

Fishertown, Pa.

M. W. B.

LETTERS FROM ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.—III.

London, Fifth month 21st, 1903.

EDITORS FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

I HAVE had it in mind to write some notes somewhat supplementary to my recent letters, filling in omissions here and there, and adding matter germane to the subjects treated, but necessarily omitted for want of time and space. In reading the printed letters, however, I find I cannot do more than add a few disjointed general observations.

First as regards our fellow passengers. The size of our own company of seventeen precluded the necessity, which is generally felt, in a long voyage, of seeking the society of others, and so, although there were numbers of pleasant people in the ship's company of three hundred-and-fifty we made comparatively few acquaintances, at least for some time.

Generally in a trans-Atlantic voyage, there are some well known people aboard, and this voyage was no exception to the rule. I recall but two of the passengers, however, who being somewhat public characters, it seems worth while to name. One was Nathan B. Scott, U. S. Senator from West Virginia, a member of some of the important committees of the Senate, and also a member of the National Republican Committee.

Senator Scott is a man of commanding appearance, and most vigorous personality, one likely to make his presence felt in any company. While I saw him daily, we did not become really well acquainted until we landed at Nice, but we met considerably there, and afterward, in Paris and London. Our first point of contact seemed to be his interest in the Society of Friends. He was placed as a boy among Friends in Ohio, and for several years lived in a Friend's family and attended me-tings, receiving impressions which led him to retain a high regard for the Society and its members. Since we have become well acquainted he has generally used the plain language in addressing me, and although I do not as a rule welcome the use of it in persons not Friends, I felt differently with him, as I thought he really enjoyed its use, and his talks with me pleasantly recalled the memories of his early life. My wife also enjoyed the society of his estimable wife, and it is pleasant to know that we shall be fellow passengers on our return voyage next week.

The other passenger referred to was Antoinette Brown Blackwell, a woman of advanced age, who started on the long trip without, I think, knowing any one on the ship. She will be remembered by survivors of the anti-slavery workers as one of a group of highly cultivated women who made a distinct impression on American life in the past two generations. She was associated for many years with Lucretia Mott, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Julia Ward Howe, and others, in the anti-slavery work, and in the movement for the elevation of women. Fifty years ago she was ordained a minister, the first woman clergyman in the United States, and became widely known for her eloquence as a preacher and her advocacy of the reform movements of the day. She spoke twice, by request, to gatherings of our ship's passengers. The first time I had not made her acquaintance, and did not happen to be present, but the second time, at her request, I acted as chairman, and introduced her to the audience. Her addresses were of a rare order, eloquent, terse, and full of refined thought. Although most quiet and always shunning notice, she was a distinct acquisition to our company, and I think all who came in contact with her felt the benefit of her presence among us.

One of the customs of the East, which strikes newcomers as strange, is the oriental system of trading, the price first asked by the seller being generally not what he expects to get, but intended as a basis of negotiation with the buyer. Beginning with Algiers, wherever we stopped the deck of the steamer was transformed into a trading mart where a general assortment of merchandise was displayed for sale, and eager bargaining was maintained, generally with the women passengers, until just before we sailed, when the merchants were unceremoniously hustled off by the officers. While this unfortunate and demoralizing system of trading is in vogue more or less all through the East, it was probably on the steamer's deck that the most extreme and characteristic specimens of it were found, and it was generally understood that one-half the amount asked by the vender was quite as much as was expected to be realized by him.

I remember one evening inspecting a quaint looking watch said to be several hundred years old, and of no value except as a curiosity. The dealer asked me either ten or twelve dollars for it. When I laid it down and turned away, he called after me and asked what I would give for it. I told him that while I did not care to buy at the price he asked, I did not like the system of making offers. As he insisted, however,

I finally told him, if offered to me for four dollars, I would buy. He made a wry face and told me at once it was mine. As a rule, however, the bargain is only struck after considerable negotiation and much loss of time. Afterward one of my daughters bought a little wooden ornament for a shilling. On hearing of the transaction, I inquired what price had been asked by the dealer, and was told "one shilling." I told her I felt sure she had paid too much and I proposed to see at what price I could buy a duplicate of the same dealer, and I offered six pence which was promptly accepted. I then thought still better could be done, and by way of experiment asked Dr. Swain as a new customer, to offer three pence for another. In a few minutes he came back with it in his possession. I then told my daughter I would see whether one penny would not be accepted for still another, but just then the vendors were ordered off, and we shall never know what the bottom price really was. The trifling cases adduced are similar to many others and are perhaps too extreme to be fairly characteristic, still they are somewhat illustrative of a system which undoubtedly tends to lower the self-respect of both buyer and seller, and which is objectionable in every way.

In writing the Palestine letter, I find I made scant mention of the mosque of Omar, for the reason that in Jerusalem I felt little interest in anything that was not directly connected with the Founder of our religion. This Mosque, however, perhaps the largest and finest temple of the Moslem religion in existence, not excepting Santa Soffia in Constantinople, is of great interest from its immense size and wonderful beauty, and also because it stands on the site of Solomon's temple, a portion of the walls of which are still in existence.

It is outside the mosque and just over the ruins of the walls of the Temple of Solomon that the Jews repair every week to weep and wail. While its sacred associations will always make Palestine a most interesting land, as compared with Egypt there is little of antiquarian interest, the only notable ruins in Jerusalem being the remnant of the walls just referred to of Solomon's Temple.

Of course everything is comparative. When I looked at a few old buildings on High Holborn here in London, which are said to be all that remains of Old London, and perhaps four hundred years old, while at first they seemed of great interest, I could not remember that in Athens and Palestine that which was associated with events of two thousand years ago was afterwards dwarfed in our minds so far as antiquarian interest is concerned, by far older Egypt and associations and ruins two thousand years older still; and so four hundred years will not appear old, at least until this trip is over.

When I read, more than forty years ago, Curtis's book on Syria, my youthful mind was so much impressed with certain portions, especially a chapter entitled "Jerusalem or Rome?" in which he compared the relative interest excited in his mind by the two cities, that it has ever since remained in my memory.

I had intended in this letter to give some account of two rather incongruous experiences—the entry of King Edward of England into Paris, which we saw, and my attendance on a portion of London Yearly Meeting. I find, however, to do so would unduly extend this letter, so I close with some extracts from the chapter referred to as expressing my own feelings better than I could hope to do.

"Rome, Athens, and Jerusalem—the physical, the intellectual, and the moral, do we long doubt which is the greatest?"

"The art of Greece is still supreme. The Empire of Rome has never been rivaled. But the spirit which has inspired art with a sentiment profounder than the Greek—the faith which has held sway subtler and more universal than the Roman—are they not the spirit and the faith that make Jerusalem, the holy, because they were best illustrated and taught by a life whose influence commenced there?"

"More cognate to ready sympathy, more appealing to the sensuous imagination is the pomp of imperial Rome, as with camp-fires burning from the Baltic to the Euxine, and from farthest Euphrates to the Pillars of Hercules, its gorgeous confusion of barbaric splendor and Grecian elegance, gleams athwart the past.

"Fascinated by that splendor, as by auroral fires streaming through the sky, the young student reaches the gates of its metropolis with an ardor that merges in romance.

"Hence were hurled the thunderbolts that shook the world, and whose vibrations tremble yet. Hither came the poet, the philosopher, the statesman, the scholar, and in no city of the world was there ever assembled so much human genius in every kind, and in every time, as in Rome.

"Do you remember, Xtopher, when we came to Rome over the hushed desolation of the Campagna, that separates it from the rest of populous Italy, as the grim belt of the middle ages separates it in history from modern times?"

"The afternoon was waning when we reached the edge of a little hill. Upon those dreams of Rome, rose suddenly Rome itself. It lay beyond us and below, silent and solemn, a group of domes and spires only, the rest was hidden by a hill. But as we proceeded, the city advanced into view, a long procession of architectural pomp—domes, and spires, and campaniles mingling in rich confusion, until, when all had passed before, the dome of St. Peter's closed the pageant like a monarch. In the last rays of the sun, the golden cross blazed in air. Lost in a chaos of memories, expectations, and dreams, we leaned from the carriage and gazed at Rome.

"So, as I smoked the pipe of meditation at the door of the tent, among the hills of Judea, waiting for the day, which should lead me to Jerusalem, returned the vivid image of the moment and the feelings which led me to Rome. It was natural, for Rome and Jerusalem, as the two extremes, are the two most memorable cities of history.

"Yet against the claims of its superb Italian rival, what has the Syrian city to show?"

"To the myriads of men who throng whole centuries of history, headed by the eagle and asserting Rome, Jerusalem opposes a single figure, bearing a palm branch, and riding upon an ass into the golden gate of the city. That palm is the magic wand which shall wave the discordant world into harmony; that golden gate is the symbol of the way which only he can enter who knows the magic of the palm. That single figure is the most eminent in history, the highest hope of art is to reveal his beauty—the sublimest strains of literature are the prophecies and records of his career—the struggle of society is to plant itself upon the truth he taught.

“In the vision of the past, as upon an infinite battle-field, that single figure meets the might of Rome, and the skill of Greece, and the wit of Egypt, and the flame of their glory is paled before his glance. He rode in at the golden gate, and was crucified between thieves. But it is the victim which consecrates the city. In vain the heroism of the republic and the purple splendor of the empire would distract imagination and give a deeper charm to Rome. The cold auroral fires stream anew to the zenith, as we sit in the starlight at the tent door. But a planet burns through them brighter than they, and we no longer discuss which city we approach with the profoundest interest.”

I. H. C.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held on Second-day evening, Sixth month 1st.

Howard Cooper Johnson read a paper entitled, “Growth of Corporate Power,” in which he briefly sketched the development of the corporate idea from the time of the early Roman republic to the present era, when the formation of corporations has reached such magnitude. He maintained that their principle is right, though the methods employed are often wrong, and such methods should be prevented by “casting a strong light upon the actions of directors, forbidding restriction of competition, and keeping the corporations in clear subjection to the laws of the country.”

Dr. Jesse H. Holmes, of Swarthmore College, talked earnestly and to the point, upon the present political aspect and Friends' attitude thereto. Dr. Holmes' attitude was one of great broad-mindedness; he is strong in the belief that one's loyalty is due not to the administration or its exponents, as it now is, but to the ideals on which a democracy is founded. Intelligence, independence, modesty of opinion, and courage are essential qualities of the true patriot. The complacent willingness to ally with the masses, and disinclination to be one of a minority, give support to many disloyal and degrading political acts. Excessive deference to wealth, as shown in its undue representation in Congress; the increasing centralization of power in governmental circles,—these must be fought against. Above all, let a man never have as his only reason for voting a certain ticket, that he has always done so; let him ally himself with the group where he finds truth, without regard to party or precedent. Let him be optimistic in his faith that political conditions can be improved, and untiring in his individual effort to lessen the gulf between the real and ideal democracy. Dr. Holmes made his audience think to some purpose, and his fearless honesty of conviction was refreshing.

Edward C. Wilson, the President of the Philadelphia Young Friends' Association, made his final appearance in that capacity, as he leaves Philadelphia in the fall. It is with the greatest regret that we lose such an actively interested, enthusiastic officer and member.

CAROLINE F. COMLY, Secretary.

NEWTOWN, PA.—The last meeting of the Friends' Association met at the home of Thomas and Elizabeth Stapler, on Fourth-day evening, the 3d inst., Willis G. Worstall presiding.

After Scripture reading, the first paper of the evening was read by Mary Anna Packer, giving a biographical sketch of George Truman. At seven years of age he felt that his Heavenly Father would ask him some future time to dedicate himself to His work, and how faithfully he did dedicate himself to the work of the Father the paper most ably showed.

“Is it wise or helpful to insist that sorrow and suffering are necessary for the development of character and spirituality?” was answered by George Walton. He drew a very nice distinction between the worldly sorrow and the Godly sorrow, citing the characters of Jesus, and Paul, and John Woolman, as expressive of the Godly sorrow, and concluded with the thought that possibly sorrow is necessary for the proper development of our souls, but that we need not seek it.

Ella J. Burroughs read “Nauhaught, the Deacon,” which conveyed its own beautiful lesson.

Sarah F. Cary, on behalf of the Discipline Committee, read a paper giving her own personal views upon the deficiency of our members in living up to the requirements of our Discipline, which paper called out considerable expression.

Elizabeth Packer, representing the Current Topic Committee, read a very timely article on the strike in the Lowell cotton mills, showing what such a strike meant to the community.

The next meeting of the Association will be held in Tenth month.

S. J. R.

PLYMOUTH, PA.—The regular meeting of the Friends' Association was held Sixth month 5th. Lydia Webster opened the exercises by a reading, followed by Isaac Roberts, who read a short selection entitled, “Two Flags and One Bible.” Donald Corson then recited “The Modern Version.” Anne E. Davis read a few extracts from Professor Drummond's “Death,” followed by a review of Current Topics by Elizabeth D. Corson. Benjamin Smith closed the exercises by a reading from “Dynamic Faith” on “Mystics and Mysticism.”

WILLIAM W. ANBLER, Secretary.

HORSHAM, PA.—The Horsham Friends' Association met on First-day afternoon, Fifth month 31. A large number were present. Hannah P. Satterthwaite read an account of the life of John Comly, Martha C. Wood recited “The Tapestry Weavers,” and Hanna Comly “The Battlefield of Life.” Three questions which had been sent by the general conference of Friends' Associations was answered. An address was given by Lucretia Blankenburg, of Philadelphia, on “What Friends have done to advance the cause of equal rights for women.”

MOORESTOWN, N. J.—A regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held on Sixth-day evening, Fifth month 29th. Joel Borton of Woodstown addressed our meeting on “Fidelity to our Principles and Duty to our Meeting.”

The former subject he divided into the three heads, Light, Life and Love.

The latter topic he divided into the three heads, Meetings, Ministry and Conversion. He said that often it is not lack of interest but death and removal that make our meetings small. We should all be earnest workers, even though silent, and it is this virtue which leads to ministry. The life as we have it to-day is made up of the two parts, human and divine, and real true ministry leads to the growth of both.

Conversion is the silent operation that goes on by which gradually the soul is developed, and conscience, the eye to judge what we do, is enlightened. Conversion gives the power to realize what is the “true and perfect will of God.”

After this interesting talk a reception followed.

ANNA B. DUDLEY, Sec.

ACCOITINK, VA.—The Young Friends' Association met at the home of Alfred H. Roberts, Fifth month 10th, 1903, with a large attendance. The president, Charles M. Pidgeon, read the third chapter of St. John. An excellent account of an early Friends' family by Clayton Conrow was read by Sarah

E. Walton, Abbie A. Gillingham read extracts from a biography of Miriam Gover, and the third chapter of Janney's History was reviewed by Anna M. Wilkinson.

After a short intermission an essay, written by Tacy B. Doing, was read by Frank H. Wilkinson. A recitation, "Unawares," by Lewetta Cox, was followed by a reading by George C. Gillingham.

LEWETTA COX, Sec.

Educational Department.

DEGREES CONFERRED AT SWARTHMORE.

At the Annual Commencement of Swarthmore College, Sixth month 9th, degrees were conferred as follows:

BACHELOR OF ARTS, In Greek and Latin:

Carrie Burnham Kilgore, Philadelphia; Fannie Burnham Kilgore, Philadelphia; Clara Price Newport, Swarthmore, Pa.; Norman Sumner Passmore, Oxford, Pa.; Marion Virginia Peirce, West Chester, Pa.; Maud Esther Rice, Newtown, Pa.; Samuel Townsend Stewart, Cleveland, O.

With the major Biology—Edmund Cocks, Cornwall, N. Y.; Margaret Gleim, Lansdowne, Pa.

With the major Chemistry—Edgar Thomson Greene, Germantown, Pa.; Pennock M. Way, Fairville, Pa.

With the major Economics—Joshua Hibberd Taylor, West Chester, Pa.

With the major English—Caroline Clothier, Wynnewood, Pa.; Helen Nesbitt Emley, Philadelphia, Pa.; Elizabeth Westfield Jackson, Bartville, Pa.; William Ely Roberts, New Hope, Pa.; Helen Dewees Souder, Woodstown, N. J.; Elizabeth Sutton, New York, N. Y.; Hallie Gundaker Hulbert, Swarthmore, Pa.; Mabel Pryor, Langhorne, Pa.

With the major French—Anna Josephine Elizabeth Nichols, Wilmington, Del.; Annie Ross, Flushing, N. Y.

With the major German—Helen Elizabeth Lease, Salem, O.; Lulu von Ramdohr, New York, N. Y.; Nora Leland Stabler, Sandy Spring, Md.

With the major History—Byron Beans, Hartsville, Pa.; Elizabeth Martin Booth, Chester, Pa.; Louis Ely Thompson, Penn's Park, Pa.

With the major Physics—William Hannum, Ward, Pa.

BACHELOR OF LETTERS: Inez Helen Lord, Charleston, Ill.

BACHELOR OF SCIENCE, in Engineering: Walker McClun Bond, Winchester, Va.; John Horace Ervien, Ogontz, Pa.; Howard Sterr Evans, Hoyt, Pa.; Robert Emerson Lamb, Baltimore, Md.; Edward Roy Meredith, Calcium, Pa.; Marriott Price, Baltimore, Md.; George Satterthwaite, Conshohocken, Pa.; Asa Pound Way, St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada.

Mechanical Engineer, John Amand Lafore, C. E. 1898, E. E. 1901.

Master of Science, Lewis Fussell, B. S. 1902.

Civil Engineer, Henry C. Turner, B. S. 1893

GEORGE SCHOOL NOTES.

On Sixth-day evening, Fifth month 29th, Prof. William C. Stevenson, of Tome Institute, Port Deposit, Maryland, gave what he chose to call a heart to heart talk with the boys and girls on the right ways of living. He also spoke on the meaning of true education and made a strong plea for more serious, earnest thinking.

On the 30th, the Whittier Literary Society presented the following program:

Recitation, "The Old Man and Jim," Harry Sherwood; Oration, "Ignorence the Barrier to Success," Beulah Hurley; Whittier Greenleaf, by its Editor, Chester Middleton; Farce, "The Elixir of Youth"; Recitation, "The Two Home-comings," Mary Satterthwaite; Farce, "The Census Taker."

The Penn Literary Society held a public meeting on the 6th, when the following program, composed entirely of selections from James Whitcomb Riley, was given: Recitation, "Afterwhiles," Sara Brown; Recitation, "An Old Sweet-heart of Mine," Mary Sands; Recitation, "Knee Deep in June," James Greene; Play, Charles Parker and Marion Watson; Recitation, "Thoughts for a Discouraged Farmer," Harry Parker; Recitation, "The Little Cripple," Vesta

Haines; Gleanings of the Penn by its Editor, Lanning Masters; Recitation, "A Bear Story," Harriet Sheppard; Recitation, "Prior to Miss Belle's Appearance," Harry Buzby.

This spring, a number of the teachers and students signed the pledge of the Pennsylvania Audubon Society for the protection of our native birds, thus increasing the membership in the school to forty-nine.

Feeling the necessity of teaching the students practical business methods, and of providing a safe place of deposit for their money, a George School Bank was opened about two months ago, and has been in successful operation since. The bank which is conducted according to regular banking methods is in charge of the book-keeping class, and is open twice a week for the transaction of business.

Prof. Lorin H. Bailey, professor of mathematics, is president of the bank, Rebecca McDonald is cashier, and two members of the book-keeping class are chosen each week to act as tellers.

Friends wishing to attend the Commencement at George School, Fifth-day, Sixth month 18th, can take a special train at the Reading Terminal at 9.15 a. m. R. A. L.

ABINGTON FRIENDS' SCHOOL.

The corps of instructors at Abington Friends' School for the school year 1903-4 is as follows:

George M. Downing, M. S. (Pennsylvania State College), Principal, Science and Mathematics; Carrie B. Way, B. L. (Swarthmore College), English; Isadore E. Croyse, B. Mus. (Syracuse University), German and Music; Harry H. Derr (Graduate of West Chester Normal School), Mathematics and History; Lyndon E. Ayres, B. A. (Bucknell University), Latin and Mathematics; May E. Stevenson (Graduate of School of Industrial Art), Manual Training; Rachel S. Martin (Graduate of West Chester Normal School), Principal of Primary Department; Elizabeth R. Cox (Graduate of Abington Friends' School), Assistant in Primary Department, Geography; Alda D. Leaw, Matron. An additional instructor is to be appointed in German and French.

The Commencement exercises take place on Fourth-day, Sixth month 17th, at 10 a. m. President Swain, of Swarthmore College, will give the address to the graduating class, which contains eleven members. This is the largest class ever graduated from the institution.

COMMENCEMENT OF BALTIMORE FRIENDS' SCHOOL.

Baltimore Friends' School held its Fifth Annual Commencement Exercises in Park Avenue Meeting-house, on Sixth-day evening, the 5th instant. The meeting-house was well filled. President Ira Remsen, of Johns Hopkins University, addressed the graduates on "The Distinction Between Memory and Knowledge." Dr. Remsen drew largely on his own school days for illustrations needed.

Jonathan K. Taylor, Chairman of the School Committee, also addressed the graduates, speaking, among other things, on some of the advantages of the system of co-education, as practised by Friends.

John W. Gregg, principal, presented the school's diploma to Arthur W. Broomell, G. Lupton Broomell, Harry D. Holme, Muriel Janney, Erma A. Krug, Edith S. Lewis, and Edgar C. Powers.

The scholarship awarded by the Woman's College was won by Muriel Janney. The Swarthmore scholarship was awarded to Arthur W. Broomell.

An informal reception to the graduates followed the graduation exercises.

John W. Gregg expects to study law in Washington next fall. He will be succeeded as principal by Edward C. Wilson, now at the head of the department of Chemistry and Physics at the Friends' Central School, Philadelphia.

PROFESSOR DAVISSON, of the Nebraska State University, has issued a pamphlet in which he claims that the farmers of that State are getting larger dividends than the Steel Trust.

LITERARY NOTES.

"CHANGES in College Life in Fifty Years," by John Bascom in the Atlantic Monthly is an article of especial interest. "A Forgotten Patriot," by Henry S. Pancoast, is a defense of Thomas Day, the author of "Sanford and Merton," whose reputation has suffered on account of Dickens' satire of him and his book. "Baratria," by Leonidas Hubbard, Jr., is an account of the old pirate kingdom of the New Orleans bayous. M. A. DeWolfe Howe gives a lively review of the rise of Unitarianism under the heading, "The Boston Religion."

Among the studies of Wesley and the great Methodist revival of religion is one in the North American Review by Professor Rice of Wesleyan University. In the same number, under the title, "Tennyson; A New Estimate," Frederic Harrison reviews Sir Alfred Lyall's recent life of Tennyson. Marion Wilcox writes of the misuse under Henry VIII., calling it "A Proto-type of Latin-American Misgovernment." In the subsequent experience of England he sees the way to better things for Latin-America. Sydney Brooks discusses the present situation of "Politics in England." "Paterfamilias" takes issue with President Roosevelt in regard to large families, discussing the matter in the interest of the poor man's wife.

The Wesley article in the Review of Reviews is by Dr. J. M. Buckley. A series of articles on the modern treatment of consumptives takes up "The Out-door Treatment," "How to Live Out of Doors," the "Chances in Colorado," and "New York's Fight against Tuberculosis." Charles M. Harger writes on "Forest Making on Barren Lands," describing the experiments in tree-planting on Western sand-hills begun by the Government this spring.

SUBMISSION.

Read at the College Park Association of Friends, San Jose, Cal.

"Though he slay me yet will I trust Him."

DID no cloud our pathway darken

As the maze of life we tread ;

Did our skies all bright and joyous

Naught but light around us shed ;

Were our cup of bliss unmingled

With the bitterness of dread,

We might find this world too radiant ;

And while drinking in its bliss

Deem no other worth our seeking—

None so bright and fair as this—

And in careless joy e'er dwelling,

Thoughts of change with scorn dismiss.

Welcome, then, the cloud and shadow—

Welcome all thou seest we need ;

O, our Father, wise and holy,

Unto thee our steps to lead,

Though full oft on bread of sorrow

Bathed in bitter tears we feed.

Though our hearts all pierced and bleeding

Oft must find the fragile reed,

Once earth's fairest hopes appearing,

In the hour of utmost need,

Broken by thy power in sunder—

Teaching that in very deed,

Every idol from thy altar

Howe'er cherished must come down ;

That without thy aid we perish

Neath the terrors of thy frown,

While earth offers naught so glorious

As the saints' immortal crown.

Ne'er, O ne'er, with hearts repining

May we bow beneath thy rod ;

Called through paths all rough and thorny

As of old the Saviour trod,

May we feel through them we're passing

To the mansions of our God. R. F. B.

The Life of an Ant Queen.

How long may an ant queen live? In their natural habitat some queens doubtless have short lives; but by reason of the protection afforded them, and the seclusion enforced by the workers, they probably live much longer than other members of the community. Within artificial surroundings they attain a comparatively long life. The oldest emmet queen known to science was one preserved under the care of Sir John Lubbock, later Lord Avebury. A number of years ago, during a visit to this distinguished naturalist at his country-seat, High Elms, Kent, the writer for the first time saw this venerable sovereign, living in the ingenious artificial formicary which had been prepared for her. She was then in the prime of life, as it afterward appeared, being seven years old.

In the summer of 1887 Sir John was again visited, this time at his town house in London. After greetings, he was asked about his royal pet.

"I have sad news to tell you," he answered.

"What? Is the queen dead?"

"She died only yesterday. I have not had the heart to tell the news as yet even to my wife."

Having offered my hearty condolence I asked to see the dead queen. Sir John led the way to the room where his artificial nests were kept. The glass case which contained the special formicary in which the old ant had lived was opened up. Lying in one of the larger open spaces or rooms was the dead queen. She was surrounded by a crowd of workers, who were tenderly licking her, touching her with their antennae, and making other demonstrations as if soliciting her attention, or desiring to wake her out of sleep. Poor, dumb, loving, faithful creatures! There was no response. Their queen mother lay motionless beneath their demonstrations.

"They do not appear to have discovered that she is really dead," remarked Sir John. Afterward he wrote me of another queen which died at the age of fourteen. The ants dragged her body about with them when they moved until it fell to pieces.—[H. C. McCook, in Harper's Magazine.]

Emerson's Courtesy.

MARY A. LIVERMORE, the other day, at the final meeting of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association for the season, gave a reminiscence of Emerson, showing how his rare courtesy affected even children. Mrs. Livermore said that when she was a little girl she was monitor at the Hancock School in Boston, and it was her duty to answer the door. One rainy day the bell rang, and she found at the door a tall, thin man with a dripping umbrella, who inquired for the principal. She was just at the hoydenish and disrespectful age, but there was something about this visitor which so impressed her that she led him in as politely as if he had been a prince, placed a chair for him by the fire, relieved him of his wet coat and umbrella, and after she had started to leave the room, came back to draw a fire screen between him and the blaze, for fear he should find it too hot. She afterward expressed to her teacher some surprise at the unwonted civilities she had felt impelled to show the stranger. He answered, "Ah, that was Ralph Waldo Emerson, and that is the effect he has upon everybody. He is so courteous himself that he calls out the latent courtesy in all others."—[Woman's Column.]

A Porto Rican in Pennsylvania.

THE Indian Helper contains the following letter written to Colonel Pratt, by Milagro Schulze, a pupil of the Carlisle Indian School who is now living in a country home.

"I came up here from Porto Rico two years next July and I did not know how to speak a word of English. I go to school here in Kennett Square and I work hard at school and get promoted twice a year. I feel sorry for the other Porto Ricans who don't stay in the country. If I did not have a strong will I never would have stuck this long. I hope you will permit me to remain here until I graduate, then I will go home and teach my people the ways and customs of the northern people.

"My favorite studies are history and biography. One of the great men I read about and admired very much was Abraham Lincoln. I thank you very much for your kindness to me, and if I can never repay you with anything else I will with gratitude."

CURRENT EVENTS.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT reached Washington at 7 p. m., on the 5th instant, on his return from his western trip, and received a warm welcome. On his homeward way he stopped at Freeport, Illinois, and he and his party were driven to the site of the Lincoln-Douglass debate in 1858, where a monument commemorating the event was unveiled in the presence of thousands. In his speech at this place the President eulogized Lincoln as America's greatest orator, and a statesman worthy to rank side by side with Washington, the founder of our republic.

It is impossible at this writing to estimate the great damage done by floods in Kansas and Missouri. At Topeka and Kansas City the waters have subsided, but St. Louis is flooded along the entire water front, and East St. Louis is threatened with complete inundation. Over 200,000 acres of rich farming land are under water and 25,000 people are homeless. Relief is being sent to the stricken cities. As soon as the news of the disaster reached Philadelphia Mayor Weaver, acting for the Citizens' Relief Committee, sent $5,000 to Topeka.

On the 7th instant a torrent descended at daylight from the Blue Ridge Mountains upon the town of Clifton, S. C., with 4,000 inhabitants. The Pacolet river rose 30 feet in one hour, and the loss of life and property was appalling. Five cotton mills at Clifton and Pacolet were destroyed. In addition to the mills large warehouses filled with cotton and cotton cloth were swept away. Thousands of people are homeless and their means of livelihood taken from them. The War Department will furnish absolutely necessary relief in the way of rations, medicines, etc.

In England the interest in the Irish Land Bill has for the time been eclipsed by the proposal of Joseph Chamberlain, the British Secretary of State for the colonies, and leader of the Unionist faction of the Conservative party, that Great Britain abandon her policy of free trade and impose duties on goods imported from all countries except her own colonies. The main object of this policy, which is seconded by Balfour, the British Prime Minister, is to unite the colonies more strongly to the mother country. This plan is opposed by two rising young men in the Conservative party, Lord Hugh Cecil, son of the Marquis of Salisbury, and Winston Churchill.

The Bartram Association met in Bartram's Garden, Philadelphia, on the 3d to do honor to the memory of John Bartram. About 200 persons were in attendance, most of whom were descendants of the famous botanist, and Mordecai Bartram presided. Out of the meeting sprung a movement for the improvement of the Garden, not to convert it into a park of formal cut and line, but to smooth its paths, cut dead branches from the trees and give some appearance of trimness to the lawns. The Executive Committee will take charge of the work, and will ask the coöperation of all historical and naturalist organizations.

It is commonly supposed that the books which are most widely read are fiction, and new fiction at that. The public libraries, however, can sometimes tell a different story. From both San Francisco and Chicago comes the same report that "The Making of an American" by Jacob Riis is one of the most popular books with the readers of those two cities, being rivalled in the former city by Hale's "Recollections of a Century."

NEWS NOTES.

The textile strike in Philadelphia is still unsettled. It is said that 30,000 children are in the strikers' ranks.

The Sultan of Turkey and the Queen of the Netherlands are the only total abstainers among European sovereigns.

Two French passenger steamers collided near Marseilles on the 7th. One vessel sank and over 100 of her passengers and crew perished.

On Commencement Day at Bryn Mawr College, Pa., the corner stone of a fine new library building was laid. Dr. Horace Howard Furness was the chief orator.

French monks who recently arrived at Caracas, after having been expelled from France, have been forbidden by the Venezuelan Government to open a college there.

MUSLIMANS over the world have contributed $2,500,000 to the construction of the Hedja Railway from Damascus to Mecca. The road is finished past the Dead Sea.

In Chicago a general strike of waiters, waitresses and cooks employed in hotels and restaurants began on the 6th instant. The guests in the Grand Pacific prepared their own dinner.

One thousand people left Seattle for Nome on the 2d inst. in three steamships. Each was crowded to its capacity with freight and passengers, and hundreds seeking passage were turned away.

The royal gold medal for the promotion of architecture has been awarded by King Edward to C. F. Maklin, the New York architect who designed the remodeling of the White House.

The United States Grand Jury, in Washington, has returned true bills against the Groff Brothers, charging them with offering bribes to A. W. Machen, former Superintendent of Free Delivery.

HENRY G. MORSE, the head of the New York Shipbuilding Company, whose extensive plant is located on the Delaware, in lower Camden, died suddenly on the 2d instant, from an attack of apoplexy.

The annual wage scales of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, in Pittsburg, has been signed one month before the expiration of the old scale. The workers gain some slight advantages.

The tornado which swept the town of Gainesville, Ga., on the 1st instant, destroyed a large cotton mill, killed 125 people, wounded 300 more and left 1,500 homeless. Army rations are being issued to the sufferers.

A NEGRO who shot a white man was taken last week from a jail in Belleville, Ill., by a mob and hanged, after which his body was thrown into a blazing bonfire. The other atrocities committed are too horrible to relate.

The strike of the journeymen carpenters in Philadelphia is practically ended. The men are to work 44 hours per week at 45 cents an hour, until Tenth month 1st and 48 hours per week the remaining eight months of the year.

The old order of German Baptists, whose national convention was recently held at Kakarusa, Ind., decided by a vote that members should not be permitted to use telephones in their homes. Five thousand persons attended the conference.

A CONVENTION of United Mine Workers has been called to meet in Pottsville on the 15th, it is thought for the purpose of electing the miners' three members of the Conciliation Board. Credentials from such a convention will be acceptable to the operators.

GOVERNOR TAFT has written to the Government that there is little real famine in the Philippines and that the $3,000,000 appropriated by Congress will be sufficient to relieve real needs. A contract has been made to import into the islands 10,000 carabao that have been made immune from rinder pest.

ARMSTRONG & McKEELY
Pittsburgh.
BE' MER-BADMAN
Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS
Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK
Pittsburgh.
ANGOR
Cincinnati.
EOKSTEIN
Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC
BRADLEY
BROOKLYN
New York.
JEWET
ELSTER
UNION SOUTHERN Chicago.
SHIPMAN
COLLIER
MISSOURI
St. Louis.
RED SEAL
SOUTHERN
JOHN Z. LEWIS & BROS CO
Philadelphia.
MORLEY
Cleveland.
SALEM
Salem, Mass.
CORNELL
Buffalo.
KENTUCKY
Louisville.

IN painting the use of Turpentine saves labor and the use of Dryer saves time, but the excessive use of either destroys the paint.

Safety lies in using Pure White Lead and Pure Linseed Oil, and having the paint thoroughly brushed out. This may require a little more time and labor, but it will pay. The paint will be satisfactory and it will last.

If interested in paint or painting, address

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL

Manufacturing Optician

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

Men's Summer Underwear

We sell enormous quantities of Men's Underwear at fifty cents a garment. It is a popular price, and we are making it more popular all the time by selling at fifty cents qualities that are sold freely elsewhere at seventy-five cents. These are some of the kinds for men:

French Balbriggan—fine, light-weight, and extra well made; long or short sleeves and legs; bicycle seats—50 cents each.

Otis Co.'s Underwear—very fine Sea Island Cotton Balbriggan; long or short sleeves and legs; drawers have Otis double gusset—50 cents each.

Egyptian Balbriggan—made of superior combed yarn; shirts have looped-on ribbed skirts; drawers have double bicycle seats—50 cents each.

Morley's White Gauze Shirts—a famous English make; long or short sleeves; a quality that sells regularly at 75 cents each—50 cents each.

White Gauze Drawers—a domestic make, of combed yarn, that goes with the Morley shirts—50 cents each.

Peppercil Drawers—our own make; jean and feather-weight, with elastic web or string and button ankles—50 cents each.

Athletic Drawers—in knee length; our own make; jean and feather-weight styles—50 cents each.

Imported Lisle Shirts—in mesh style, with short sleeves only; a popular number—50 cents each.

Additional styles at 50 cents are of medium-weight natural wool, light-weight silver-gray cotton, fast-black and light-blue balbriggan.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

6TH MO. 13.—THE COMMITTEE ON Philanthropic Labor of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends will meet in the Meeting-house, Fifteenth and Race Streets, Philadelphia, at 1.30 o'clock p. m. The Sub-Committees will meet as follows:

The Indian, in Room No. 5, at 10.30 a. m.

Peace and Arbitration, in Room No. 3, at 10 a. m.

Colored People, in Race Street Meeting-house, at 9.30 a. m.

Improper Publications, in Room No. 4, at 10 a. m.

Purity, in Room No. 2, at 9 a. m.

Women and Children, in Race Street Parlor, at 12.15 p. m.

Equal Rights for Women, in Room No. 6, at 10.45 a. m.

Temperance and Tobacco, in Room No. 1, at 11 a. m.

Educational and Publication Committee, in Room No. 1, at 9.30 a. m.

Legislation Committee, in Race Street Parlor, at 10.30 a. m.

All members of the Friends' Equal Rights Association of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting are invited to attend the meeting of the sub-committee on Equal Rights for Women; Lucretia M. Blankenburg is expected to be present.

6TH MO. 13.—BURLINGTON FIRST-DAY School Union will be held at "The Mount." All are cordially invited.

Carriages will meet the 8.18 a. m. train from Kinkora at Jolustown, the 8.27 train from Wrightstown, and 9.10 from Mount Holly at Birmingham.

6TH MO. 13.—A COMBINATION PICNIC by Girard Avenue and Race Street First-day Schools will be held at Abington Meeting Grounds. Take Willow Grove cars on Eighth or Thirteenth Streets to Greenwood Avenue, Jenkintown. All are cordially invited.

6TH MO. 14.—CORNWALL, N. Y., FRIENDS' Association, at the home of William Westervelt, at 3 p. m.

6TH MO. 14.—A CONFERENCE AT WARMINSTER Meeting-house under the care of Abington Quarterly Meeting's Philanthropic Committee, at 3 p. m., will be addressed by Elizabeth Lloyd, on "Scientific Temperance Instruction."

6TH MO. 14.—A CIRCULAR MEETING AT Frankford, at 3.30 p. m.

6TH MO. 14.—MARY TRAVILLA, OF WEST Chester, will attend Plymouth meeting in the morning, and will address a meeting of the Friends' Association, in the meeting-house, at 3 p. m.

6TH MO. 14.—VALLEY MEETING, 10 A. M., will be visited by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit the smaller branches.

6TH MO. 14.—A CIRCULAR MEETING under the care of a committee of Western Quarterly Meeting will be held at Homeville.

6TH MO. 15.—GENESEE YEARLY MEETING, at West Lake (Bloomfield), Ontario, at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 10 a. m.

6TH MO. 18.—MULLICA HILL, N. J., Young Friends' Association.

6TH MO. 18.—PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY Meeting, at Fifteenth and Race Sts., at 7.30 p. m.

6TH MO. 18.—FISHING CREEK HALF-Yearly Meeting at Millville, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 3 p. m.

6TH MO. 18.—GREEN STREET MONTHLY Meeting, at Fourth and Green Sts., Philadelphia, at 3 p. m.

6TH MO. 18.—QUAKERTOWN, PA., YOUNG Friends' Association at the home of Dr. W. H. and E. Irene Meredith.

6TH MO. 21.—A CONFERENCE UNDER THE care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor will be held in the meeting-house at Birmingham, at 2.30 p. m.

6TH MO. 21.—A CONFERENCE UNDER THE care of the Philanthropic Committee of Western Quarterly Meeting, in Hockessin Meeting-house, at 2.30 p. m. Opening address by Arthur H. Tomlinson, of Swarthmore Pa.

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing customers of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

JOSEPH L. JONES

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
 Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers. For book on sample, write Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a, FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
 Two occupants, 50 cents each per night; $2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
 *Phone 1-33-55.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co. STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.
 O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue. Uptown offices, 808 and 1008 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
 J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

Dead men's estates are often absorbed by their debts, leaving the family penniless.

The household loaf is never buried with the household head, when that head has a policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
 921-3-5 Chestnut St.

REDUCED RATES TO GETTYSBURG

VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD, ACCOUNT PROHIBITION STATE CONVENTION.

On account of the Prohibition State Convention, to be held at Gettysburg, Pa., June 16th to 18th, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets to Gettysburg and return, good going June 15th and 16th, and good to return until June 19th, inclusive, from all stations on its lines in the State of Pennsylvania, at rate of a single fare for the round trip.

REDUCED RATES TO ATLANTA, GA. AND RETURN.

VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY, ACCOUNT NATIONAL CONVENTION BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION OF AMERICA, JULY 9TH-12TH, 1903.

On July 6th to 9th, inclusive, round trip tickets will be sold to Atlanta, Ga., via the Southern Railway on account of above convention at rate of one fare, plus $1.00, from trunk line territory, final limit July 15th.

By depositing ticket with special agent at Atlanta on or before July 15th and payment of fee of fifty cents, an extension of final return limit may be obtained to August 15th, 1903. The round trip rate from Philadelphia will be $22.50, proportionately low rates from other points.

Side trips tickets will be sold from Atlanta to various points on July 13th and 14th, final limit, ten days, at rate of one first-class fare, plus 25 cents for the round trip.

Chas. L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

A KIND-HEARTED suburban street-car conductor explained as follows how he came to be called "Old Catnip":

"Out where my car runs, catnip grows all along the track. There's pretty near a mile of catnip out there. Several years ago I brought in a little bundle, and gave it to one of my neighbors for her cat. She parcelled out that catnip all around the block to other people who had cats, and they tell me the cats nearly lost their minds over that fresh catnip.

"Most town cats, you know, never get any catnip except this old, dried stuff from the drug stores. It's pitiful, isn't it? I suppose lots of nice cats have lived and died without ever tasting a bit of fresh country catnip.

"Well, pretty soon some of the other neighbors began asking me to bring them a little bundle of catnip; and the thing rolled up until now I run a big catnip business all summer without a cent of money in it, either. I had to have my daughter make a list of my catnip customers; and I take them in turn, all summer long, until cold weather comes.

"The story has got out on me, too," concluded the conductor looking a trifle sheepish. "And some of the other men call me 'Old Catnip,' and they call my car 'The Catnip Car.' But I don't care. It pleases a lot of women and pleases a lot of cats, and I'd rather please women and cats than please most of the men I know.

"Yes, I smell of catnip all summer long; but what's the difference? It's a good, clean smell, catnip is,"— [Gathered.]

GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN sat one spring morning in Union Square, New York, as was his custom, surrounded by children, to whom, contrary to his attitude toward adults, he was always affable and agreeable. On the outside of the group surrounding Mr. Train stood a small colored girl looking wistfully at the white children who were receiving all his attention and hearing his wonderful tales. After they had dispersed and Mr. Train was alone the black child advanced timidly and said to him: "Do you love children?" Looking at his questioner in some surprise, Mr. Train admitted that he did. Then in a low voice she said: "I am a child." — [Chicago Chronicle.]

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelopes). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet. 27 pages. *Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. *A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

*All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association, N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Meaning of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail $0.22. "The reading of which is a spiritual feast."— FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.11.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.22.

The Doukhobors. By Joseph Elkington. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated, $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION, N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

United Security Life Insurance and Trust Company OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Capital, $1,000,000
Surplus and undivided profits, 500,000

Banking and General Trust Co. Business

OFFICERS:
WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
ESMONDE H. AUSTIN, Second Vice-President and Treasurer.

CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS, Assistant Treasurer.
HENRY LABARRE JAYNE, Counsel.
FRANCIS H. HEMPERLY, Actuary.
T. HEWSON BRADFORD, M.D., Medical Director.

DIRECTORS:
William M. Coates, William H. Lucas,
Caleb J. Milne, William R. Verner,
V. C. Sweetman, J. W. Hampton, Jr.,
Charles Porter, Orlando Grease,
Robert Dornan, I. Layton Register,
John G. Carruth, Esmonde H. Austin,
William Bault, Silas W. Festit,
Joel Cook.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (INCORPORATED)
220 S. 2nd St., Philadelphia

A TEACHER was recently giving instruction to her pupils on the modern history of Italy, in the course of which attention was called to the Vatican as being the residence of the Pope. This lesson was followed by one on chemistry, when the terms solid, fluid, and vacuum were adequately defined. A review of the lessons on the following day brought out a startling revelation. The question was asked, "What is a vacuum?" To which one little girl gave the astonishing reply, "A vacuum is the place where the Pope lives."

An eminent bacteriologist recently examined the skirts of a fashionable lady after she had been on a shopping expedition, and found on them thousands of bacteria, among which were the bacilli which produce diphtheria, lock-jaw and consumption.—[The Chautauquan.]

STEPPING off a railroad train to-day we found two carriage drivers anxious to get us. The nearest horse had no tail. The other a long one. We employed the driver of the horse that had a tail, and then said to him, "We employ you because your horse has a tail." The driver was much pleased. If all friends of horses will do in all cases just what we did, much good will be accomplished.—[Geo. T. Angell, in Our Dumb Animals.]

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER. ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS AND CORPORATIONS. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION REGISTERS AND TRANSFER AGENT.
ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

VERY LOW RATES ON MANY POINTS REACHED VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

The Southern Railway Company announces the sale of tickets at extremely low rates from points on its lines for the following special occasions:

- Asheville, N. C., Southern Educational Association, June 30-July 3, 1903.
- Asheville, N. C., National Dental and adjunct Societies, July 2-11, 1903.
- Athens, Ga., Summer School, July 1-August 9, 1903.
- Atlanta, Ga., National Convention B. Y. P. U., of America, July 9-12, 1903.
- Knoxville, Tenn., Souther School, July 23-July 31, 1903.
- Monteagle, Tenn., Public School, July 1-August 30, 1903.
- St. Louis, Mo., Saengerfest of North American Saengerbund, July 17-20, 1903.
- San Francisco, Cal., Annual Encampment, Grand Army of the Republic, August 17-22, 1903.
- Tuskegee, Ala., Southern School, June 26-August 7, 1903.

Above rates open to the public. Tickets will be sold at above points from all stations on Southern Railway. Detailed information can be had upon application to Chas. L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

REDUCED RATES TO LAKEWOOD, N. Y.

VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD, ACCOUNT MEETING GENERAL SECRETARIES Y. M. C. A.

For the benefit of those desiring to attend the meeting of the Association of General Secretaries of the Y. M. C. A. of North America, at Lakewood, N. Y., June 16th to 22d, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell round-trip tickets to Lakewood and return from all stations on its lines, June 16th and 17th, good to return until June 23d inclusive, at rate of a single fare for the round trip.

EMERSON enjoyed doing certain sayings of Thoreau, as "So the circumstantial evidence is very strong, as when you find a trout in the milk." The chub is a soft fish, and tastes like boiled brown paper salted."

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices Samples Free to any Address

A. L. DIAMANT & CO., 1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets (Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE 1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

AQUILA J. LINVILL, Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal, 1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

LANSDOWNE AND DARBY SAVING AND TRUST COMPANY

Full Paid Capital, $125,000.00.

2 per cent. paid on Check Deposits, 3 per cent. paid on Savings Deposits.

GEORGE FOSTER WHITE, President, Treasurer and Trust Officer; W. LANE VERLINDEN Vice-President; JOSEPH T. BUNTING, Second Vice-President; MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary; LEWIS LAWRENCE SMITH, Solicitor. Acts as Executor, Administrator, Trustee, Guardian or Agent. Will prepared and kept free of charge where this Company is named as Executor. Aims at perfect service and perfect Security. Either the Franklin National Bank or the Girard National Bank will receive deposits for this company.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, SIXTH MONTH 20, 1903.

OPPOSITE THE BRITISH MUSEUM

THACKERAY HOTEL

(TEMPERANCE)

Great Russell Street, LONDON

Passenger Lift. Electric Light in all Rooms. Bath Rooms on every Floor. Spacious Dining, Drawing, Writing, Reading and Smoking Rooms. All Floors Fireproof. Night Porter. Telephone.

BEDROOMS from 2-6 to 4-6 per night

Inclusive charge for Bedroom, Attendance, Table d'Hôte Breakfast and Dinner from 8-6 to 10-6 ($2.10 to $2.60) per day.

Full Tariff and Testimonials on Application.

Telegrams: "THACKERAY, LONDON."

Illinois-On-The-Strand

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

WALTON & FRENCH

Ocean view unexcelled Bell 'Phone No. 26

Will remain OPEN throughout the year

The Rose Valley Guest House

MOYLAN, DEL. CO., PA.

Between MEDIA and SWARTHMORE.

A quiet and beautiful retreat. Vernon Run and Ridley Creek wind through the valley. Boating and swimming. Pure water. Our own garden. Good train service and trolley. Address: NATHAN KITE, Moylan, Pa.

THE HOBART,

Write for booklet.

310 SEVENTH AVE., NORTH ASHBY PARK, N. J.
Address E. H. BAKER, Formerly of Atlantic City.

The Marlborough. Kept by Friends.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.

Under entirely new management. One block from bathing grounds and hot sea baths. For particulars

Address SAMUEL B. LIPPINCOTT,
17 Sea View Avenue.

THE DRIFTWOOD

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Special Spring Rates. For particulars address

SARAH J. FAXSON and SISTERS

NEW ARBORTON

Kept by Friends.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.

Half block from the sea. For particulars address

HANNAH BORTON,
Hot salt baths. 7 Sea View Ave., Ocean Grove, N. J.

The Pennhurst,

Second House from Beach

MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,

1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts

K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE., ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.

M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

WANTED.—MAN AND WIFE, OR SUITABLE person, who will assume the responsibility of keeping and share expenses with a family of two (Friends) in exchange for the privileges of a refined home in Philadelphia. References exchanged. Address No. 54 1/2 Office.

WANTED.—BY FAMILY OF FOUR ADULTS, a furnished house in country, convenient to the city, for part of the summer, at a nominal rent. Best care would be taken. Address S. F. B., this Office.

WANTED.—NEAR NEW YORK CITY a capable woman to care for semi-invalid and assist in housekeeping. Servants kept. Address Mrs. Charles Tyson, Kitchawan, West Chester co., N. Y.

WANTED.—POSITION AS ASSISTANT IN country, Friends' boarding home or school. Address F. K. D., this Office.

WANTED.—YOUNG WOMEN TO ENTER the Training school for Nurses of West Philadelphia Hospital for Women. Apply to M. E. Kelsey, Superintendent, 4035 Parrish Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—BOARDERS FOR THE SUMMER in country. Friends' Family. Modern conveniences. Apply early. Box 125, Windstown, N. J.

FARMER.—WANTED A MARRIED MAN to farm place. Must be reliable and experienced. Tenant house. Address with terms and full particulars. No. 92, this Office.

FARM-HAND.—WANTED A GOOD, STEADY man to work on grain farm. Wages $30. Address No. 92, this Office.

HELEN G. BORTON WHO IS A STUDENT IN Emerson College, Boston, is prepared to give "The Lost Word," by Henry van Dyke as an evening's program for Young Friends' Associations and other meetings. After Fifth month 24th for particulars address Helen G. Borton, Woodstown, N. J.

BOARDERS DESIRED IN FRIENDS' FAMILY on farm. Desirable location. Address S. 800 Spring Mill Avenue, Conshohocken, Pa.

TO RENT.—BY SEPTEMBER 1st, TO A RE- fined family, for board of owner (a lady), 21-room house in West Philadelphia. Address T. E. Hendrickson, 617 Market Street, Philadelphia.

FOR RENT.—S. W. COR. TWENTIETH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 13 rooms and 2 baths, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

FOR SALE OR RENT.—A VERY DESIRABLE summer or winter residence at very low figures because the owner has no further use for it. Sixteen rooms, all modern conveniences. Large grounds, plenty of shade, good water. Good steam and electric car service. Schools as good as the best. Immediate possession. And also for sale a number of first lien mortgages on farms in Missouri, in South East Kansas or in Oklahoma; placed by men of good reputation and long experience. For particulars, address R. HAINES PASSMORE, Real Estate and Loan Agent, West Chester, Pa.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

Geo. C. Child,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

A Printer's Promise

means much or little according to the printer who makes it. We believe that not a little of our success in holding customers is due to the way we keep promises.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE BETTER KIND OF PRINTING
1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

And echoing sweetly, on the hill,
Whistles the sorrowing whippoorwill.

—Alfred Billings Street.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

THE members of the First-day School Assembly will leave Philadelphia in a body on the train leaving Broad Street Station at 12 o'clock, Second-day, Sixth month 22d. This train stops at West Philadelphia, 12.03 p. m., Germantown Junction, 12.12 p. m., Trenton, 12 p. m., and at all important stations on the Belvidere Division.

For those who will agree to return in a party on the afternoon train, on Seventh month 6th, reaching Philadelphia at 8 p. m., it is possible to obtain a party ticket good for ten or more at the rate of $4.57 each person. Those who wish to travel on this party ticket should meet Robert Fyle, of West Grove, Pa., in the west end of the Ladies' Waiting Room, Broad Street Station between 11 a. m. and 11.30 a. m. on the morning of starting. It takes some time to procure the party ticket and those reaching the station after 11.30 cannot be included. The regular excursion ticket, from Philadelphia to Cresco, good to return at any time and on any train, is $5 20.

Mark all baggage, whether valise or trunk, with a tag having thereon the owner's name and the words, "First-day School Assembly."

Carriages will meet the party at Cresco station.

There are accommodations in the settlement for others who may wish to visit Buck Hill Falls at this time. The Assembly arrangements are all extra to the regular equipment of the settlement.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Pocono Pines Assembly

AND Summer Schools

NAOMI PINES, PA.

New Assembly Inn, opens June 1, 1903.

Overlooks lake three miles long, half mile wide. 400 acres of Old Pines. Rowing, sailing, bathing, 200 feet Elevation. Open fire places and blankets a necessity. Always cool. Wide verandas. Shady walks. Bible conference July 14-26. Summer schools July 27th to August 15th, faculty of twelve, including President ISAAC SHARPLESS, JOSEPH WALTON, etc.

New Auditorium and Lecture Hall in the Pines.

Write L. H. BEDELL, Manager,
Reasonable Terms. Naomi Pines, Pa.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME. WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: V. F. A. BUILDING,

N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.

*A TELEPHONE NO. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXV. 385
 POETRY: DAYBREAK. 385
 ADDRESS OF JOSEPH WHARTON TO SWARTHMORE GRADUATES OF 1903. 385
 QUAKERISM AT SWARTHMORE. 386
 WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson.—Continued. 387
 SWARTHMORE COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT. 389
 EDITORIAL:
 -Swarthmore College. 390
 -Non-Resistance. 390
 -Notes. 391
 -BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS. 391
 -SOCIETY NOTES. 391
 -PRESIDENT SWAIN TO THE ALUMNI. 392
 -A LETTER FROM THE DOUKHOBORS. 394
 -CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.. . . . 394
 -EDUCATIONAL. 395
 -PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES. 396
 -LITERARY NOTES. 396
 -BUCK HILL FALLS ASSEMBLY. 396
 POETRY: The Significance; Industrial Peace; The Sandman. 397
 METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR FIFTH MONTH. 397
 WORK FOR PEACE IN ENGLAND. 397
 PATENT MEDICINES AND THE DRINK HABIT. 398
 MISCELLANY: Be Accurate; A City Country Club; Thirty Poisonous Plants; How a Spider Used Sixpence; Wendell Phillips' Apt Reply. 398, 399
 CURRENT EVENTS. 399
 NEWS NOTES. 400
 CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS. 400

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing Optician

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OFFICES: { 603 Walnut Street, Philadelphia,
{ Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
325 SWEDE STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Thompson Shourds, 2212 Wallace Street,
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds. Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa
Phone 3-54-78 D Filbert.

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sanson Street. Philadelphia, Pa.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.)
REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
Keystone ad Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

J. Linden Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
ARCHITECTS
Telephone Connection 531 Chestnut Street, Philad'a

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING AND SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,
Telephones. Girard Building and
216 W. Coulter St.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $3.00; all three $2.55.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,
FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

EUGENE BAKER,
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, } Principals.
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.
For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES, Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Jenkitown, Pa.
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City. For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.
A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.
Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.
For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)
New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.
For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A. M. (University of Pennsylvania) Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Sabbath-day, from 1 p. m. to 3 p. m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer
1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, SIXTH MONTH 20, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 25.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XXV.

In the economy of God, no effort, however small, put forth for the right cause, fails of its effect.

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

From "The Scottish Reformers."

DAYBREAK.

I AM waking in the morning, oh, so early,
Though my friends, the owls, have fallen fast asleep,
And the birds have all begun their hurly-burly,
From the solemn rooks to small birds' tiny cheep.

They are singing in the thorns below the willows,
In the firs across the beck they loudly sing ;
They have left their tiny broods on downy pillows,
And the merry wives are busy marketing.

Earth's incense, the cool mist, is passing slowly,
Which will all distill as dew when day is born—
And beneath God's dome, so clear, so blue, so holy,
Swells the Hallelujah Chorus of the dawn !

—E. M. P., in Friends' Quarterly Examiner, London, Eng.

ADDRESS OF JOSEPH WHARTON TO SWARTHMORE GRADUATES OF 1903.

YOUR admission to Swarthmore College four years ago gave evidence that you had worthily availed yourselves of the opportunities for study which had been open to you. The diplomas you receive to-day testify that you have not failed to profit by the opportunities for improvement which you have here enjoyed.

When the doors of Alma Mater close upon you as students, you pass beyond them into the world of mature humanity to meet novel and varied opportunities, for gain, for growth, for usefulness, but alas! for decay and ruin also. Some of those opportunities you will embrace, others you will reject, thus making your several futures.

I purposely reiterate the word opportunities in order that your attention may be drawn to it and to what it signifies. Opportunity is not synonymous with chance, or occasion; it does not imply obligation. It is of wider scope, and is more precious than either of these, for, as above intimated, it involves the conception of choice, of free will. Rather does it mean an opening of the way, a release from limitations, an arrival of favoring conditions which bring within reach what before was unattainable.

This great word opportunity carries our thought backward and forward to infinity; backward as far as we can imagine an ego to have existed before thus clothed with flesh, forward as far as we can imagine an ego to survive the decay of this mortal frame.

Do we dream; are we fain to believe that this spark of spiritual life which animates each of us was and is forever immortal, imperishable? Was then each spark one of an inconceivable multitude, incorporeal yet endued with polarity, with specific purpose or aim which it constantly sought, progressing from stage to stage as opportunity occurred? Has it thus been a successful candidate among those myriads for innumerable advancements; been conditioned, rusticated, never quite expelled, until, after so many toils and trials, it graduated upon a bright Commencement Day into this mundane career? Then how many opportunities must it have seized and made use of, for since eternity is as devoid of beginning as of ending, and existence implies motion or change, the arrival here of such a pre-existing individual life must be the result of infinite endeavor, the prize of countless victories.

How priceless, therefore, is this present life in the clear light of reason, the warm sunshine of affection, the ardor of virtuous resolution and activity; this hardly won foothold in a new arena teeming with opportunities for further conquests that yield vast improvements here preparatory to infinite gains hereafter!

Should we dismiss as fantastic the conception of individual life prior to this life; is it inherently less probable than life surviving this one? Do not hundreds of millions of Asiatics believe both, in the form of transmigration? Have not many eminently sane persons felt conscious of previous existence? Did not Châteaubriand declare that he had long resisted being born into this world? Did not Cicero say that the easy acquisition of learning, as for instance a language, by certain persons, seemed to indicate that they had known it before? And when we read in the book of Job that the Lord said, "Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth," may we not take the author to mean that the spirit of Job then in some way existed? Can we not all say with Wordsworth—

"Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting :
The soul that rises with us, our life's star,
Hath had elsewhere its setting,
And cometh from afar."

When we pass from consideration of the vague and mysterious past to that of the mysterious future, we seem to be on comparatively familiar ground, because that future has been for so many ages the subject of most earnest thought and emotion. Innumerable persons have not only attained assurance of their individual immortality, but have acquired therewith a hope approaching certainty of meeting their departed friends, and of enjoying with them perpetual felicity untroubled by cares or toils.

It is not for us to dispute these conceptions of the future; let us rather take to heart the conviction that just so far as we make good use of our opportunities here, shall we be prepared to avail ourselves of whatever opportunities any future existence may offer.

Is this prospect of endless endeavor less alluring than the prospect of eternal idle bliss? Is it better to be an insect drowned in rum or molasses than to be a valiant spirit battling somewhere against ancient chaos and misrule—against all that is foul and evil? Surely all who think must rejoice to believe that if immortality of the ego may be assumed, endless opportunities must arise wherein it may struggle victoriously for order, purity and righteousness, itself gaining thereby vigor, beauty and happiness.

Shall we face the alternation of doubting universal individual immortality? Let us not scorn him who so doubts, for he is not alone. The ancient Israelites, the ancestors of our religion, appear to have had little or no conception of personal immortality, and the great Jewish sect, the Sadducees, even to the coming of Jesus, were not convinced of it.

Are we quite sure that Jesus, when he declared that his followers should have eternal life, did not leave open the inference of absolute death or extinction for others, not his followers, who yet were not such workers of iniquity as to merit everlasting fire?

Calvin's doctrine of preterition means simply that those who were not elected by God for salvation were by him passed by, not preordained to eternal life. Preterition therefore does not necessarily signify everlasting torment with the wicked, but rather failure for the non-elected to survive; that is, extinction.

And something akin to this is coming into favor with modern philosophers; namely, that but a small part of mankind so live as to merit or achieve continued existence, thus following closely the saying of Jesus, "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

Evidently, however, this occasion does not invite or permit further development of so great a subject, but those who lack faith in personal immortality in any form cannot deny that the momentous consequences of opportunity embraced or neglected are perpetuated in the forms of heredity, of family and racial evolution. The choices and the deeds of our ancestors bear fruit in our own characters, which again survive in the uplifted or degraded condition of our descendants, from age to age.

Nor can we do more than allude to man's power of making opportunities and of using them, as well as those afforded by the occurrences of life, to impress one's character and ideals upon those around him, upon others whom he never personally touches, and even upon all the future generations of men.

Knowing thus that reiterated action produces character, and that character determines the future for ourselves and our descendants, we still cannot know whether that future is to be in this life only, or in an identity surviving death. Yet, whether we regard an endless chain of mundane evolution or an infinite vista of personal immortality, we cannot dispute the inestimable value of the varied opportunities our lives constantly offer, nor the inexorable necessity of rightly living this present life.

But can you hope to live rightly unsupported by creed, or dogma, or theological doctrine? You need those things no more than the Venus of Milo needs corsets. Your guidance and support must come from within you.

"So high is grandeur to our dust,
So near is God to man,
When Duty whispers low, Thou must!
The youth replies, I can."

Enter then with cheerful courage into the great world of adult life. Choose among the opportunities that will offer to you, holding always to your main purpose of righteousness, despite all allurements. Do your duty bravely and honestly though storms arise, never doubting that, though it may seem long delayed, you or your children shall receive the reward of your well-doing, for "shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?"

QUAKERISM AT SWARTHMORE.¹

THE principles and teachings of Quakerism have a very definite bearing on the student life of Swarthmore. The fundamental doctrines of the Society of Friends are so bound up in the customs and traditions of the College that they have an important influence on the life within its walls.

The peculiar doctrine of the Society—that of the intimate relation between a Higher Power and the individual, and the Friends' devotion to simplicity,—have made the Quaker meeting for worship very different from the service of other religious organizations. Its basis is the silent communion, the good as revealed to each individual.

To many unaccustomed to silent service, the meeting hour with its quiet way at first seems a burden, but gradually comes the ability to sit quietly and restfully in the silence and to carry out a consecutive line of thought. Those who are not members of the Society receive this training in no other way, for the silent service is peculiar to the Society of Friends. The "sweet dew of quietness" shed their influence upon all, and if at first unappreciated, the meeting hour may in time become a source of help and strength. In some of the most refreshing and inspiring meetings there is no word spoken, but those who sit in the silence must seek for the refreshment and inspiration which they receive—it does not come unsought.

There is no pre-arranged program for the Friends' order of worship. He who breaks the silence does it from a sense of duty arising within him at the time. There can be no prepared sermon and no remuneration for such service. It comes from a prompting to fill the needs of the hour and as such must spring directly from the heart.

Quakerism does not concern itself with theology or with the points of difference upon which other religious bodies divide. These are of small importance. The Friend says with Whittier :

¹Oration delivered by Elizabeth Sutton at the Commencement Exercises of Swarthmore College.

" I know not what the future hath
Of marvel or surprise ;
Assured alone that life and death
His mercy underlies."

The question of prime importance is the present life, and the Friend aims to make that life the best he can, with the divine assurance that the future life will care for itself.

Instead of ceremonies and sacrifices, Friends hold to the belief that " God is the animating spirit of the universe, present in all things, man not excepted," and in this theory there is little place for minister or priest.

" Who fathoms the Eternal Thought ?
Who talks of scheme or plan ?
The Lord is God : He heareth not
The poor device of man."

The Friends have no formal creed. There is a truth without creed or sacrifice or form. The mission of Quakerism is to simplify religion, to show that upright manhood and womanhood are the fruits of religious life, to mould the human character for service. These teachings of the Society are a power in the life of our own college of Swarthmore. They may work silently, but recognized or unrecognized they aid in moulding the character and the life of the students.

We have the opportunity of gaining "power through repose," and of forming the habit of calm, clear thought. We have the opportunity of becoming familiar with that central doctrine of Quakerism, the Inner Light, which gives the individual the realization of the divine power within himself. We have the opportunity of becoming familiar with the truths of Christianity as held by the Society of Friends.

The principle that the object of worship and of education is the foundation of human character, prepares the student of Swarthmore to meet the life outside of the College with firmness and with strength. The ending here is only the commencement of that broader life without, and as we look back and view those forces which have worked most strongly throughout our college days, we realize the power of those truths which we did not always understand, but which have been and will be, a quickening principle in our lives. Let us go out from our college to mingle with men, filled with that combined humanity and self-reliance which shall make us of service to our fellows, and an uplifting force in the society in which we live. This shall be the essence of our Quakerism.

I BELIEVE in the immortality of the soul, not in the sense in which I accept the demonstrable truths of science, but as a supreme act of faith in the reasonableness of God's work.—John Fiske.

96

FOR a man to refrain even from good words, and to hold his peace, it is commendable; but for a multitude it is a great mastery.

—From Charles Lamb's Essays of Elia.

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

BY JOHN JACKSON.

(Continued from last week.)

THE emancipation of the slaves in the British West Indies directed John Jackson's attention to the spiritual condition of the people in those islands, and gradually the conviction gained possession of his mind that he was called to visit them to tell them of the heavenly Father's love. There was nothing in his outward circumstances to make such a visit easy. He had more than involved all his property in the outlay for the school, which was now full of scholars, and his wife, who had a young babe, felt that such a separation from her husband would destroy her peace of mind. He felt that the Spirit would prepare her for the necessary sacrifice if his conviction continued, and so he waited patiently. Some months afterwards he was very ill with a fever, and his life was despaired of. During this time his wife "passed through deep baptisms," and as she watched by his bedside she felt that if he were only spared to her she would willingly suffer without a murmur all temporary separations which her husband's duty to others might require. As soon as he was better she assured him that she would never again interpose to prevent him from fulfilling any duty to which God called him.

With returning strength the conviction that he ought to go grew stronger, and he determined to confide it to his friend, George Truman, who came out from Philadelphia to see him. In the course of the conversation it transpired that George Truman had come for the purpose of telling John Jackson that he had felt a concern to go to the West Indies. They both talked the matter over with their wives, and decided to lay the concern before their respective monthly meetings. The Darby Monthly Meeting took place on the next Third-day, the first day that John was able to go out, and the subject was opened in both the men's and the women's meetings. The Friends assembled felt that such a separation would be a cross to them, as well as to the family. Tears came into the eyes of the men at the prospect of losing their beloved brother and minister for a season. The women thought with dismay of the wife and her desolation, and for a time there was a dead silence; then Rachel herself rose and said: "Not my will, O Lord, but thine be done." That evening John Jackson wrote a letter to his father-in-law, of which the following is an extract:

"To-day was our monthly meeting, and I found no other way for me than to inform my friends of the prospect I had in view. It was unexpected, as not an individual of the meeting (except my dear R.) had any previous intimation of it. The meeting took the subject into serious consideration, which resulted in the full expression of unity with me in the concern. A minute was accordingly made to that effect. The subject will necessarily be laid before our Quarterly Meeting, and the Yearly Meeting for Ministers and Elders. . . . I have now left it with my friends, and if they are not prepared to set me at liberty the responsibility will rest upon them, and the work will not be required at my hands. Thou wilt know that my dear R. will feel a separation of several months, in no small degree, and I should not, at this time, have gone so far as to have opened the subject in meeting, had she not paved the way, by a resignation to what appears to me to be a duty, which, if not yielded to, would have marred mine as well as her own peace; and I doubt not but the same hand that was underneath to support her, when of late the prospect of a final separation rested as a cloud upon her spirit, will be extended, and like a guardian angel will protect and preserve her, should it be my lot to leave the endearments of home, in the service of the Divine Master. As regards our temporal prospects, I have confidence to believe that in these things we shall prosper; that the 'cruse of oil' will not fail, but as we endeavor to live and walk worthy of the vocation where-with we are called, peace will still be found within our walls and prosperity within our borders."

The minute granted by Darby Monthly Meeting read as follows:

"To the Inhabitants of the West Indies, where these may come.

"Our beloved friend, John Jackson, a minister in unity with us, in a feeling manner opened in this meeting a concern which had for some time past rested with much weight upon his mind, to pay a religious visit in Gospel love to the inhabitants of some parts of the West Indies. This meeting being introduced into a deep feeling of sympathy and unity with him in his concern, leaves him at liberty to pursue his prospect as truth may open the way, with fervent desires that when his labors of love shall be accomplished, he may be favored to return to his family and friends with the reward of peace.

"Extracted from the minutes of Darby Monthly Meeting of Friends, held at Darby, in the County of Delaware, and State of Pennsylvania, in North America, the 21st day of 4th mo. A.D. 1840, and signed on behalf thereof, by

NAOMI PASSMORE, }
JOHN H. ANDREWS, } "Clerks.

"Signed also by 42 members of Darby Monthly Meeting."

This certificate was endorsed by Concord Quarterly Meeting on the 28th of Fourth month, and by the Yearly Meeting of Ministers and Elders on the 9th of Fifth month, the latter putting "United States of America" instead of "North America."

Accompanied by Thomas B. Longstreth, who felt it his duty to go with him as a traveling companion, and also by George Truman, John Jackson set sail from New York Eleventh month 19th, 1840. There were about twenty-five other passengers on the vessel, most of whom were invalids in search of a milder climate. From John Jackson's published narrative of his visit we select some incidents of the voyage.

"A snow having fallen the day previous to our departure, everything presented a wintry appearance. . . . During the first two days of the voyage we experienced a heavy sea, in consequence of which most of the passengers suffered exceedingly from sea-sickness.

"On First-day, the 22d, we had passed the Gulf Stream, the ocean became calm, and the weather was mild and pleasant as a summer morning. At our request a meeting for Divine worship was held, which was attended by all the passengers who had sufficiently recovered from sea-sickness. . . . We were favored to enjoy a comfortable meeting together, and a word of encouragement was given to some whose declining health warned them that the period of their dissolution was drawing nigh.

"On the 23d we encountered a heavy gale. The waves rose high, occasionally sweeping over the deck of the vessel, thus rendering any position unsafe without a rope, or something to which we could cling for security.

"On Fourth-day, the 25th, the storm had entirely abated. It was proposed by one of the passengers to hold a meeting for Divine worship, according to our custom, in the middle of the week. This being responded to, preparations were made to hold it on the deck of the vessel. Nearly all of the ship's crew and passengers seated themselves, and during the opportunity we deemed it right to present to view some of the testimonies and principles of truth as professed by our religious society.

"On First-day, the 29th, it was again proposed to hold a meeting. The captain and passengers having manifested a desire for it, we collected together on the deck of the vessel, where, amidst the roaring of the ocean, and the sound of the wind among the rigging of the ship, we endeavored to draw near to Him whose voice may be heard even amidst the noise of many waters. . . .

"Early on the morning of Twelfth month 1st the captain told us, if his reckoning was right we should see land by nine o'clock. A man was sent to the mast-head, and about a quarter past nine we heard the cry, 'Land to leeward!' By ten o'clock we had neared sufficiently to make it visible from the deck of the ship. It proved to be the hills of Virgin Gorda. During the day we passed in sight of Tortola, St. John's and St. Thomas, and by 5 o'clock p.m. were in sight of Santa Cruz. Owing to the heavy rain and the darkness of the evening, the captain deemed it prudent to 'lay to' for the night, that we might have daylight to approach the island.

"The next morning a gentle breeze wafted us along the north side of the island, where we had a full view of its mountains, some of which are cultivated to, their summits. The cane fields, boiling houses, mansions of the planters, and the tenements of the slaves clustered together, presenting the appearance of small villages, the lofty cocoanut, the banana, and other beautiful trees, growing around the dwellings, all added to the novelty and interest of the scene. We arrived at West End by six o'clock, p.m., being thirteen days, six hours, since we weighed anchor in the harbor of New York."

ELIZABETH LLOYD.

(To be continued.)

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

THE thirty-first annual commencement at Swarthmore took place on Third-day, Sixth month 9th.

After a reading from the Scriptures by President Swain, Joseph Wharton made an opening address, which is published in full elsewhere. The oration of Elizabeth Sutton, of the graduating class, on "Quakerism at Swarthmore," is of such special interest that it also is published in full. George Satterthwaite, of the graduating class, made a fine appeal for "The Higher Commercial Education."

The address to the class was made by John Huston Finley, LL.D., the newly-elected president of the College of the City of New York, who formerly occupied the chair of Economics in Princeton University.

President Finley urged his hearers to line up to the ideal citizenship of the future. He denied that competitive selfishness is the distinguishing feature of our age. He said, in part:

"Selfishness there is, as there has always been, and to-day it is perhaps more noisy, more patent, and blatant than it has ever been, but I doubt if ever before this seemingly selfish struggle has had a higher, a more benevolent motive or a more benevolent expenditure.

"It is the pure, sweet, unselfish aspiring life in every community that keeps its best impulses a quavering, that brings responsive vibrations from its basest and most sordid bodies, for every one has something of that divine resonance in him, if it only be touched by the right vibration, and that tells all that life is more than livelihood—that it is more than meat and raiment.

"The consciousness of responsibility to the past is not the most inspiring thought. It is the thought of what we have before us. We are heirs by birth of all the past, but we are to have no possessions in the future unless we add to our inheritance. The forces behind us are to share in the joy of victory or in the shame of defeat. The issue does not rest with the strength of our acres alone, yet, after all, everything does depend upon what we do, or what we persistently aspire to do."

FELLOWSHIPS AND SCHOLARSHIPS.

Next President Swain announced the winners of fellowships as follows:

The Joshua Lippincott scholarship of $450 a year, to Albert Cook Myers, M. L., '98.

The Lucretia Mott Fellowship, founded by the Somerville Society, $525 a year, to Annie Ross, '03.

A special fellowship of $525 a year, to Clara Price Newport, '03.

A fellowship at the University of Chicago, to Marion Pierce, '03.

The Otto F. Kolle gold medal, for attainment in character, influence and scholarship, to Samuel T. Stewart, '03.

Clara Price Newport and Maud Esther Rice, both '03, were elected to membership in the Phi Beta Kappa organization, as a recognition of high scholarship.

The following scholarships were awarded:

These scholarships of $200 to resident and $100 to non-resident students, to students promoted without condition.

The Deborah Fisher Wharton Scholarship, to Louise C. Fahnstock; honorable mention, to Charlotte R. Bogert, Anna L. Curtis and Dorothy F. Green.

The Samuel L. Underhill Scholarship, to Louis N. Robinson, '05; honorable mention, to Elizabeth Hall, Helen Heed, Margaret D. Leiper and Lynne L. Merritt.

The Anson-Lapham Scholarship, to Bertha C. Pierce, '06; honorable mention, to Margery Beddoes, Caroline Hadley and Rachel Robinson.

A pleasant feature of the exercises was the conferring of three honorary degrees. Swarthmore has always been very sparing of these honors, having in the thirty-four years of her existence conferred but six honorary degrees, viz.: in 1888, upon William Hyde Appleton, the degree of Ph. D., and upon Susan J. Cunningham that of Sc.D.; in 1889, upon Arthur Beardsley, that of Ph.D., and upon President Sharpless, of Haverford, that of LL.D. In 1890 the honorary degree of A.B. was conferred on Olivia Rodham; in 1897, that of A.M. was conferred on Elizabeth Powell Bond.

The degrees conferred this year were Doctor of Laws upon John K. Richards, who was graduated from the college in 1875, and has since been Solicitor-General of the United States, and has lately been appointed a United States Circuit Court Judge; Doctor of Laws upon Joseph Wharton, and Master of Arts upon Isaac H. Clothier.

A list of the graduating class, and the degrees received, was given in last week's INTELLIGENCER. There were this year thirty-eight graduates.

Before conferring the degrees President Swain addressed the members of the class, as follows:

PRESIDENT SWAIN'S ADDRESS.

"It is my privilege to-day to say to you the last words before you receive your diplomas. You have looked forward with expectancy to this your commencement hour. It has required resolution, effort, sacrifice, to reach it. As on entering you looked forward with hope and aspiration to the inviting fields before you in college life, so now you look with eager minds and yearning hearts to the things that come beyond these walls. May it always be so, that each duty done will prepare you for a larger and better one. Like the trained athlete who at the crack of the pistol is ready for the race, you are eager to compete in the struggles of life. As no athlete wins glory and honor for himself and the institution whose color he wears unless he adheres in a manly way to the rules of the game, so you in the more serious efforts of life must also adhere to the rules of the game, and recognize that honorable defeat is better than ignominious victory.

"If you should consider the life of any man who has been a leader of thought or of action, you would

(Concluded on page 302.)

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, SIXTH MONTH 20, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE.

THE ideals of those who are interested in Swarthmore College are that it shall be one of the highest and best among Eastern colleges, and that it shall be a Friends' college. As a college it must be, not relatively good, not a school to which Friends will send their sons and daughters only or chiefly because it is a Friends' college and has Friendly influences, but of a grade of excellence that is recognized as the highest and best by the highest educational authorities, and by those who have no direct interest in the principles of the Society of Friends as such. That it be such a college is due to those who are concerned to have their children, while in college, under Friendly care and influences. If it is not such a college, it has no good reason for existence as a college.

On the other hand, if Swarthmore is not a Friends' college in the best and truest sense of what that means, it has no reason for existence at all. There is no reason in the world why the Society of Friends should undertake to build up an excellent college that will merely add to the number of excellent colleges in the land. The interest of Friends in building up a college is that the best educational opportunities may be brought to bear in the training of our young people for the work of life, including the religious work of our Society. Our concern in training our young people is that they may be equipped in the very best possible way to take part in the industrial and other enterprises of our day, that they may also be impressed with the importance of the religion for which the Society stands, and with its bearing on present day problems and activities, and that they may go out to their various occupations and places in the world "concerned Friends" and prepared to make the principles and testimonies of Friends tell in the communities to which they belong.

In order that Swarthmore may be a Friends' college in the most important sense, it must both stand in the most effective way for what we have just said, and also be in close touch with Friends in all of our meetings and of all stations in life. It is important that whatever the training at Swarthmore can contribute to the life and work of our meetings, may be brought to bear in every community of Friends, and especially in those farthest from Friendly centers, and in those meetings that most feel the need of strengthening. It is important, too, that the very best influences of concerned Friends everywhere be brought to bear in making the college truly and fully representative of the Society as a whole.

It will not do for us to leave it to a few to have the care, to bear the burdens and to contribute the money necessary in maintaining our college. Especially in the matter of raising the necessary funds, those of us who could contribute but little are too apt to wait for some wealthy Friend to make a large contribution, forgetting that it is as important and as much our duty to contribute our small portion as it is his to contribute his large share. We forget, too, that the large sums that are raised for foreign missions, for instance, are made up, not of great contributions of millionaires, but very largely of the pennies and nickels and dimes of "Sunday School" children and of women's missionary societies. We should not be willing that what is ours should be paid for by some one else, and this should apply to our public institutional possessions as well as to our private property.

Both in the matter of financial support and in that of bringing to bear in the maintenance and building up of the college the best influence of our Society in these modern days, let us all do our part toward making Swarthmore the ideal Friends' college.

NON-RESISTANCE.

THE recent difficulties between the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Western Union Telegraph Company, resulting in the destruction by the former of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of valuable and useful property, has excited widespread interest and comment. We note that this is largely of a partisan order. Some people consider it just retribution upon the Western Union Company and others hope that the railroad company will be obliged to make restitution for the destruction. We need not enter upon the merits of the case. The courts have done that, and will continue to busy themselves with its legal settlement. It seems suitable for us to call attention to our belief that nations and corporations, as well as individuals, can settle their difficulties without resort to violence and destruction, and that the wanton annihilation of useful property is to be deplored by all believers in the Gospel message, "Resist not evil."

The extension of the principle of arbitration needs to reach out into our civil life and adjust such difficulties. Our Christianity is of dwarfed stature when it upholds deeds of destruction in the spirit of vengeance, because the burden of legal proof seems to be in its favor.

Our views of non-resistance, as a Society, are radical; as individuals, more or less modified in their application. We find instances where we feel that its extreme application would entail wrong toward someone. Every general testimony must admit of a variety of applications and interpretations, but in a case where the protection of neither life, property nor liberty is involved in the matter, a close application of the law of non-resistance seems consistent not only with the profession of Friends, but with the sane law of righteousness in business everywhere.

At the Commencement Exercises of Haverford College President Sharpless made the following contribution to the discussion, in which so many educators have participated, of the effect of college athletics upon scholarship:

"If professors have in them plenty of warm blood and interest enough to understand the games which their students play, so that they can talk them over intelligently and sympathetically, it will be surprising how soon this troublesome question of athletics will be solved. I have no wish to turn our educational institutions into country clubs, but I do not believe that our high ideals of scholarship or morals will suffer with any reasonable equipment for the gratification of the sporting instinct, provided the games and the studies are not arrayed against each other in hostile camps, but rather are parts of one general system in which there is coöperation and confidence."

BIRTHS.

EVES.—At their home in Millville, Columbia county, Pa., Fourth month 17th, 1903, to Charles and Ellen Russell Eves, a son, who is named Samuel Russell Eves.

MARRIAGES.

AMBLER—GIBB.—On Sixth month 9th, 1903, at the residence of Dr. William H. Yeager, 3332 N. Fifteenth street, Philadelphia, Margaret Scott Gibb and Charles Melville Ambler, son of Catharine C. and the late Chalkley Ambler, both of Philadelphia.

HICKS—LEVICK.—At the home of the bride's uncle, Louis J. Levick, 822 Pine street, Philadelphia, Sixth month 9th, 1903, under the care of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting of Friends, William J. Hicks, of Kennett Square, Pa., and Elizabeth Wetherill Levick, daughter of Anna E. Levick, of Quakertown, Pa.

JENKINS—ASH.—Under care of the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia, on Fifth-day, Sixth month 11th, 1903, at the home of the bride's parents, Samuel S. and Sarah J. Ash, Swarthmore, Pa., George Herbert Jenkins, of Philadelphia, and Mary Schofield Ash.

SHRIGLEY—WHITE.—On Sixth month 16th, 1903, at Darby Friends' Meeting-house, under the care of the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia, Arthur Shrigley, son of John M. and Clara A. Shrigley, and Rebecca Lamb White, daughter of George Foster and Mary Jeanes White, all of Lansdowne, Delaware county, Pa.

DEATHS.

KELLEY.—At the home of her brother, Isaac J. Nichols, Darby, Pa., Anna Maria Kelley, Eleventh month 14th, 1901.

After the death of her husband, in 1896, she came to her brother's home. She suffered greatly with rheumatism, being unable to take a step for fifteen years, but she bore all with patience. One sister in her 90th year is now the sole survivor of a large family.

PYLE.—At her residence in Lansdowne, Pa., on Sixth month 5th, 1903, Sarah Pyle, in her 88th year; a life-long member of the Society of Friends.

Interment at Friends' burying ground, Darby.

TAYLOR.—At the Friends' Boarding Home, West Chester, Pa., on Sixth month 13th, 1903, after a long illness, from paralysis, Joseph G. Taylor, son of the late Lowndes and Rachel Taylor, of West Goshen, Pa., in the 76th year of his age; a member of Race Street Monthly Meeting of Friends, Philadelphia.

The funeral was from High Street Meeting-house, West Chester. Interment at Longwood, Pa.

He bore the trials and sorrows of a checkered life with great fortitude and cheerfulness, and passed on to the higher life with a contented mind and thankful heart. "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God."

WALTON.—In Buckingham township, Bucks county, Pa., on Fourth-day, Sixth month 10th, 1903, J. Ritner Walton, aged 68 years; a member of Buckingham Monthly Meeting of Friends.

Interment at Horsham, where he was a member previous to 1859.

SOCIETY NOTES.

The Central Committee to arrange for the Conference of 1904 will meet at Salem, Ohio, at the time of Ohio Yearly Meeting, which begins Eighth month 31st, the ministers and elders meeting the preceding Seventh-day.

The Joint Committee on Isolated Friends, as has already been stated, will meet between the sessions of Indiana Yearly Meeting, which begins Eighth month 24th. It is hoped that some of the members of these committees will be able to leave home long enough in advance to attend some of the quarterly meetings that are held in the vicinity during the summer.

Salem Quarterly Meeting, at Salem, and Miami Quarterly Meeting, at Green Plain, O., will be held Eighth month 8th, and Short Creek Quarterly Meeting, at Short Creek, one mile from Mt. Pleasant, Ohio, on Eighth month 15th.

Green Plain is on the Pennsylvania Railroad between Columbus and Cincinnati, O. The Friends there extend a cordial invitation to Friends generally to meet with them. Any who have a prospect of doing so are asked to address R. M. Roberts, S. Charleston, O., or S. R. Battin, Selma, O.

John J. Cornell and his wife, Eliza H. Cornell, expect to visit the Friends' Meeting at Woodstown, N. J., on First-day, the 21st, and hold an appointed meeting at Mullica Hill in the evening. During the week they will visit Friends' families in the vicinity, and on the following First-day will attend the meeting at Hancock's Bridge in the morning and hold an appointed meeting at Salem in the evening.

A special meeting of the Plymouth Friends' Association held in Plymouth Meeting-house last First-day afternoon was addressed by Mary Travilla, of West Chester. She also attended the meeting in the morning, where her service in the ministry was very acceptable.

Genesee Yearly Meeting began with ministers and elders meeting Seventh-day morning, the 13th. Serena Minard, from New York, was the only minister from another yearly meeting here with a minute. First-day meetings were well attended. The speakers were Serena Minard, Charlotte Cox, Samuel P. Zavitz, Joseph Lawton, from Easton, N. Y., and Isaac Wilson.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

(Concluded from page 380.)

find some dominating key-note which has led him on from one achievement to another. He has had an abiding conviction that this thing or that could be done by him. Reverses, failures, opposition, only serve to renew effort. Patience, time, money, labor, everything is sacrificed to the one thing on which the heart is set. Let your hearts first of all be set on making the most possible of yourselves, and using your developed powers and gifts in a life of service. There is no compensation in this life, and, I believe, in the life hereafter, such as the consciousness of duty well performed.

"A teacher of mine had for his slogan, 'Bring something to pass, young man, bring something to pass.' If you would do something worthy of you, if the college is justified in its gifts to you, you will elevate by precept and example—chiefly by example—the ideals of the community in which you live. You will bring something to pass which will make the community better for your life in it. You will realize the words of Lincoln: 'It is a fearful thing to die and leave the world no better for having lived.'

"I would not have you believe that public life alone or work for the public good is the only channel by which you may serve your State and generation. It may happen, and of necessity will happen, that some of you can best live your lives in a less conspicuous, though no less useful, way.

"I know a woman who has an invalid sister and a feeble and aged mother who are her constant care. She is giving her life for them. She is doing it loyally, faithfully, lovingly. She does not ask that she may be released from this anxiety and labor. She only prays for strength and wisdom to give them the attention and comfort they need. Like Mary Lyons, she fears nothing except that she may not know all her duty and fail to do it. The one is living her life in an humble way, but no less successfully than did the other. She is also bringing something to pass, and the world will be better for the lesson of her life.

"Gather riches if that is your allotted part; seek political preferment if that is your field; be the embodied spirit around which a college is builded, or the stay and support of loved ones; but follow in the line of your gift and training, be it in station exalted or humble. 'Act well thy part; there all the honor lies.'

"Whatever your profession or calling, may you learn wisdom, may you bring something to pass, and may the world be better for your lives. This is the prayer, this is the hope, yea, the commission of your alma mater to you to-day.

"As the years come and go may your alma mater in the providence of God send out into the world in increasing numbers men and women of culture and refinement, force and power, who see that it is more blessed to give than to receive—men and women who are clean, who are practical; knowing society as it is, loyal to their visions and conception of duty, in the family and in the State, as citizens of the Republic."

ALUMNI MEETING AND REUNION.

In the afternoon the Alumni held their annual business meeting, during which matters having to do with the welfare of the college were introduced and earnestly considered. The Association has an oversight of the games and sports of the students, and exercises care that they be suitably managed. Care is extended to the matter of the news that goes out from the college into the papers. A committee was appointed to assist in raising the endowment fund.

At the reunion of the Alumni, in the evening, there were present representatives from all the classes that have been graduated except seven, some of the classes being very largely represented. It was especially noteworthy that members of all the earliest classes for several years were present.

Benjamin F. Battin acted as toastmaster. Those who answered to toasts were: President Swain, Maud Esther Rice, '03; Harry McAllister, '92; Martha McIlvay Eastwick, '75, and ex-President Edward H. Magill.

PRESIDENT SWAIN TO THE ALUMNI.¹

IN this first annual gathering of Alumni and friends of Swarthmore College within the college walls at which it is my privilege to be present, I desire to show my respect for the honored past of this institution by calling attention to some of the things, which in my opinion, must be preserved and emphasized in the future, in order that Swarthmore may best serve its purpose in the world.

If the new Swarthmore is to fill her place in the advancing times and be to the student of the present and coming generations what she has been to you, it is important not only that the things which have been vital in the past shall be preserved, but that such new opportunities shall be offered as are required by the highest interests of the college and of the young people who are to come here for their training in the future.

In looking over the early utterances of the founders of Swarthmore I was delighted to find that their ideal was to make a college in every respect of the highest rank. For a third of a century that has been the conception of those in authority. They set for themselves the standard of the best colleges of the land in scholarship and liberal training, under the condition and surrounding which Friends could approve, or to use a Friendly phrase, "a guarded education under the care of Friends." Thoroughness and quality were to take precedence over quantity. The founders were never ambitious for great numbers or for unnecessary multiplication of courses, but they were satisfied with nothing except the best. This conception should be the foundation stone of the college of the future.

The principle has been recognized that rules and regulations and buildings do not make a college; but that the primary requisite for the successful college is a scholarly, industrious, enthusiastic body of successful teachers of high character and pleasing personality, co-operating in perfect harmony to make the conditions as favorable as possible for the growth and development of every good and precious gift with which the rising generation has been endowed. Swarthmore has been and now is blessed with many such teachers. May the college of the future keep pace with the modern ideals of high scholarship, professional training and research, but may she never forget that the usefulness of a teacher is not measured by what he knows, but what he can give and inspire. The Swarthmore of the future must look to high scholarship and reputation in the educational world, but she must remember that the teacher's usefulness is mainly determined by the things he can plant in the minds and hearts of the students. That man or that woman is of service to the college who can lead young men and young women to have right conceptions and to live up to them.

¹ Dr. Joseph Swain's address to the Alumni of Swarthmore College, on the evening of Sixth month 9th, 1903.

In the future as in the past there must be simplicity of life. The tendency of this age is toward a complexity of living which crowds out the finer things of the human soul. There is too much tendency in the college life of the larger colleges of to-day toward a greater expenditure of money and too great social seclusion. Swarthmore must stand on the side of democratic equality and democratic simplicity. That college will deservedly cease to hold a high place in the affections of the American people which does not treat the sons and daughters of those in moderate circumstances with the same respect as those of the rich, and does not see that at any cost in the atmosphere of the college the student shall be judged by what he is and not by any artificial standards. To the honor of most colleges may it be said that there is no better democracy to be found in any place than in the American college. Let the new Swarthmore bear a leading part in thus contributing to our national life a true and more enlightened democracy.

At the annual Swarthmore dinner in New York this spring, a well-known alumnus who has made for himself an honored place in the profession of engineering, and who I believe is not a member of the Society of Friends, said he owed all he knew of his profession to Swarthmore College, yet valuable and necessary as this knowledge was to him in his every day-work, he believed the thing before all else which made him successful as an engineer was the influence of the Quakerism of the college. He said he thought it was the sterling quality of manhood inculcated in the students here that made the engineers who were graduated here stand above those of any other college he knew, and so he regarded these qualities as the greatest element of their success in the world. The essential qualities of Quakerism as applied to higher education as I understand it, are those qualities which have shown themselves in the past of Swarthmore, and which I have emphasized to-night. If this be true, why does Swarthmore need more endowment, and why are the friends of the college determined she shall have it?

It is the duty of modern Quakerism to adopt any improved method of modern civilization that does not violate any of its principles, and to discard any tradition, however dear, which does not bear the test of modern knowledge and modern scholarship. The time is past when any college can hope to attract and hold good students unless the educational facilities are the best, for the student of to-day can choose from too many well equipped colleges for this to be attempted.

I do not need in this presence to discuss the future place and usefulness of the small college, but the thing which was emphasized by President Harper at the inaugural exercises here, is, I believe, profoundly true. He said the future of the small college would be a great future, a future greater than its past because that future would be better equipped, better organized and better adjusted. I am ready to go farther and state what this proposition implies,—namely, that no institution of higher education can permanently stand which has not this better equipment, which does not march forth with the progress of the age, for only the colleges that are well equipped, whether they be small or large, can hope to maintain themselves in the struggle for existence. The tremendous development of the public high schools throughout the country gives the student an opportunity to receive a thorough secondary education. The great universities with a large number of elective courses of study are ready to take the students directly from these high schools. Thus the small college will be left without patronage unless in addition to the influences of religion, home and personal contact, equal educational facilities can be secured at no greater or at less cost. The presidents of the great universities are alive to the importance of such men as have made the small colleges of the past. The Mark Hopkins of the future will be in demand in the universities as well as in the colleges. A small college a quarter of a century ago could count on keeping her teachers for very small salaries because there was little demand for them elsewhere, but to-day the small colleges all over the country are the prey of the great universities. A university president who has a large number of appointments to make every year informs himself concerning the teachers in the colleges all over the land, and is usually prepared to offer to the best of them better salaries than they are obtaining. Thus, there is danger that the best may be taken away unless larger salaries can be offered at home. In order, therefore, to retain the best scholars we must have the means to carry on the work.

On the other hand, the interest upon safe investments decreases from year to year. Thus while $400,000 was twenty-five years ago a liberal endowment, a million dollars to-day is the minimum on which a college can keep up its work on a sound basis. I have no doubt that the friends of Swarthmore will see that the million dollars endowment is secured within the three years prescribed. The showing at the end of the first year is certainly encouraging, but why take three years? Why not do so at once? Friends have responded liberally, but have the alumni done all that they reasonably can, and are they making every effort to forward the influence of their Alma Mater? Let every one do for the college in accordance with his ability.

The needs are numerous and imperative. We need new chairs established. We need the endowment of present ones. We are promised the funds to start a new men's dormitory. We need a new library and enlargement of the Scientific building. New apparatus for the engineering department and laboratories are urgent. We need additional books. If you are able, why not endow a chair or erect a new building? There is no way by which you can do a greater service or build a more enduring monument. You can help your college in a hundred ways. You can send more students. You can give a book to the library, a piece of apparatus to a laboratory, a scholarship to a struggling student. Recently an alumnus did a good thing for his high school and his college by establishing a free tuition scholarship for Swarthmore at Chester. Another alumnus made it possible to have the athletic grounds improved. Another gave a prize to stimulate students from the high schools to come here. If you cannot yourselves give, you might influence some one else to give. Recently by will Swarthmore received $500. A timely solicitation by some friend of the college might have increased that amount. Every day some one is passing away and leaving large sums of money for public purpose. A cooperation on the part of every alumnus and friend could, I believe, secure a much greater portion of such legacies to Swarthmore College.

Let us all join together to see that our college gets a greater share of our time and means and more of our influence to induce others who are able to devote a greater portion of their means to Swarthmore College, to the end that the rising generation may come in increasing numbers and receive better preparation at Swarthmore for the duties of life. If President Thwing's figures are not at fault a college education multiplies a man's opportunities for success and influence in life 250 times. How can money better be spent than in building a college, and who that has seen these surroundings and breathed this atmosphere believes there is any better place to leave one's money for such education than just here at Swarthmore? Let us all join hands and give to Swarthmore not only a million but more than a million and build here a college whose equal cannot now be found in America. This is not an idle dream or exhortation, but a possibility and a duty. All it requires is that every friend of Swarthmore shall believe in her hard enough and work for her long enough and this will come. A great scientist has said that he resolved to be a great naturalist and he became one. Thus let the friends of Swarthmore resolve that Swarthmore shall be a great college, and work to make it so, as this scientist did to reach his aim, and they will succeed in their purpose as he did in his.

PROFESSOR C. B. ATWELL, of Northwestern University, finds that 80 per cent. of the graduates from 1859 to 1881 have married, and that the average number of children per graduate family is three. The Harvard percentage of marriages recently reported is about the same, but the average number of children only two.

A LETTER FROM THE DOUKHOBORS.

THERE have been some hindrances to the erection, with the assistance of Friends, of the proposed boarding-school for the Doukhobors. In the meantime some assistance has been given to those who were willing to allow their children to go to Rosthern and attend the public school. Eight children are now in Rosthern and the parents of two of them have written the following quaint letter:

"We, Gregory Michaelovitch and Praskovita Vassilyevna Popov and all our family of Popov send our greeting to Jos. S. Elkinton, Joseph Elkinton, George M. Comfort, Ephraim Smith, Jonathan E. Rhoads, Samuel Morris, William L. Bailey and William Evans with your beloved partners and also with your dear children and also to all your Christian household of faith, to you who are the partakers of the same faith with us. You our much beloved brethren and sisters in our Lord Jesus Christ, we send you our hearty greeting from the depth of our souls and we praise the Lord God for his great mercy in bringing us to Canada to this free country as he has blessed us to live here.

"Moreover we have a greater joy which I am unable to express with my tongue or describe with the pen, that is how my heart feels that there are so many of our Friends who have been sending us help and supporting our bodies by sending us carloads of clothes and also flour and were having compassion with us as with their own children. And up to now, dear Friends, your love has not grown cold but has become warmer. As to us we were very glad when Mr. Cors. Jansen gave us such a precious word that you do not deprive us of your love and you desire to have our children taught in Rosthern in school and then I was exceeding glad so that from gladness I could not refrain the tears in my eyes and I respond to your gracious dealing and your desire towards our children. I believe also our children ought never to forget you for such a great love of yours. I have also therefore given away my children Tania and Peter to be taught in Rosthern. Dear Friends we are not able to thank you enough for your great love.

"We remain, wishing you all the riches of God's love, forever loving you,

"GREGORY MICHAELOVITCH POPOV and wife."

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Philanthropic Committee of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting and its various sub-committees met on the 20th. Edward H. Magill spoke at some length on the concern introduced by him into the Yearly Meeting, that Friends should call a conference of all religious denominations to discuss a plan of union in temperance work. Another member of the committee suggested that Philadelphia Yearly Meeting would do well to respond to the call of the Five Years' Meeting of the other branch of Friends for a general temperance conference of Christians in Washington, in 1906. A sub-committee was appointed to take the whole subject into consideration.

A petition was directed to be sent to Secretary Cortelyou, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, asking that the women inspectors at the port of New York be continued, and that women be appointed at Philadelphia and other ports where immigrants arrive, for the better protection of young women. A letter was also addressed to Mayor Weaver expressing appreciation of his efforts for the suppression of vice.

BYBERRY, PA.—The last meeting of the Friends' Association was held on First-day afternoon, Sixth month 7th, with a fair attendance. The Scripture reading was given by Thomas Doan, and was followed by the reading of the minutes. An original paper on "The Scriptures," was read by Elizabeth P. Bonner. A review of "The Simple Life," by Charles Wagner, was given by Anna B. Hawkins, which taught that the spirit of simplicity should pervade all life; plain dealing and the faithful fulfillment of simple duties, realizing that plain duty is ever the nearest duty; that distance may make

